Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Siemann	Liberty	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rochelle	Browne	Encino	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Everett	Harrison	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Hanlon	Manchester Townsh	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Pickens	Maricopa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Meyers	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Wagman-Christian	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anne	Fulmer	Saint Michaels	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Naomi	Verdugo	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Milgrom	Englewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Oshyan	Greene	Albany	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melinda	Trevorrow	Greensboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Anderson	Moab	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dan	Fiedler	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geraldo	Medor	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Teresa	Jaeger	Rockledge	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mallory	Johnson	Norristown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beverly	Ayers-Nachamkin	Carlisle	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Togers	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Kearney	Coghlan	San Francisco	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This merger would have devastating consequences for the ability of local news to cover the stories that their communities desire. This consolidation of power is not what the people want. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

C	Bross	Walnut Creek	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anika	Ledlow	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	McQueen	Corvallis	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Madrona	Bourdeau	Taos	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Mollet	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anthony	Castillo	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Clements	Hilo	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elana	Levinson	Forest Hills	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Tischler	New Rochelle	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Grace	Colangelo	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Schneider	Fairfax	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Griffiths	Aspen	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Houston	Oklahoma City	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eli	Wilkerson	Savannah	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frances	Clemmensen	Mountain Brook	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elijah	Taylor	East Hampton	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frances	Ginther	Gary	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lori	McElhaney	Hudsonville	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elijah	Taylor	East Hampton	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rosalind	Katz	Apache Junction	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Echlin	Newfane	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pat	Muzzatti	Essex Fells	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Hoch	Woodmere	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Davidson	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jim	Falick	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
ste	ho	PIkesville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matt	Woolery	San Mateo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Russell	De La Mare	Lake Forest	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susanne	Mavers	Tulsa	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephen	Clark	Daytona Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rusty	Spell	Auburn	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Feazell	CHARLESTON	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Fay	Seminole	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Albistegui	Vista	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Estrin	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matt	Van Slyke	Grayslake	Illinois

FCC's stated policies have again been proven worthlessness. Like old prayers meaning something to souls long departed from this era, they cannot enter the corporatized cranium, or be felt in any heart's chamber locked down by self servitude, that is driven by blind ambition, going too fast -- right off the cliff as america's middle class waits at the bottom to scavenge any valuables from the rising heap of wreckage unseen since The Great Depression.

What goes on inside your empty vessels?

Mallika	Jayaraman	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Spaner	Marthasville	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Staples	Camas	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ronald	Cohen	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rev	Cline	Bellmore	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Betty	Ferrero	Round Rock	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Sundholm	Oklahoma City	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Dennert	Saint Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frances	Black	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dustin	Sotnyk	St. Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kay	Lowe	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Wayne	Lincoln	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nan	Selz	Little Rock	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessie	Osborne	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Powell	Pacific Grove	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Di Sibio	Brookhaven	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maggie	Hall	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Abrams	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Burns	Hinckley	Ohio	I've seen the messages that Sinclair-owned stations have broadcast, and while they certainly have the right to say those things, it worries me that they might be the only voice most people hear. It has been said that controlling the media allows one to control the world, and if one group, regardless of viewpoint, were to control what our media tells us, I would be very worried for the future of diverse thought and cultural growth. It is for these reasons, and many more, that I agree with the below statement, prewritten by the ACLU. I have read it thoroughly to be sure that I align with all of its points: "A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and
Erin	Madison	Encino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roberta	Reed	Huntington Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Crowder	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

BARBARA	TURNER	PACIFIC PALISADES	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Mauro	Succasunna	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lara	Oppenheimer	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Ashton	Astoria	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Rhodes	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruth	Reagel	winnetka	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Valerie	Joyner	Petaluma	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Hughes	Annapolis	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Seth	Mosgofian	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Reinhart	Arvada	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This threat is so completely serious and such a threat to our

Judith	O'Keefe	Berwyn	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alison	Hill	Lafayette	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meredith	Wallin	Stroudsburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anthony	McCradic	Arlington	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Enid	Barry	Griffin	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Bryant	Culver City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jarrett	Cloud	Morris Plains	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erin	Ayash	San Luis Obispo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Leonard	St. Cloud	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dawn	Jackson	Westville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Jones	Paradise	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynne	Simon	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Campbell	Wilmette	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tony	Bell	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ashleigh	Halverstadt	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Saint	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rita	Olson	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Zachary	La Crescenta	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ramon	Sandoval	Littlerock	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Nixon	Panama City	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

annie	capestany	Walla Walla	Washington	Democracy depends on a free media with multiple voices. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Ice	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Esmat	Baradar	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Reed	Floarea	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cindy	Wharton	Oceanside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	H	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Summer	Shumway	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
annie	capestany	Portland	Oregon	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Democracy depends on a free media with multiple voices. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Cripps	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lester	Bauer	Richfield	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Graeme	Magruder	Sherwood Forest	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorie	Huckaba	Roseville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheryl	Dunn	Livermore	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dena	Mossar	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kim	Haroche	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dan	Tracy	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Rau	Marine City	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Laflamme	West Palm Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marion	Kaselle	North Branch	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Bridges	West Chester	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Simona	Miller	Albany	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Martin	Cranberry Twp	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Mont-Eton	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcia	Aquilino	Grafton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Cowan	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vince	Snowberger	Louisville	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Freeman	Russellville	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jonathan	Seyfried	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Soretta	Rodack	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Franklin	Peterson	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alex	Millar	Valley Village	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynn	Waters	Irmo	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Doris	Ennis	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Gray	Bloomington	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in the USA and would be in opposition to the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that is absolutely essential for a democracy that works for everyone.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias which would undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this dangerous merger. Thank you.

Patricia	Borri	Wheat Ridge	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Kratt	Vallejo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Garcia	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Barney	Solana Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chelsea	Gutierrez	Ashland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Breckenridge	Valparaiso	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerry	Fitzgerald	Hackensack	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eileen	Macmillan	Lafayette	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Lynch	Saline	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Klinke	Carlsbad	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Frank	Bossier City	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Keir	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ruth	ballard	hayesville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Pielenz	Half Moon Bay	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathy	Johnson	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Nash	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jayasri	Pandian	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christie	Decker	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joe	Cox	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Sellers	Concord	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charline	Ratcliff	Monterey	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jonathan	Kimber	Iowa City	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Townsend	Muskegon	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Hightower	Fort Wayne	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura and Hendrik	Huhn	Bodega Bay	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Betty	Krier	Takoma Park	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Craig	Lovelock	Hollywood	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	McKee	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

milene	golzer	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	McGivern	Sarasota	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Olivier	Massot	Arlington	Virginia

Dear FCC,

Please reject the Sinclair-Tribune merger.

Sinclair has a bad habit of distributing biased and unbalanced stories within local news in "must-runs" segments that are heavily scripted to give weight to conservative view points without giving equal time to opposing ideas.

Douglas	Matteson	San Rafael	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Ward	Snohomish	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margot	Frost	Prescott	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bill	McSteen	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country, and it would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias, and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shazia	Miller	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jenny	Wenk	Berkeley	California	Please vote against the Sinclair-Tribune merger. It's in direct contravention of the FCC's own policies.
				Having spent 37 years on the advertising sales side of newspapers I know how important it is to have MORE voices, NOT fewer voices.
				While I will always support a publisher's/owner's right to express their view in Editorial/Opinion pieces I will also always support diversified ownership of media.
Lee	Williams	Columbia	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Brady	Elgin	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Rice	Lebanon	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Taylor	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Patrick	Horn	Palo Alto	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A merger between Sinclair and Tribune would give an unprecedented amount of power merger to a single media company, with a consolidated level of power that would threaten press freedom in this country. The FCC is here to protect our communications and must not allow such a threat to our first amendment rights to take place.
				Freedom of press is a fundamental part of the free speech guarantees provided to us by the bill of rights. However, Sinclear-Tribune would be a single entity, and would be guaranteed to have some level of bias. WIth such power, this bias could sway the public opinion and lose the diversity we currently have in the media.

Myriam	Burger	Ridgewood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gary	Keast	Charleston	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Helfand	Narberth	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shirlee	Harrison	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

GREGORY	HARRISON	SPOTSYLVANIA	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deborah	Lowe	Los Gatos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melody	Ross	Santee	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robin	Stamper	Virginia Beach	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris Pan	Launois	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Evergreen	Brighton	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Breunlin	Oak Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Ethridge	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Carlson	Carlsbad	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alan	Kurek	East Islip	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Warren	West Simsbury	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Rudman	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Sorce	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Dennis	Columbia	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Oscar	Bird	Roswell	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Whitney	Broussard	Millbrae	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elinor Dunn	Grayer	Medford	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Wayne	David	Newark	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Justin	Wright	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It already has begun to stifle our free speech. The diversity of views in the press that are essential for a healthy democracy are being actively suppressed by this merger. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
wandy	soto	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jose	Aceituno	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pablo	Herrero	Laguna Niguel	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Shami	Winter Park	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kim	Moninghoff	Laurel	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

calvin	Blinder	Columbia	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Tunick	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacquelyn	Menefee	Hamden	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gretchen	Soechting	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Wenninger	Effort	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alex A.	Bobroff	Homer Glen	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Gurney	Skokie	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Harris	Eagle River	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joe	Newman	Fayetteville	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Holly	Frazer	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Novo	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hope	Nicholls	Charlotte	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lea Ann	Graves	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dominique	Landis	Roseville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lois	Harris	Claremont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Hodge	East Jordan	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Homer Edward	Price	Sylva	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Garnet	McQuitty	Fairfield	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sophy	Johnston	Guilford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Inderjit	Jaipaul	Glen Mills	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

M	Garrett	South Jordan	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allen	Gross	Woodbridge	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Latimer	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
DEBABRATA	MITRA	PRINCETON JCT	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlotte	Innes	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kay	Novak	Corvallis	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Kuta	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joy	Smiley	Levittown	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Liddy	Farmington Hills	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gina	Austin	Mount Juliet	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nina	Todor	Ewing	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amy	Ramaker	Laguna Woods	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Parker	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Schneider	Waikoloa	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Takatsch	Port Jervis	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dennis	Keller	Middletpwn	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Ann	Black	Caseyville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marjorie	Shapiro	Orange	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jay	Astle	Idaho Falls	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marcia	Kayser	Keene	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Termini	Merritt Island	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Keller	Middletown	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Nall	Prescott	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kristi	parson	toledo	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maris	Arnold	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Theresa	Lange	Norfolk	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randal	Graham	Sacramento	California
Gregory	Foster	Hyattsville	Maryland

Please help keep our media diverse and not overwhelmed by mono

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Weigel	Edina	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	McAuliffe	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Fremon	SCHROON Lake, NY 1	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	Lange	Norfolk	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Beitel	Pitman	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
WALTER	RICE	PORTLAND	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ryber	Cummings	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean	Burridge	Champaign	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

WALTER	RICE	PORTLAND	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Valerie	Suplee DiFranco	Underhill	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Morefield	St. Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane and Jon	Levinson	San Carlos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hannah	Hasson	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carter	Neal	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Rodman	Altadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marie	Freckelton	Mt Clemens	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Howard	Edmond	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meghan	Welsh	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Rubin	Long Beach	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephen	Thornburg	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jay	Gartman	Boynton Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mara	Sabinson	Cornish	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Irma	Liberty	Vallejo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rebecca	Maranto	Texarkana	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clara	Pearlman	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
George	Kushin	Reston	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leeza	Watstein	Livermore	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nicole	Everling	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Napoleon	Little Neck	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	McCann	Pearce	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Homer	Brown	Berea	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Gale	Oppenberg	West Palm Beach	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and forces canned opinion on all its subsidiaries. This profoundly undermines viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The Sinclair-Tribune merger is antithetical to free speech and fails the test of being in the public interest. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Gipple	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debra	Teplin	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Murphy	Kapolei	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barry	Gilbert	cary	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danielle	Tamkin	denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Schlesinger	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alena	Laube	Highland Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

M. Sue	Michael	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

karen	mehner	Butler	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Kelly	Warrensville heights	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

A	DeSanna Girroir	Woodacre	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anne	Larson	Riverdale	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Chavez	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natiel	Barron	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	Davenport	Elk Grove Village	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
rita	howell	madison	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Chavez	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Golden	Naples	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	Tran	Hartley	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Bosch	Goshen	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mayssan	Farra	Indian Land	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jay	Strickland	Englewood	Ohio	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

END THIS MADNESS! Consolidation of business and media is putting

Phyllis	Chavez	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jay	Byerley	Fountain Hills	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roberta	Kauffman	Skokie	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kim	Huffman	Taos Ski Valley	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie Jean	Brown	Morgantown	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	Jin	Newport Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Cobb	Moreland Hills	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
A	Schmitt	Phoenixville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias, and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brandon	Baker	El Cajon	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gretchen	Feld	Lexington	Kentucky	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Lakatos	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joanne	Conroy	Stockbridge	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christie	Ruppel	Slidell	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Betty	Abadia	Portland	Oregon	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This is exactly counter to the heart of our democracy!!!!

Thomas	Daly	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rosanne	Basu	Hermosa Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Fryback	Lomita	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Anderson	Montrose,	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marvin	Bunnell	Hopkins	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Berriault	Sheffield	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

F	Sylvest	Millbrae	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Rozek	Coralville	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Dunn	Henrico	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Elizabeth	Damiano	Stockton	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Harkins	Norwalk	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce	Hodel	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eli	Morowitz	Foster City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joe	Crider	Monmouth	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gabriel	Steinfeld	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Radcliffe	Ambler	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	K	Mableton	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Tait	Salida	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marion	Glennon	Ventura	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lori	F	Lake Foresr	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rita	Crowley	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joyce	Caci	Carlsbad	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	O'Brien	Delray Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Louise	Koch	Roseland	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jim	Loveland	Gulfport	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
andrea	olandag	Pinole	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Khotoveli	Sunny Isles Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Gabioud	Silver City	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

BARBARA	RALPH	Millsboro	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Ruffin	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Guy	Biagiotti	Santa Ana	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jean	Bails	Saint Clair Shores	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rich	Berkowitz	Hayward	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louise	Oncley	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Hurvitz	Oakkand	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ron	Michel	Fort Lauderdale	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Brown	Bedford	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
George	Lee	KINGSPORT	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jewell	garvin	Navarre	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ej	McConaughy	Mission Viejo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosemarry	Hofman	Wilmington	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Batchelor	Gurdon	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Kelly	Jersey City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruthanne	Dayton	Pgh.	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maya	Rish	Brooksvile	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacqueline	Cisneros	San Pablo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	West	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eion	Bailey	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Bell	San Anselmo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tony	LaMorticella	Elmira	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clare	Ronzani	San Leandro	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Sparling	Henrico	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristine	Adams	Alameda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Paskowitz	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Johnstone	Montrose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geoffrey	Peckover	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Weisbecker	Egg Harbor City	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Sansone	South Jordan	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lucy	Bayer	Ukiah	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tara	Cooper	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Romona	Czichos-Slaughter	Hollister	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eve	Fetzek	Bradenton	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karla	Moore	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Schatz	North Branford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Antony	Osso	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
ROSALIND	B	Louisville	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Adler	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alfred	Bucknam	Williamstown	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Lamers	San Bernardino	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurrie	Cozza	Stony Point	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Courtney	Clift	Jersey City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hillary	Chernow	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Watson	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerald	Molina	Stamford	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sylvia	Fatzer	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shirley	Jeude	Morrisville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Drew	Glenview	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Grant	Conklin	Crest Hill	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Vickery	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maxine	Skurka	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Wilhoite	Rio Rancho	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Trechter	Chantilly	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Siegel	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cindy	Melbie	Laurens	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Barrows	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Simmons	overland park	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynne	Henry-Dinneen	Torrance	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne and Donald	Smyth/Zeek	Davis	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Pachos	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dorothy	Shelton	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Anderson	Mpls	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandy	brubaker	philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dolores	Parra	Land O Lakes	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bonnie	Egan	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Molly	Reno	Bright	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephenie	Futch	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Patten	Oklahoma City	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bert	Morris	Maplewood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Drew	Abbott	Emeryville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anastasia	Yovanopoulos	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christa	Palazzolo	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeffrey	McAdoo	Hermon	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ted	Davis	Boonton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brice	Beckham	West Hollywood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Ann	Barrett	Easton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lucy	Reagan	Bethlehem	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Krooth	Berkeley	California	Stop now. Don't go forward with this anti-american plan! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judy	Mayer	Simi Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joy	Carnahan	Largo	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Whorton	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Meckler	South San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shelby	Eckles	Fate	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sylvia	Hubert	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jodi	Ford	Quakertown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Santilli	Westbury	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Bruner	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Dow	Taylor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joslyn	Baxter	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Adler	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erica	Kaser	Englewood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Hancock	Miami	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anne-Louise	Monn	New Oxford	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Jones	Anchorage AK	Alaska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Willis	Gilkey	McKeesport	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Switzer	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carey	Kayser	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Kelly	Buffalo Grove	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynnette	Rizek	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Mufson	Mercersburg	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Veronique	Liem	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rona	Gundrum	Redwood City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anastassiya	Andrianova	Fargo	North Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leticia	Cazares	Glendale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Stroh	Auburn	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janis	Sorinsky	Glenview Nas	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Mathes	Broomfield	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Gilstrap	St. Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
George	Oyama	Escondido	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Wolfes	Palm Desert	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lucia and Jack	Gilbert	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maryann	Furlong	Thousand Oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
An	Steenbergen	Costa mesa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	Moore	Great Falls	Montana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Irene	Worek	Bordentown	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Johnson	Yorktown Heights	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Laffend	Claymont	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dena	Gavito	Bedford	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Temple	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Hinkes	New Hope, Pa.	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mitchell	Diamond	Sunnyvale	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Modesto	Apo	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Prestridge	Memphis	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Omid	Tavallai	Sunnyvale	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Vanderberg	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Cava	Hayward	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peter	Nguyen	Newport Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Richman	San Mateo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Corrao-Ullrich	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Ulasich	Minnetonka	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Randall	Herrington	Brentwood	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Goens	Flossmoor	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daryl	Groetsch	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Thomas-Azud	Westminster	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Bertles	La Mesa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Anderson	Dexter	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Alpern	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

M	Aibel	Northport	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jerry	Druch	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Collins	Rome	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Coralie	Koonce	Fayetteville	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Becker	Roanoke	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Courchine	Peterborough	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Tobiason	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kipley	Bellairs	Geneva	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Rovito	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julia	Steinberg	Princeton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Headley	Longmont	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynne	Hertzog	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Vortreflich	Marlton	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Benson	Aurora	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anje'	Waters	Nevada City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Kelsey	Pigg	Quincy	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Even their employees recognize that Sinclair’s policy of forced political messages is wrong. And for individuals who trust these stations as their source of local news, mixing these trusted faces who they often see in the community with certain political views reinforces very narrow political beliefs. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Penny	Concannon	Lake Leelanau	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sisan	Silva	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Fischer	Roanoke	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Charles	Wardlaw	Media	Pennsylvania	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Moyer	Atascadero	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Angela	Gillem	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hannah	Fusselman	Cedar Rapids	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eileen	McLeod	North Highlands	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Wennlund	Ashland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Johnnella	Butler	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Hausman	Larkspur	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrea	Reuter	Northridge	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lydia	Cameron	Sausalito	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Harris	Ventura	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Dunford	Epsom	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Deborah	Gordon-Brown	Kingston	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The airwaves theoretically belong to the people, not to corporations advancing corporate Olivia's. Sinclair, along wit Fox, only worse than Fox is not impartial A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Susan	Brombacher	Candler	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tracey	Welch	Westminster	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Musser	Saint Louis	Missouri
Jared	Wright	Lafayette	Indiana	With Sinclair's blatant political bias, allowing this merger to go throu A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Fiala	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Arlin	Hill	Wichita	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Massie	Glendale	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Daniel	Stopfer	Tuckerton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Blodgett	Citrus Heights	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maegan	Moo	Lakewood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Gelblum	Boulder Creek	California	Today, more than ever, with the media under attack by the President, the country needs independent media, particularly those that are willing to criticize the powerful - to comfort the afflicted and afflict the comfortable. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Frances	Abdoo	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Izaiah	Buseth	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
J.	Ballengee	Glenview	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I live outside of Chicago and the Tribune is my paper. If Sinclair get I will no longer read the Tribune. I want an paper that is not biased. The tribune has always been to the right but has also been fair. Sinclair is not; he is so far to the right that it appears the Republicans own him. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

Catherine	Allen	Carson City	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jan	Colville	Stambaugh	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Towry	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Butler	Elgin	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peggy J.	Fuka	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Fenicle	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deena	Berg	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Raashid	Haque	Mint Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Hallett	Berkeley	California	Please do NOT approve the proposed merger between Sinclair and Tribune Media! We need independent and free speech driven by local investigative reporters, not canned propaganda from politically motivated interests. I want to hear and see real news and views expressed by reporters based on their research, insights, and observations.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Alan	Gaus	Franklin	Tennessee
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Noel	Mellish	Midland Park	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	McConahay	McHenry	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karol	Tulp-Magee	Deep River	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maggie	Ownbey	North Hollywood	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Halley	Wilmington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Johnson	Menlo Park	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Weikel	Stratford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edward	Larkey	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carey	Wheaton	Sebastopol	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	McGinnis	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Craig	McKerley	Tulsa	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anita	Oswald	Niwot	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathaniel	Beard	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Schoepfer	Sahuarita	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jhonatan	Ferrer	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	McCabe	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Welker	Mesa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Campbell	Wyandotte	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Randall	Germantown	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	Perricelli	Eureka	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Budd	Boca Raton	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roberta E.	Newman	Mill Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monica	Schwenke	Sunnyvale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samir	Sugathan	San Marcos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Ivey	Berea	Ohio	The FCC must do their job and ensure Americans have access to diverse information. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Michael	Van der Linden	Walpole	Massachusetts	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elle	Ayare	Reno	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marguerite	Terrill	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stanley	Bass	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Emily	LaBrenz	Sterling	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Benton	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachael	Denny	Bradley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Gordon	Huntingdon	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Yamada	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ovidiu	Sofariu	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adrienne	Hohenberg	Lamy	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Gallagher	Green Valley	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
JACQUELINE	EDMONDSON	JOHNSON CITY	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

LindaLee	McEachronTaylor	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brant	Kotch	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Kesler	Charlotte	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Richen	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Zyvert	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
R	R	Old Bridge	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Griffith	Canton	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Shotwell	El Rito	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Richen	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bruce	Fraidowitz	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stanley	Bass	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Daphne	Shafer-Repass	California	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stella	Townsend	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Bush	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sherry	Graham	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Randall	Grimm	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would establish a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in the U.S., and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Alexander	Council Bluffs	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ryan	Ku	Mililani	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Bohn	Wahiawa	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Caswell	Sebastopol	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arthur	Gribben	Northridge	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Gustavson	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand firmly on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Dlesk	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alene	Murphy/Pettee	Gypsum	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Greene	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jaron	Phillips	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Milam	Mission	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alison	Rubin	Bryn Mawr	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kim	Blake	Capitola	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Fujita	Kaneohe	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathleen	Donohoe	Mountain View	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Bush	Milpitas	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Curlette	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy	Jordan	Port St Lucie	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Feliss	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lindsey	Bloom	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Clark	Vadnais Heights	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peggy	McGuire	Gerber	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Rand	Sunland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrea	Snyder	Hickory	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Williams	Sand Springs	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Am	Schmidt	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janis	Pember	Lebanon	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maggie	Maxwell	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

shawnee	badger	VALENCIA	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sean	Golden	Northport	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tomm	Pickles	Portland	Oregon	This is a serious move to entrench narrow control of the public airways. I concur with the remarks below. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Tami	Anderson	Sausalito	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Colleen	Foster	Stockton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
Karin	Kappen	Los Osos	California	It is extremely important to show the media that there are A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nan	Pember	Lebanon	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Kroger	Itasca	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bob	Kaplow	Dundee	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Lillie	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Hartlieb	Mesa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	McKeag	Mosier	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Stayton	Northumberland	Pennsylvania	Please reject the Sinclair-Tribune merger! We need many voices from the press. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Christine	Armstrong	San Marcos	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Kienzle	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeaneane	Williams	Greensboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Morse	Glenwood Springs	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Hanks	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Obyc	Powell	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Saltz	Salem	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Alleman	Waukegan	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mildred	Harris	White Springs	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Smith	Honolulu	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bethany	Queen	Carlisle	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pilo	Gomez	Milford	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alana	Northrop	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Constance	Greene	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leora	Bishop	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Tarsy	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Hannah	Bettendorf	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Shane	Menlo Park	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alane	Repa	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Dadgari	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marsha	Weisfeld	Mahwah	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Boldon	ENCINO	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Goodrich	Bakersfield	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Levey	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roger	Podewell	Homewood	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Holly	Goodrich	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Smith	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Valerie	Paterson	Pocahontontas	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
lloyd	reynolds	fountain valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Johnica	Love	Chico	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Elman	stewartsville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Sikora	Doylestown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Gannitto	Fairview Village	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kim	Aloi	South Burlington	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martha	Larsen	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Sabin	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rodney	Jones	Reston	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Ambrosino	Portland, OR	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paula	Scott	South Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Kronzek	WASHINGTON	District of Columbia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeanne	Hannigan	Hilo	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Torres	Sherman Oaks	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Eastman	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Vallejos	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tonia	Twigger	West Linn	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monica	Schallenberger	Bridgeville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Berggren	Ballston Spa	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Fox	Wyckoff	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cynthia	Madden	Hopkinton	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Philip	Ratcliff	Cloverdale	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sidney	Henry	Alexandria	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kay	Reinfried	Lititz	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cleopatra	Zagrean	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Bradley	Naples	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mezu	Ukah	Rancho Santa Marga	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Marable	Memphis	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Nocerino	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Garzon	Stillwater	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Frantz	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Blake	Hailey	Fort Worth	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ELlen	SPira	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Sinton	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kailey	Kefi	Herndon	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Sherman	Saint Petersburg	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Rossi	Placerville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	Starner	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Wallace	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mykie	Reidy	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Ashley	Pfeil	Porter	Texas	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This would limit free speech rights as well as potentially not informing us of certain stories.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Daniel	Gartner	Oro Valley	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deborah	Reade	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cari	Ignarra	Huntington Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
JB	Y	Huntsville	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Linden	Palm Bay	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Krell-Bates	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bradley	Horn	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Filemyr	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Irene	Saikevych	Central Point	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Jones	Ashland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Smith	Rockledge	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Brown	Bedford	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Mink	Meadow Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Bradley	Toms River	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J	Byrd	Greensboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jonathan	Wideberg	Sarasota	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ebony	Yarger	Twin Falls	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	Reeves	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Blanning	Corona Del Mar	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cornelia	Cadwell	Lompoc	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Minda	Schwartz	Saratoga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Nelson	Belleville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Hays	Delmont	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Timothy	Wigington	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kao	Saeturn	Ukiah	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Denis	O'Brien	Woodstock	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Gatton	Breese	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patty	Bonney	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	McNiff	Burke	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Jacobs-Pollez	Tishomingo	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Schneider	Gainesville	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gray	Anderson	White Plains	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Obrien	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that are essential to a healthy democracy. I VOTE NO! Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Parker	Olympia	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Mullins	Bloomfield	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Blickensderfer	Redlands	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Denisevich	North Kingstown	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Pauken	watsonville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Covert	Contoocook	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephanie	Fauber	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Luz	Martinez	Miami	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jill	Roth	Marietta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Lief	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ashley	Odell	Manchester	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kim	Kensler-Prager	Toledo	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Our broadcasters need to be telling the truth--not blasting propaganda.
Patricia	Joubert	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lana	Brewer	Sonoma	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	Filo	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothea	Newport	Ellicott City	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Koruga	Fremont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wayne	Brotze	Carlinville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Walter	Sleeth	Atherton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Crooks	Plainfield	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	Gross	Altadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Galler	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stan	Zeavin	Pacifica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Leighty	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
S.	Smith	Sound Beach	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Kochevar	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Juanita	Hepler	Boise	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lili	Endlich	Playa Vista	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judy	Hoffman	Plano	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Stidley	Tucson	Arizona	Our country is built on a free press, so do not take steps that would seriously impact our freedom.
Karen	Behnke	Honolulu	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Kelly	Wilmette	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Andrew	Reynolds	Fairbanks	Alaska	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This merger would allow a huge swath of consumers to be subjected to a barrage of propaganda representing the opinions of one man, and stifle all other voices, by representing opinion as

Terry	Condon	Kissimmee	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Hever	Haverhill	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Childers	Saint Cloud	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Fine	El Cajon	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Penny	Mezzano	LYNCHBURG	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roy	McKenzie	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heath	Post	Lansing	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Burke	Crescent City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Regina	Phillips	Winnetka	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	McArthur	Orlando	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Merete	Aiyer	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Van Leekwijck	Beaverton	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Meers	Heber Springs	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Parr	Mill Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Mazzarisi	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Davis	Lake Oswego	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dave	Eckart	Littleton	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Needham	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Freedom of the press is the 1st thing to go when the fascist roll in.

Ann	Davenport	Astoria	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lauri	Heikkila	Tujunga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Kristensen	Millington	New Jersey
Cathy	Jones	Oklahoma City	Oklahoma	Sinclair Broadcast Group and Tribune should never be allowed to m A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Noel	Emswiler	Memphis	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennie	Sabato	Somers Point	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hannah	Fariss	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Raj	Rajamani	Salt Lake Cty	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Johannah	Frank	Escondido	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marjorie	Ziff-Levine	Bonita Springs	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dielica	Gold	Santa Fe	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Meeks	Bailey	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Nelson	Corrales	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	Haney	Marina Del Rey	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Siegel	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joshua	Phillips	Ketchikan	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Owens	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Ryland	south Portland	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Schwarz	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Isabel	Truong	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fern	Wachtel	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kinsey	Service	Goleta	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

leanne	flask	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Heniff	Irving	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Anderson	Sonoma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jody	Gibson	Des Moines	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Grace	Marvin	Chico	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Booth	Grosse Ile	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Kaufman	Piedmont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Larry	Weisgal	Pleasanton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Leonhardt	Norman	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roberta	Toomer	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Cahill	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Cooley	Oxnard	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Wolf	Lewisburg	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Andrus	Ogden	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Surinsky	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jonathan	Mitchell	Madison	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Roth	Louisville	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Morris	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cory	Johnson	Sidney	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michelle	Campbell	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Stapleton	Poinciana	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Zipf	Delaware	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Cooley	Oxnard	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eleanor	Templeton	Bronx	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Bledsoe	Charleston	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. This has the real possibility of putting limits on what views local new stations could express. Sinclair's broadcasts portray a consistent political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Holt	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ACLU Supporter	Unknown	Hollywood	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Corrigan	Morrisville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth a	Wilson	Jefferson City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Sullivan	Memphis	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Vertal	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Candace	Smith, RN/retired disabled	Marysville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

terrence	alers	Tequesta	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Markalunas	basking ridge	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol Nordahl	Aldape	Richmond	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Hughes	Rosenberg	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Justin	Simonson	Claremont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Herdman	Winchester	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

sherita	wilson	amherst	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lee	Kruser	Perrysburg	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John and Cheri	Courtnage	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Thompson	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Coffman	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steve	Ongerth	Richmond	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J. Howard	Cherry	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Venezia	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacklyn	Burns	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	G	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wanda	Berry	Homewood	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Stillwell	Salem	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lily	Chow	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alana	Mancuso	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	G	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gladys	Garcia	Dunedin	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Crystal	Miranda	Jersey City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
cheryl	schulte	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Valerie	Jones	Virginia Beach	Virginia	There must be some differentiation and separation between owners of broadcast and print outlets. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Allison	Bullock	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

THOMAS	TENSING	CINCINNATI	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shelley	Trenholm	Lancaster	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bradford	Wade	Ferndale	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Anastasia	Bissell	Dubuque	Iowa	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Finta	Alexandria	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Ihle	South Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Becca	Rabin	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Naomi	Matusow	Fountain Hls	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Frank	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tiffany	Dalpe	Fullerton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Aronowitz	Victor	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	beilin	Depoe Bay	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beverly	Conway	Greensboro	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elliot	Drisko	Mohegan Lake	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Lidov	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Glover	Wilmington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aviva	Sernaker	Tamarac	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peter	Ponzetti	Davison	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clara	Eder	Vienna	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patrick	Vingo	Norwalk	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Hicks	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomasina	Tijerina	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kusay	Alsafi	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Weaver	Loveland	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Grela	Olney	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

mandy	byrd	greensboro	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nick	Barela	South Jordan	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Don	Hough	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ezra	Selove	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anita	Wooton	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth Morris	Downie	Winnetka	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marci	Javril	Marina del Rey	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Montgomery	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Priscilla	Martinez	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Hazelleaf	Seal Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Infantino	Ridgewood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberly	Ditz	Thief River Falls	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy A.	Stoner	Bartlett	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cindy	Domasky	sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pamela	Hemphill	Watsontown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Brock	Lancaster	Ohio	It is imperative that you protect the citizens of the United States from being forced to have the news we receive from our local tv stations filtered and altered by the Sinclair Broadcasting Corporation. You must reject the merger that is now before you between Sinclair and Tribune Media. We live in the Columbus, Ohio area and viewed the 'message' from Sinclair, read by our local station manager, that was repeated across the nation in all of their stations. We knew then that Sinclair should not be trusted to uphold the concept of free press. That 'messaging' requirement imposed on Sinclair's stations is dangerous to our First Amendment right to free speech and free press, our most precious right. Please work for the protection of this country's constitutionally guaranteed rights by denying this merger.
Patricia	Gregor	BOISE	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sam	Holtzman	Cupetino	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Frye	Haddam	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Giguere	Montpelier	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views and political balance in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering dishonest political bias and this will undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brenda	Harrison	Sugar Land	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brooke	Pierce	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Rhoads	Douglas	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Dueker	Galloway	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jay	Frye	Haddam	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jay	Frye	Haddam	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Elman	Woodside	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that are essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias, and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Dennison	Garden Grove	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Hendrick	Madisonville	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

nora	maya	irvine	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Senia	Sanchez	Saint Peter	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Rothman	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tansy	Brooks	Cotati	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey Anne	Jones	Pacific Palisades	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jon-Mark	Overvold	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Belanger	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Al	Beltram	Albany	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Bunker II	Manchester	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marinell	Daniel	El Sobrante	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Raul	Garro	Lafayette	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kay	Cash-Smith	Tahoe City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alisa	Witt	Black Hawk	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathleen	Reilly	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

silvia	milla	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Melton	Wilmington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosalind	Gordon	Lake Worth	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Durfee	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

art	felsinger	tempe	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Carney	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Zisa	Englewood Cliffs	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Angela	Leventis	Philipsburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerry	Fitzgerald	Sanibel	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	lance	san antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Burns	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kenneth	Wallace	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dionne	Spralls	Kalamazoo	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vicki	Weeks	Savannah	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Diener	Wilmington	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Madeleine	Toland	Ashburn	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Clark	Litchfield	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bobbie	Upson	Oceanside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elise	Moore	Van Nuys	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	White	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Nero	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Roesner	Traverse City	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Cox	Brooklyn Center	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
mary	renaker	Santa Monica	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair supports authoritarian Trump and he already has a network! Boris Ephstyn is a Russian asset. You're not welcome here Sinclair!
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Philip	Federico	Bloomfield	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martin	Jordan	Loami	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Todd	Buikema	Lakeway	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jack	Campbell	Kansas City	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Schricker	Pawling	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Powers	Altadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Phillips	Lakewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stefan	McKannon	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angelique	Van Bavel	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Pace	Chapel Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen F.	Ridge	Charlotte	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Buckman	Baton Rouge	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	McKillip	Sicklerville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Al	Rogat	Fort Mill	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

*	Zentura	Casper	Wyoming

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keith	Mehl	Livermore	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Smith	Marietta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicole	Pickens	La Mesa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Ann Goodell	Gastonia	North Carolina	This merger is not in the best interest of our country. A monopoly of this size allows it to put out any kind of information, true or false. They will be in control and we chance losing our right to free speech. This is too much like Russia.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Sarah	S	Loma Linda	California
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Hutchens	New Albany	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Henel	Sebastopol	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anya	H	Yonkers	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maureen	Bierhoff	King Of Prussia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

SANDRA	VILLAVICENCIO	Bonsall	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peter	Cooper	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Soteropoulos	Chatham	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
mary	karpiak	Westmont	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

pat	whebbe	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Grace	Brennne	Cumming	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Hazen	Nipomo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristen	Genovese	Derby	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Philip	Stratton	Fargo	North Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Allycia	Godbee	Cecil	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vicki	Green, Ph.D.	Napa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Luke	Tabacchi	Virginia Beach	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alex	Panzetta	South Ozone Park	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Norris	Robinson	Oklahoma City	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Ambrose	Oneonta, NY 13820	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Norton	Durango	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Campbell	tequesta, Fl	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Roberts	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Rux	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gaia	Mika	Taos	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Perry	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rose	Crudele	Bay Village	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tricia	Satifka	Washington	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Hodge	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Zach	Gonzalez-Landis	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Arana	East Boston	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	YEAGER	OSWEGO	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marco	Pontiac	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Rosenbaum	West Caldwell	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Benjamin	Tyner	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bette	Dedrick	Creswell	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shayna	Burko	Evansville	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Jenkins	Sunnyvale	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edward	Gullo	Bellows Falls	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Gunther	Islip	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Zegan	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

hugh	kelly	Sarasota	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Ames	Hartsdale	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Vandenburgh	Springfield	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lily	Webster	Los Angeles	California

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Lee	Garcia	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Warren	Beaver	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jimmie	Bates	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tammy	Dolan	MOUNT PLEASANT	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Berger	Montrose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donnell	Bruce	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Toni	Mayer	El Cerrito	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Craig	Michaud	Redwood City	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				A merger between Sinclair and Tribune would violate the FCC's own policies on National TV Ownership. Together, Sinclair and Tribune would reach more than 39 per cent of all U.S. TV households. Such a merger would reduce viewpoint diversity, a key point upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
				A conglomerate of such size and power would have a detrimental effect on free speech and on the diversity of views in media. These are essential for a healthy democracy. The FCC must do what is right and oppose this merger.

Abby	Wanamaker	Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Hauck	Springfield	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Soriano-Palma	Watsonville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Brown	Solvang	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Carver	Ambler	Pennsylvania	I am adding my voice to the many who are dismayed at the Sinclair threat to free speech and fair unbiased reporting. Their extremist heavy handed editorial control across all their stations seems more like a state controlled communist media, not the free press that is essential for a free nation. They are feeding the country a kind of indoctrination that is sanctioned by unseen powerful and monied interests, all wrapped up in the facade of news.
Kenneth	Finton	Arvada	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Molly	Weinberg	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lance	Alligood	Sanford	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Ewert	Loveland	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abby	Wanamaker	Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Smith	Park Ridge	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Kline	Blacksburg	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lois	Zeidman	Tempe	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tricia	Kob	Fort Collins	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Becker	Woodbury	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kristina	Hudson	Woodland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Curt	Gebhart	Jackson Heights	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sheila	Bray	oakhurst	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terri	Stoll	Tarrytown	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Dunaj	Old Lyme	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Green	Crozet	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brad	Hershbein	Kalamazoo	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Heintz	Sun Lakes	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Krejsta	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Wiles	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Gillaspy	Reno	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nikki	Faddick	Carlsbad	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	natyzak	Saratoga Springs	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marielle	Levy	Oakton	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Franco	Astoria	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Taylor	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Zagumny	Cookeville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Brunner	Lake Elmo	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roy	Thompson	Sinking Spring	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Nelson	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathleen	Colwill	Berwyn	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Petersen	Columbia	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Evans-Ford	New Braunfels	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

betsy	Flory-McCoy	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Aileen	Schulte	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	White	Maplewood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Adkins	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Burt	Warner Robins	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Rosenberg	Sherman Oaks	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Marshall	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anie	Knipping	Montclair	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Hall	Greeneville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Eastman	Pittsford	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Pavlic	Northville	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Albert	Semer Jr	West Columbia	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Mangini	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amu	Haselfeld	Dorchester	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gene	Stewart	La Jolla	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Nutini	Delray Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kathy	ford	Fallbrook	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristine	Quintero	Yuma	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Neeman	Dayton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Snavely	Lawrence	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorraine	Romero	Henderson	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Thomas	FERNDALE	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ted	Marshall	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Medina	Centerville	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerome	Frieman	Cary	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ronald	Davidian	Kentfield	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meta	McDowell	Rancho Mirage	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Greenhill	Honolulu	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Johnson	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lenora	R	Barnhart	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meabon	Burns	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill and Alan	Casty	Seaside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Puglisi	Bridgewater	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard L	Giovanoni	Morton Grove	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Feissel	Santa Rosa	California	If you value truth and factual reporting, then you must stop the Sinclair-Tribune merger which would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Richard	Puglisi	Bridgewater	New Jersey	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jared	Contreras	Dallas	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Mead	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

A.J.	O'Brien	Herndon	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rebecca	Wells	Lincoln	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julianna	Robinson	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Connor	Cunningham	Chapel Hill	North Carolina

Please block the Sinclair-Tribune merger, which would give one corp

Arthur	Goldfarb	E Northport	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracy	Sear	Ojai	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Tully	Jacksonville	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hannah	Gibson	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mika	Handelman	Ypsilanti	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joelle	Noulin Merat	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jillian	Sang	Coral Springs	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Levitov	Lincoln	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

DaMarkus	James	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beatrice	Berkery	Burbank	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Miller	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beth	Johnstone	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deb	Walsh	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

bob	kochinskas	Putney	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Lowry	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Colleen	Matoon	El Cajon	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan Keirn	Kester	Fort Wayne IN	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Curran	Redding	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stacy	Cornelius	Laguna Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Hochman	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Kittell-Queller	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Johnsrude	Prospect	Kentucky	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Proietta	Phila	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ingeborg	MacKay	Petaluma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Moore	Davis	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Emerson	West Hartford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Ollive	Superior	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dawna	Leggett	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rhonda	Richardson	Sneads Ferry	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Wesling	Wildomar	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Gorney	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eileen	Coen	Chevy Chase	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J. Michelle	Porter	Hillsboro	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brooke	Larsen	Baton Rouge	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Zac	Hestand	North Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Olivia	S	ELK GROVE	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Bucklin	Sonoma	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Bishop	Plainfield	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Rothman	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Ketchel	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Werner	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Regan	Duluth	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rose	Jeffery	Muncie	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Isenberg	Fenton	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helene	Rosen	Ivyland	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katie	Hanson	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Freed	Sebastian	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Loren	Fox	Bronx	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allan	Gleason	Kingman	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ashley	Farreny	Pennsauken	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorraine	Graham	Saint Ignace	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Sumich	Mountain View	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Walsh	Hoboken	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Douglass	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Georgia	Cox	Manhattan Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rosa	Rosas	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenn	Kalleberg	Aliso Viejo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stacy	Lauwers	Ferndale	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Berkshire	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Chiao-Ih	Hui	Salt LAke City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rodney	Whisenhunt	Roseburg	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joann	Koch	Lebanon	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Hitchcock	Palmer	Alaska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Linda	Gillaspy	Reno	Nevada	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The American people are tired of propaganda news. I get my news from the BBC and this is ridiculous. No younger people I know believe that the news is real. For a democracy to work, news must not be biased and must be factual. Having shows like Fox News is killing America. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

URBAE	HALL	ARDEN HILLS	Minnesota	The answer should be no. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Ivie	Salt Lake City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Hall	North Canton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Wulff	La Grange	Kentucky

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlotte	Wright	Tega Cay	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Daniel	Hess	Midlothian	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gayle	Tapp	Tulsa	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Maxwell	North Platte	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jaime	DiMeco	Visalia	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Fisk	Palm Bay	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Dudley	Madison	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	McLellan	Painesville	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicole	Espina	Brooklyn	New York

Sinclair has got to go. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Checchia	Encinitas	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brandon	Dudley	Madison	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Charter	Jericho	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Hall	North Canton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Isabel	Ortiz	Beaverton	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Arellano	Lyons	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Halac	Fort Collins	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michon	Hinz	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Cole	Wheaton	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Ruiz	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Noel	Kirshenbaum	SAN FRANCISCO	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harry	Halac	Fort Collins	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Horton	Independence	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lawrence	Turk	Hendersonville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Longanecker	Placerville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanie	Quinn	Saginaw	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ben	Calderone	Levittown	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peggy	Miller	Lemoore	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Mabry	Highlands Ranch	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chelsea	Cameron	Ventura	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melissa	Moorehead	Robbinsville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlene	Deveraturda	Mililani	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellie	Schwartzman	Orinda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Brookstone	Lakewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Guerra	Bayside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Edell	Westlake Village	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Cooper	Middlefield	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Griffy	Glendale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Dawson	Soquel	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

C	Soraghan	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erin	Aidi	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Gylden	Valley City	North Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	Clark	Sloatsburg	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Gratz	Kailua	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Leasure	Davis	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arnold	Finkel	Cooper City	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Margaret	Friend	Tampa	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country that would stifle the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. The proposed merger comes at a critical time when our fragile democratic institutions are being undermined. Please insure that diversity of perspective is maintained in the press by denying this merger.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Sossner	Lombard	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Black	Salem	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	McLeod	Palos Verdes Estates	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Sundergill	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Horning	Millersport	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Coakley	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Nordmeyer	Saratoga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Tully	Lexington	Kentucky	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Bowker	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Fisher	West Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Bachman	Tallahassee	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Brown-Istvan	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Raiman	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Tanquary	Grandview	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Fisher	Castro Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Grace	Carswell	Louisville	Kentucky

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Keim	Columbiaville	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
P	Bryer	Eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Huston	Lancaster	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandi	Hebley	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shirley	Fredricks	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Khurshaid	Alam	Northville	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betsy	Maestro	Cornville	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexandria	Bryce	Grand Rapids	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Adams	St. Charles	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kimberly	Cleland	Ashburn	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beverly	Haga	Mesa	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
E	Powers	Inglewood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Lindgren	Gainesville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Shirlena	Monroe	Salinas	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Freedom from tyranny includes the media. Independent investigative reporting is imperative to our understanding. The press must remain truly free, and this merger is just a step further down the path to a dictatorship.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Daniel	Wagner	New Berlin	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roberta	Ruben	Springfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenda	Hawley	Moscow	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Ali	Mahdavi	solana beach	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. With un industrial monopoly we lose money. With a media monopoly we lose our liberty. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria Perlita	Schorfheide	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charles	Winship	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

michele	sterlin	tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sylvie	Jannon-Shields	Santa Clara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	Levicky	Sparta	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Wolfe	Nashville	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Morgan	Richards	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Darrin	Doyle	Mount Pleasant	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Bridges	Burbank	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ioana	Barac	Meriden	Connecticut	Growing up in communist Romania I know too well what a monopoly over broadcasting of any type can mean, especially if paired with an ideology and intent of spreading a particular message. It is so disheartening to see how things in the U.S. turn more and more like they are in Eastern Europe - instead of the former eastern block learning from the U.S., it is us here regressing into mistakes already proven damaging to free speech, free thinking, trustworthy officials, separation of powers and depoliticized judiciary

Ed	Baker	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lucinda	Reichley	North Wales	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Evans	Beavercreek	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra L	Lawrence	New Braunfels	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Fehr	Sharpsburg	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Weinstein	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Evans	Beavercreek	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Fehr	Sharpsburg	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Toledo	West Palm Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Toledo	West Palm Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Toledo	West Palm Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Ginsberg	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Boyer	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Toledo	West Palm Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Weitz	Laguna Niguel	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberly	Trauth	Del Mar	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Jackson	Elgin	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Toledo	West Palm Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Koldus	South Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kevin	Leslie	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

marilyn	townsend	willits	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Tishkoff	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tymekia	Scott	Alexandria	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Behr	Phoenix	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Molly	Skinner	Huntington Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marci	Adams	Franklin	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Merrilyn	McGloin	Williams	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bobby	Rabon	Grambling	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sue	Struthers	Riverside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jesus R	Cruz	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Merrilyn	McGloin	Williams	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anne Marie	Gunther	Norristown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcia	Peterzell	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Glinski	Alden	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debbie	Fox	Rockledge	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Heather	Yates	Tracy	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Merrilyn	McGloin	Williams	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Micolucci	Cornelius	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexa	Metrick	Golden	Colorado
Ahren	Ream	Kutztown	Pennsylvania

The FCC seems to be working actively against its mission, first with repealing net neutrality and now with allowing a merger of Sinclair Broadcasting Group and Tribune Media.

The fourth estate is an essential part of a functioning democracy--I've seen firsthand what can happen in a country without an independent and robust media. I was visiting Katmandu, Nepal over Christmas of 2000 when rumors were spread that a Bollywood star made negative comments about the Nepalese people. There were riots in the streets, Indian shop owners were attacked and their businesses burned, and children were shot by errant bullets while studying at their desks at home. These comments were never confirmed, the actor denied ever saying

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vivian	Look	Galt	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bea	N	Bradenton	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	McSweeney	Midlothian	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eda	Wilson	Whitewater	Wisconsin	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shanna	Fleming	Petaluma	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kirsten	Aaboe	Lemon Grove	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Smith	El Cerrito	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nathan	Hetrick	Lakewood	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alex	Dillard	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Georgine	Busch	Kailua Kona	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Aquino	Des Plaines	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen and Will	Lozow Cleary	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Loverud	Andover	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Regina	Lehman	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Buchert	New Orleans	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Labiner	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Leddy	los angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caryn	Brown	Mc Dowell	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Nowack	Brewster	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Austin	Gore	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jim	Vorland	Preston	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Merrilyn	McGloin	Williams	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Phair	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger is a nightmare and would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	McAuliffe	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Merrilyn	McGloin	Williams	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara-Ann	Nikl	Danville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Martinez	Maplewood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kira	Moore	Sarasota	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tatum	Ponte	East Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
PRISCILLA	DELANEY	WYNNEWOOD	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Flores	Lubbock	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laurel	Mastrogiovanni	Croton On Hudson	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

G	Burton	Delaware	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Shaw	Land O Lakes	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Delahoy	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
steven	nasta	New City	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susanna	Ehrmann	Glenview	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
johnny	kersey	Manchester,	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Angevine	Bethel	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Viers	Hubbard	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vicki	Long	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Bloom	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Daschbach	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Juan Paz	Mendez	Bend	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Turnbull	Salem	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Taylor	Westbury	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Bauer	Kailua	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Herbert	Short	W Homestead	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Freya	Harris	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gerard	Gower	Scranton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keitha	Farney	Plattsburgh	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peter	Schumacher	Pennsboro	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Kerman	Warren	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Ann	Fleming	Manhattan	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katie	Cowling	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Nancy	Zamboni	Trenton	New Jersey	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. There are already accounts of Sinclair media journalists being required to read questionable materialon air. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Kathleen	White	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Schwartz	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Aquino	Des Plaines	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Neal	Brown	Ormond Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Blagen	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kimberly	Stronczek	Hot Springs	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Hall	Berlin	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Powell	Gaithersburg	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Antoinette	Martin	Sayville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
marilyn	gockowski	duluth	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Healy	Torrance	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarah	Schulz	Valley Village	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Molloy	Urbana	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	A	Mesa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Lopez	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Gajdos	Lombard	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Bechtel	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rose	Mankowski	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy	Geoghegan	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Samantha	Endrom	Staten Island	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alain	Gervais	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Guinn	Bourbonnais	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Pocklington	Salisbury	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pat	Purnell	New BERN	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matt	Bowker	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Stratman PhD	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Wieland	San Ramon	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ishrat	Sahasrabudhe	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rochelle	Morrison	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glynden	Bode	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Harrison	Tarzana	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Barnes	Villas	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abbie	Jacobs	Hoboken	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Goscenski	Battle Creek	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clare	Colquitt	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Krauss	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Ceriale	Palm Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ethel	Simpson	Fayetteville	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Varacchi	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margaret	Wise	Scarborough	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	Smith	Keene	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ashley	Wiseman-Norment	Round Rock	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sam	Lightcap	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kristina	Wroblewski	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rheannon	Torres	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Davis	Marquette	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Evans	Salisbury Mills	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia M	Southcomb	Germantown	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lucille	Barish	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Josefina	Casales	Port St Lucie	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Babb	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Cheslow	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrice	Zboya	Penacook	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christy	Stout	Holden	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dan	Schupack	Westminster	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Hawes	Boca Raton	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Jones	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary M.	Mason	Huntington Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Cheslow	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Turner	Saint Charles	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	Buckley	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lori	Shein	Poway	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Seibert	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sudha	Jamthe	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Fraker	El Centro	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Beegle	Golden Valley	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Campbell	Elkton	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Howard	Arvada	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Lopez	Las vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Tiedeman	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Donovan	Glendale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Samuel	Riccillo	Pueblo	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. There must be freedom of the media.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

emily	hall	montclair	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cindi	Hernandez	Mena	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Don	Chasteen	Millbury	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlotte	Adams	Wimberley	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Davidson	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shannon	Goddard	Morgan Hill	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kyra	Carroll	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Maxwell	Archbold	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Ostrow	East Amherst	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	DiCarlo	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anna	Kuipers	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	dArcangelo	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Demetra	Vounas	Skaneateles	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Acres Dailing	Sugar Land	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Heuvelman	Venice	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
R	Stuckey	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Rick	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beulah	White	Middletown	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Dodd	Creve Coeur	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Heuvelman	Venice	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Hunt	Fullerton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Ruhl	Flemington	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Tsien	Eugene	Oregon	Truthful, honest and relentless journalism is essential for a democracy. A merger between Sinclair and Tribune Media would NOT provide readers or listeners with truthful or honest reporting - it would however provide them with relentless right-wing propaganda. America does not need any more propaganda machines. The proposed merger should not be allowed.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Sherry	Klinedinst	South Bend	Indiana
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	McGuire	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathan	Habel	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

michael	Petrozzini	Portland	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
David	Kale	Los Angeles	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. It's never been more critical to safeguard our media. Our unusual current President has made clear, time and time again, that he's against freedom of The Press – unless it's press in his favor(FOX PROPAGANDA OUTLET!). Stunningly, this President once tweeted, "Sinclair is far superior to CNN and even more Fake NBC, which is a total joke." IT's NOT HARD TO Guess which side he's on with this proposed merger? We don't have a second to spare as OUR FCC careens recklessly toward pushing through a merger deal that would make Sinclair the largest TV broadcasting conglomerate this country has ever seen. We can't let this corporation take away our rights to a free press and free speech. DO YOUR JOB!

Rita	Carlson	Eureka	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nathan	Jones	Lansing	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Antonelli	Barrington	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Norm	Stanley	Yucaipa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Banks	Center Barnstead	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Denis	Hanlon	Sebring	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deondra	Carter	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bill	Brady	West Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexia	Caprio	Aliso Viejo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Porter	Dolgeville	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Roach	Dayton	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mitchell	Stachowicz	Yorktown Heights	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Mirto	Orange	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leal	Abbott	Woodland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pepukayi	West	Hackensack	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Birch	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Clickner	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bernardo	Alayza Mujica	Lima	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Haft	Beverly Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
LAUREN	MELLON	New Hope	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Brown	Silverton	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Susinski	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helga	Spector	Somerset	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cornelia	Whittlesey	Mount Ulla	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Douglas	Engle	Budd Lake	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Hesdorfer	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lillian	Graziano	Coram	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Buckley	Lyons	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karin	Forno	Pacific Grove	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher John	Smith	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Hottinger	Pfafftown	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shane	Linderman	Zeeland	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maeve	Rupp	Clifford Township	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Suzanne	Frisch	Guilford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Janes	KailuaKona	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Kaser-Odor	Concord	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Cohen	new Orleans	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Klos	McMurray	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Gallagher	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alliya	Qazi	Seal Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jim	Martin	Reno	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Carpenter	Livonia	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

De	Broughman	Kalamazoo	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elaina	Hershowitz	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

janine	jones	las vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Frederick	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

F.	Wesley	Ithaca	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Egbert	Tenaya	Minnetonka	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Hayes	New Philadelphia	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Hulbert	Palmer	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Celia	O'Kelley	tuscaloosa	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Surton	Cascade Locks	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Stuhr	Overland Park	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Chandler	Shelbyville	Kentucky	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Smith	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caroline	Kirsch Russell	Casper	Wyoming

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Blodgett	Lansing	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Wayne	Losey	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ra Khem	Thoth	St. Louis, Mo.	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tamara	Arsenault	silver spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mccleary	Harriet	Minneapolis	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna Marie	Slack	Loveland	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Voakes	Happy Valley	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Schusterman	Bellaire	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Kasten	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Scripp	Varysburg	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Holly	Allen	Springboro	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Slayton	Moore	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Larson	Omaha	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Bates	Norman	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia S.	Russell	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Cohen	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Goth	Montrose	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lucia	Jiang	Valparaiso	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	McCaleb	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Riffelmacher	Bay City	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karon	Allen	Cypress	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruth	Karpel	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Gilpin	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Josephine	Bramble	Richmond	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eidy	Villegas	Irvine	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Moshe	Adler	University Heights, C	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dimitri	Papaioannou	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eve	Schwartz	Keswick	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Robinson	Boca Raton	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

F.Gene	Miller	Macomb	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Asano	Fertig	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Joseph	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

LeeAnne	Pinnelli	Cotati	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Nierenberg	Teaneck	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lawrence	Weber	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matt	Revels	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Burke	Kittery Point	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Moeser	Portsmouth	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bret	Polish	Reseda	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Becky	Steward	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Pinter	batavia	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Michaelson	Binghamton	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Washington	Greenville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	Duran	Reno	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Bellizzi	Solomons	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Grossman	Tallahassee	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanna	Krause-Johnson	Minneapolis	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Franny	Villegas	Irvine	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J	Stansell	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tracy	Singer	jersey city	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frederick	Fernald	Wolfeboro	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brenda	Main	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julia	Clark	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
D	Johnson	East Syracuse	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Fleming	Tulsa	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	ONeill	Pleasant Hill	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marg	Walker	St. Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tracy	Meyer	Goochland	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alfred	Arney	Fort Collins	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alma	D'Epiro	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandy Ridolfi	Ridolfi	Rock Island	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Harnish	Landisville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marjorie	Anderson	Croton On Hudson	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sondra	Pardes	New Hyde Park	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Anctil	Riverside	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary Rita	McDevitt	Louisville	Kentucky	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Suh	Forest Hills	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
robert&mary	Swain	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tess	Clark	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brianna	Rosen	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah Jane	Wilson	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
J. William	Pezick	Richmond	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eddie	Anderson	Jackson	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frank	Wilsey	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stuart	Hayden	Centennial	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danita	Reynolds	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Esteki	Sterling	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Schenke	Lenexa	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Marchese	Henderson	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Keith	Weng	Redwood City	California	The proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger will leave the US with a single broadcaster reaching vast majority of US households, a direction in contradiction of the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristopher	Allen	Myrtle Beach	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roger	Stoughton	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

robert	bates	Kansas City	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Stutman	Newark	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fiona	Dunlop	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Kathleen	Kastles	Wailuku	Hawaii	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please do what you can to block the Sinclair-Tribune merger. We need to get a variety of opinions, not just those of the 1% of people who hold power and vast wealth. First net neutrality, and with little bites at our freedoms, soon we will have a very limited access to information that differs from those who see consumers as resources. This merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by

Janice B.	Heller	Palm Desert	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kat	Theriault	Chandler	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

clyde	tucker	Wabeno	Wisconsin	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karron	Esmonde	Oceanside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

heather	spear	Truckee	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Hellwig	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nelson	Page	Marrero	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott And Cathleen	Weston	Post Falls	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lenore	Sheridan	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Clark	Clear Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathie	Sekendur	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Valerie	Adell	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Larson	Sunland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rose	Saint John	Guerneville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terry	Cohen	East Amherst	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bryan	Ruth	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanna	McGovney	Concord	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Greco	Studio City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Kossler	Oak Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Arnold	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edith	Hunter	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
CarolAnn	LeMasurier	Ward	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Florence Battis	Mini	Kennett Square	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gerald	Antich	Bolingbrook	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marjorie	Kessler	Katy	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	McConkey	DeKalb	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stacy	Sellers	Oxon Hill	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Whitney	Havins	Weymouth	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jenica	Faye	PRESCOTT	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marc	Beschler	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Klaus	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Heidelberg	Kamuela	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jocelyn	Johnsrude	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lou	Pellegrino	Lafayette	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Parker	Amherst	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph J	Pranschke	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Quana	Kavanagh	Lagrange	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcia	Petersen	Bradenton	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	LeJeune	Lafayette	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Johnson	Menominee	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chantalle	Hanna	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gretchen	Hammond	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Callahan	Little Egg Harbor Tw	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Betley	Kentwood	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

isaac	lara	san jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Lanham	Long Beach, Ca	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Powell	Hanover	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Suzanne	Parker	Inverness	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linnell	Krikorian	Manchester	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deborah	Uzurin	Ridgewood	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Embid	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janice	Mackanic	Point Pleasant	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	Leitner	North Myrtle Beach	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Berlin	Lewis	Spring	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina E	Dickson	Black Mountain	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margaret	Getty	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Renee	Verbanic	Fairmont	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith K.	Kliban	Corte Madera	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

veronica	delano	fairhaven	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rozalind	Werner	Yucca valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bill	Kelly	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hans	Von Briesen	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Mitchell	Yucaipa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Gremore	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Feliciano	Strongsville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Philip	Dooley	Tolland	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ruth	wolz	Troy	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Aguilera	Richmond	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Rey	Bryan	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Collins	Winnetka	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Wendt	Kensington	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Les	Rozycki	Middletown	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce	Greenberg	Highmount	New York	All opinions need to be heard, not just one side of a story. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Kerrigan	Greenville	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Mohrman	Lone Tree	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Toles	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Leach	Bloomington	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Phyllis	Moroney	Fort Lauderdale	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kahlil	Goodwyn	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
L	Schreiner	Suwanee	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Kauffman	Newtown Square	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margery	Graves	Grinnell	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Jackson	Gilroy	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Mansker	Pearl City	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katelyn	Swift	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Chenelle	Newark	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

michael	adams	Ashland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jesse	Mendoza	Thornton	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terry	Bowen	Centennial	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barrett	Cisney	Owings Mills	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Perry	Canton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steph	Smith	Little Falls	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Camille	Milose	Shelby Township	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Stapleton	Farmington	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Dukes	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	McCulley	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Glasgal	Rockleigh	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Craig	Beach	Reisterstown	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Koopmans	Burlington	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Valera	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

T	Collier	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Phyllis	Stanbury	Grand Blanc	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rodger	Yeaton	El Segundo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Schwab	Westerville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dr. William 'Skip'	Dykoski	New Brighton	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katya	Lobanova	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Howard	Rentzer	Lahaina	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Morabito	San Marcos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phil	Goecke	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gillian	Hauptman	FANWOOD	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Atterberg	Quincy	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Waters	Fort Collins	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lawrence	Tetenbaum	Plainview	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Hatfield	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Chrisos	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
eileen	juric	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laina	Katcher	Los Alamos	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Eunson	Senoia	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Resnick	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	McGinnis	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arleen	Wagner	Montrose	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Theodore	Bomba	New Britain	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack	Jenkins	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Rehak	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leah	Hallow	Clifton Park	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Gill	San Rafael	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenda	Born	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Roberge	Montrose	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Doug	Ruth	La Mesa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Clark	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Hoyt	Cresco	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Johanna	Shafer	Stanfordville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Smith-Kennedy	Foster City	California	I believe that a Sinclair-Tribune merger would pose serious threats to the future of our democracy. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Robert	Tharp	Santa Clara	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. I believe that it has never been more critical to preserve our First Amendment Rights and safeguard our diverse media. I strongly urge the FCC to stand on the right side of history and block this This is a bad idea for democracy. We should be reducing the number of permissible TV stations owned, not allowing expansion. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

Claire	Axelrad	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Folks	Monterey	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Kinney	Norwich	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	Mast	Cresco	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Molly	Klowden	Elmhurst	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Jern	Jackson	Wyoming

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Mosby	Lafayette	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Falcon	Decatur	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geoffrey	Berresford	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ben	Asher	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chad	Eckard	mansfield	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eugene	Atkin	Aurora	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Kennedy	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	Palmer	Louisville	Kentucky

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Thomas	Lansing	Michigan

No, no. Not okay, bad....

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Denenberg	Glenview	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

O.	Stryker	Gainesville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anna	Victoria	Columbia	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanne	Hurschman	Tamarac	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steven	Kapchinske	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristin	Andersen	Murrieta	California	This is really wrong!!! Please listen and stop this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Rowe	Lake Mary	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Stark	Elgin	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Osgood	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Barry	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susanne	Hesse & Doug Dyer	Alachua	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Morris	Pomona	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aidan	Donahue	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Irene	Lines	Concord	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynnea	Helgedalen	Coos Bay	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Paparelli	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Miles	Calabresi	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Denenberg	Glenview	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane	Green	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Shaffer	Winter Garden	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Prentice	Clark	Chappaqua	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jimmie	Smith	Garland	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Richardson	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Ellis	Port Ewen	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Barlow	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robbi	Nester	Lake Forest	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Garaventa	Manchester	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gloria	Hoerning	East Islip	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Loretta	Dunne	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Kelly	Mount Laurel	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marian	Ellette	Hillsboro	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Henneman	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Chapman	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Scott	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matt	Chiodo	Littleton	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

eileen	juric	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Kohlman	Warwick	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marc	Brenner	Lafayette	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jorge	Morros	Hollywood	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Patterson	Fort Wayne	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ronald	Christ	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Harnly	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deb	Hoffman	Severna Park	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marlena	Lange	Middletown	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	D'Agostino	Gurnee	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adrienne	Meisel	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pedro	Salgado	Gulfport	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mitch	Young MD	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tracy	Anderson	brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Connie	Cranford	Haysville	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Nathanson	Del Mar	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheri	2	Barstow	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilou	Barratt	Myersville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dwight	Johnson	South Windsor	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Sarah	La Belle	Oak Park	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hernan	Correa	Brentwood	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joanna	Rubin	Canonsburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rita	Falsetto	Aguilar	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jamie	Harkins	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Marks	Altadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Norm	Cegelnik	Selma	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jody	Telfair-Richards	Bristol	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judy	Cross	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Molly	Finnegan	Lafayette	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Walters	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rose	Phillips	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	LaVertu	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Franklin	Whitney Jr.	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Josiah	Dunaway	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Timmons	Troutdale	Oregon	Seriously, how could you think this is a good idea? News is hard. The more journalists in the world the better. I don't even care if that means more of them are left standing at the truck stop in the ice every winter. We need good information, we need more sources. Sinclair isn't that, so don't screw with me.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
joanne	murer	stillwater	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Rogers	Plano	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Quintero	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heide	Osterlye-Collins	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Davis	Norman	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Consuelo	Cruz	Palm Desert	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kendra	Mon	Petaluma	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Rye	Highland Park	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Robinson	Salem	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elliot	Gordon	Irvine	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Krysta	Workman	Burlington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	McCort	Los Gatos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ashley	Donayre	Pottersville	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Kelly	San Bruno	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kim	Fay	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Asche	Las Cruces	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Abel	Avellaneda	Santa Ana	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maureen	Duffy	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arlis	Bates	Litchfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Asay	Dover	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynn	Levine	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Kooy	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Zoe	Alexander	Haiku	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Burke	Oak Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donald	Minasian	Milford	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Mulhollem	Carlisle	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Geoffrey	Brookshire	Ithaca	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terry	Clayton	Pellston	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Lauer	Palo Alto	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Platt	Tallahassee	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarah	Creel	Fairfax	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Emmanuel	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Claire	Bennett	Beatrice	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tami	Biddle	Carlisle	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lee	Steinmetz	Emeryville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Duncan	Brown	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Doug	Church	Nashua	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daisy	Head	Tuscaloosa	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Jeffers	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	Orologas	Winter Haven	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Durk	Barton	Detroit	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Lindgren	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Greiss	Carlisle	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	McGonagle	Stoddard	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Damian	Osisek	Vestal	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Naugle	Fresno	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
frank	vargas	ione	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tara	Daub	Sea Cliff	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Herman	Schwartz	Keswick	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Darlene	Kvaternik	Harrisburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Petre	Popescu	Skokie	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	O.	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
john	moriarty	Maple Grove	Minnesota	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sinclair will use its power to require that their political views are

Gulam	Emadi	Van Nuys	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
George	Kaloyanides	Stony Brook	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Grayfred	Gray	KENNETT SQUARE	Pennsylvania	I believe that a free and diverse press in all its forms is essential to our American democracy. Permitting any corporation to control a substantial part of the media across the country is a threat to our democracy. I believe it is plain that the proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of such a size and power in this country that it would be such a threat. It would also contradict the FCC's own policies. Such ownership would stifle free speech, the free flow of information and the diversity of views in the press that has been and still is essential for our democracy to be strong and flexible as well as protective of our institutional structures that have made us the country that has been the envy of millions of people around
Cindy	Yelverton	Magnolia	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eva	Edelstein	Monroeville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christina	Warden	Matteson	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Becky	Friends Of Liberty	Chula Vista	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frank	Wissler	Spring Branch	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Monopolies are unAmerican.

Carol	Inouye-Matthews	Vancouver	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Mussman	Savage	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ismael	Martinez	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Samhitha	Sreenivasan	Howell	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Plank	Teton Village	Wyoming

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	OBrien	Redway	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Celeste	Winterberger	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mynka	Draper	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lois	Marshall	Wilmot	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gerald	Good	Carlsbad	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Pinkerton	Centennial	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathleen	Osborn	Kearney	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Bradley	San Mateo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Wohacz	Santa Maria	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jesse	Maniff	Roslyn heights	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Tinch	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Holly	Jones	Beavercreek	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hope	Doty	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Loesch	Galt	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ami	Delgado Perez	Pensacola	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Johnson	Ruther Glen	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Faleiro	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harold	deWolff	Kennett Square	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martin	Fleishman	Farmington	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leonid	Turetsky	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clifford	Babcock	Battle Creek	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Johnson	Ruther Glen	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Tinch	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victor	Paglia	Newport Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Merritt	Denver	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheri	Kneifel	North Platte	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Laureta	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heath	Hancock	Davenport	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott	Jennings	New Orleans	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Calhoun	Livonia	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frank	Skeltis	Battle Creek	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Schwartz	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peggy	Morris	Tampa	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Saul	Schindler	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Fauci	Lady Lake	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee	Johnson	Las Vegas	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	McGee	Jackson	Wyoming	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

susan	porter	Avondale	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tameez	Sunderji	Walnut Creek	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ariane	Famiglietti	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. You must say NO to Sinclair!
Judy	Sartor	Redondo Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Kristin	Jordan	Akron	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Adams	Brunswick	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vickie	Cummings	Wakefield	Rhode Island

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Walker	Fullerton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffery	Walsh	Avon Lake	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Norton	Christiansburg	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle free speech and further endanger the diversity of views in the press that is essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicole	Kittersong	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Lane	Holland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Mah-Leung	Palmetto Bay	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Jane	Delmastro	Penfield	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Jane	Delmastro	Penfield	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arthur	Hagar	Pine Lake	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Jane	Delmastro	Penfield	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Buehler	Yardley	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	Golden	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Newgren	Homewood	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vickie	Askins	Cygnet	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Newgren	Homewood	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Hager	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Vore	Marquette	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee Ellen	Benjamin	Atlanta	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roberto	Tejada	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tamaqua	Lovett	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol Michler	Detmer	Murfreesboro	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sherry	Linker	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bill	Werman	Dublin	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Francis	Houghton	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jay	Roth	Mounds View	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Blandford	Amarillo	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Betty	Little	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erika	Sjule	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeff	Buckley	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jackquelyn	Young	White Plains	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eric	Griffin	Spring Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

lorraine	schmall	chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nelda	Carlisle-Gray	St Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Sorenson	Lenexa	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Levy	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Payne	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Dorothy	Johnson	Centreville	Virginia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Freedom of the press is one of the foundations of a democracy. Plurality of news sources is essential to the dissemination of ideas. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

Amy	Kimmel	GRAND ISLAND	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephanie	Randall	Gray	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Ryan	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Marinelli	Morgantown	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Wisner	Lake Villa	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Ann	Fastook	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Jordan	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Simon	Jacobs	Cambridge	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Gray	Woodstock	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Probst	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Arnett	North Miami Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne Clorite	Clorite	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thill	Raghu	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Moscatello	Rio Grande	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dewey	Odhner	Horsham	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Raczkowski	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kay	Randall	Moorhead	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandra	Wicoff	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Walters	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Glass	Pleasant Hill	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Sensibar	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mitzi	Deitch	Feasterville Trevose	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Bean	Savannah	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Kalinowski	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terence	Anthoney	Carbondale	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joshua	Knopman	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Koblenz	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Abate	Lindenhurst	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Cunningham	Madera	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Betty	Piniotes	Lisle	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Dubosky	Spring Mills	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Carolyn	Mooso	North Hollywood	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

nicole	demestihas	Montpelier	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Myrtle	Jamison	Forrest City	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Liv	Hempel	Bay Shore	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith L.	Sensibar	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andy	Lynn	Pensacola Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Hobart	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jim	Anthis	Edmond	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Clapper	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gloria	Cisneros Lenoir	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Leiken	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	Juenemann	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randy	Perry	chuluota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maria	Aragon	Alamogordo	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beatrice	Hoffmann	Winona	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Uli	Schöberl	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Gay	Kramer-Dodd	Eugene	Oregon	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We need diverse ownership of media sources in our country more than ever, yet the number of companies owning media outlets is shrinking. Please reverse this trend. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Dinin	Fresh Meadows	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Zagumny	Cookeville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gretchen	Cooper	Arcata	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Temple	San Leandro	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

JANE	MARINSKY	Buffalo	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sara	Ross	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Rothschild	San Mateo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shari	Farrar	Hackett	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephany	Alphin	Winston Salem	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Blakesley	Foothill Ranch	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power (at least in this country) and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press, both of which are essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger!

Nancy	Kramer	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Rodgers	Charlevoix	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Barry	Manchester Townsh	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Boyle	Midlothian	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Burrus	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dennis	Alanen	Roseville	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Astrich	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arnold	Advocate	Camp Meeker	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacqueline	Soenneker	Laurel	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joann	Brown	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Thomas	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hannah	Thompson	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Reefe	Fayetteville	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stefania	Johns	Algonac	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Henry	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eugenia	Economos	Orlando	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Kollasch	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bruce	Rauscher	Alexandria	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Henry	Gerard	Capo Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
shannon	maaske	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

TJ	Martin	Cary	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Llewellyn	Mesquite	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kendyl	Moran	Arlington Heights	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Daley	Atlanta	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lesley	Schultz	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jose	Arzuaga	CICERO	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Villano	Erie	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dennis	Keener	Medford	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kay	Bircher	Benson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Driscoll	Meridian	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Stufflebeam	Oregon City	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Vivian	Barro	Gastonia	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carlos	Corral	Hayward	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carrie	Yamaoka	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Quante	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sara	Cleto	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Warwick	Winslow	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Wright	Wyoming	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Wood	Ithaca	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Russell	Millburn	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Craig	Loftin	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rahel	Ruiz	Castro Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Willie	Lin	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jason	Baldinger	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Yanta	Hugo	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Suzik	Addison	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Alberghini	Bellerose	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Howie	Fresno	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	Paxton	Brook Park	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Swett	Black Mountain	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorrie	Binion	Lexington	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathleen	Abler	Huntington Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Fisher	Huntingdon Valley	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Golob	SOUTH NEWFANE	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Bauer	Reston	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Kirsh	Shrewsbury	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	White	Derwood	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Pinkerton	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Maclaughlin	Rochester	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ebun	Adelona	Hot Springs	South Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Briel	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gabriel	Frayne	Portland	Oregon

Commissioners: I am a journalist who works for a neighborhood nev

Heidi	Daniels	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Barnum	Carmel	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kade	vandewalle	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Burton	Scottsdale	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Scherf	Oregon	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steven	Stockwell	Ochlocknee	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Penni	Thorpe	San Mateo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Kraus	New Rochelle	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Clayton	Lynchburg	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jonathan	Halperen	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thelma	Sacks	Maitland	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mike	Meyer	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lore	Lawrence	Duarte	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steven	Stockwell	Ochlocknee	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cindy	Munford	Bedford	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Virginia	Hildebrand	Mountain Top	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mira	Vlajnic	Des Plaines	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Lanning	Cedar City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	Ehrlich	New Orleans	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pamela	Scott	Boulder Creek	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Bryce	Gilsum	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tyler	Michaelson	East Syracuse	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Lee	Frisco	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gina	Vastola	Point Pleasant Beach	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Wagner	Youngstown	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lois	Baruch	Delray Beach	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Vohlers	Cary	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lindsey	Utrata	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Stokes II	Freeport	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tori	Green	Bessemer	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nick	Dalke	los angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hampton	Shields	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Whiteside	Eureka	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sheri	Pippin	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beheroze	Shroff	Irvine	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Kitson	Wallingford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Hershey	Bloomfield Hills	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melissa	Masi	Tabernacle	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	O'Brien	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Riley	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Camp	Richmond	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Laciano	New Orleans	Louisiana

I am extremely concerned about a potential Sinclair-Tribune merger

Michael Grant	White	Alameda	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joe	Buhowsky	San Ramon	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

April	Dorcak	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Selma	Cufurovic	Boise	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Pendergast	Raymond	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erma	Lewis	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Christensen	Aurora	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elliott	Sernel	Palm Springs	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Timme	Puyallup	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jacqualine	Cavalla	Maspeth	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Harter	Havertown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Hoshko	Columbia	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Wernis	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Beverly	Tallahassee	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cecilia	Barbosa	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laverne	Hanna	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberly	Lowe	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sieglinde	Schmidt	Thousand Oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Russell	Duran	Gallup	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Endicott	Orlando	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Connie	Schmucker	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cynthia	Hatch	Memphis	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betty	King	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Raymond	Gomez	Spring Hill	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Martinus	Paso Robles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Jones	Coppell	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosemary	Smith-Campbell	Memphis	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Lombardi	Levittown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Hobart	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christine	Clayton-Stroh	Highland Park	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dan	Leonard	Medford	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Passon	Elk Rapids	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce	Truitt	Rochester	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Heather	Ladner	Lake Charles	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alison	LaBarge	Carol Stream	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marie	Garescher	Peekskill	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Paliakas	La Grange	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Olivia	Shelton	Painesville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Earl	Lowery	Redding	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joy	Carroll	Granville	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Gould	Redondo Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michelle	Koul	SevernA park	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. As god is my witness I will throw out my tv.

elizabeth	english	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
ACLU Supporter	Unknown	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nick	Ospa	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jaspreet	Klar	Fresno	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Lanyon	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Bussgang	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allen	Gibas	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stefanie	Landman	Livermore	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorraine	Fuller	Arvada	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Eric	Konon	Brooklyn	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies.
				Sinclair Broadcasting Group injects politically charged segments into their local news segments. They order their anchors to parrot the company's far right wing views and pretend it's coming from local news anchors.
				The Sinclair Broadcasting Group's proposed merger with Tribune Media is unacceptable.

Elissa	Malcohn	Beverly Hills	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gibran	Mancus	Fairfax	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerry	Taylor	Stamford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
eileen	Brown	denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Krista	Ahlberg	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Adkins	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Ditkowsky	Wilmette	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Josephs	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Richards	Ames	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Isabel	Kirsch	San Luis Obispo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Schultz	Upper Saddle River	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Meg	Sandow	Felton	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The press is not a fast-food conglomerate, where one counts on the exact same meal being served no matter where one eats. A diverse and free press is critical to the health of a democracy.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

Sherri	Wasserman	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margaret	Franklin	Collierville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Schwartz	Biddeford	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kent	Jaquette	Universal City	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louise	Scarfone	Fort Myers	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosemary	Neely	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Castells	Whitehouse Station	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Szurant	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harriet	Grose	Morristown,	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Szurant	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberly	Morrill	Portland	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Szurant	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alicia	Culbertson	Rapid City	South Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Phyllis	Park	Chillicothe	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia P	Haley	Sanderson	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jaden	Davis	Dallas	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Zettler	Jacksonville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Randal	Little	Thornton	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Walter	Moczygemba	Killeen	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claudia	Dade	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Weber	Fort Myers	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Hubbard-Reeves	Pensacola	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J	Hilton	Glen Allen	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Popp	New Albany	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Jones	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roberta	West	Rutledge	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joy	Massa	Mill Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steven	Hibshman	Foster City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elise	Margulis	Livingston	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Darrell	Driver	Carlisle	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Perry	Canton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Kiralis	Fairlee	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Zoe	Sitzmann	Zionsville	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diana	Moser	La Jolla	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	D'Angelo	Wilmette	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bruce	Peterson	Bridgeton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sallie	Everette	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gail	Sperling	Cincinnat	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Noreen	Szeluga	Lombard	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Teresa	Larsen	Solon	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Trudy	Miller	Wichita	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
maureen	taylor	st louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Luke	Metzger	Wichita	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle free speech, and the diversity of views in the press that is essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

MJ	Ariyanto	St. Louis	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Bricker	Ballwin	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pat	Duncan	Los Lunas	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aileen	Harvey	Novato	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Purcell	Paradise	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Brooks	Basking Ridge	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ulle	Koiv	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Deutsch	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judi	Kesselring-Bursby	Elk Grove	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Goldstein	Iowa City	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Annie	Thoms	Brooklyn	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Scripted news forced on all local stations belongs in a dictatorship, not a democracy. Please move to protect our democratic values and block the Sinclair-Tribune merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Ellis	Standing	Earlham	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Snell	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bobbi	Williams	Alameda	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Connelly	Cockeysville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

L Nell	Logan	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
michelle	carlson	West Plains	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karl	Schneider	Suttons Bay	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cameron	Babberney	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Carlisle	Gainesville	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Teresa	Syme	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bridget	Kyi	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Orandy	Forth	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Chrisman	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Rowe	Salina	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

susan	dickerson	Clinton	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Candyce	Anderson	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Geiger	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Ayhens	Turlock	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Courtnee	Bennett	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Moya	Jamestown	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Molloy	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

dawn	shauger	cascade	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Tonetti Dugan	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Constance	Otten	Midland Park	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beverly	Nero	Northridge	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Norma	Bridges	Redondo Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adina	Reshotko	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Skubick	Palm Harbor	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Darla	Ginter	Rocky River	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Marshall	Windsor	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Dengis	Delray beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
bennett	stein	brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joshua	Knight	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Rhodes	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mimi	Bartell	Cypress	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Hanly	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Minklei	Buffalo	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hannah	Walters	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martin	Woodle	Center Moriches	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Belch	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

P	Klein	Northport	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. As a journalist and citizen I urge you to do the right thing.
Robert J	McElroy, MD	Empire	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katie	De Pasquale	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julia	B	Lawrence	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Zephyr	Isely	Golden	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ginny	Mozaffarimehr	Tujunga	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Byrd	Fisherville	Kentucky	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Harry	Meredith	Inman	South Carolina	I watch a A Sinclair-Tribune station locally and they are extremely biased in their programming and a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Luderitz	Brigantine	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Earle	Annapolis	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Mondragon	Altamonte Springs	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Crowder	Glen Allen	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Clark	New Boston	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vilo	Westwood	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Otrin	Mount Shasta	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christopher	Liston	Elk Grove Village	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

holly	urbanus	Goleta	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Rogers	Tarrytown	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Schaake	Annapolis	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erik	Voldal	Rochester	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John AND Jean	Fleming	Lakeville	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Brian	Watson	Gainesville	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please don’t approve this merger. We don’t need government propaganda posing as news. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elisabeth	Sommer	El Paso	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sheryl	Negrin	Emeryville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Knopf	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anthony	Cox	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annette	Segall	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Riddle	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Daniels	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathy	Ferrier	Highland park	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arthur	Kendy	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ted	Hatsushi	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debbie	Tenenbaum	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Irma	Riley	Gainesville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karlene	Gunter	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Heath	Mobile	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Myers	Willows	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keven	Ayala	Manassas	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Brooke-Debock	Brattleboro	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frances	Dever	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Trisha	tenBroeke	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Metheney	Cardiff	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Levy	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Jeang	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Martin	Kahului	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aoife	U	Austin	Texas

I oppose a Sinclair-Tribune merger. It would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Nelligan-McGarry	Charles Town	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michaela	Crowther	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caitlin	York	Gardena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Culton	Okemos	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Kay	Westfield	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randy	Daugherty	Tyler	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gina	Caracci	Cocoa	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
virginia	watson	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marge	Dakouzlian	Staten Island	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dale	Ginsburg	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Cadwalader	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rita	Larkin	Addison	Illinois	I STRONGLY OPPOSE the Sinclair- Tribune merger! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Fomenko	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Milton	Mitchell	Fort Washington	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Reagel	winnetka	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janet	Getz	Bethesda	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karl	Traichel	Northford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joanne	Yacko	New Suffolk	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce	Rood	Plymouth	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Clara	Whiting	San antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clint	Cruse	Webster Groves	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Randy	Applegate	Westminster	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Snyderman	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	Rohde	Lincoln	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marylynn	Boris	Orlando	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Richard	Boyer	San Clemente	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. What kind of a [totalitarian?] country are we. Why are The People having to constantly fight to preserve American Principles? A media monopoly, or even significant media consolidation is anathema to our fundamental values. DO NOT do this thing! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a

Alice	Jena	Richmond Hill	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fern Lea	Weinstein	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

richard	Camp	Riverside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Logan	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Baron	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
R.	Henrickson	E. Nassau	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annabel	Zammit	Walnut Creek	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Suzanne	Bremmer	Dryden	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Merrill	Vienna	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Geraldine	Levine	Huntley	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

shari	w.	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Sutton	Salisbury	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ryuichi	Miyahara	Menlo Park	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gus	Montero	tarrytown, NY	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Pace	Arlington Heights	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tiya	L	Florissant	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Moses	Carl	La Crescenta	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Jordan	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christian and Mary	Schneider	Elysburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Tice	Potomac	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marge	Moon	Cleveland Heights	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Wise	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracie	Miller	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Benjamin	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Massey	Quincy	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tracy	Wells	Westwood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carl	Aplin	Sheridan	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gail	Berritt	Westport	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Link	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
GRETCHEN	VORBECK	Sedona	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlotte	Whiting	Lancaster	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gloria	Donohue	Larkspur	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Blanck	Altamonte Springs	Florida	I personally know reporters who have left in disgust. This isn't a news station. It's a right-wing entertainment arm of Trump TV. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Wihro	Kim	Suwanee	Georgia	Please allow free speech to be as free as possible.

Robert	Findlay	Flanders	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Tanzini	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Hersem	Gulfport	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Stambaugh	Mesa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Shore	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dorothy	Hudson	Cooperstown	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Beiser	Cincinnati	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Morris	San Rafael	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Stein	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maria	Talavera	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Wolff	Chino	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Aguirre	Linden	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

vince	beasley	Goldsboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Krause	Saint James	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meghna	Dholakia	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
karen	knop	St Pete Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcia	Robinson	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Kaplan	Tenafly	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katharine	Ubik	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dan	Jones	Brewster	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jacque	vulcano	boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Martien	Broomfield	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Steele	Grand Junction	Colorado

I urge the FCC to stop the merger of Sinclair-Tribune. This merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power that would threaten free speech and stifle the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. It also is in conflict with the FCC's own policies.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Penny	Goldman	Coral Springs	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Sleyko	Palatine	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Michelle	Smith	Gwynn Oak	Maryland	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We understand STUPID is how republicans like their voters. However, there is a REASON we DO NOT ALLOW any single company to OWN over a certain percentage of broadcast capabilities. It is called PROPOGANDA. IT IS HOW HITLER RULED GERMANY AND WE ARE NOT HAVING IT HERE. NOT on OUR WATCH. We see you and know you cannot win with LIES. It is ALL YOU ARE CAPABLE OF. Thank you. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free

Pat	Ursic	Darien	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melissa	Howell	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Panotopoulos	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kiele	Fullerton	York	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shelley	Stein	BROOKLYN	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rachel	Fisher	Reno	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Weldon	New Prague	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Grim	Kirkwood	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Fitzgerald	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peter	Sayre	Annandale	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Doristeen	Taylor	Ypsilanti	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
liz	murphy	Lafayette	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Webb	Green Valley	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marjorie	Berk	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Constant Robinson	Frederick	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Yeomans	Ventura	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Mannheimer	Mill Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Burks	Constance	New Orleans	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Antonia	Siania	Grand Junction	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Sarah	Vogwill	Brooklyn	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlene	Miyashita	Mountain View	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stacy	Pyburn	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

DANIEL	FIELD	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Pius	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Rodriguez	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Emily	Pelka	Raleigh	North Carolina	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would limit the freedom of speech/media and contradict the FCC's own policies. I am absolutely against this merger, and I strongly urge the FCC NOT to allow this.

Colin	Short	Murray	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	Hoover	Knoxville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Roche	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ms.	Lilith	Ventura	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jami	Sinclair	Des Moines	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Allison	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gregory	Doty	Rancho Palos Verdes	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Russ	Wagner	Geneva	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Monroe	Ossining	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Louise	Jones	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Berglund	Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Sims	Old Greenwich	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Martino	Hoffman Estates	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Rinn	Malakoff	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Greene	Detroit	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Norris	Gainesville	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Wilson	Merritt Island	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deanna	North	Jefferson Hills	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Brookbank Reed	Glendale	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
ellen	kabat	Herndon	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harriet	Liroff	South Orange	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jill	Turco	philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheri	Dzubak	Trenton	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Miller	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roberta	Reed	Huntington Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elisabeth	Siebert	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ann	rovere	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susanna	McCarthy	Covington	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Boice	Shamong	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brandon	Snow	Hailey	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Danby	Mead	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Klein	Deerfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Brienze	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tara	Goldberg	Vista	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nathan	Coopwood	Lomita	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keith	Soucy	Ann Arbor	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sylvia	S	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Levin	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Hermsen	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joan	Goldberg	Newton	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Levin	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	O'Somachain-Price	Loveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Verlyn	Deckert	Meridian	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Malcolm	Moore	Portola	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Malcolm	Moore	Portola	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aimee	Longinetti	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Brienze	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jill	Koch	Scottsdale	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Anderson	Hellertown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cina	Barker	NASHUA	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Kuhstoss	Douglasville	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Anderson	Hellertown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jaice	Cooperrider	Thornville	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Parker	Harriman	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Brienze	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Singer	Cazadero	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Walter	Christensen	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matt	Caldie	Bloomington	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	McIntosh	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A diverse press with many opinions and perspectives is a free press. If there is one predominant voice with a particular perspective, listeners don't get a full picture of the situation or facts. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Nolen	Barrett	San Francisco	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Mitchell	Cornelius	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Lamkin	Willits	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Lanka	Maricopa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Hertzberg	Racine	Wisconsin

The Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a dangerously large and powerful TV broadcasting conglomerate that would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's consistent, unwavering political bias undermines viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Please stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nolen	Barrett	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Neil	Parker	Sound Beach	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Ann	Seltzer	Overland Park	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beverly	Klug	Tipton	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Papas	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Rachel	Hubka	Austin	Texas	Sinclair has demonstrated its brazen political bias by requring broadcasters to read a script verbatim to espouse its views on all its stations. Permitting Sinclair to own so many local stations, including TWO stations in my own city of Indianapolis, constricts competition in the most important of all areas - public information in a democracy. This undermines viewpoint diversity upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meg	Reed	Frisco	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Railsback	Bloomington	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aggie	VanHoudt	Kirkland	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Boyd	Beckwith	Atlanta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Norman	Jentner	Akron	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Lochridge	Mountain View	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Posey	Krakowsky	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Crystal	Brunelli	Raymond	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stanley	Kaneshiro	KENAI	Alaska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sara	Lazarus	Short Hills	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tony	Tsang	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kevin	Silas	Blacksburg	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tony	Tsang	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beth	Benjamin	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Melotti	Escondido	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Merrian	Nevin	Los Altos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Graham-Waldon	Felton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Pearsall	Petaluma	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Meland	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jorge	Tormes	Miami	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Margolis	Highland Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judy	Nakadegawa	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

a	Beato	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ed	Copain	Perkasie	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nikki	Schipman	Mint Hill	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marilyn	Snyder	Prospect	Kentucky	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Offen-Brown	Albany	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marty	Robinson	Gresham	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Demestihas	Salem	Palau

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Finn	Belleville	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ssu	weng	santa fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
ANNE	THURSTON	PRINCEVILLE	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Carlson	Georgetown	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Penny	Goldman	Coral Springs	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ira	Gerard	South Elgin	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jan	Barley	Napa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Regan	Portland	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
George	Frye	Mocksville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Carlson	Bozeman	Montana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Podrasky	HIGHLAND	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louis	Kanter	Vernon Hills	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Gutierrez	Torrance	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beth	Ogilvie	Castro Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Nicodemus	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kay	Vanover	Limestone	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Rosy	Jacobsen	Longmont	Colorado	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please do NOT approve the proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger! It'd create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				It would strangle the free press! There's nothing free about a scripted press, and nothing free about a public with no other option for local news.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias

William	Shields	Little Rodck	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ryan	Block	Morgan Hill	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power. This is in contradiction with the FCC's own policies. It would stifle free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Kronheim	Upper Darby	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Randy	Vanover	Limestone	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gilbert	Moreno	Boise	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julia	Briggs	Snohomish	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Cooke	Staten Island	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Keithler	Englewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	LeBlanc	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ada	Shaum	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Rota	New Orleans	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Kelly	Felton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Heiserman	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Everett E	Dennis	Austin	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karl	Hahn	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marjorie	Erway	Kailua Kona	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	McCallum	Gilroy	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	Kunhardt	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lillian	Logan	Temple Hills	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brian	Cochilla	Bedminster	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lana	Touchstone	Vallejo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruth	LaNore	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Fifield	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anthony	Rivera	Seattle	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

vic	xie	chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shari	O'Connor	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Jones	Chesapeake	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alicen	Eatroff	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

bree	m	Lakeville	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brooke	Hampton	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Garro	Davenport	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melissa	Morrone	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nikhil	Shimpi	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Jaconette	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Catherine	Mekus	Louisville	Kentucky	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Mary	Yates	Gilroy	Connecticut	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Do not sacrifice diversity of views and free speech for dollars! Do

Carol	Lavoie	North Conway	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Diane	Fronko	Merrionette Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tina	Kelly	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Darren	Page	Morgantown	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Driver	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Veronica	Raymond	Temple City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amanda	Kozar	Springfield	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jaclyn	simonet	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Benderson	Cedar Rapids	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carrie	Miller	South Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jake	Anderson	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anita	Ung	Champaign	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edmund	Leahy	Spring Valley	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ACLU Supporter	Unknown	Liberty Center	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louie	Kwok	Woodbridge	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
sarah	ochs	Richmond	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Neil	Fisher	Tulsa	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Switzer	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Kordsmeier	Mountain View	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Davlantes	Kaneohe	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Ott	Winston Salem	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Rebecca	Gage	Hempstead	Texas	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger creates one voice that would cover most of the country. Sinclair requires its editorial viewpoints to be repeated by each station. The stations are not allowed their own view points. Nor do they state that the viewpoint is not their own but that of the station owner, and that they are required to not only repeat it but to pretend that it is their own view. Thus the station misleads every listener who think that they are hearing local views. Since they probably put more trust in their local editorial staff, the listener swill give this more weight than if they knew it was the belief of the station owners who live somewhere else and was just being parroted by their local station.

christian	miller	murrieta	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marie	Anthony	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	DeNola	Redwood City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Esther	Kannapel	Slc	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorrie	Underwood	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

christian	miller	murrieta	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Anderson	Honolulu	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kirk	Bails	Harrison Township	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Judge	Oceanside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lily	Beaumont	Kerrville	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Corinne	Monk	North Olmsted	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Chandler	Newport	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Newman	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Oviatt	Golden	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynne	Vanne	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Kennedy	Ventura	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Myers	Petersburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Caryl	Sawyer	Sandston	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Epling	Pacifica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cleo	Dioletis	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John E.	Feather, Jr.	Mount Gretna	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Tallon	Glen Carbon	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Rodine	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cole	Miller	murrieta	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mandi	McElroy	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Unger	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Haley	Perez	murrieta	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Bradley	Burlington	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Chryst	Powell	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessie	vIOLET	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Barnett	arvada	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maximus	Perez	murrieta	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karoline	Chiavetta	Lake Forest	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wanda	Dennis	Hercules	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ann	witkes	Gladwyne	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Lorretta	Marcel	San Francisco	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Propaganda is dangerous and became the weapon of Nazi Germany and Yugoslavia, etc.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

William	Tabor	Duluth	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christian	Miller	murrieta	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Miller	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steven	Rekant	Blacksburg	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beverly	Johnson	Hesperia	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Natalie	Berk	Wilkes Barre	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacob	Miller	murrieta	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Swanson	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deanna	Walker	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Geimer	Davis	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dolores	DeMayo	Laguna Woods	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Noel	Arellano	Compton	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	McDonald	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danielle	Kolko Henshaw	Louisville	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Parus	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alice Patricia	Gustavson	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Priscilla	Tine	Knoxville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kelly	Miller	murrieta	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Lehr	Omaha	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lori	Hanley	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

veronica	Eghdami	Belmont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	Murphy	Jamesville	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shabbir	Khondker	Rocklin	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

London	Collin	murrieta	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Jones	Oxnard	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sonya	Olsen-Hasek	Salem	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Tiracchia	Stroudsburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Douglas	Deaton	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lina	Braunstein	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Karlin	Plainsboro	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Herron	LAREDO	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anne	Carnegie	Waxhaw	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kathleen	roman	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roland	Creswell	Fort Worth	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donielle	Workman	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Raul	Hernandez	Orlando	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ezra	Miller	murrieta	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Andrew	Van Herik	Chicago	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. The only way to stop fascism is to stop the small, subtle moves toward it. Reorganizing local broadcasts around a right-wing, fascist agenda is one of those small moves. Maybe you, the FCC, are already part of the destruction of democracy in America, but I hope not. Stop this merger. Our right of a free press and our future as a country depends on it.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Lou	Busey	Enka	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Barton	Hoffman Estates	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nelson	Stockdill	Ypsilanti	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lee	Witty	Fayetteville	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geert	Beling	Ingleside	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kathy	beavers	Terrell	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Violette	Perez	murrieta	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Harrell	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Mentall	Arlington	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frank	Altman	Fort Lauderdale	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Iris	Bruel	San Rafael	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Justin	Meyer	Chippewa Falls	Wisconsin	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Armor	San Anselmo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Long	Hamilton	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lyle	Larson	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margaret	Croner	St. Louis, MO	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Gordon	Ridgefield	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Fox, Ph.D.	Amherst	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Cravens	Antioch	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Malgorzata	Schmidt	Frederick	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Patenaude	Parishville	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ivar	Sanders	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

C	Escobar	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Todd Forbes	Peterson	Anaheim	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Bryant	La Crescenta	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Philipp	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shannon	Okum	Midlothian	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joanne	Sieck	Rochester	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geoff	Jensen	Prescott Valley	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betsy	Beard	Catalina	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Roberts	Albuquerque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Nagel	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristine	Danowski	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	Rios	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda V	Maloney-Tarvers	Kapolei	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. I personally search out several different sources of news each day for multiple points of view and to facilitate discourse. Our country's citizens deserve access to free thinking and varied ideas, the foundation for people to have an informed vote. We are not robots to be programed.
Anne	Tierney	Saint Louis	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Halee	Sage	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
W. Michael	Biklen	Muscatine	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee	Witty	Fayetteville	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gregory	Ptucha	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Gardner	Hinesburg	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Derek	Evans	Jupiter	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee	Witty	Fayetteville	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Brace	Joshua Tree	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Zaenglein	Amherst	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Alter	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Dayton-Kistler	South Jordan	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Hagen	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Sobota	Sarasota	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rena	Appel	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Heer	Cocoa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mariko	Yannacone	Palm Bay	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Johnson	Salt Lake City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kay	Moon	Bala Cynwyd	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kae	Bender	Lancaster	California	News should be factual, not some repetitious ideological punditry foisted as real news. Fox "news" on every lobby tv is bad enough, but more Sinclair stations touting an extremist propaganda would be ridiculously totalitarian. This is a BAD idea and should be avoided -- and the Fairness Doctrine should be restored. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Stephanie	Shlasky	Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tabitha	Groat	Marlette	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Dellavalle	Apple Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Zaenglein	Amherst	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Latimer	North Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caryn	Coville	Greenvale	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Naeger	Topeka	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Finnerty	Carmichael	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Grace	Ukoha	Columbia	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janine	Gehris	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lyn	Burton	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

G	Griego	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kay	Wilson	Durango	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anthony	Hernandez	Denver	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Zeravica	San Marcos	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harold	Watson	Springfield	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Strom	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Henry	Nixon	Lemon Grove Ca	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deborah	Sheinman	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Beck	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

We need more media diversity in the United States, not less

Michael	Honig	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

Elaine	Fielding	El Cerrito	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dilara	Rukhsana	BROOKLYN	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Malcolm	Wattman	Palm Beach Gardens	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Thoma-Culver	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shirley	Garland	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Isaac	Ehrlich	Rhododendron	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Hawkins	Anchorage	Alaska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Sharn	Matusek	San Francisco	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. As a high school journalism teacher, I teach students about how to report the news ethically and the importance of an unbiased press, a cornerstone of democracy. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosalind	Bresnahan	San Bernardino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lorna	Holmes	Honolulu	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Levy	Norfolk	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Klaus	Steinbrecher	Castle Rock	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Fly	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aileen	Carissimi	Saratoga	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrice	Johnson	Lubbock	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and BLOCK THIS MERGER!
Nick	Scott	Loveland	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Mack	New York	West Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Wolff	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Shindler	Overland Park	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Becky	Piazza	Marble	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gail	Galvin	Valley Center	Alaska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Theodore	Stazeski	Baker	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Courtney	Cooperman	Short Hills	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press, which are essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias that could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC (1969). The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Lagmay	LA	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Beckerman	Los Angeles	California
Melissa	Jelinek	Homer Glen	Illinois	I think there are two major things to think about with this merger. C A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

lucile	krasnow	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
JoAnne	Walls	Belden	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Pollak	Concord	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dolores	Piretra	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Humphreys	Leander	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louis	Toth	Clarksville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Nord	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Flanagan	Bastrop	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eugene	Grunby	Potomac	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Emily	Rothman	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Hall	Hondo	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Miriam	Dunbar	Cordova	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Kasdorf	Detroit	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Wolfe	Palo Alto	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Veronika	Conant	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Emerson	Burkett	Guerneville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Doris	Bittar	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Craig	Slawson	Metairie	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dominique	Allen	Saint Joseph	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Steele	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	DeLong	Lakeland	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Keller	Bridgeport	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marybeth	Ulrich	Carlisle	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Donaldson	Grass Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Finnie	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Alford	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Colburn	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robyn	Miles	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Art	Hanson	Lansing	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Terry	Shaffer	Towson	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy	Hornby	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Kat	Setauket	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harlan	James	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gary	Klein	Thousand Oaks	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Jordan	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Curtis	Holgate	Lancaster	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Vanlandingham	Shawnee	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harriet	Goldman	Monkton	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annie	Katzman	N.Y.C.	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Oeth	Corona Del Mar	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stacey	Phillips	Salem	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Enid	Rubin	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	White	Enola	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Ashley	Bethany	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Ku	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ben	Sigrist	Emeryville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Bozowski	Dayton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Mary Ann and Frank	Graffagnino	Tucson	Arizona	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joy	Murphy	Lafayette	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shabnam	Afsah	Bethesda	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Janetos	Groton	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Venning	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karla	Frandson	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Jones	Florence	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leona	Lazar	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Bunn	Knoxville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Atul	Patel	Carlsbad	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donna	Gensler	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mitchell	Zito	Mentor	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
mary	spano	Stafford	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Goodfellow	Huntington Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Heninger	Los Altos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Hardy	Matawan	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Rodine	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andy	Smith-Petersen	Yarmouth	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Mathews	Reno	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Preiswerk	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Powers	Northfield	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Grimm	Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Chris	Schulz	Marshall	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelsey	Nyland	Danville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
sarah	masters	Beverly Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Boehler	Roswell	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alvin R	Paden	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Peha	Torrance	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carla	Shearouse	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeni	Foster	Grants Pass	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Wyzenbeek	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

D	Pollak	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandy	Sycafoose	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lee	Reis	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Verlene	Kelsey-McKee	Salt Lake City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pam	Bixter	Evergreen	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leah	Charney	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Locke	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Pressgrove	Brenham	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frances	Dutro	Erie	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	VanDeVeire	Batavia	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vladimir	Khait	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betty	Hartzler	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Mattison	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bruce	Wimberley	El Segundo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chimey	Lee	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ashli	Tingle	Castro Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debralee	Stein	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dan	Vestecka	Lincoln	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marie	Vassilakidis	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Albert	Meadowcroft	Wilmington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	Arett	Naperville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Janice E	Ruzichka	Saint Paul	Minnesota	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenn	Sollers	PHOENIX	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Omar	Siddique	Ellicott City	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	McGarrahan	Dallas	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcastingconglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. I am asking the FCC To block this merger.
Patrice	Woeppel	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nina	Diamante	Los Angeles, CA	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lyla	Zeller	Flagstaff	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aaron	Daniel	Oklahoma City	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Mobley	Key biscayne	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Lau	Colonia	New Jersey	The FCC must not allow a merger that suppresses free speech by eliminating the main and sometimes only outlet for that free speech. All sides must ALWAYS be allowed to be presented on every news station, no matter who owns that station.
				conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Elizabeth	Bledsoe	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Cassell	Abq	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kate	Gill	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Powell	Long Beach	California
Amit	Shoham	Oakland	California	Another attempt to take away the citizens' rights under the first am A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	West	Lewiston	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tyler	Van Liew	Bend	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Chandler	Yountville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
D.M.	Nelson	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	De Vries	Willits	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sakti	Rinek	Taos	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Baldwin	Anchorage	Alaska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Becky	Kolb	Weldon Spring	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Regine	Benalcazar	Lawrence	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roxanne	Hewitt	Henderson	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Bader	Bethlehem	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	MacBride	Voluntown	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elyse	Coulson	Winter Park	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Carp	Desert Hot Springs	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Chu	Fremont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gregory	Orr	Fremont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Ohrt	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
karyl	goland	nyc	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Mansfield	Ravenna	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Lynch	Pacific Palisades	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Pritchard	Panama City	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Moira	Saucedo	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ray	Timmermans	HORNELL	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Noel	Ross	Redding	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Lewis	Reno	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ryan	Sells	Palo Alto	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ava	Evans	Encino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Debra	Moore	Clio	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Derek	Kennedy	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sue	Walden	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	OConnor	Petaluma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Leyse	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Robinson	Oakland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Timothy	O'Neil	Manhattan Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Johnson	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hoyt	Hoeffler	Fairview Park	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Will	Sloan	Bradenton	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeanne	Schlatter	Coshocton	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lydia	Selvidge	Rowlett	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Landre	Roswell	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Monte	Brice	Juneau	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Dawson	Cedar Falls	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Whitson	Pomona	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

tsipora	peskin	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Schmitt	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mei Chun	Lin	Culver City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dale	Shero	Fernandina	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Liebert	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Glass	Oak Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry John	Meyers	Syracuse	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	Lianzi	Fort Myers	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jonathan	Turner	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Keenan	mission viejo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Alissa	Friedman	San Rafael	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lillian	Buchanan	Redmond	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lisa	McCallister	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Dalisky	San Ramon	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susannah	Gelbart	Las Vegas	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Willard J	Shepard	Wheatland	Wyoming	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Sherman	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abby	Schulte	Happy Valley	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	McCorry	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

kyla	dounouk	West Hartford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
M	Timmins	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Gentile	Dublin	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Melissa	Black	Wayland	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Sapp	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Beckham	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marc	Page	Norwich	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Cullen	Richmond	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gordon	Greene	Tinley Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharyl	Beattuie	Keizer	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pam	Angelakos	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
p	b	Carol stream	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Kaufman	Scottsdale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Pistono	Bend	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

W. Michael	Biklen	Muscatine	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Cockrell	Englewood	Colorado

The media industry is ALREADY TOO BIG !!

GIANT MONOPOLIES are bad for the freedom of our country.
STOP THIS MERGER

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

pat	michelson	Morrisville	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Bruno	Elk River	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlotte.	Gagne	colorado springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Blodgett	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danielle	Lescure	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lily	Cox	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Brockett	Redwood City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shannon	Allsop	Salt Lake City	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Vasquez	Salem	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Timothy	Duggan	Fairmont	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gideon	Wizansky	Ashland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ronald	Katz	Huntington Woods	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

john	kandrac	Amherst	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Raynor	Voorhies	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Albee	Romero	Kentfield	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shelley	Cohen	N. Middlesex	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Grossi	Lakewood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Brockett	Redwood City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Albarran	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
scott	vizecky	Hendricks	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Heidkamp	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Louis	Marks	Arlington	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	McNaughton	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ryan	Wettstein	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	Laue	EVANSTON	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anita	Shenkman	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Soby	Omaha	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lyn	Younger	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elisa	Carlson	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Peck	Mission Viejo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Boyles	Crown Point	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robin	Platt	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Scally	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marie	Dixon	Winchester	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Cornwell	Granite City	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Soby	Omaha	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

sameena	usman	santa clara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brittany	Johnson	Broken Bow	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Russell	Laupahoehoe	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mark	Beckwith	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	Specht	Albany	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Donly	Chorn	Lake villa	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

priscilla	lane	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Giselle	Lopez	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mindy	Guzman	Santa Cruz	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Valerie	Myer	Santa Barbara	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Olson	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dee	Wagner	Wheeling	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jan	Modjeski	Murrells Inlet	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Camille’s	Toledo	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Masini	Los gatos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jonathan	Welch	Cathedral City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Grant	Mammoth Lakes	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kara	Beebee	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Chapman	Fair Oaks	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Macomber	Herndon	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Milo	Matthews	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hildegarde	Evans	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Leary	Sunnyvale	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Sheree	Poitier	Rancho Palos Verdes	California	Concentration of size and power in broadcasting and other public media endangers the diversity, neutrality and independence of the press. Neutrality and independence can only be achieved by a collection of diverse individuals and companies, and no single individual or company can ever be truly neutral or unbiased. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dany	Lindenbacher	Basil	Kentucky	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Torrey	Hanson	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Zylke	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bruce	Briggs	Worland	Wyoming	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Campbell	Benicia	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Reno	Ursal	Mountain House	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey and Sus	Evans	Wintersville	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brenda	Colfer	Manhattan Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marion	Phipps	McHenry	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
C D	Metzger	Lees Summit	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurie	Flesher	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margot	Nack	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara-Jane	Cohen	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alma	Calles	Imperial	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Izral	Sterling	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marion	Phipps	McHenry	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Simon	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Matarese	Davidsonville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Mattison	Cottonwood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
T.	Katz	Deerfield	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Chow	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jera	Janzen	Goleta	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Klinefelter	Bishop	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruth	Granito	Euclid	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sylvia	Tarbell	Los Altos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maryellen	Redish	Palm Springs	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terry	Meyer	Columbia	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	Rudholm	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Hartin	Murfreesboro	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marilyn	Morris	San Rafael	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Byrens	Lafayette	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robin	Cook	Arlington	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Hartin	Murfreesboro	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phillip	Mueller	Los Altos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Siobhan	Paul	West Bloomfield	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brock	Nichols	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Jones	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gaynelle	Johnson	Duluth	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Ogle	Memphis	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maurizio	Vitale	Beverly Hills	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rona	Florio	Anchorage	Alaska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alicia	Sweatt	Pell City	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anwaar	Judeh	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bret	Kalner	Boynton Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maurizio	Vitale	Beverly Hills	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margaret	Hart	Clovis California	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elisabeth	Johnson	St. Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	Bensberg	Huntington Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Thanks

Bruce	McArthur	Sebastopol	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Bittle	Lawton	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

marissa	rincon	Whittier	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Dirkx	Belmont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlene	Elgart	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judi	Berzon	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Rowley	Sheridan	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Schmidt	Forest Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Combsm	Marion	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Weingart	Powell	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Kappus	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Allegra	Mautner	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Byers	Downey	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Akash	Patel	Carlsbad	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Clare	Ronzani	San Leandro	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Annoni	Midvale	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Victoria	Romani	Dobbs Ferry	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Delaney	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

E	R	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathy	Silva	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joele	Dupont	Lewisville	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerhard	Eckardt	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Ravelo	Fullerton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jonathan	Earl	Sunnyvale	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Herrod-Lumsden	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Barrett	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ken	Ward	Gloversville	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jody	Mogle	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brittany	Sharp	houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Allison	Rothman	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amrit	Khalsa	Redondo Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizebeth	Stewart	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hersha	Evans	Christiansburg	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rose Marie	Jacobs	Davenport	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Pitner	Washington	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Faelyn	Wilson	Storm Lake	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharen	Rockefeller	WASILLA	Alaska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lin	Lin	Cambridge	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Drusilla	Winters	Noti	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	McKnight	Healdsburg	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Christwitz	Clearlake	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dennis	Allen	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Palmer	McCall	Nebo	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cheryl	Arthur	Charlottesville	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tiffany	Wood	Park City,	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nikki	Theard	Coeur d Alene	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

bonnie	cooper	Asheville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Camille	Gilbert	Santa Barbara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Morrison	Rocky Point	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Mummery	Honeoye Falls	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nikki	Broadwell	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kaitlyn	Winn	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vasu	Murti	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Wanda	Ballentine	St. Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mindy	Blaski	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vasu	Murti	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurel	Perry	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Kuhn	Allen Park	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ilana	Percher	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Joan	Lobell	Baltimore, MD	Maryland	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. It will mandate the same false stories be read on stations across the nation. Sinclair's broadcasts portray the real FAKE NEWS as consistent, unwavering political bias, and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

John	Vias	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would further undermine the accuracy of the TV news that many Americans watch as their primary news source. We need more accuracy and fairness, not less.
				It would create a broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and stifle free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by
Salvador	Camacho	New Orleans	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Trembly	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We need to stop this Josef Goebbels-style propaganda machine in America!
Brian	Highland	Boulder	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Harkness	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lonnie	Patterson	Princeton	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lois	Brownson	Los Altos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Ibarra	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Bell	Crane	Texas
Edith	Orner	Albany	Oregon

I stand to protect our democracy, therefore I stand against this merg

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

GABRIELLE	MEEKER	LIVERMORE	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
JamesW	Gilliam	Glendora	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Veronica	Jensen	Hillsboro	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Trujillo	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. I demand that the FCC stop this merger.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Hamblin	Flagstaff	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Eighan	Brookhaven	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Steele	Falls Church	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Wright	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Tanner	Sedona	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Derek	Fandel	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Templin	Oakland Gardens	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Barr	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Broderick	Summerville	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Cellucci	Broomall	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	OBrien	Redway	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marcel	Liberge	GRANTS PASS	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Quinn	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katie	Henderson	Larkspur	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

May	Suh	Wilmette	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

M. Nour	Naciri	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emily	Boliver	Laurel	Mississippi

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy	McQuown	Mill Valley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Watton	Glendale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tony	Grutman	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Guest	Carmel	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Carol	Schneider	Oakland	California	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This is it. You are not going to merge Sinclair with Tribune. If you do, you will ruin and affect local news outlets that people listen to everyday. Trump is a bad President. This will also put our
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Zainab	Elberry	Nashville	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nate	Rydman	Moab	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathy	Holden	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Howe	Tell City	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Cassidy	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Brackett	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would violate the FCC's own policies. It would stifle free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray a consistent, unwavering political bias that would likely undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karl	Koessel	McKinleyville	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Sherbina	Green Valley	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Leonard	Richardson	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mark	White	Tacoma	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Lufen	Princeton	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Williams	Jamaica	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aaron	Bonar	Virginia Beach	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susanne	Watson	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karl	Black	Portage	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael Carr	LaPorte	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carla	Mays	Concord	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Rolf	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Spinelli	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theo	Wilson	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Flannery	Highland Park	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ken	Gunther	Jupiter	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacqueline	Weltman	Richmond	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Willis	Gresham	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carey	Suckow	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ellen	Middleditch	White Rock	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roberta	Stern	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gretchen	Sauer	San Leandro	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lionel	Ruberg	Newtown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Burleson	Davison	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Buchler	San Luis Obispo	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Penelope	Link	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tami	Linder	Rio Rancho	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

NANCY	BENGTSON	Sedona	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Suzuki-Martinez	Tempe	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Kane	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Ronca	Studio City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ulises	Ceja	Lynwood	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gabrielle	Zartman	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tammy	Tencza	Eagle River	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Hoyt	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Bagby	Lincoln	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger & Georgia	Dykhuis	Des Moines	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Logan	Highland Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Easter	Piketon	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Johnson	Detroit	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ed	Shapiro	Port Townsend	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jacqueline	Lefler	Sebastopol	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Gwin-Satterlee	Felton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Yenawine	Bolinas	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Hauck	Beaverton	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allen	Maertz	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kevin	Krogmann	Santa Clara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anita	Simons	Oceanside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Owens	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeannette	Stokols	Irvine	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sal	Velasco	Studio City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandy	Handsher	Fairfax	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Mecum	Meadow Vista	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Delibos	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rana	Mehmood	KATY	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peggy	Powell Morgan	Laredo	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caren	Rowley	Carlsbad	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Peter	Campi	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Failing to do so will most definitely mar the FCC and inevitably nullify its power.

Debbie	Salahi	Laguna Niguel	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Horowitz	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ela	Nolan	Murrieta	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marianne	Klamer	Pound Ridge	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Gibson	E Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tabitha	Maya	Bakersfield	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this cou ntry and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lana	Cohen	West Hills	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Shand	Bayside	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Grover	Carson City	Nevada

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Mikus	Lake Forest	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Bloom	Selinsgrove	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
loren	mosley	Akron	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Armitstead	Suffolk	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eric	Wheeler	Bellefonte	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dean	Esch	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Satter	Manchester Center	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Theresa	Russio	West Linn	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Chieng	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	McCall	Painesville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Burkhart	Lancaster	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Wong	Canoga Park	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joe	Daniel	Hermitage	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peggy	Wendel	Stanwood	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Martinez	Lomita	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jean	Tenney	Los Gatos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ricki	Newman	Newburgh	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christianne	McGinn	East Hampton	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jenifer	Briggs	Torrance	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Ruth	Menlo Park	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lidia	Briceno	Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beverly	Bullock	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Yoav	Getzler	Valley Village	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Lianoglou	Jersey City	New Jersey	Please. This is Sinclair-Tribune merger is nuts.
Michael	Kemp	Eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Constance	Newman Penn	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charlene	Ferguson	Otho	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mindi	White	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	McGee	Montgomery	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack	Li	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Meares	Matawan, NJ	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Felicity	Figueroa	Irvine	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Moore	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Koh	San Francisco	California

You must prevent the merger of Sinclair and Tribune--which would create the biggest broadcasting conglomerate in US history. Such monopolistic control of the media is the exact opposite of an energetic free press, which is what the First Amendment is supposed to guarantee and which is vital to democracy.

Rosemary	Carney	Greenwood	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosemary	Carney	Greenwood	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Coral	Caudle	North Port	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Woolsey	West Hartford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Vincent	Verga	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

bob	Lentz	Sylmar	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shawnee	Mclemore	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

bob	Lentz	Sylmar	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Henry	Bennett	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

sun hae	kim	Flushing	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Glenn	Fithian-Barrett	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Kranowski	Blacksburg	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Louis	Maripolsky	New York	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ANTHONY	BONADIES	LOS ANGELES	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Alley	Santa Monica	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Stern	Denton	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deborah	Walker	Charleston	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Fox	Brookings	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Crockett	Florence	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melanie	MacMillan	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gloria	Justen	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robyn	Buck	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
s	f	Fort Collins	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Walter	Klockenbrink	Nixa	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Cameron	Pride	Wadsworth	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please prevent Sinclair Broadcast Group from merging with Tribune Media. SBG takes away free speech with the (heavily biased) scripts it forces on news stations under its reign. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

Beverly Jeanne	Lewis	Dawsonville, Georgi	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
kamran	parwana	Ballston Spa	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Holley	Alamogordo	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tamadhur	Al-Aqeel	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kaaren	Zvonik	Green Valley	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maury	Davenport	Wailuku	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kay	Baumgartner	White Mills	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarah	Kling	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Matthews	Greenbrae	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynda	Vernia	San Marcos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Evelyn	La Croix	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Jennigs-Smi	San Marcos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Thomas	Corvallis	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Sendrey	Morgan Hill	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ramon	Moreno	Canon City	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Kreppein	Gurnee	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Morningstar	Talent	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carole	Plesser	Prairie Village	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maura	Murnane	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
J	Rosa	Honolulu	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Cross	Gresham	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Robinson	Springfield	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Green	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cary	Appenzeller	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maureen	Guilfoyle	Page	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jordan	Kelso	Haleyville	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Pritchett	Alameda	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. You have already blocked net neutrality, in favor of bug business.
Helen	Webb	Redlands	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Cehovet	Henderson	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jonathan	Peter	Binghamton	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Miller	Newport Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Smith	Warrenville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carmen	Falcon	Chandler	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary W.	Athens	Tulsa	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nadia	Sindi	Eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Follingstad	Spring Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lani	Ludwig-Toth	Huntington Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Evelyn	Beverage	Wake Forest	North Carolina	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
				Sinclair's policies force local broadcasters to present biased informa

Margaret	Raynor	Galt	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sabine	Michell	Vallejo	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Peterson	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Bolton	Independence	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Shimata	Honolulu	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this would undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarah	Rosario	Great Falls	Montana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilee	Allen	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matt	Bender	cardiff by the sea	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Darlene	Wyatt	Lemon Grove	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leah	Helmer	Medford	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Petersen	North Bergen	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Wesley	Barton	Magnolia	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katrina	Espey	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Martinson	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jim	Cody	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeremiah	Pearcey	Alexandria	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Rennie	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margaret	Smith	Aptos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leonard B.	Chandler	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

G	Alling	Toledo	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Nkoane	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stacey	Gunderson	West Fargo	North Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Ruzicka	High Ridge	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
q	q	san diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dick	Barton	Ames	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marion	Schulman	L.A.	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marc	Silverman	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kim	Caolo	Plano	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Johannes	Deny	Munchen	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Friedman	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Grossi	Lakewood	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gayle	Brown	APO	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patrick	Carr	Santa Rosa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Picozzi	Palo Alto	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Kangas	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
D.	Rincon	Fresno	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

L.L.	Bennett	Elmira	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Claire	Maddlone	West Palm Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexander	Diaz	Oceanside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rhonda	Oxley	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Aro	Marquette	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Suzanne	Tokarsky	Jacksonville	Vermont	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Fox	Damascus	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steven	Bodenstab	Woodridge	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bill	Christie	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Zweigoron	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Liam	Youngblood	Hoover	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Roman	Los Angeles	California

Please don’t let this merger go through. The coverage from Sinclair i

Reevyn	Aronson	Redwood City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Reevyn	Aronson	Redwood City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Reevyn	Aronson	Redwood City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Reevyn	Aronson	Redwood City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Norton	Petaluma	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Reevyn	Aronson	Redwood City	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather Prudence	Davis	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Harper	Castroville	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

janet	brewer	Colonial Heights	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Clare	Lewis	Harrison Township	Michigan	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Cisney	Denver	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kristi	Benedict	Greensboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amelia	Jones	Santa Monica	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gaye	Wiesner	Staten Island	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Mathers	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Garcia	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Ensign	Tucson	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Graham	Ringgold	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Kelley	San Francisco	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randy	Lopez	League City	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brigid	Connell	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathy	Adkins	Kalamazoo	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerry	Uhlman	Carlisle	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Voorhies	Eric	Kapaa	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Leibowitz	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Walcher	Del Mar	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bernie	Gonzales	Caruthers	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karla	Klinger	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tony	Grijalva	LOS ANGELES	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Douglas	Hendershot	Lake Orion	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tony	Grijalva	LOS ANGELES	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jarrod	Simmons	Plaquemine	Louisiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joshua	Daley	Boone	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claire	Wrigley	Berkeley	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Ellis	West Olive	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hillary	Ostrow	Encino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	Tremaine	Princeton	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bonnie	Worden	Charlevoix	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffery	Clifford	Nucla	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffery	Clifford	Nucla	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffery	Clifford	Nucla	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Edward	Cox	Pottstown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Cox	Pottstown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beauman	Breeden	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Stoll	Oregon City	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kit	Champlin	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Mille	Bay Shore	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kimberly	Perkins	Franktown	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

J J	Wilcox	ETNA GREEN	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
L	Marx-Adams	Hollis Center	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

denise	belanger	Bloomfield	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Wendy	Tripp	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Donnelly	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	LaZazaar	Livingston	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

AnneMarie	Bercik	Maitland	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
C	W	Boston	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Watkin	Glencoe	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Chapman-Burson	Humble	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Coles	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bonita	W	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Dill	Galion	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Countryman	Saugerties	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gwenna	Weshinskey	Portland	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Natale	Canonsburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Haines	Huntington Station	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Holly	Fuhrmann	Erie	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katherine	Hajek	Copley	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Appel	Laguna Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Gilbert	Lyons	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary Olive	Stone	Westfield	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Grosch	Venice	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Papperman	Pennington	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Bouvier	Marietta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Victoria	Cox	pottstown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jay	Mehta	Wichita	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Larry	G	Moon	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tom	Whipkey	South Bend	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexander	Silverio	San Jose	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Graham	Honolulu	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eileen	Wilson	Merritt Island	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jerry	Boswell	Highlands Ranch	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Mundwiller	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Biemiller	Marietta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
robynne	limoges	Redwood Falls	Minnesota	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a biased TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would destroy for many parts of our country The ability to choose. It would eradicate our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that are absolutely essential for a healthy democracy, a true democracy. We know that taking control of press information as this merger would do is the first step toward fascism. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this

Marilyn	Rosen	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alisa	Miller	East Lansing	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rachel	Hokanson	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diana	Chen	Anaheim	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Nicodemus	Martinsburg	West Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Pankewicz	Raymond	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce Aiko	Miyagishima	Lakewood	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Todd	Georgetown	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Moulton	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rose	Lawer	Columbus	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Miller	Wells	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Gordon	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caleb	McKinsey	Lakewood	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Dubow	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Webb	Carrollton	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Benjamin	Briggs	San Bernardino	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gordon	Urquhart	Birmingham	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennings	Stone	Nrh	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Schilling	Grand Rapids	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Androff	Marine on St Croix	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Gulley	Memphis	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brent	Hepner	Norfolk	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frances	Wood	Worcester	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marck	Oconnell	Tampa	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Zephyr	Horowitz-Johnson	Petaluma	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Rankin	Windsor	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Ciarletta	Trappe	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paula	Ochs	West Orange	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Fischer	Ridgefield	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
sharon	astor	New London	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristin	Leesment	Brevard	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sheila	Edwards	Bargersville	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Jackson	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tracy	McDonald	Rumson	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joy	Hecht	Arlington	Virginia	The Sinclair television network is already the largest local news producer in the country, with 173 stations in 81 major markets nationwide. The company has required its member stations to broadcast a centrally scripted message, rather than allowing them the freedom to present news and fact based on their own reporting and analysis. No matter what the company's perspective, this does not guarantee the free speech or the free access to information that the FCC is mandated to protect, and it runs counter to the principle that broadcasters must present a full range of views that was upheld by the Supreme Court in Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC (1969).
Lucy	Paschke	Bonita Springs	Florida	By approving this merger, you would add an additional 42 stations A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Merryl	Azriel	Gaithersburg	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Erickson	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Randie	Flaig	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Suzan	Ragan	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ina	Osborn	Woodridge	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lindsay	D	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Moss	White Bear Lake	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
christine	klaes	n. muskegon	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

cliff	Zinner	raleigh	North Carolina	A diverse media is essential to keeping informed – the Supreme Court said so in its 1969 decision in Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. By limiting the views that local anchors can express,
Bradford	Behr	Silver Spring	Maryland	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Holder	Orrington	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marisa	Foss	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matt	Cornell	Durango	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Meghan	Cosgriff	Twentynine Palms	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexis	Williams	alexandria	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jessica	Van Culin	Grosse Pointe Farms	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

david	kanter	Hughesville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Loretta	Griffin	Mount Prospect	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Malecki	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patrick	DiGiovanni	Arlington	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Pansulla	Montclair	New Jersey
Donna	Delin	Lombard	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglome

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jet	Dana	Mint Clare	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
treiops	treyfid	Culver City	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rod	Boyd	North Richland Hills	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Claudia	Nolan	Syosset	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheila	Denton	Overland Park	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patty	Gallo-White	North Sandwich	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Feher	Silver Spring	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Watkins	Leitchfield	Kentucky

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Doctrow	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brenda	hershberger	Mason	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chantal	Allard	Grand rapids	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Almeranti	Troy	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	SHEEHAN	PITTSBURGH	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Thomas	Vincent	Gulf Breeze	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alison	Wentland	Perrysburg	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
PAM	WALLACE	Greeneville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tanya	Zinner	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jennifer	Reznick	Fairfax	Virginia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We are not the USSR, China or North Korea. We need to preserve a

Suzanne	Keller	Wilmington	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Charles	Maclin	Gary	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Kawa	Stuart	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Loafman	Plano	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Enrique	Garcia-Carrera	South Orange	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Powers	Muir	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Reeves	South Royalton	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tyler	Owens	Mankato	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Kangas	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Pelkey	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vicki	Conway	Lilburn	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Feinberg	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrew	Tsikitas	Flushing	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Shaffer	Bethlehem	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

william	palmer	Cornish	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alan	Segal	Raleigh	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Vinge	Kalamazoo	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Naila	Hanak-Smith	New York	New York	Dear FCC- please intervene: A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Helm	Audubon	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carolyn	Alden	Naples	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Brown	Newton	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kristine	Stevens	Richmond	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I'm getting so tired of outlandish and obvious political bias in

Jennifer	Small	Richmond	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Poklemba	Corvallis	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Stordahl	Marquette	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kandace	Eaton	Wichita	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Misty	Day	Fullerton	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Lopardo	Titusville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Funk	Bethlehem	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sharon	Todd-Elliott	New Boston	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Craig	Wallentine	Ambler	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lindsay	Thompson	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John R	Steele	Shamokin	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I am deeply opposed to this merger.
Brandon	Prince	Boise	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Lyon	Washington	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephen	Barrett	Edmond	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Johannah	Willsey	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Willcox	Farmville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nick	Melander	Salt Lake City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teresa	Frytz	North Richland Hills	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Eason	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Larry	Bumpus	Maryville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynne	Cruz	Vernon Hills	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mike	Mondachein	Oak park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Gabriel	Chapel Hill	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shari	Berkowitz	Queens	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Naomi	Ballon	Boynton Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Randall	Waterbury	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Fisher	Wilmington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Mason	Saint Joseph	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Griffith	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elaine	Hullihen	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Perry	Milwaukie	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rosemary	Griffith	Honolulu	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Milcah	Sprenger	Port Chester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martha	Diaz-Livingston	Sunrise	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tsee	Lee	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Irene	Weisberg	New york	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Howlett	Rome	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Brennan	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

james	zelbacher	Burnsville	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathleen	Wisneski	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

emma	currigan	wilmington	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
christophe xavier	ayizoa meke	Douala	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jacob	Rainey	Gallipolis Ferry	West Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pam	Larsen	Norwich	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Booker	Nabors, Jr.	Burlington	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Dayna	Colbert	Fishers	Indiana	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. As someone who studied journalism closely, fully believes in the right to a free press, and believes that monopolies stifle competition, the Sinclair-Tribune merger is deeply concerning to me and a threat to the autonomy of the fourth estate. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Jessica	Ruddell	Urbana	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

erin	znidar	Mentor	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Isabelle	Headrick	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
sheryl	Liberman	Merrimack	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Chang	New York	New York
Charles	Cheves	Blairsville	Georgia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias an A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Rioux	Mystic	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Alex	Besdansky	New Hampton	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brandon	Nelson	Elgin	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nicolas	Besdansky	New Hampton	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brandon	Nelson	Elgin	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Madeline	Besdansky	New Hampton	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Cheves	Venice	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brendan	Krivda	Elkins Park	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Dete	Carlisle	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Virginia	Rivers	Bryn Mawr	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Preissler	Providence	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
JEFFREY	POTTER	PROVIDENCE	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alethea	Eason	Silver Ciy	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy	Winick	Hollywood	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Connie	Crew	Lansing	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Byrnes	Fairfax	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Opaskar	Cleveland Heights	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Stevens	Longwood	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Yoakum	Lago Vista	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Richardson	Williamsburg	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alison	Allen	Katy	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Martha	Hatchett	Mertztown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Taylor	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Baker	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Miguel	Camacho	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cassandra	Caffee Morelock	Church Hill	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Phyllis	Steging	Citrus Heights	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. We have to stop these huge mergers. They will undermind our
Alice	Ross	Narrowsburg	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Black	Ferndale	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
C	Day	Vero	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Nielsen	Wilmington	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Denise	Levins	North Kingstown	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	O'Connor	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laurie	Kepros	DENVER	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara A	Cordts	Olathe	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heidi	Holloran	Haiku	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heidi	Holloran	Makawao	Hawaii

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Marsh	Birmingham	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Andolina	Lancaster	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Zussman	Fairfax	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kirtley	Young	Watertown	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
rob	slebos	Tampa	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Please consider rejecting this merger because a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Reilly	Berkeley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christina	Sahhar	Oceanside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ilene	Calfin	Dearborn	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Hogan	Clifton Park	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Blum	Fairfield	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	English	Wilkesboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sheldon	Altschul	Asheville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Santos	Noto	belmont	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

George	Merritt	Franklin	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sandi	Craig	Rockaway	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kenneth	Ripp	Cloquet	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Philip	Burke	Newport News	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Yolanda	Mitts	Kalamazoo	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Sheila	Roit	Lithia	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. I am deeply concerned that a Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Please don’t allow this to happen
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

carolyn	dreeszen	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Costa	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Penny	Zahler	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frances	Ginther	Gary	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynne	Thomson	Orangevale	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Abelson	Wake Forest	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Cassell	Naples	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dori	Dietz	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rena	Lewis	Ojai, CA	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Barefoot	LeRoy	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lauren	Castner	Howell	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kelley	Courtney	Clementon	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carlene	Clark	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cecile	Zeigler	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carlene	Clark	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Daisy	Paradis	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracy	Peel	Bronx	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Connie	Fox	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brandon	Day	SAINT PAUL	Minnesota
Carla	Sanders	Dallas	Oregon

Stop this merger. Some of us recognize what is happening.

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adam	Racinskas	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Wakefield	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Ingraham	Hartland	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cristi	Fleming	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Shane	Cartersville	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Dyson	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donald	Priest	Petoskey	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Haupt	Cincinnati	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aimee	Bograd	Baltimore	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Faye	Rozmaryn	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Franko	Charlottesville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Cook	Miami	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracy	Highfill	Scottsdale	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lynn	Clark	Contoocook	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Edmunds	Deming	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Louison	Frederick	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gene	Louison	Frederick	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Burgess	Monroeville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Terry	Prospect	Kentucky	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Charles	Klinzing	Monroeville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bahieh	Musa	Falls Church	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mike	Vitella	Freehold	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carl	Geissert	Fresno	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendy	Moran	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Scott	rosenfeld	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anne	Bialke	Trumansburg	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Iris	Waxman	Fresh Meadows	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Annabeth	Marks	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jon	Womack	Pomona	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	McCall	Madison	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Thompson	Ann Arbor	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nancy	Krauss	Cambridge	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeff	Brack	Bellvue	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Lesman	Carlisle	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karin	Smith-Spanier	kingston	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a this merger would threaten free speech in this country.this would dominate the access to facts and information that citizens receive to be educated participants in our democracy. protect free speech by saying no to this or any conglomerate in news. TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Margaret	Vernon	Fonda	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andy	Sebula	Portland	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Lynne	Connolly	Decatur	Georgia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. This comment is to urge you not to allow the Sinclair merger. It is of deep concern that I see what is happening all over our land with power becoming concentrated in the hands of the few. For one company to control the airwaves as much as this merger would, undermines our democracy and our tradition of local control.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Carol	Dewees	Pottstown	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Dewees	Pottstown	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ruth	Wentzel	Topsham	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betty	Adams	Onekama	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

BARBARA	COLOMBO	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hailey	Terracino	Ringwood	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Holly	Bussey	Yardley	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Lyons	Naples	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Ting	Arlington	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lucian	Dixon	Jackson	Mississippi

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gilbert	DePaul	Georgetown	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Billie	Rosene	Kannapolis	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Veronica	Aplenc	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maureen	Ray	Grass Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cassandra	Johnson	Tampa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Wyman	Centerville	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christopher	Green	Sharon	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
KATHERINE	MCNICHOLAS	Brentwood	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Sohn	Geneva	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Lawson	Penn Valley	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Futterman	Highland Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sonia	Mendoza	Imperial	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

isabel	Sanchez Dunn	Lake Elsinore	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
michelle	handelman	brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Quartell	Cleveland	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Mundra	Detroit	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

raul	cintra leite	Saddle Brook	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Rhonda	Boshears	Champion	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

valerie	smith	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrea	Branas	Philadephia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Brendze	Narberth	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
MIRIAM L	IOSUPOVICI	IMPERIAL BEACH	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Ghent	APO AE	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	White	Lapel	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gary	Jungers	Council Bluffs	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margaret	DeRose	Ridgefield	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Hamil	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Deborah	Boyd	Hilton Head Island	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Clark	Califon	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Evelyn	Findley	Eugene	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Barry	Dandridge	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jane	Uzzell	Norfolk	Nebraska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Francis	Lynch	Palm Coast	Florida	Media mergers limit the free flow of information necessary for a free, open, democratic society. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Mara	Steedley	Hollywood	South Carolina	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Frenza Fisk	Henryville	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Carol	Rizzardi	Palm Coast	Florida	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. In the 20th century, the FCC recognized the importance of multiple voices in a diverse media and limited the media outlets a single company could own. Sadly, that wise precedent has been eroded over the years, and media conglomeration threatens the free flow of information. Nothing threatens it more than the proposed Sinclair-Tribune merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Giora	Carmi	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elinor	Willis	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Duncan	Claremont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lori	Dowd	Select One	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Koval	Charleston	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stephanie	Christopher	Palatine	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Blasi	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frank	Shorter	Cary	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Bruns	Northbrook	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Petersen	Wentzville	Missouri

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Curran	Riley	Madison	Wisconsin

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helen	Lipin	West Bloomfield	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Westbrook	Portsmouth	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bobby	Skaggs	Mannsville	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexander	Goodson	Reno	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ann	Kirk	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Ruinsky	Seaford	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kyle	Harvey	SPRING HILL	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Armando	de Quesada	Hartselle	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathryn	Uehlinger	Rockville Centre	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Abigail	Levin	Buffalo	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

arthur	rozum	anchorage	Alaska

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Shelby	Prospect	Kentucky

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Childers	lexington	Kentucky

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jack	Meloche	Chelsea	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kyle	Harvey	SPRING HILL	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Starr-Spires, PhD	Milford	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Claire	Chamberlin	Rhoadesville	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

RENCHAR	DELA-CRUZ	TOPEKA	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Renee	Burdick	Land O Lakes	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

marcia	caban	waterford	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Johnson	Wilsonville	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Liz	Salsberg	Plymouth	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dianna	Amick	Bayfield	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Felicia	T	CONCORD	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tom	Hokanson	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Trisha	Masterson	Astoria	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Soule	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Sills	Greensboro	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Tobola	Lynnwood	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Douglas	Huntingdon	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Larsen	Winsted	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	York	Nashville	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Damon	Osora	Goshen	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Willson	Bedford	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joseph	Soule	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Howe	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Philip	Frank	Black Earth	Wisconsin

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

cynthia	villani	mamaroneck	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Radner	Catonsville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Keely	Wickwire	Mill Creek	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Chris	Souza	White Hall	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lynn	Miller	Cape Vincent	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brooke	Fox	Seattle	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christine	Swint	Marietta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allen	Wheeland	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	McFadd	Encinitas	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
SHERI	MAKAYAN	BRISTOW	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Roosa	Jamaica Plain	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robbie	Leatham	Boise	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Uphold our US anti-trust laws!! Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joseph	Soule	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wayne	Clifford	St Petersburg	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonnie	Squires	Battle Creek	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ron	Schmidt	Pittsburgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Baldwin	Moorpark	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Alice	Corson	Asheville	North Carolina	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. PLEASE do NOT add another layer of muck and shit in don the con's (A CRIMINAL!!) non stop ATTACK on our FIRST AMENDMENT RIGHTS while he attempts to DESTROY OUR DEMOCRACY!!! WHAT IS WRONG WITH YOU??!! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Tony	Giordano	Howell	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brenda	Roman	Lancaster	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Genna	Vinson	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Weil	Saint Paul	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Sigafoose	Alexandria	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cynthia L	Groceman	Lees Summit	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barak	Wolff	Santa Fe	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ella	Robson	Huntley	Montana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Benjamin	Taylor	Astoria	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kellie	Moore	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robin	Washco	Charlotte	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandy	Ray	Longmont	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Connie	Loisel	Minnetonka	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Valeske	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

April	Whiston	Naperville	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
m	kauder	pasadena	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janiece	Staton Retired RN, BSN, M	Beaverton	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Miguel	Quarles	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Todd	Dewolf	Sarasota	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Benjamin	Moore	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amy	Soloway	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Chris	Widmer	Washington	District of Columbia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Scott	Moundsville	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
PATRICK	MURPHY	Stillwater	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Dubinsky	Ashford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
nancy	morski	Hamburg	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathtrina	Komlofske	Ephrata	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
S	Mohan	Benicia	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cerise	Cauthron	Newburyport	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Danielle	C	Charleston	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Mazur-Biuso	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tracy	Dellavalle	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alex	Holste	Minneapolis	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Arshad	Ameen	Memphis	Tennessee

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Dil	Galion	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ron	Hahn	Mesa	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Amelia	Wilmer	Lawrenceville	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terrance	Dunder	Freeland	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gerrard	Wilson	Indiana	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eduardo J	Morales Vicente	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristina	Rowell	Seattle	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erik	Johnson	Kendallville	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roger	Harkness	Oklahoma City	Oklahoma	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jill	Bailey	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Urian	Dang	La Mesa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Frank	Hunter	Westmoreland	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Lubken	Riverside	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeffrey	Caniglia	Jersey City	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Brown	Hendersonville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicole	Morse	Boca Raton	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce	Clark	Tinton Falls	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Roberts	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Katharine	Driscoll	Bellevue	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Margaret	Drewry	Troutville,	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joyce	Clark	Tinton Falls	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cassandra	Jones	Indianapolis	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Zitzelman	Lake Stevens	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Julie	Robertson	Napa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Esperanza	Ramos	Reseda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matt	Carney	Oakland Park	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Courtney	Budler	ROSELLE	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edward	Parken	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tricia	Shaughnessy	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Crystal	Taylor	campbell	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Rohrs	Manchester	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Foreman	Fort Wayne	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexis	Dowding	East Liverpool	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brad	Cornell	Wolcott	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Edith	Grafing	Kansas City	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steven	Howell	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Georgina	Lambert	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Olivia	Grob-Lipkis	Saratoga	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Georgette	Gafford	Atlanta	Georgia	I strongly oppose the Sinclair-Tribune merger. It would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies and stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Mark	McGehee	Cleveland	Tennessee	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Enough is enough from this administration which has done more than any previous to destroy basic human rights.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carolyn	Richter	Franktown	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anne	Loretto	Roseboom	New York	Enough with the centralization of broadcast control!!! A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
				Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erich	Schmidt	Robbinsville	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Beverley	Gardner	Englewood	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Newton	Presque Isle	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
RICHARD	BAKKER	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tricia	Starks	Fayetteville	Arkansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Simpson	Redondo Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathy	Olson	Mosier	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Connie	Vernon	Vancouver	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	DuBreuil	Salem	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Erin	Frey	Kalamazoo	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patty	Thomas	Paonia	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Nicholson	Bucyrus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

joan	fitzgerald	stuart	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Haynes	Glendale	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorinda	Pails	Rochester	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Al	Yanagisako	Honolulu	Hawaii	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennie	Heines	Pensacola	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	G.	Leawood	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aaron	Smucker	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Helga	Cohen	Rilla	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anni	Weston	El Granada	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Ward	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tamatha	smith	Pensacola	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Tom	Peterson	Omaha	Nebraska	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. How is this not a monopoly over information? There has been no justification provided or communicated to the public about how this is in the best interest of the public. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elena	Brunn	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kim	Ralph	Ventura	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angela	Chammas	Hawthorn Woods	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
JOSHUA	JACOBSON	CADILLAC	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kay	Hartmann	New Buffalo	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathy	Anderson	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dana	Seeley	Livonia	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Christian	King	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anne	Loughrey	Charlottesville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	McCarthy	Brandon	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Black	Charleston	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
HOLLY	POTIER	Plano	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Aaron	Eaton	Kingston	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Camille	Hogan	Orland Park	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

tg	Vath Gertin	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Shawna	Jennings	Murrieta	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cheryl	Winston	Boulder	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Danita	Strand	Telluride	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Weitz	Allentown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Anne	Roblain	La Rochelle	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

JODI	SHORT	ANZA	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Trujillo	Amherst	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcia	Kindlmann	Guilford	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Duffy	Burbank	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tammy	Sanders	Marshall	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Annette	Porter	Baltimore	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Bogolub	Deerfield	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Victoria	Pellot	Pennsauken	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lori	Fields	McMinnville	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gail H	Henry	Bethesda	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Teri-Ann	Carryl	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Janay	Collins	Port Townsend	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracey	Lehr	Frostburg	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Geldmeier	Riesel	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Schiappa	Riverbank	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patrick	Mitton	Safety Harbor	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Giblin	Oconomowoc	Wisconsin	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Phyllis	Johnson	East Haven	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janice	Whaley	Marion	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joan	Berenbaum	Highland Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Coles	Margate	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Roberta	Fox	Newton Centre	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Coffey	Garland	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Denise	Banister	Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

tiya	habachy	new York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maxine	Horst	Canton	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandee	Gray	Moundsville	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
marilyn	burgard	Grandville	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mari	Budnick	Beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marjorie	Rahn	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

peg	reagan	Gold Beach	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Guinan	DES MOINES	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	M	los angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carol	Pelosi	Wake Forest	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Dmitrich	Pleasant Grove	Utah	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jennifer	Ferguson	ANDOVER	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paul	Kesler	Bridgeport	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Detwiler	Coopersburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Taylor	New Bern	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Damion	Todd	Yakima	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betsy	Holland	Oneonta	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Peter	Dennis	San Diego	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Moore	San Antonio	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adam	Stockett	Jersey city	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Jacobs	Piedmont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Wallace	West Lebanon	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alfred	Jessel	New Haven	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Perry	Hall	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Papuga	Clinton Township	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Steven	Adams	Orefield	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Casey	Johnson	ALPHARETTA	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Amanda	Schuster	Bergenfield	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Cooper	Palmetto	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Johnson	Manzanita	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heidi	Jordan	Rocky River	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Mathe	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Flynn	Rockford	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Julie	Witz	Fairfax	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stuart	Wells	Nampa	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. You

Riley	Major	Eagan	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Christina	Grachek	Maple Valley	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Allison	Youngs	Sault Sainte Marie	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger contradicts your own policies and would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eunice	Froeliger	Charlotte	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vivian	Liebenson	Rockville	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eric	Anderson	Jacksonville	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Timothy	Lynch	Arlington	Virginia	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Local media outlets serve their communities best when they gather, create and share their information content locally and independently. This creates a diversity of views reflecting local needs and interests.
				A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press essential for a healthy democracy.

William	Spiilliard	Palm Springs	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dorothy	Brockgreitens	Albany	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alan	Cooper	Kennewick	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
lenore	rosario	annapolis	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nikole	Earnhart	Snellville	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Jones Lewis	Carmel	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Niloufar	Sanatinia	Salt Lake City	Utah

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janie	Thompson	Blanco	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Gentry	Rapid City	South Dakota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Owen	Yost	Denton	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Angel	Hamilton	Brighton	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Karen	Kesler	Louisville	Kentucky	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Elizabeth	Watts	Lynbrook	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Holomon	Birmingham	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Juan	Zamora	Sacramento	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roann	Casino	Reseda	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Rankin	Skokie	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Moninghoff	Laurel	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Cembura	Jupiter	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Angela	Watrous	San Lorenzo	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

VICTORIA	GAUZE	IMMOKALEE	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Harold	Lowenfels	Toms River	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Yenne	Boca Raton	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Lily	Jones	Pompton Plains	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ken	Salat	Brookfield	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Evelyn	Haas	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Francis	Flynn	Arnold	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
susan	tuck	chatsworth	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allison	Pincus	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
cyndi	rohland	mohnton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kari	O'Connor	Plymouth	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Cari	Grossman	Springfield	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Kamins	South Hadley	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Rafkin	Dayton	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Otvos	Deptford	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeanne	Schneider	Greenlawn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Wofard	Leander	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Caitlyn	Swoboda	Springfield	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sariena	Carmichael	Ewing	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nicole	Smith	Danbury	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	A	Fairfield	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ruth	Ferreri	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emma	Watson	Cumberland	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kim	Lang	Burl	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Richard	Independence	Kentucky	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Nathalie	Hoke	Camp Hill	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathleen	Balzer	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allison	Rittmayer	Natchitoches	Louisiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jim	Hopper	Lynnwood	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathryne	Mckissock	Pisgah forest	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Womack	Charlottesville	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leroy	Phillips	Queens	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Fred	Binkley	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carla	Christianson	Ormond beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tim	Laplaca	Boca Raton	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
c	b	Limerick	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Pacheco	Manassas	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Betsy	Fetchko	Ellicott City	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Greg	Lowe	Harrisburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Heather	Winkel	Cochiti Lake	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sara	Shoemaker	Seattle	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Octavia	Craig	Silverdale	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kristina	Saxena	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
pete	bell	sparta	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ken	Clark	East Helena	Montana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Adams	Wooster	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Mosher	Oneonta	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Tracy	Davis	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Clark	las vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sebastian	Rilen	Eden Prairie	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michell	Redfoot	Benicia	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dorothy	Hooper	Stockbridge	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Byron	Boldrini	Pittsburg	Kansas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katherine	Perdue	Fredericksburg	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lindy	Crain	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Benjamin	Masters	Hartsville	South Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Bell	Lacey	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Richard	Shapero	Morehead City	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Dean	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Judith	Mordkoff	Storrs Mansfield	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Monroe	Seattle	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Dianne	Trahan Browning	Las Vegas	Nevada	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicki	Elliott	Martinez	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Colleen	Bertino	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jill	Chadbourne	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Gardner	PALMDALE	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ashwini	Narayanan	Mountain View	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anuraj	Dua	Hoboken	New Jersey

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sylvia	Hutt	Jarrettsville	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Phil	Etting	Seattle	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Roffe	Norwalk	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Plath	Norwalk	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Hima	Bee	NYC	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sonia	Solomonoff	Wooster	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Isenstein	Cottonwood	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Merikay	Garrett	Mahtowa	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

diane	gerardi	aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Murphy	Laramie	Wyoming

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Easton	Leland	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	Borg	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Norman	Seiff	Phoenix	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Syril	Kline	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Streyle	Avondale	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Clifford	Kashtan	Saint Louis Park	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Geri	Harju	Suamico	Wisconsin	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Patricia	Lupien	Framingham	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brent	Barnes	Springfield	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Iva	Gocheva	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Vickie	Berry	Paradise	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anastasia	pridlides	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carrie	King	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Susan	Ebbers	New Brighton	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	sorensen	Merced	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ada	Palmer	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. We saw how dangerous a media monopoly was with the rise of Berlusconi in Italy - we must protect our democracy against the same kind of power-grab.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janet	Eason	Memphis	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Denise	Meyer	Bridgewater	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

William	Pacent	Monmouth Beach	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Blacklock	AUSTIN	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Kalanta	Staunton	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	Testa	WILMINGTON	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ian	Atchison	Winston Salem	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marcus	Nelson	Columbia	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Trudy	Stone	San Marcos	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Alan	Miller	Louisville	Kentucky	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. You have one job and allowing the creation of a giant propaganda machine for one radical side of the political spectrum is the opposite of what that job entails. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC.

David	Rohland	Mohnton	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Elizabeth	Farley	Louisville	Kentucky	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Peck	Sierra Vista	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kera	Morgan	Marina del Rey	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chris	Ottosen	Shell Lake	Wisconsin

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Schaffer	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Robidoux	Chester	Vermont

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Heather	Arnold	Aurora	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cherice	Engle	Albuquerque	New Mexico	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
DOUGLAS	WILLIAMS	CARSON	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bob	Ottosen	Shell Lake	Wisconsin	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laurie	Amaya	So Pasadena	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judy	Dobler	Seattle	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jane	Gfrerer	Edina	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Benaway	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tracy	Northup	Cape Elizabeth	Maine	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dione	G	Grass Valley	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Stacy	Fairchild	Auburn	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Brown	Mancelona	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jen	Gagne	College station	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Nero	Richmond	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Maggie	Harrington	South Haven	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kaye	DeBona	Asheville	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ann	Lall	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellesia	Blaque	Allentown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Maryam	Ansari	Colonial Heights	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurice	Smyrl	Concord	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Misty	Dibrell	HOUSTON	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Cooper	Indianapolis	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Emilee	Oaks	Mansfield	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Halm	Lakewood	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kyle	Schlosser	Columbia	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Salina	Leroux	Somerville	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathy	Richardson	Arlington	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alyse	Mervoh	Taylor	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marci	Lewis	Pennington	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ilrania	Wootson	Bear	Delaware

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barbara	Zoellin-Malm	Sunnyvale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Barb	Irwin	Bellingham	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Angela	Noecker	Shaker Heights	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Steed	Westmont	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Putzell	Crown Point	Indiana

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leanne	Segersin	Eden Prairie	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laqueshia	Thomas	Houston	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dawn	Greer	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pamela	Zurer	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gretchen	Till	Oakland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eric	Peterson	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michelle	Paolilli	Dana Point	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Michael	Rosen	Penngrove	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Allen	Wilmington	Delaware	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Scott	Harris	Red wing	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steven	Yellin	Menlo Park	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ryan	Kelly	ULSTER PARK	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brian	Kolbeck	St. Louis Park	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Susan	Mclean	Santa Rosa	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carly	Katz	Vancouver	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Weaver	Centralia	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Natalie	Gude	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Laura	Hart	Frederick	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Megan	Wieland	Broomfield	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harriet	Maglin	Aptos	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Doug	Willmore	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

MacKenzie	Krantz	Milwaukee	Wisconsin

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

jody	shell	pgh	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Randy	Carlock	Marietta	Georgia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Najeeb	Kamil	Santa Clara	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Hannah	DuBose	West Chester	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Daniel	Westrick	La Jolla	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kimberly	Convertino	Kirkland	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bonita	Delatorre	Newberry	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Angela	Rex	Salyer	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bettino	Celeste	Richmond	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marcie	Eichmann	Colorado Springs	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Reibstein	Plymouth Meeting	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Bari	Egan	Laguna Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Walsh	Rochester	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sarah	Hanson	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kaela	Rowe	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Armandina	May	Saint Petersburg	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Allison	Wyatt	Goodhue	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Crane	State College	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debbie	Coquerel	Macon	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Molly	Nicoletta	Seattle	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debbie	Couchman	Saylorsburg	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Cavanagh	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Shawn	Northrup	Poulsbo	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Gregg	Murphy	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jessica	Gilson	Olathe	Kansas	If this country prizes capitalism, creating a major broadcasting conglomerate does not allow for competition. It allows for propaganda. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Eve	Yohalem	New York	New York	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Davis	Round Rock	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Imani	Smith	Cincinnati	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nanette	Powers	Naperville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sophie	Masud	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lindy	Gewin	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Harris	Collier	Athens	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Deffke	Longmont	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Walter	Bruinsma	Springfield	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Judith	Scriptunas	Chambersburg	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joshua	West	Fishers	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rebecca	Hagee	Crofton	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lorne	Blythe	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

JoEllen	Larzelere	Flint	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Whitney	Heald	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Brooke	Prim	tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Cheaney	Valley Vlg	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Melissa	Fieldhouse	Hampstead	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alyse Ardell	Spiegel	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Donna	Charter	Arlington	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Kinzinger	Cape Charles	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Trevor	Tweeten	Brooklyn	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jennifer	Liebsch Smith	Adamstown	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Erin	Allen	Columbus	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jonathan	Springston	Atlanta	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paola	Bernacchi	Washington	District of Columbia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
roger	till	canton	Ohio	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laurel	Husk	Telford	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mariya	Gilyadova	Durham	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Shields	Demotte	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Glen	Northup	Riverside	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dianne	Ensign	Portland	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelly	Carmichael	Syracuse	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jason	Sherk	Dadeville	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Miller	Ossining	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dawn	Foster	Lake Oswego	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Monica	Ploetzke	Columbia	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

C D	Carlson	Eugene	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Cawley	Chesapeake	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

suzanne	donovan	Hummelstown	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Angela	Weisbeck	Preston	Idaho	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Quinn	Johnson	Laguna Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Wendi	Leitzell	Yelm	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margit	Sage	Boise	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	McDaniel	Marietta	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nicholas	Photinos	Evanston	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Rosemary	O'Neill	Gambier	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

L	S	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Connor	Martin	Red Hook	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alice	Meerson	Pasadena	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Craig	Skoney	Redford	Michigan

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Helene	Loper	Northport	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Marie-Claude	Perigon	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Du Brule	Newark	New Jersey	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Emma	Napolitano	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Wright	San carlos	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrea	Larsen	St Louis Park	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frederick	Yuhl	Leominster	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrea	Ryan	Green Island	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

A	Hamill	Jonesborough	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. Furthermore, mergers of this sort are a violation of the Sherman
Elizabeth	Sandager	Sioux Falls	South Dakota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Terrance	Gaschler	Seattle	Washington

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marie	Jackson	Okemah	Oklahoma

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Mary	Blackston	Frederick	Maryland

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Vangelos	Hidden Hills	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Desiree	Boucher	GIG HARBOR	Mississippi	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Linda	Devin-Sheehan	Stony Brook	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lisa	Shulman	Sebastopol	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kim	ardila-Morgan	Delray Beach	Florida	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Chuck	Tryon	Holly Springs	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Harms	Tesuque	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Caton	Avila Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Katherine	Powerd	New York	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Becky	Yurk	Hudson	Wisconsin	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pam	May	Bemidji	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Linda	Williams	Valparaiso	Indiana	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
John	Kaster	Santa Cruz	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dawn	Prochovnic	Portland	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Paul	McCarthy	Scotia	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Andrea	Williams	Kempner	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Diane	Kenna	Clarendon Hills	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Bill	Shier	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
William	Wilkinson	Omaha	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Georgia	Dennis	Murfreesboro	Tennessee	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Andrew	Jonson	North Augusta	South Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Moseley	Killeen	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Priscilla	Rocco	Costa Mesa	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sue	Grassle	Evanston	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Suzanne	Kruger	Harpers Ferry	West Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Drew	Van Culin	Grosse Pointe Farms	Michigan	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Matthew	Goldenberg	Somerville	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ryan	Strempke-Durgin	Cedar Rapids	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tim	Errickson	Long Island City	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Patricia	Mceneany	Inverness	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Leslie	Santucci	Silver Spring	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Veronica	Presley	Chicago	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathryn	Wiktorski	McKenna	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pat	Ryan	Clifton Park	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cynthia	Wallace	Crystal Lake	Illinois

DO NOT let this merger go through. I am against it. It makes too big of a company with way too much power.

Cynthia S. Wallace

_____

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a

Jonah	Wortman	Brooklyn	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brianne	Foster	Tillamook	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Armando	Gomez	Blaine	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Sara	N	Fort Worth	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marc	Silverglade	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Heitz	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Glenda	Kohlhafer-Regan	Charlottesville	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Schindler	Hintsville	Alabama

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pierre	Roussey	Bloomington	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kelcey	Patrick-Ferree	Iowa City	Iowa

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marilyn	Johnson	Belmont	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Dawson	Cranston	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Brown	Urbandale	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jeff	Winter	Seattle	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

David	Gross	Pinckneyville	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ronald	Brown	Elmwood Park	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Roberta	Mancina	Minnetonka	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Joanne	carey	Franconia	New Hampshire	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ted	Malecki	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carolyn	Lohr	Charlotte	North Carolina	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Allen	TRACY	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Karen	Woldman	Orlando	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jay	Howell	Ithaca	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Regina	Hernandez	Taft	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Steve	Gerson	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Itis	Baloo	New York	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a monstrous broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power, and would contradict the FCC's own policies. This abomination, this monstrosity would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in a press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray fanatical, unwavering political bias which intentionally undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger, or forever be held in contempt.

Eduardo R.	Gomez	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marc	Johnson	Manzanita	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Su-Hsiu	Wu	Wakefield	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
cathie	perkins	beaverton	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Miriam	MacAllister	Half Moon Bay	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Lesley	Robinson	Holly Springs	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeffrey	Rein	Tucson	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Robert	Marro	Newport	Rhode Island	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michele	Stine	State College	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sarah	Jackson	Cocoa	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Laura	Kushner	Sunnyvale	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Dennis	Landi	Long Beach	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathy	Mattox	Cypress	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Britt	Kirkland	Calera	Alabama	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Debra	Bailey	Lake Dallas	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Voorhies	Oakland	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Janette	Sperber	High falls	New York

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Larry	Bridges	Phoenix	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Gilberto	Perez Lopez	Houston	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Nancy	Dolan	Alexandria	Virginia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

ALISON M	POWER	Massena	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
David	Barnes	San Francisco	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sandra	Orlin	Chalfont	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.
Jennifer	Shanahan	Chicago	Illinois	Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger. A scripted press is not free. Stop this merger. A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Shaw	Yuma	Arizona	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
George	Courser	San Diego	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kaitlin	Walker	Sacramento	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jill	Daves-Plaunt	Pacific Grove	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

charlotte	suttner	Indian Wells	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Vanessa	Wallace	Haverford	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharon	Campbell-Crow	San Jose	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Tamar	Wells	Guilford	Connecticut	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

andrew	cullen	lewisburg	Pennsylvania

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Azmath	Kamran	Grand Prairie	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Anastasia	Pine	Lawrence	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Eileen	Sevlie	Kissimmee	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Cathy	Harrison	Circle Pines	Minnesota

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kathryn	Hunt	Driggs	Idaho

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Kate	Newman	Spokane	Washington	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eleanor	Arnason	Saint Paul	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Martha	Christians	Lehigh	Iowa	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Carter	Peterson	Wyoming	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Alexa	Ritchie	Irvine	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
James	Ewart	Elk Grove Village	Illinois	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Abboty	Minneapolis	Minnesota	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Noreen	McGuire	White Plains	New York	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Joanne	Roudebush	Biltmore Lake	North Carolina

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Deborah	Gwin	Deming	New Mexico

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Corey	Horton	Austin	Texas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Paula	Resch	Hamden	Connecticut

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Lange	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Pauline	Enders	Austin	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matthew	Larkin	Peoria	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Margaret	Dennehy	Chicago	Illinois

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Ellen	Prichard	Milwaukie	Oregon	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Mary	Murray	Bel Air	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

James	Steele	South Paris	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Robert	Ruggiero	Palm Harbor	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Marlyn	Haber	Upland	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Ian	Heming	Irvine	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Evan	Schiff	Los Angeles	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Virginia	Randall	Vidalia	Georgia

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Beth	Elliott	Tucson	Arizona

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Newbold	Bokeelia	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Richard	Arnold	Los Angeles	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Jerry	Fieldsted	CA	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Michael	Iwai	Anaheim	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Pamela	Green	St Petersburg	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Thomas	Forker	Half Moon Bay	California

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Bowling	Little Rock	Arkansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Grant	Whitman	Wichita	Kansas

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

John	Mengel	Centennial	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephen	Resch	MEDFIELD	Massachusetts	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Eric	Schobel	Frederick	Maryland	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Leslie	Sullivan	Albany	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Carol	Youngs	Steuben	Maine

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Frances	Valencia	San Antonio	Texas	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Barbara	Frazier	Tappahannock	Virginia	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Adam	Bloom	Denver	Colorado

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Red	Townsend	Hudson	Ohio

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Stephanie	Adams	Long Beach	California	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Kathryn	Shoemaker	Lafayette	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Matt	Ahlschwede	Lincoln	Nebraska	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
Brenda	Hadenfeldt	Lafayette	Colorado	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sharaine	Handsome	Philadelphia	Pennsylvania	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.
nicolle	Wicker	chesterfield	Missouri	A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy. Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Jeanie	Ogden	Sisters	Oregon

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.

Sally	Cotumaccio	Estero	Florida

A Sinclair-Tribune merger would create a TV broadcasting conglomerate of unprecedented size and power in this country and would contradict the FCC's own policies. It would stifle our free speech and the diversity of views in the press that's essential for a healthy democracy.

Sinclair's broadcasts portray consistent, unwavering political bias and this could undermine viewpoint diversity, a value upheld by the Supreme Court in 1969 with Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. FCC. The FCC must stand on the right side of history and block this merger.