Re: MB Docket 16-42, Expanding Consumers' Video Navigation Choices

Dear Ms. Dortch,

Enclosed please find the signatures and comments of nearly 12,000 Free Press members urging the Federal Communications Commission to stop Comcast from selling private information without consent, and to lower cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on the set-top boxes consumers are forced to rent each month.

The petition reads:

> To FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler, Commissioner Mignon Clyburn and Commissioner Jessica Rosenworcel:
> Thousands of us have written in support of the FCC's broadband privacy proposal and the agency's efforts to end the monopoly on set-top boxes. These are common-sense, pro-consumer policies, but we're concerned they won't move forward if you don't act now.
> The cable industry's friends in Congress are threatening the survival of both of these measures, trying to force the agency's hand by holding up Commissioner Rosenworcel's renomination and pressuring the chairman to resign after the election. This is no way to govern, but we’re concerned their pressure may be working. Commissioner Rosenworcel is reportedly reluctant to move quickly on these crucial measures.
> Anything worth doing at the FCC is going to take at least a 3–2 vote. You have a chance to go down in history as leaders of the FCC that did more for the public interest than any other. Your decisions over the next few months could cement that legacy — but only if you hold strong.
> We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Best,

Candace Clement

Monopolies are not good for a "Free Market". Private information is just that: Private!
—Andreas Ohland, new port richey, FL

You need to protect us against abuse from big business. That's your job.
—Brian D Gregory, Bremerton, WA

congress is supposed to work for THE PEOPLE! not BIG CABLE.
—tom swem, dayton, OH

I can't afford cable TV now!
—William Cramer, Lancaster, WI

It's not about politics, it's about the rights of the people.
—Hillary Colby, Aurora, IL

This issue should be above politics this effects millions and millions of Americans. This is for and about the people.
—Derek Blackshire, Jacksonville Beach, FL

Communication through the internet is vital. The Internet was developed with public funds. It is not owned by private interests. It should be treated as a public utility.
—Victoria Headley, Winchester, VA

Comcast ALREADY has too much power/influence in the world for God's sake!
—Mark Vincent, Wilmington, NC

IF I SOLD YOUR PRIVATE INFORMATION I WOULD BE ARESTED !!!!!!!!!!
—Eddie Hines, Saint Paul, MN

The government needs to act in the interest of consumers, not companies.
—Kevin Kirk, Hampton, NJ

Time to help the people first!! Blessings!!
—Will Agee, El Cajon, CA

I'm poor. Fuck you very much.

—William Chavez, Sacramento, CA

Privacy is critical to all citizens.
—Paul Lindsey, Cheyenne, WY

I both want and expect quality programming and affordable prices. This is possible, with proper regulation(s).
—LK Woodruff, Rosemount, MN

Monopolies are bad for their customers and hence for the country! Years ago the government broke up Bell Telephone, so why are you now allowing monopolies to thrive?
—Karen Kirchdoerfer, Orefield, PA

How can you allow a corporation to sell our private information without our consent?
—Janet Tache, Penn Valley, CA

We spend so much more for cable in this country than any other country. This is unconscionable.
—Bridget Wolfe, Newport, OR

Limited income-bills are way toooooo high.
—Joan Borame, El Cerrito, CA

I deserve to have a lower bill for my cable, and not to be tricked by corporate people.
—Brian Runyon, Cincinnati, OH

there are things that are right and things that are wrong. Big business will always choose profits and ignore the right and wrong.
—Robert Miles, nashville, TN

They continually sell my info away & get nothing in return but more heartache
—Raleigh Atkinson, Pasadena, TX

Because I do business with cable does not imply my info can be sold to others!
—Thomas Zachary, La Crescenta, CA

it's just one more example of how our country is being manipulated by corporations.
—Janet Bautista, University Pl, WA

No more waiting...keep the Internet FREE and stop the Mega Telecomms to stop raising their rates.
—Sheila D, Willmar, MN

People enjoy their privacy. Also, it's always nice to watch TV when it's getting cheaper.
—Lennart Grol, ,

Privacy is paramount, especially with a company with a consumer reputation as hostile as Comcast's.
—Aaron Mitschelen, Frederick, MD

French and Korean internet users pay roughly half what we do in the oligopoly-bound U.S. Swedes pay 1/6 our cell phone bills. Let's stop being a third world nation!
—Mark Dempsey, Orangevale, CA

It is unconstitutional to breech someone's privacy as in selling private info. Without consent. Comcast is the most expensive cable company I have ever dealt with and I will be dropping them asap. I can barely afford to put food on the table, pay for my utilities and taxes, let alone a huge cable bill. PS. I work full time as an R.N. in a hospital.
—Brita Light, Camden, ME

Privacy is one of the most important civil rights which is recognized and protected by the US Constitution. We must protect privacy at all costs!
—Eva Malhotra, Sierra Madre, CA

Please stop letting the large cable companies control the outrageous pricing schemes such as cable box renting. They make enough money as it is and rule with their lobbist.

Comcast and other cable providers have proven that they cannot be trusted with the local and regional monopolies they have bribed their way into.
—Ben Adler, San Jose, CA

These are just two of the reasons that I DO NOT have cable! Wouldn't it be nice to be able to subscribe to ONLY the channels that I want to watch? No, please don't hit me!
—O Lamoree, Fort Lauderdale, FL

Our agency in deciding what we want broadcast or shared is invaluable. That power should lie with no one but the individual.

It's bad enough that there is a practical monopoly so we need protection from these corporate crooks!
—William Royal, Sun City Center, FL

people, not greed
—Mary Mahoney, Boston, MA

My information belongs to me, unless I give permission to use it. Set top boxes are just like a telephone-I pay for use of the network, how I access it is my choice. Open the market for competition so consumers can choose.
—Sander Shipper, manhattan beach, CA

This is important to me, and to every citizen who relies on commercial Internet providers to provide them access to the Internet and entertainment channels.
—Joshua S. Freeman, Irvington, NY

Monopoly interests are ruining our economy and need to be curtailed!
—Byron L Davis, Salt Lake City, UT

You exist, I hope, to represent the interests of the people of the United States of America, not the profits of mega-corporations. I hope you take your REAL reason for existence seriously.
—David Casker, Johnstown, PA

Because cable and internet in the United States is incredibly overpriced. In Finland the cable and internet can cost only about €34,00 and that includes a land line phone, basic cable, and internet that is 100mbps and with no data cap. Comparatively in the U.S where you would pay maybe $50,00 and thats the 'low' price for JUST cable television and probably about $60-70 for internet that is MAYBE 60-70mbps with a datacap imposed? Its ridiculous.
—Jade Angela, Memphis, TN

Protect My Privacy and Lower My Cable Bill TODAY!!! Finish what you started!!!
—Walden Simper, San Diego, CA

Because I own my private information, not companies I do business with. It is time to end these heavy-handed tactics by a monopolistic industry. If they want to retain their monopolies, they must submit to regulation or make room for true competition which has a way of sorting things out on their own.
—Mike Sirois, Lawrence, MA

Privacy is important. Our lives are already disrupted by all the data leaks, why make that a profit center too?!
—Russel Brooks, Walla Walla, WA

I use the internet a lot and my privacy is important to me.
—Janet Benner Ph.D., Goleta, CA

So tired of monopolies taking us for a ride! Do your job.
—Johanna Fears, Louisville, KY

Cable bills are too high
—Janet G Heinle, Santa Monica, CA

The cable company - Cox, never leave a balance the same -it gets higher with each month -everytime they "make a deal" they never keep it - and continue raising prices - I am 85 and can no longer afford their shenanigans, but need cable/Internet for it is an integral part of my life at this age
—Toni Gilmont, San Juan Capistrano, CA

Privacy is important to everyone.

I have Comcast for TV, but I really don't like them. SDD
—Mr. Shelley D. Dahlgren PhD, Issaquah, WA

Because it time to level the playing field and stop Comcast from selling our private information. Maybe you can do something good for the people.
—James Hyman, Saint Petersburg, FL

My Cable Bill is $89 a month and a lot of those channels I never watch, with the new set top box that would break up the channel for what I'm looking for.
—Nicholas Dumdie, Dundee, IL

I value my privacy and financial security
—Paul Christensen, Minneapolis, MN

Privacy is pivotal and non-negotiable. The monopolies can charge without impunity. This is un-American, illegal (why are there so many monopolies if they're illegal??) and unethical.
—Patricia Perron, Seattle, WA

sick and tired of government agencies playing monopoly games
—Alexandra Moffat, Orford, NH

Looks like you need to prove you're not a DINGO again?
—Jeffrey A White, Forest Grove, OR

I am tired of sharing my info in order to use applications online, no one should have o give up friends emails, pictures or photos to use an app or website. And cable should become cheaper it is a rip off! Charging to rent equipment necessary to use the cable should not be extra! I haven't had cable in over 7 years and unless things become fairer to the consumer I won't ever go back.
—Tina Mizhir, Port Chester, NY

Please end the monopoly of required set top boxes and implement these common sense laws.
—Andrew Pabon, Chicago, IL

This is a strike against the corporatocracy and for democracy. After all, the FCC is a government (of, by and FOR the PEOPLE, remember?) agency. Please reestablish this in your agency. You promised.
—Lawrence Jacksina, Charlottesville, VA

Too many people I know have had disastrous results of their primacy compromise with identity theft, etc.
—Diana Madoshi, Rocklin, CA

Our privacy should be protected and not sold to anyone or any agencies also lower the cable bills so customers can enjoy the shows and not how they are going to pay for your services
—Glenda Lilling, Port Chester, NY

I am paying for their services, not for them to sell my information as well as the ridiculous fees we are paying to use the services.
—Ruth Berry, Lady Lake, FL

The city of Everett, Massachusetts has been locked into an exclusive cable agreement with Comcast for last decade (although I believe that agreement may have just ended or may be ending, details about this are hard to find). Instead of receiving competitive pricing, the result has been higher pricing, poor service and aging infrastructure. Surrounding cities like Malden and Chelsea have other options, like Verizon Fios available. In Everett, however, cable is monopolized by Comcast and we, the consumers, suffer. This industry needs oversight and needs a change from business as usual.
—Timothy Venezia, Everett, MA

—Jerry Huhn, Charleston, SC

We need consumer's interests to be considered over mediz profits.
—Stuart Garrison, Los Angeles, CA

I don't understand why you would delay passing these 2 regs. I hope you're not involved in any ' revolving door' shenanigans.
—Al Cohen, hummelstown, PA

Fair rates!
—Paul Safr, Janesville, WI

It's very simple; corporations don't want to compete, they want to control. You're job is to enable competition, not control. I don't mind fair costs for cable. I do mind inflated costs so that they can control. If Comcast had put as much monies into their service as they do their lobbying, there wouldn't be anywhere near the number of complaints.
—Ronald Drahos, Bloomington, IN

My information is for my service, not to sell to third parties. And if there's a monopoly causing my cable bill to be too high, then do something about it!
—Adam Bradley, Berkeley, CA

Our cable bills are too high. The bills should be reasonable like gas or electricity. Not out of control montrosity.
—Ms. Kim Kensler, Toledo, OH

This is just common sense stuff. We wonder why the public hates the government?
—Jeffery Hogan, Killeen, TX

Mr. Wheeler do not let Congress mislead you. They are working for the corporations involved, not for the People of the United States of America. Keeps us united by stopping this sham Congress is so constantly fighting for. They are suppose to represent US! You do, so please, we have your back.
—Brenda Boudinot, Painesville, OH

Please protect my privacy, and please lower my cable bill by ending the monopoly on the box I'm forced to rent. You've acted to protect consumers in the past, please do so now
—Tracey Fleming, Fort Worth, TX

My private information is that, private. It is your job to protect Americans privacy. Letting comcast having any of my information would be devastating.
—Gwendolyn Brody, Port Townsend, WA

My Comcast bill has been outrageous for just basic cable and internet. It costs them virtually nothing but they gouge us monthly. Beware, the sales reps speak with forked tongues.
—KATHLEEN SISSON, Kent, WA

It's wrong to have a monopoly in ANY industry. Thank you
—Dawn Skindziel, MILL CREEK, WA

You know that the cable companies are robbing us right and left. Give the citizens some relief.
—Harold Waters, Houston, TX

I pay way too much for cable as it is. Please have comcast lower our cable bills!
—Thomas Ronan, Phila., PA

Our privacy is very important to us, as well as lowering our cable bill because we are Seniors on a monthly income where every dollar needs to be accounted for !!!!
—Theresa Roderigues, Pinellas Park, FL

Corporations do not need protection from free markets, stop supporting the stealing of taxpayer's money.
—Scott Yetman, ,

Please protect us the consumer from these corporations and the greed. We need more choice and lower costs. Please end the monopoly on set-top boxes we are forced to rent each month and allow us a choice. Don't let companies like Comcast, Verizion to tell the FCC how to do it's job. Please act now and Protect My Privacy and Lower My Cable Bill TODAY
—Lawrence C Nordquist, Norwood, MA

Mr. Chairman: This is very important to me. Protect my constitutional rights! Thomas Madden
—Thomas Madden, Springfield, VA

All of you are presently commissioners - - there is NO decent reason to hold off on this - - please do your job, while you're in office.
—Larry Bright, Ypsilanti, MI

The US is losing the communication battle. I am sick of monopolies take my money.
—Nancy S, ,

Make them stop profitting off my life info and let me have the option I have in every other aspect of my consumerism to buy what I use. I'm not forced to rent cars or my residence or my laptop or my phone.
—Rachel Whitcombe, Davis, CA

We're supposed to have a right to privacy. Why are people selling information about me, increasing the risk that my identity can be hacked?
—Jeff Becker, Easton, CT

Your job is to serve the US people. Do your job!
—Susan Meiers, Macomb, IL

WTF, FCC??? Why is it so hard for you to do what the PEOPLE overwhelmingly want? Threatens your future employment?
—Bill Haegele, philadelphia, PA

I live in an area with limited options and can't even get a broadcast signal (in Seattle!). After years of frustration with Comcast, we cut the cord and are without even medium speed access. Beats being a slave to Comcast but looking forward to rejoining the 21st century again.
—David Robinson MD, Seattle, WA

I'm a Comcast user and will not appreciate them selling my information. If that isn't protected, then all of our information will be laid out before the world!
—Len Lindgren, ELGIN, IL

I don't want my information sold to the highest bidder without my consent.

You should represent pur interests. Thank you.
—Francisco Koch, North Hills, CA

It is in the public interest.
—Carlos R Rodriguez, Vero Beach, FL

I have an idea. If the FCC doesn't want to work for The People, maybe the FCC doesn't want to exist at all. After all, without paying to operate the FCC, industry can have everything they are asking the FCC to give them. So The People have to pay twice. For wishy washy FCC regulations, and then bad internet and bad privacy security. Without the FCC, we only have to get run over once, not twice. So how do the folks at the FCC feel about their jobs? I am so tired of consumer agencies working for big industry. They were created to make the working relationship between industry and The People more even. If the FCC doesn't perform that function then what do they exist for?
—Marguerite Val Tara King, Earlton,, NY

The FCC has recently done an unprecedented job of reforming a monopolistic and manipulative industry. Cementing those gains now will produce long-term benefits for consumers and the country as a whole.
—Douglas Samson, Ithaca, NY

Every time I get a cable bill there are new and different charges. It takes forever to reach a "person". I am paying almost paying $200.00 for phone service, internet, and cable. I do not have premium channels. I do have an additional latino package and almost every month they change channels that are added or deleted.
—Gloria Linda Maldonado, Redwood City, CA

I've got more fees on my cable bill than I do channels. It's ridiculous.
—Stephen Quarles, Atlanta, GA

Cable bills are too high. I remember when TV was free and had fewer ads as well.
—Walter Birdwell, Port Isabel, TX

The public need to be protected from the monopolistic cable companies.
—Jo Anne Fannin, Willoughby, OH

DO YOUR JOB! STOP THE STALLING! ARE YOU PART OF THE CORRUPTION??
—Karen Laakaniemi RN MSN, PENSACOLA, FL

The cable companies can continue to offer poor service because we have handed them a quasi monopoly. Privacy is eroded in the name of profits and control is cemented by insisting on the company's own set top boxes. We all complain, even the FCC, but only the FCC and our congress can change the system.
—Saundra Foderick, Zimmerman, MN

I am a senior on a fixed income and I can't afford high priced internet service. Please finish what you started for all of our people. Thank you. Sincerely,

I am a working senior, working still at 67 because programs that should be 20$ a month are 6o$ and up. For gods sake start working for the people and not the ones buying your. Votes . Congress is so corrupt. Washington is turning over in his grave.
—Delilah J Shank, Colma, CA

Comcast is making enough money, thanks.
—James Mahan, Los Angeles, CA

Do you want your private info sold as a commodity
—Regina Hamaker, Princeton, WI

Broadband internet is under siege from all sides. From monopolists abusing their power in multiple forms to spying technology that seeks to monetize our private lives. We need a new era of strong regulation and control to firmly and irrevocably establish individual rights versus corporate corruption.
—James Milnthorpe, Phoenix, AZ

I fear corporate take overs and rip offs
—Lorraine Please enter your last Kirk, Nederland, CO

(1) My personal information is owned by me ... not by anyone else. It is not for sale and is not to be shared without my consent. (2) My family and friends spent top dollar to purchase "cable ready" TV's several years back to get rid of the bogus cable charges for the boxes and remotes only for them to magically reappear. Get rid of them!
—Lisa Pereira, Stratford, CT

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Chris Curley, Richmond, VA

Cable bill is too high already!
—Glenn Wright, Oneonta, NY

By selling my private information and keeping the proceeds for themselves, corporations are robbing me. I should have the option of buying a set-top box, which over time would save me money instead of enriching cable companies.
—Jeanette West, Bradenton, FL

As U.S. citizens we're supposed to be free people, part of being free is having privacy. No one or company should be able to capitalize off of the citizens personal information except the citizen the information is for. And a person shouldn't be forced to either choose between letting a person or business do what they want with that persons personal information or not use the person or businesses service, website, etc. If an online company is a business they need to either charge a reasonable fee or give the user the ability to forfeit their personal info. If something isn't done about the cable companies, satellite TV, and telephone TV providers even lock on customers they're going to end up losing customers, so if you want to protect them anyway you can, talk some sense into their heads, although since they're traded companies their only concern is maximum profit and stock value so it'll probably be a waste of time. And the number one thing, REIGN IN THE ADVERTISING INDUSTRY! They're not even advertisers anymore they're personal info and data thief's, that do nothing but brainwash the public.
—Enrico Pelausa, Manassas Park, VA

Outside the US, other OECD countries give cable providers no favors: no monopoly, no contracts. A user can change companies from one day to the next, get better service, and pay about what 1/3 Americans pay. Why can't the FCC require competition in the US?
—Homer Ferguson, Nashville, TN

DO THE RIGHT THING FOR THE 98% AND PROTECT CONSUMERS !!!
—Howard Miller, Ventura, CA

We are private citizens - please respect that. Business practices should understand that.
—Suzanne Kuffler, Woods Hole, MA

Cable is going to price itself out of the market. I'm a retired widow with a passionate interest in staying current. I'm thinking of dropping my cable service and finding better ways--more cost efficient and more pertinent.
—Elaine Leggett, Austin, TX

We're already paying for cable networks we don't want. At least let us save some money.
—Mark Hillenbrand, Oak Lawn, IL

I canceled Direct TV, land phone, and internet (all bundled with CenturyLink) because of the high cost. Then I am bombarded with enticing lower cost packages from all (for a finite time). I need the FCC to help me.
—Butch Blawd, Minneapolis, MN

Invoke anti-trust laws and break up Comcast!
—Peter Veits, Burnsville, MN

I'll appreciate you taking a pro-consumer position on the broadband privacy policy and set-top box monopoly...and, say, didn't the US pass some very stringent rules about monopolies a couple of decades ago? Did they just disappear through attrition?
—Faith Freewoman, Rochester, NY

I dis bit an exception to the 3th amendment.emand that my electronic writing and messaging bee confidential, Commitment to electronic form
—Peter Butt, San Pedro, CA

I don't want an Internet provider, for example, Comcast, selling my personal information, and this should be against the law. I also hope the FCC would end the gouging of customers who are forced to pay a monthly fee on cable boxes, such as DVR devices. Customers should be able to purchase and own their own boxes. Right now customers are paying over $20 per box, per month--I spend more than $40 per month on just two DVR.
—Nancy Gutierrez, PALM DESERT, CA

I do NOT want my private info out there, and would love to pay less for cable.
—Rob B Campbell, New York, NY

Among the reasons why cable rates should be lower is so a larger portion of the US population is able to view vital programs that enhance their knowledge of voting and the issues facing the nation.
—Frank Chorba, Overland Park, KS

I count of the FCC to keep cable prices fair and to protect my privacy.
—Sarah G, Glendale, CA

PEOPLE over Profit, Please!
—Jim Lykins, Scappoose, OR

Our privacy is important to us. It is also important to Comcast to sell without our consent so it can make even more money off of us. We are held hostage to exhorbitant costs due to the monopoly it holds. Along with customer (non)service representatives that have outright lied to me personally more than once. If my husband wasn't such a baby, I would just have Netflix.
—Paula Cronin, Hooksett, NH

Please act in the interest of consumers and our freedom, rather than in the interests of business.
—Mary Tasillo, Philadelphia, PA

The FCC has no control over the cable industries becoming monopolies, but you. do have the power to ensure the public interest is served by voting for these commonsense measures.
—Harry Lewis Michaels Jr., Fort Collins, CO

The internet is the lifeblood of the economy--protect access for everyone
—Elizabeth Butler, Henderson, KY

Enough of the shenanigans! Please, Chairman Wheeler, keep up the fight to reign in the monstrous greed and reckless behavior of the cable giants. We have paid too much for too long, and it's time to break up the stranglehold. Thank you!
—Mary Hager, Leverett, MA

Cable cos. keep charging more and more and giving us worse service, making us pay extra for channels that were once included in a "standard" package. The switch to digital TV has made this much worse. In addition, we pay for numerous duplications of channels in the various add-on packages, and we now have to pay for digital adapters to get anything on an older TV. As for broadband, which also comes only from the CATV cos., the service is poor and over-priced. It is much better in numerous other countries (although it was invented here). I pay for "up to" 50 Mbs, which I get nowhere but on a test site. Sometimes I get as much as 7-8 Mbs. Unually, I get less than 1 Mbs. Is this false or deceptive? We need much more competition in the CATV and broadband industries.
—Jerald Vinikoff, Mechanicville, NY

big conglomerates & big money is killing America. Big government does nothing to protect US citizens against big corporate greed!
—Phyl Morello, White Pine, TN

Also ban cable cos from charging monthly fees for required equipment! SHAME ON YOU!
—Julie Adelson, Santa Monica, CA

COMCAST needs TO BE STOPPED!-and cable box rent is outrageous!-my 94 yr old mom has a cable box that is 9yrs old-out of date!-she has paid for the entire box many times! but Comcast still bleeds her money!
—Thomas A. Guaraldi, Houston, TX

The Internet and TV are foundational to our country's growth. Telecom monopolies have proliferated at the cost of consumer choice and technological progress. It's time for that to stop.
—Alan Harris, Houston, TX

I consider internet privacy of an extremely primary nature — a digital interpretation of several aspects of the Bill of Rights — and they must be protected at all cost.

—Eleanor Kaye, Hallandale, FL

I hate getting ripped off by cable companies. Certain large cable companies rent/lease cable boxes at about $10 each month. These companies also charge for use of cable cards should one be lucky enough to find a device with this feature.
—Kenney Phillis jr, Denton, TX

Please don't let monopolies charge extra for service or sell our private information without our consent.
—Alice Trexler, arlington, MA

I'm tired of paying a monthly rental for my set-top box. Why should I have to when so many such devices are available on the open market for a one-time charge? We're not wealthy and that monthly charge for the STB is killing us. Please open up the purchase of third-party set-top boxes to the competition and end the cable companies' monopoly on these devices and forcing their customers to rent this readily available equipment from them. That just isn't right.
—Herb Schulsinger, Valinda, CA

My information is MINE. With the rising cost of connecting to the internet, I may, as far too many American's, no longer be able to afford it.
—Tamara Carpenter, Kalamazoo, MI

Comcast is a dragon.
—Carl Weiler, Ferndale, MI

As a senior on a limited budjet it is crucial that our rates are lowered to a level that is affordable without compromising our level of service.
—Capolarry Mack, WBL, MN

We need to end monopolies...PERIOD!
—Paul Paul Neeley, Antioch, IL

I want my privacy guaranteed and I want an end to the monopolistic practices that Comcast employs.
—Jusef White, Fremont, CA

My personal information belongs to me solely, no matter what some greedy corp. insists otherwise. Any use of customer personal info. by comcast must be on an opt-in basis only, which would force that excrement to be transparent about their practices, at least in this respect.
—Joe Weis, Reedley, CA

NONE it the recipient should read private email or know what the heck I'm doing on the internet. My records are MY RECORDS!!
—Barbara Doucet, Newnan, GA

Cable is a monopoly -time to break their control
—D T Ptak, Delevan, NY

Its time for consumer's rights to take priority over industries' interests. No, you can't let them sell my info. Why is this even a question? What happened to the anti-monopoly, anti-trust measures in this country?
—Jason McDonald, Oklahoma City, OK

Businesses which provide home/small business Internet service have captive customers, with few choices. They MUST be regulated Tightly as common-carrier monopolies working in the public interest, convenience, and necessity, unless/until real, vigorous competition for the physical layer of Internet service becomes a reality.
—Nick Kratz, Pasadena, CA

Freedom...
—Mr. Michael Krall, Lander, WY

These are times when a global market produces global sales harassment and expands the risk of fraud through identity theft. It becomes exceedingly difficult to properly manage one's digital foot print when vendors and corporations sell personal information. It is bad enough that they want this option at all, it is totally unacceptable that they should sell personal info without their customers'/clients' notification and consent.
—Noreen Winningham, Skokie, IL

Cable bills in the U.S. are ridiculous especially compared to other nations.
—Ronald Wharton, Columbus, OH

It's unamerican, free up the bonds of this monopoly
—Ben Kapek, Spokane, WA

Comcast has no right to sell my private info and cable-TV has forever cost too much!
—Larry S Powers, South Berwick, ME

I can't even afford cable. I can't even afford the taxes for cable. The fact that cable prices keep going up so fast and faster than the taxes is insane. I think the fact that cable is so expensive is why so many people download movies and shows illegally.
—Travis Sullivan, Grand Island, NE

We get poor reception, quality, options, and customer service. For all this we pay dearly compared to the rest of the world. What is wrong with this picture? Monopolies perhaps? Shameful.
—Lillian Feierabend, Cottonwood, CA

Privacy is of the utmost importance. As is opening up the STB business. Please move on this now
—George E Hitz Jr, Sudbury, MA

Paul Ryan and Marco Rubio decided, because of the price of gas, which I buy maybe once a month, that I didn't deserve a COLA this year. My cable bill went up anyway! Maybe none of this matters, as I will have to drop cable or my prescription medications soon!
—Lewis Litzinger, Tallahassee, FL

Please, be on the side of us consumers.
—Karl Heinz Kremer, Rochester, NY

I am writng to urge the FCC to vote on and pass rules that would 1) stop Comcast (or any cable/internet provider) from selling a consumer's private information without the express consent of the consumer, and 2) end the cable-TV provider monopoly on ownership of set-top boxes that force consumer to rent these devices on a monthly basis. There is no social benefit basis for either of these practices. They exist solely because of the market power held by the entities involved and are procticed to extract more revenue from consumers rather than somehow improve service. Bill Schramm schrammwe@gmail.com
—William Schramm, Oak Ridge, TN

Dear Jessica Rosenorcel, please take immediate action to pass the measure and prevent Comcast from selling our private information and also from becoming a monopoly. You are our only hope! Do what is the right thing.
—Gogian Yee, MONTEBELLO, CA

Please protect and help consumers.
—CL Doyle, Bronxville, NY

This sort of thing is supposed to be for the benefit of the American people, not commercial interests.
—Jeff Harrison, Worley, ID

Because WE PAY some company/corporation to PROVIDE A SERVICE OR PRODUCT to us, does not mean that that entity should assume it is automatically granted the right to take our private information -- which they have ONLY because it is needed to conduct activities directly related to the delivery and/or servicing of said paid-for product or service -- and give it away (i.e., favor trading) or sell it. They have NO built-in right to do such. Additionally, unless there is a valid patent reason to constrain a consumer to the use of a particular/specific amenity/tool that is required to receive and use a service or product, then said amenity/tool should be subject to competitive acquisition and pricing -- after all, these same companies that want the government to protect their interests are the same ones that scream about keeping government out of the "free market place". Seems that they should not be allowed to have things both ways. Competition is good for the country, and good for the consumer. I'm hoping you will support the FCC's broadband privacy proposal, and its efforts to end the monopoly on set-top boxes (FYI - my cable rates have skyrocketed in the last 3 years due to consolidation of the industry -- we need MORE competition, not less). Thank you for your consideration in these matters.
—R Shandor, San Diego, CA

I do not have the money and power, that the people that see you so often, have.
—Andy McGinnis, Milton, FL

Cable companies have an unfair monopoly that threatens our privacy and our wallets. Please stop them.
—Ms. Jan Kimbrough, Valley Village, CA

Your charter is to serve the public interest. It is NOT in the public interest to have personal information sold to corporations without the individual's consent. Please resist these attempts of congress persons who have sold out to corporate lobbyists to change your rulings. Corporatists pay lip service to the merits of competition, yet when it comes to pricing of set top boxes, they inconsistently favor monopolistic policies.
—WK Kent Wilson, Portland, OR

Do your job.
—Patricia M. M. Williams, Lewes, DE

Why would the government allow the selling private information without user consent? Why is that even an issue? What good are those annoying security questions, if Comcast can sell the answers?
—LL Price, Kearney, NE

The public's private information is not for sale, please finish protecting our privacy. The Monopoly's you are allowing are allowing the prices to sky rocket also. Please protect the public before helping Corporations. Thank you.
—L Yaco, San Francisco, CA

The FCC is chartered to act in the public interest, which occasions opposing powerhouse operators like Comcast. I am asking the FCC to do its job.
—Germain C Giner, Chicago, IL

The FCC and Congress need to stop kneeling before the telecommunication corporations and start listening to the American people.
—Terrance Kelly, King of Prussia, PA

Freedom of thought is dependent on a reasonable expectation of privacy. The minute everyone thinks someone is listening to everything they say or write, we lose creativity and we lose the constitution of the United States of America.
—Christian McCarty, Seattle, WA

Generally speaking privacy is very important to me. I try to avoid posting too much on the internet that could lead to people bothering me and don't really want companies that I pay for services to decide they want MORE money and sell my info.
—Ben Loukota, Newtown Square, PA

My cable bill is ridiculous! I thought it was common knowledge that monopolies are bad. Why is the Cable Industry allowed to keep one? Is it because of the campaign donations they give you?
—Alan Wojtalik, Baltimore, MD

It's like a lot of other issues, there's a lot of talk what can be done to make things better, but damn little in getting something done!
—Steven Oakland, Ames, IA

Monopolies lead to abuse of power - and the role of a federal agency in a democracy is to protect the people, not the powerful. Please stand up for us. This is about so much more than saving a few dollars on cable TV bills - it's about equal access to information, education, jobs, and opportunity.
—Ria Megnin, Dayton, OH

It's way past time to put American families first. Please do the right thing for all Americans instead of just corporations.
—Shari Wildschutte, Concord, CA

No more monopolies in the cable industry...you must stop Comcast from selling our private information and no more set-top boxes.
—Darrell Schmidt, Rose Hill, KS

Your supposed to be working for the american people, stop taking bribes and "Do Your Job"!!
—Stephen Mcquade, dudley, MA

Please protect my privacy. Also, if our justice department won't take action against the monopoly of Comcast, I hope the FCC can stop them from charging rent on cable boxes.
—Meredith West, Chicago, IL

Monopolies cost consumers. NO reason for one to exist except to unfairly benefit business.
—Elizabeth Molsen, Newtown, PA

We must find a way to end monopoly capitalism, worldwide, one way or the other.
—Warren Colison, Minneapolis, MN

We need more diversity of internet providers and other media.
—Melissa B Peters, Henrico, VA

Ending the monopoly would improve the entire nations economy by providing competition and innovation, etc. We as a nation need to improve our infrastructure, we are not even on par with other countries!! AND I want my information kept private, they do NOT have my permission to sell my information. And I would very much appreciate a much lower bill, or at least the option to use another companies more competitively priced service. Thank you!
—Kim Hensley, Sacramento, CA

Privacy is paramount in one's personal life. Consequestally, personal information should not be permitted to be sold or otherwise shared. In addition, competition in terms of hardware which will meet required performance standards should be encouraged, not restrained thought captive equipment rentals.
—R R Schneider Jr, Bethlehem, PA

Cable companies have no right to threaten our privacy for their own profits. Nor do they have the right to jack up cable prices like a monopoly.
—Anthony Straka, Wappingers Falls, NY

Because monopolies are illegal and you are the only entity that can enforce this! Free competition is better economics anyways!!
—Joanie Kenney, Fort Collins, CO

There is no decent reason to delay voting.
—Marvin Feil, Newton, NJ

Comcast has repeatedly abused its monopoly in my neighborhood by claiming to keep our rates the same, while adding bogus new fees and using its customer service department to bait and switch trapped consumers. Please step in.
—Judy Ford, San Anselmo, CA

supposed consumer protection; do your job or get out of our way
—R Kim, Prescott, AZ

It's tiresome the number of companies profiting from selling information about me that I have never and will never do business with.
—Eric Ashley, Fort Lauderdale, FL

I'm one of those folks who has "cut the cord" for financial reasons. I do sometimes miss cable, but as long as the providers can run roughshod over my privacy and my bank account, I'll be getting by without them.
—Kathryn A. Burns, Austin, TX

My privacy is of the utmost importance. At present the cost of cable service is outrageously expensive and something must be done to reduce the cost.
—Hon. JD Krutick Craig Hon. Joyce Krutick Craig L.L.M. (Ret.), Torrington, CT

Business should not have more power to commit fraud than government does to stop it.
—Alan Van Zuuk, Walterville, OR

Protect my privacy and lower my obscene cable TV bill.
—Ron Kennedy, ,

Forbid what is wrong and uphold what is right.
—LuQman AbdurRahman, Ann Arbor, MI

As the most modern of public utilities the web needs to be nurtured as a public trust, not skimmed as a Republican venture into mind and wallet control
—John Heigl, Lady Lake, FL

I was abused and cheated by Time Warner. I am now trying Direct TV. The only choices I have are Hargray(haven't heard anything good about them) and direct and dish. So deregulation has given us monopolies with their high prices and abuse. We are all very fed up with the high prices and abuse.
—Diana nadanyi, Bluffton, SC

I don't think it is fair to provide subpar service and expect people to pay more for what they should already get for the high prices they are already paying. You cannot doing anything in American society without having online access and it should be considered a public utility.
—Arica Dawson, Holly, MI

My personal info is not for sale
—John W Lawler, Magalia, CA

Monopolies are bad for the country.
—Matthew Dooley, Pittsburgh, PA

You know what to do Wheeler. Protect our internet freedoms and stop stalling renomination of Rosenworcel.
—Jeffery Young, Rochester, NY

We're consumers.
—Lester and Judy Hoyle, Cave Junction, OR

Privacy is part of our freedom to communicate that enables radical discussions regarding how people want society to change. This is fundamental to the kind of conversations that created the prosperous democratic civil society that many around the world envy, and no less vital to the kind of free thinking we need to adapt founding principles in the context of evolving technologies. The powerful should not have the power to know and track everything that the less powerful think. We all do better when common people feel safe to express themselves privately and find ways to address problems they might not want shared publicly.
—Brian Ashman, Saint Paul, MN

OF COURSE the privacy of people's internet usage should inviolable. That should not even be an issue, it should be taken for granted by all parties.
—Tom McNeely, Bellingham, WA

Privacy cost and competition
—Charles Woodward, Belleville, WI

My Cable Bill.....and my Privacy.....
—Fogerson Margot, Belleville, MI

The only thing worse than a bad government is bad business. I, as an American, have a right to my privacy and my property. These companies are threatening to take both away from me, and I won't have it. It is your job to listen to the people, and the people are saying hold strong, and don't let these big companies centralize not just your, not just mine, by the liberties of ALL Americans.
—Colum Cross, Albany, NY

Cable companies have been ripping off their customers for far too long and it needs to stop. There must be more competition, including freeing up the last mile, eliminating the set-top box monopoly, increasing broadband access to outlying areas, and forcing them to use the money we are forced to give them to provide low-priced access for schools and libraries.
—Richard R Gingras, Quinton, VA

The consumer is in danger of getting screwed even more than currently. The FCC should be defending the people, not enabling their being gouged. We already have slower and more expensive internet service than any other industrial power: a national disgrace.
—S Fleck, Chapel Hill, NC

My cable bill is expensive and i don't have premium channels. For what i pay i should be getting everything they have to offer. Selling my info? I don't think so. It's not enough to over charge but to take money for my info that you have no right to sell? Belly up boys. It's time to stop screwing the ones who put and keep you in business. It's called appreciation.
—Barbra Morman, Mount Pleasant, TX

I had to discontinue TV cable because it's become too expensive to maintain.
—Leon S. Miller, St. Petersburg, FL

This is all too obvious. What is Comcast the NSA now? And leave us a few dollars for other expenses. The cable industry has enough profits for a thousand years.
—Bruce Monnier, Durham, NC

From the advent of the telegraph onward, public communications and broadcast media have always been prey to the controlling influence of private interests to the detriment of the public at large. If we let this happen again with the Internet, given the demise of journalism, we can expect grave damage to our democracy itself.
—Sam DeLeo, Denver, CO

Freedom entails privacy.
—Kimberly Jecker, frisco, TX

The cable fat cats are an oligopoly bordering on a consortium-monopoly. Hence, they need to be rigorously regulated as either a public utility or a common carrier. P.S. to Ralph Nader: Sorry I ditched your campaign in '08, bro. I now know that you would never have sold out to Hillary like Bernie did. All my best to the PIRGs!
—Terry Gruzebeck, Minneapolis, MN

My freedom matters. If they can sell me, they can sell you and yours.
—Michele Brophy, King Ferry, NY

Limited income. Comcast should Not be able to sell our private information!
—Mary Snow, Columbia Station, OH

I take measures to keep my info private but cannot protect myself from internet service and other media providers without your help. My cable internet and TX service has increased 50% over the past 4 years, including rent on the cable box. I need your help to obtain fair pricing instead of the monopoly extortion to which I am subject in my rural town.
—Ms. Jo Ann Duman, Texarkana, TX

The internet is now utilized by almost everyone. Keep it open to all.
—Patricia Silver, Berkeley, CA

Replace the FCC with real Americans who actually protect the people instead of what we have now.
—Mr. Joseph Sandy, Clarksburg, WV

I am tired of being robbed by these corporations. You are there to regulate them and represent the people. It's time to do your job.
—Lester Sheran, Powder Springs, GA

Please support the action to prevent Comcast from increasing rates for poorer service and speed and prevent their selling of private information to make even more money. Comcast has to be restrained! I am a retired low income individual and I need the protection of this action .Please control Comcast's monopolistic actions now!
—James E Baker, St. Paul,, MN

I can't believe that you would let political pressure block you from moving forward with measures that are so clearly in the public’s interest. Please step up and protect the people.
—David W Etherington, Eugene, OR

Most Americans rely upon television and/or the internet not just for entertainment but more importantly for information, shopping, banking, and communication (like this message). Political power is shifting to the public interest over 'big telecom' corporate influence. Do the right thing. Thank you.
—B Suel, Neotsu, OR

The cable industry is acting much as the old Ma Bell did when she was in the catbird's seat. They provide a service and forbid the ownership of the means to access it. Only a monopoly can behave in this fashion. On the personal information front, I gave my information to Comcast for the purpose of hiring them to provide a service to me, not for them to sell me to the highest bidder. Please make them get my permission to sell my personal information. It's not too much to ask.
—Robert Post, Villas, NJ

These are basic measures that as a consumer we should have. Please follow through on these proposals.
—Michael Schmitt, Portland, OR

You're suppose to protect us from monopolies, not Comcast profits!!!
—Clifford Johnson, Minneapolis, MN

As a senior on a limited income, my 'supposedly' freedom's are being "Stripped' by 'the SUPER RICH' everyday. DO YOUR JOB, PLEASE!!! STOP THE 'Mining' of "the 99%" population's Money.... There is a VAST amount of people who are "FED-UP" with the BS congress "hides" and inserts into bills that are voted on. Please Take Action NOW.....
—, Fort Walton Beach, FL

No more rent seeking from legacy outfits unwilling to innovate. Free market means industry responds to market demand--not legislates monopolistic advantage.
—Brian Driggs, Glendale, AZ

Internet service is a utility, like the phone companies. My information is just that, MY information, not my ISP's.
—Mick Curth, Aurora, CO

Please work for the people on this.Every year or every other year,rates go up.No matter what cable company you have.Their profit margin exceeds from one year to the next while we pay more for their service.Enough greed has to stop for the sake of us little people.
—Stephen Smith, Bethlehem, PA

I am paying a ridiculous amount each month for very basic cable and internet service, with no chance of reducing the bill since the better rates are only given in bundles. Currently, I am forced to rent a) router, b) a modem, c) digital converter box, even though I have a HD, smart TV. Having only been able to find a part time job for the last two years, it is ridiculous that I should have to pay over $105 A MONTH. I need internet service to look for better jobs. I need basic cable so that I can at least watch the local news because without the stinking digital converter, I can't even get local TV stations on my TV. Do the right thing by THE PEOPLE, of whom I am a part, and end this monopoly and protect my/our privacy! Thank you.
—Ms. Holly McDuffie, Los Angeles, CA

I am disabled and on a fixed income.We do not receive cost of living increases yet my cable and internet bill continues to go up and my TV service is not very good.Please help me and others like me.
—Alan Minietta, Wheat Ridge, CO

Cable is now so expensive in Macon, GA. that I can no longer afford it on what I get in Social Security payments.

No corporation should have such control over the American public. The FCC needs to protect Americans. Do the job you were meant to do.
—M Garrett, South Jordan, UT

We need more competition in our broadband market.
—Christopher Scerbo, New Castle, DE

We the People NOT They the Thieving Monopolists! INDICT COMCAST FOR ANTITRUST VIOLATIONS!
—Alan D McLemore, Beaumont, TX

I need affordable cable-internet access! Capitalism makes it too costly.
—John S. Sonin, Juneau, AK

I value my Privacy!
—Terry Dailey, Fargo, ND

I may have to give up cable and Internet all together if the prices don't stabilize, in the last 3 months my cable bill has increased 3 times currently it cost me overy $160.00 a month for cable and Internet services. I am on Disability, something needs to be done. I am paying for the same channels just to have access to discovery, history and create channels. This is outrageous. Do something for us, the consumer!
—Sandra James, Jasper, AL

Technology has given corporations the means to invade and abuse privacy in ways that have never existed before, and they show every sign of exploiting these powers, with no regard for the rest of us. Only government, in many cases the FCC can stop them. Please make sure you do. The issue of the cable box monopoly is less profound but still vital. Like any monopolists, cable companies will offer inferior products (that use more electricity than they need to just because the cable company doesn't have to pay its customers' electric bills) and gouge customers so long as they can get away with it. They mustn't be allowed to.
—Mark Lloyd Baker, Globe, AZ

This is important to me because Comcast has no right to sell my private information without my consent and I don't consent. My information is mine to sell and they should not be able to deny me any communication service if I refuse to let them sell my information and especially without compensationg me nor should any shoddy, arbitrary, or illegal contract methods allow them to engage in the sale of my private information. Comcast should not be able to sell my information, even if it relates to marketing. I also ask that the FCC does do something to reign in the profits of cable companies, it is my understanding they make money hand over fist, do seem to have a bit of a monopoly and are working to reduce competition and possibly are using this to charge more than they should as I believe my cable bill is too expensive and Comcast especially seems to be in the habit of offering less services such as NFL coverage, expensive pornography rentals, modern cable features, and restrict online television access a bit as well and charging more to get basic cable and cable services in general.Other cable providers have offered the NFL service free that I know of and cable packages cost less with other providers. I believe the renting of set top boxes is just a form of exacting funds from consumers because renters pay more than people who buy set top boxes and if it costs $200.00, although I dont know how much a set top costs as of 2016, renters could pay a $1,000.00 and still owe next months rent for the set top and have to return it when they are no longer customers. This seems like financial extortion to me and a burden for low income people. Plus my set tops have been burning out faster then when I was a child. Ive been through three Internet boxes which burned out and 2 set top boxes for cable as the last one was better than the one we replaced three years ago. So buying boxes isn't exactly good either but at least it costs the consumer that much less for cable. I believe any set top box I own should be good enough for any cable provider. Better compatibility between set tops and every cable provider in America would be a further improvement.
—Jeffrey M Rivard, Framingham, MA

Don't cave in to Big Telecom's obstruction and abuse of their power. Do the right thing for the American people whose interests the FCC ultimately serves.
—Mr Ulysses S Lateiner, Somerville, MA

I do not like the media, the police, large corporations and government breach my right to privacy and confidentiality. Their should be a public inquiry and financial compensation for me and those affect by the FCC and Congress. These people should be indicted and prosecuted to the full extent of law. I want justice for over 30 years of abuse of power.
—Christopher Huggins, niagara falls,

I'm a consumer, not a product. To sell my personal information, especially retroactively, is unethical. It's giving people no choice whether to disclose what they read, view, and how they think; this is especially unfair in communities where there is only one internet provider and where the poor cannot purchase a "luxury" service to protect this information. This is the most intrusive action I've ever seen short of a court order. If this passes, I'm sure lots of people will be looking forward to buying YOUR personal information. If this thought is unnerving, it should be. Being forced to rent a set-top box from the service provider is a stupid practice. However I think it's one that will be disrupted by the marketplace once video over IP cable providers can compete with cable operators...which will only happen if there is true net neutrality. If Comcast is allowed to impede data flow or extort money from these other providers before allowing them to flow effectively on their networks (should NOT be allowed), then forcing Comcast to open the set-top box to force more competition is a must. Again, cable providers are often the ONLY option in communities, so a monopoly or a duopoly exists and the government must regulate these industries to create competition since it fails to exist on its own.
—Kevin Berwald, Renton, WA

The cable companies are calling the shots, all to benefit them. Everything they do is to increase their profits to the detriment of the consumer. Needs to be turned around.
—Joyce Kidd, Beverly Hills, CA

Our cable bill has doubled in three years - service goes out every month or so, and we only view 20% of what's offered (it's not humanly possible to watch over 100 channels). Meanwhile, the cost of living rises and incomes stay the same or decrease. If we want high speed internet, we don't even have an alternative. Isn't it time this communications monopoly cut the public a break?
—Roberta Marley-Merchant, Lancaster, PA

This is important to me because monopolies of any sort are bad. They are anti-business, they are anti-consumer and they are anti-american.
—Joshua Dowdell, Lanham, MD

It's time to let the consumers choose what programming they want ala cart versus these expensive package deals that include many channels that no one wants or needs. High definition TV channels should be included with no extra cost. There should be no extra costs to stream or data caps. By now all of these companies should have the capability to stream as much data as necessary.
—John Horvatic, San Jose, CA

My bills for TV and online services are going through the roof. I urge you to break up the monopolies once and for all.
—Paul McDowell, Santa Barbara, CA

Please support the consumer in this matter. Thank you. It's unfortunate, but we cannot depend on Congress to support the American people given the undue influence of lobbyists.
—Walter S. Jakielski, Marseilles, IL

Broadband and net neutrality is the new platform for free speech in our democracy. It is critical that the FCC help protect the public's interest !
—Brad Buckner, Littleton, CO

The FCC does not work for the benefit of private capital, but to guarantee fair and beneficial use of the public resources owned by the nation as a whole. Please move forward immediately to protect privacy and end the monopoly on set-top boxes. Thank you
—Peter Fraterdeus, Galena, IL

I have always had a strong belief in one's right to privacy on the internet, in an age where privacy is steadily eroding in the physical world. Cable companies like Comcast would prefer no one have any privacy whatsoever, because it's in their financial interests as for-profit corporations to do whatever they can to earn money off you. This is the path that leads to increasingly dramatic abuse of one's customers, and the FCC desperately needs to limit their power. They should not be above the law.
—Andrew Fortune, East Bridgewater, MA

Please protect these common-sense, pro-consumer policies
—Jonas Hansson, Malmberget,

I'm tired of cable companies running rampant and uncontrolled. I'm tired of their monopolistic ways growing unchecked. This needs to end.
—Brent Metcalf, Urbana, IL

Consumers, ie ordinary citizens, need protection against mega corporations. If the government won't support our interests, then nobody will. Everyone needs phone service; almost everyone needs internet and TV service. We cannot protect ourselves individually. Huge monopolies must be closely regulated in the public interest.
—Colleen James Clark and Cox, Cambridge, MA

I am allowed to buy my own modem while my internet connection is from Comcast, so why should I not be allowed to buy my own cable TV box? My privacy is of paramount concerns, and I should be able to tell any company that it cannot provide my personal details to anyone else.
—Sterling Proffitt, Keswick, VA

It is bad enough that the federal government in general and the FCC in particular have allowed monopoly control by companies like Comcast, Time-Warner, AT&T, etcetera, to exist forcing most customers in having little choice as to TV and ISP services, at least stand up and take some of their control over captive markets away and support privacy of customers and competition and choice for customers as to the hardware they use. The increased competition in cable boxes will be very much like what happened when control of phones was wrested from Ma Bell (AT&T), opening up the market for competition and innovation.
—David Waratuke, Round Lake, IL

Should have been done years ago!
—Jim Bell, San Diego, CA

Companies cannot treat the American people like slaves, they don't own us and should not be able to sell our information for their profit.
—Robert Carroll, Austin, TX

This very Important for financial reasons.!!!!!
—Mary, M.I., NY

Privacy is important and monopolies need to be stopped.
—Lisa O'Donnell, Stillwater, OK

I spend $240 a year to rent a cable box that is worth $150. Consumers need FCC protection from predatory cable companies.
—John Carr, Centerport, NY

I absolutely hate having no choice. It is not a free market when a company holds monopoly power over people. It is not fair and it is not competitive. This is the problem with politics overshadowing market pressures.
—Michael H Forster, Portland, OR

Comcast and AT&T have put forth a horrible idea which deserves to be buried under a rock. It is nothing but a power play to take over our media and tell us what we should watch. Nobody will go for TV or digital media after this. I predict that file sharing will reach new heights and many will use proxy servers to hold onto whatever minimal privacy they already have. These options will cause Comcast and AT&T to scream bloody murder, but somehow I doubt that the American people will vote in favor of armed invasion of Tonga or some other tiny island country. We also have the question of the fact that this is the "World Wide" web and that social norms for the USA may be vastly different than those of Hong Cong, Paris or Kiev. Who gave Comcast/AT&T the right to block channels or otherwise interfere with content from those countries? Another thought: a study by Gwava showed that 205 Billion emails are created every day. If the average email is 1000 bytes, then you are looking at 205 Terabytes every day. In the end, people will find a way to get on the "fast" internet and circumvent the throttle on the slower streams. This will render any such laws/methods as academic and used only by people who are technologically illiterate. Programs like TOR will become mandatory, and this ham-handed approach to "ruling the internet" will end.
—Steven Robbins, Londonderry, NH

Protect people's privacy and lower our cable bills now. Empathy is needed for people not monopoly.
—Ross Lockridge III, Cerrillos, NM

Security of my private information is crucial to me. Please don't sell it.
—Chris Nazarro, Austin, TX

Television, radio, Internet, newspapers are the vehicles through which a population learn and keep informed about their democracy and the rest of the world we all live in. Cable rates are sky high and getting higher-unaffordable by millions-especially younger citizens. An informed public is an imperative for democracy. We need your help to put the safety and well bring of our country before the mega profits of the cable companies.
—Lynn Demitrieus, New York, NY

We nee our privacy and need more competition between cable companies to improve service and decrease costs.
—Patrick M. Malone, Findlay, OH

Your job is to stand up for and protect the consumer against unfair practices by mega corporations. If you give in to them, who is left in our corner? And who are you then working for?
—Heather Fastiggi, Cresco, PA

These cable companies are basically a monopoly in many areas and nothing is being done about it.

It's time to end the set-top box Monopoly and lower my bill. These two proposals are in the best interest of all consumers in this country.
—F Lashmet, Kansas City, MO

My private information is mine. To sell what is mine without my consent or due process, is theft. It is the duty of government in general and the FCC, in particular, to protect the governed from unwarranted intrusion.
—Joel E Grace, Big Flats, NY

The public needs protection in area rightfully a consumer protection. The FCC is the agency responsible.
—LuMarion Conklin, ,

Please take positive action on the two measures before you. The measures benefit the public. It is time for courage and giving a voice and economic power back to the citizens of our great country.
—Janice Absher, Spokane Valley, WA

Keep our prices low and keep companies fair.
—Tonya Stoddard, Boise, ID

The industry's requirement that we RENT settop boxes is as regressive (and repressive of technological innovation) as Ma Bell's erstwhile rule that we lease phones. Look at how many careers and fortunes were made when ATT was forced to step into the '80's. We can have a compatable burst of innovation today. Cut our chains and watch us take off! (I have no ties to any entity that might profit from this rule...but I'd like have the opportinity to!)
—Elinor M. Walker, Rockville, MD

I am a 70 year old senior. The internet is crucial to me for addressing medical issues and other banking and financing controls. I leave on Social Security and a small pension. I already have to pay Comcast $100.00 a month for basic Internet only, and there is nothing they can do to lower it. My Wife uses it to work at home at night. I refuse to use it for Phone and cable service. when I had that with Comcast it was up to $278.00 a month and they would not lower it for me. So we dropped them except for the internet. Please stop this madness. Sincerely, Thank you.
—Joseph Fell, Naugatuck, CT

my info should not be for sale. Comcast is trying to become a monopoly and control not only cable but the internet for their profit.
—Frank A Warthan Jr, Kennesaw, GA

As a senior on a fixed income, I need you to stick up for Main Street. PLEASE!!!
—William Korbel, WATERLOO, NY

Fairness. Their exorbitant prices are price gauging. $99 to be able to watch TV for a month. I call that gauging.
—Donald L. Anderson, HARPSWELL, ME

I demand that my privacy is respected. Also, because I am on a fixed income a reduction in my cable bill would benefit me so I may use that money for medication or food.
—Howard Hayward, West Bridgewater, MA

I am 87 and sometime before I die I would like to pay cable bills based on competition not on monopoly. It's disgraceful that all my life I have had to put up with bad service and high prices. Those in charge like to bleat about capitalistic competition but it exists in very few places.
—Diane Olson, Santa Monica, CA

Because we the people think the FCC should do its job. You represent all Americans not the 1%. You all get paid good wages and benefits, so quit taking bribes from the 1%. Quit being greedy at expense of the 99%.
—Lynn M Ketchum, Madison, WI

Over the 5 years I've been a comcast customer, I've seen my rate rise without any appreciable improvement in service. This monopoly Comcast enjoys will soon prevent me from using their service anymore, once it becomes unaffordable. You must step in and curb their monopolistic ways. Please make competition and lower prices a reality.
—B Franz, East Orange, NJ

I am sick of the never ending monopoly and choke hold these companies have on us!
—Eric Grebs, Carlsbad, CA

it is outrages Comcast is selling our information they need to be reined in on all
—Betty Smisek, Saint Paul, MN

I deeply resent being held hostage by the cable industry monopoly. There is only one available service provider in my area, and I have NO CHOICE but to subscribe to them. The costs keep rising, and I am forced to pay up or do without. We need some relief from this greed by any means possible, and not having to rent their set-top boxes would be a start. Also, why are they allowed to sell our private information without prior consent??? We should have the option of OPTING IN instead of being required to opt out!!
—James Cavallo, Lambertville, NJ

Monopolies represent the ability to impose "private taxes." I've actually written about this in my book "The Covenant of Democracy: Should Gov't Be Run Like a Business?" Ch. 5. I have the support of an excellent economist who does both policy and crunches the numbers. He was initially skeptical but then he looked at the graphs, and the numbers. If this gets on mainstream TV, Drumpf will send the "second amendment people" after me. And since the handgun called the "5-7" can pierce a class three vest, I'll be doomed.
—James E. Roper, Holt, MI

Monopolies are never fair -- Capitalism is supposed to thrive on competition! Privacy is guaranteed in the Constitution!!
—Aaron St. John, San Diego, CA

I'm tired of deleting unwanted solicitations, and advertising slowing my computer, and unsubscribing from e-mails. It happens whenever I research anything slightly related to anything. I live in a HUD senior co-op. Cable TV is supplied as part of the monthly payment. I have to pay a separate bill each month to rent the box to feed the cable to my TV. I bought the TV and can access any online TV service except the one already paid for with a $45 adapter. The cost of a few month's rental for the box to get service from anyone else. Seems like renting the glass to get a drink of water I paid for.
—Tom Ozzello, Saint Paul, MN

Cable is too expensive. TV used to be free.
—Iliana Sonntag, San Diego, CA

Please stand up for us!
—Diane Kopan, chicago, IL

I don't want my private information sold to anyone. Comcast now charges in the hundreds for cable and t.v. We pay the highest for the slowest internet. Please stop them. We need to have options for the cable t.v. boxes, they are ripping us off badly.
—Jeanne Shaw, Denver, CO

I am a senior citizen and the rising costs of cable are getting difficult to manage. Please take action on this. Thank you!
—Pamala Thomas, Santa Monica, CA

Please rectify the failed promised of lower cable-TV bills immediately!
—Jeanne Klein, Lawrence, KS

Information is free. Don't let a megalithic company take that freedom from me.
—Tanner Fleming, Bellingham, WA

I don't want the cable monopoly to stop the FCC from doing the right thing for the consumer. We should be able to choose what set top box we use to watch tv, and who gives out our private information.
—Chris Rayback, San Diego, CA

I'm tired of my cable bill going up so regularly and much of it is the "rent" on the cable box and the DVD recorder I'm forced to use. Please finish what you have started!
—Deadra Wright, New Braunfels, TX

The FCC is there to make sure the public is protected from preditory corporate policies as well as making the business of "communication" a fair level playing field. It's time that we, as Americans actually enforce the regulations that are put into law. I'm tired of hearing about "over regulation" when the fact is, corporations like Comcast thumb their noses at the law every day.
—Daniel Breitbach, Napa, CA

THESE COMPANIES THINK THEY OWN AMERICA. OR AT THE LEAST YOUR SOUL. DO THEY?
—Paul Palla, Greencastle, PA

I've lived in Paris, where cable service is better--and cheaper. Why shouldn't ours be?
—David Ball, Northampton, MA

Cable's way too expensive! Allow "ala carte" ordering.
—Mr. Michael S. Callaway, Upland, CA

Who do you support? It isn't like the cable companies are going to go broke any time soon. So who does look out for the public? Comcast, and the others, can look out for themselves. Which is exactly what they are doing right now!
—Randy Juras, Homer Glen, IL

Please don't let thsee cable monopolies violate the privacy of our personal data or monopolize cable boxes.
—Richard Berman, Rockville, MD

The FCC is one of the only government bodies I trust to have my interests at heart.
—Branden Houck, Sebastian, FL

Don't let the American people down. Do the right thing, now.
—Steven Carter, North Reading, MA

Privacy rights must be protected, and consumer interests, as well.
—Deborah F Hart, Oak Bluffs, MA

Maintaining my privacy is of the utmost importance to me. No one should be allowed to sell anyone's private information without their consent.
—Mr. Calvin Courts, Kew Gardens, NY

Large greedy corporations cannot be allowed to dictate government decisions.
—Don Hon, Minneapolis, MN

Privacy matters
—Mara Obelcz, Hatfield, PA

Our ability to live peaceably and productively depends on the quality of the information we have regarding various threats to and the means by which we might—again peaceably—overcome them. This makes information, and the internet, as a means of informing ourselves, the very first line in providing for the common defense. Please act to defend a free and open internet—and access to it—as it is by means of such information that our chances for survival and ensuring our enduring progress as a people and a nation will be significantly improved.
—Matthew Herschler, Northampton, MA

I am suddenly getting ads for baby products because a neighbor who steals WiFi signal is pregnant. We are all being spied upon in our own homes, and government regulation is necessary to stop these abuses. The monopoly on set top boxes is anti competitive and stifles the free market.
—David Carter, redlands, CA

Cable bills are way too high. Customers should not have to pay extra for something that is necessary. Cable companies need to charge fair, not excessive, prices.
—Eleanor Earley, Covington, GA

This 2016 election has shed a bright light on the fragility of American democracy which is under attack from numerous quarters. One is the destruction of privacy; another is the consolidation of media and communication. It is not just about bills; it's about freedom.
—Vicky Peters, Lakewood, CO

End the corporate control of government policy that protects the public. Anything else is collaboration.
—Doug Green, ,

Time to step up and do the right thing!
—Ricardo Mendez, L. A., CA

My privacy is absolutely essential to my ability to pursue my interests freely, explore new or controversial ideas, and enjoy myself without the fear of exploitation. Please move forward on the proposals to keep Comcast from selling my private information without my consent and unlocking the cable box monopoly. This is a very important issue for me and my family, and I appreciate your courage in standing up for people like us.
—Joe Miranda, Garden Grove, CA

The internet belongs to the people and we should be charging the to use it, not giving it to them to screw us with.
—Lowell Young, Mariposa, CA

My private information is just that - PRIVATE. it is time our government starts protecting our privacy instead of giving large corporations rights to steal it and do with it what they will.
—Barbara Cohn, Carlsbad, CA

Because the cable companies have gone unchecked too long charging what they want forcing us to rent expensive equipment for years like set top boxes and modems.
—Duncan Uruchima, Jamaica, NY

Because some of us are on a limited income and they are pricing us out of the market and they do not care...plus they really have no right to sell the information they require to subscribe without our express permission. Thank you.
—Patrice Anita, Los Angeles, CA

As an active internet user with two teenage children (one of whom I am just delivering to his first year in college) we are appalled at the high cost of Internet service!
—Stephen Couche, Portland, OR

Holding and marketing my private information is an invasion of my privacy. There ought to be a law against it. Monopolies lead to unfair trade practices and obstruct democracy, and they should be illegal.
—Lucinda Hannon, Avon, CT

The future of competition is at stake, we need to strip the Cable incumbents of their ability to dominate the set-top box business. If this was standardized and open to competition this would lower costs for many consumers. In addition, the Cable incumbents must be restricted from selling my personal preference information. That is an invasion of my privacy at its core.
—Mr. Vincent M. Oddo, Atlanta, GA

Given the recent court cases and votes, it seems clear that many, many people are in favor of breaking the monopoly that large companies hold. I live in an area where I have NO choices about my cable provider (only Comcast), and even then, the service is spotty particularly with regard to internet. In addition, I would like to know about how cable companies and internet companies can and do use information about me in their sales. People should know how their information is used! I urge you to stand behind these proposals that will make the lives of consumers measurably better. Thank you.
—Alecia Magnifico, Dover, NH

Many low-income families are paying cable companies a significant amount of money for cable, a necessity for their school age children, college level youths and simply every day living....these dollars go to BIG MEDIA, instead of families and individual, who are often challenge to make ends meet. The options available from cable companies is extremely limited, no box, no cable... or choose to pay a price for "bundle" offers, channels and programming you do not need nor necessarily use. Take the top-box away! Help families save $ for important needs instead. Also, help us keep our privacy...it matters!
—Ms. Marta Garcia, Yonkers, NY

YOU CAN HELP US, TOM!!!! STOP TAKING BRIBES FROM THE INDUSTRY AND HELP THE PEOPLE!!!!@!

—Amergin O'Kai, PDX, OR

This holds back the advancement of our economy
—Don Posh, Spooner, WI

Monopolies stop so much economic expansion. Comcast shouldn't worry so much about getting permission because they will have plenty of people that won't care. Just let us who don't want our info sold have the choice to stop it.
—Gabrielle V Pla, Kapaa, HI

Monopolies are against the law. Enforce the law - break them up or put price caps on their rates!!
—Nick D., Westlake, OH

We live in a society where the FCC no longer protects the privacy rights of Americans. Our information is sold without our consent. I expect our government officials to do more than protect corporations and their monied influence on Washington. It is time you protect PEOPLE instead of CORPORATIONS. I thank you for your consideration of this matter. Lynn from Kansas
—Lynn Mittelstadt, Eskridge, KS

My personal information is not a commodity. Limit what can be shared with other companies. Put constraints in place today!
—Vic Cutler, Omak, WA

PLEASE STOP LETTING THE CABLE COMPANIES BLEED CONSUMERS TO DEATH! My husband and I are retired and we don't even have even have TV ---that is NO TV---- and our cable bill is still $65. per month! $20 for basic telephone service and $45. for the cheapest internet connection. Giving free rein to cable companies to monopolize services and charge what they want will simply further impoverish and disenfranchise more and more Americans until this country truly becomes unrecognizable as a decent place to live. Don't cave in to rampant corporate greed which is destroying this country and consigning children, the elderly and other vulnerable minorities to second class citizenship and being further exploited by the sale of our private information without our consent. Thank you
—Beth Davidson, Incline Village, NV

Stop Comcast
—Garry Kramchak, Houston, TX

Please start standing up for the consumer, the citizens to whom you serve and stop big business from spying on people!
—, Omaha, NE

Please don't let companies like Comcast hold us hostage!! I speak not only for myself but for my entire family, including my 11 grandchildren who will be the ones to be hurt the most if Comcast manages to prevail. Please hold tight against their pressure tactics! Thank you.
—Elizabeth Cori-Jones, Gainesville, FL

If Congress was actually doing its job and fairly representing the people then it would not be necessary for the FCC to act, but because the Congress seems to only value what legislation means to corporate bottom lines and not the effect that these have on the people, that it is necessary for the FCC to act as a regulator for the public good as it was intended to. Our government should not be in the business of establishing and protecting monopolies. There is no need for the cable industry to be a monopoly. It has only gradually become that way through mergers which our government has allowed. This has only served to limit competition and innovation and has put the U.S. cable infrastructure behind most of the developed world, not to mention that much of what is there has already been heavily subsidized by the government already, so the people should get some say in what the government has invested in since it was supposedly don't in the interest of the public good. The public also needs some return on the government's investment other than being overcharged by greedy companies who are using the public good as a means of soaking the taxpayers in the form of tax breaks or subsidies for bigger corporate profits.

—Richard A. Johnson, Eugene, OR

Comcast needs to be taken to the woodshed for a good whopping for screwing its customers over and over again. I don't want my private info sold to the highest bidder and I want control of my settop box.
—Ken Switzer, Boulder, CO

Tired of getting screwed by giant, no choice monopolies!
—Shane L. McCune, Manhattan, KS

My privacy is very important to me as is for all American's. The price for the average person to have internet service and tv is out of control. Where I live we don't have any option but cable, and Comcast takes advantage of that.
—Laura Scheffer, North Bend, WA

Our private information should not be for sale and our cable bills, already too high, keep increasing!
—Ms. Mary Lynn Hanley, New York, NY

price gouging is just another way to say over charging. Over charging is just another way to say robbing. Robbing is stealing
—james Smiley, Mocksville, NC

We need cheaper UHS broadband by landline and all other comm methods. Seniors can't afford UHS/Fios/cable & a cell phone to access our SocSec accounts by internet. This is a massive problem for we who depend on Social Security for our food, medicine & comfort. Thank you for your time and attention to this vital matter. Yours truly, Mr. Brett Greisen
—Mr. Brett A. Greisen, New York, NY

—Mercedita del Valle, Port Townsend, WA

Please remember your public protection mandate. Act now to prevent corporate interests from overtaking citizen rights and FTC failures to stop the consolidation of mega corporations that are now offering monopolies in all markets to control decisions that are affecting consumer costs and access. Thank you.
—Marya Roddis, Chama, NM

Americans pay more money and get lower quality sevice than any other country on earth from our cable providers who are monopolies which is against the law.
—Andrew W Lazin, Winter Springs, FL

Personal privacy is of the utmost importance to me. I don't want my info sold period.
—Tom Hagen, Tacoma, WA

I am a senior on a limited income. TV is still one of the less costly entertainments I have access to. But not if Comcast had its way. Cable bills will keep going up, up, up. They don't need my money as much as I do.
—Harriet Rzetelny, Dennis, MA

It's unbelievable what cable companies charge in the US compared to almost all other countries. And the speed at which we can access the internet is so slow compared to those same countries. And yet we pay an amazingly large sum for what we do receives and they are so greedy that they want to charge even more to increase the speed. Greed is destroying our nation and the world.
—Sandra Brady, Pinellas Park, FL

The internet is marvelous for promoting freedom and creativity. But restricting what we can access via internet reduces freedom and creativity. I don't want internet service providers to limit my internet choices.

I feel the cable industry is one of the biggest consumer ripoff industries in this country. Time you did your job and watchdog what they have done to American consumers for all these years. It is after all supposed to be the peoples' airways. Why then are we being charged outrageous prices with so little choice for what we want to pay for watching? and then to have my private information which they require in order to get connected. All a huge con on all of us! STOP IT NOW AND JOB YOUR JOB!

Government agencies should work for the benefit of the country, not just its corporate interests. Comcast and others have no trouble making money and then spending it to lobby - the average Joe is at a truly staggering disadvantage. When I was in law school nerlry 40 years ago, I actually took a course on anti-trust law - it's not fashionable today. Please vote to enforce that concept.

—Stephanie Martinez, Schertz, TX

We need our government, on every level, to start working for us. It's shocking that Americans have to pay the most for internet/cable and get by far the poorest service. You need to start changing this.
—Lyn Lowry, Longmont, CO

Cable is way too expensive
—Emily Van Alyne, West Richland, WA

this is important to me because I'm retired, living on small fixed income, and our cable/internet fees are way too high. Comcast is my ISP - the only broadband available where I live - and they charge way too much for way to little. Our top download speeds don't come close to what's available in other countries. Corporate control of government is ruining our country.
—Bennett Hoffman, Tallahassee, FL

I want to see a government agency that continues to care more about the citizens than the corporations. You have done that in the past with the net neutrality decisions, and these future decisions would help continue that trend.

Our Comcast bills are outrageous! Please do something! I demand that all companies that provide paid services to me honor my right to maintain my privacy and control my personal information. Comcast has no right to sell it to the highest bidder!
—Peggy Deras, South San Francisco, CA

FCC stand strong, for the people. It's so important.
—Anthony Brasunas, San Francisco, CA

We MUST have real competition in the cable industry. These cable companies do whatever the hell they want which means customer service is the WORST, and at price gouging prices. Competition will lower the price we pay and improve customer service. Right now, I despise my cable company, but there is no alternative.
—Paul Antico, Los Angeles, CA

I should have the option to purchase a cable box like I do a phone.
—Donna Chernecki, Millburn, NJ

I'm a retired citizen and I need to keep more money in my pocket, so having options to not rent a box is a great way to save money.
—Ron H., Cleveland, OH

Please end the forced renting of the set-top box and please keep my private information private. Thank you for standing up for consumers.
—Clare Lewis, Natick, MA

Eliminating the industry's monopoly on set top boxes will stimulate competition and help lower cable fees. Cable companies overcharge consumers.
—Eduardo Ojeda Jr., Lakeland, FL

WE have a right to privacy. Enforce it.
—Lynn Price, Humble, TX

When I started with cable, no such box was needed. The wire from the cable connected to the TV. Rather than get a clumsy box that does not seem necessary, I dropped cable and switched to an indoor antenna that gives me digital signals without a box. The box is a rip off.
—Jose D. Alfaro, Maywood, NJ

Cable charges are outrageous. Security goes without saying!
—Candee Henderson, Thomasville, GA

Privacy of my personal information is paramount to keeping my records safe and my personal details secure.
—Richard Kunz, Methuen, MA

Monopolies raise one citizens rights in the market place above all others distorting the economic equilibrium of supply and demand, all to enrich one person or company. The common interests of so many, in protecting our private information and restoring a free market, must outweigh the special interests of a very wealthy few. The US claims to be a democracy, and the guardian of a level free market economic playfield. This is where we either live up to, or sell out, on that promise.

—Brian Mirkay, Linden, VA

You are appointed to preserve the best services for we, the people! Delay and blocking of such common-sense measures only confirms in people's minds that this government is not working for them. Take action!
—David Norlin, Salina, KS

Corporations increasingly not only take money from customers to make a profit, but take their personal information to make a profit without permission or compensation as well. The FCC needs to stand up and take action to stop telecommunication companies from using people as a corporate commodity without their permission or compensation.

We are retired, on a fixed income. Cable bills continue to increase. Every dollar counts in a fixed-income household!
—Suzanne Hirai, Wood Village, OR

I am retired and on a fixed income. I cannot afford the huge cost Charter makes me pay every month! The other available alternatives are just as bad !! I need Internet access to do my volunteer work! Help consumers !
—Gray Zischke, Wausau, WI

Comcast wants $30/month in exchange for not being allowed to spy on us and sell our personal information. Only Comcast knows for certain, but do you think Comcast currently makes $30/month per customer selling our information? I don't, and I hope our information is not worth that much to marketers. If it is worth that much, that just makes the intrusion that much more offensive. $30 is what Comcast wants now to get their foot in the door for this charge. If they are successful in getting this approved, what will they want in a year, or two, or ten? Since they can spy on our internet activity, and we have no real alternatives, we are faced to pay protection. Instead of, "$100 per week and we won't burn down your store," its, "$30 per month and we won't spy on you and sell what we find to the highest bidder." Maybe in a couple of years it will be $100/week. Plus, we have no way of knowing if they are keeping their end of the bargain. At some level, no one will pay it, and they will be back to the current situation of their being free to do whatever they want. Broadband should be a regulated utility, just like phone service is--correction, like phone service used to be.
—David Fink, Los Angeles, CA

the amount for cable related services keeps going up bit our wages are on the decline.
—Steve Willard, Minonk, IL

Really.... this should be an easy choice. Comcast has been consistently the worst quality of customer care and you would let them sell my personal info....they can't run their own company....do I hear breach ??? Why support a monopoly unless their is good reason and the public is deriving benefits. With the clear need for better web access for all let's move the ball forward. Don't let politics be the deciding factor, please.
—Alan Kadish, Corvallis, OR

Lower my bill
—David Helinski, Broken Arrow, OK

As a person who is visuallyimpaired I face the prospect of having a set top box that I might find usable with one cable provider, but that of another much different. I believe they should be interchangableso that if I find equipment that works for me I can use it with other providers should I wish to change. I'd also appreciate greater enforcement of accessability rules on the internet. Terry Chaney
—Terry Chaney, Royal Oak, MI

My bill has just continually increased-if priced do not go down many people will continue to cancel and use streaming services!!!
—Heather Clark, Gaylord, MI

I use Time Warner Cable service, which Comcast tried to buy. The monthly bill is almost fifty dollars. For this I am supposed to be getting 15 gigabytes of data. This is routinely monitored and averages 13 gigabytes. Before the two year service contract was up I was paying $37.00-$39.00. At the end off the contract the price seems to jump all the way up to $49.99. Unfortunately most other cable services charge the same amount. If I didn't need this computer to look for a job. It would be disconnected. So I am against Comcast I only wish I could do more. Bernie Bukoskey 11 Highland Ave. Tonawanda, NY 14150-3901

JUST DO THE RIGHT FURSHLUGGINER THING ALREADY!
—Neal Umphred, Redmond, WA

I turn 65 this month but despite having made it to that 'landmark' age, I will not be able to enjoy the "golden years" - well, at least with cable tv, that is. The bankers, Wall Street and massive, FAR-too-powerful ove-sized corporations (just like Comcast) already destroyed our economy in a crash to rival the Great Depression - many of us lost anything remotely resembling retirement and are lucky if we didn't also lose our homes. I would like to be able to afford at least SOME form of decent entertainment since the giant corporations took over our world and became more important than people - AND, I would like to do so WITHOUT being spied upon while actually having to PAY for what once was, AND STILL IS, "the Commons." Unfamiliar term to you? I'm not surprised ... Cable services should be simple, straightforward, and AFFORDABLE WITHOUT INVADING OUR PRIVACY! Corporate takeover and corruption have forever changed life for the "baby boomer generation." I think you will see a massive number of households unplugging from ANY CABLE AT ALL if the costs go up any more (who in the hell can afford it?!) and, quite frankly, being complicit with corrupted government agencies, officials, and politicians in uber-spying on us all is equated to me as ILLEGAL!!! We can't afford it and won't stand for it - I am willing to bet thousands upon thousands of us will do exactly what I will do ... UNPLUG! I'll be DAMNED if I am going to pay someone money I DON'T have, to SELL me the COMMONS THAT I ALREADY OWN, to make it EASIER FOR GOVERNMENT TO TRACK ME AND SPY ON ME ILLEGALLY! Ain't happening at ANY price. For once since the millenial rolled around, can ANYONE ANYWHERE in government just DO THE RIGHT THING?!
—Pamela Overholtzer, Moscow, ID

Monopolies are always unfair to the consumer. We must break them up, or keep them from forming. Also as a disabled senior very reliant on cable/computer access, this bill is a severe hardship for me.
—Norma Marshall, greensboro, NC

Monopolies cannot exist in a truly democratic nation!
—Nicole Fountain, Oakland, CA

Your agency must work for us, America's telecommunications services consumers, not the providers of those services, whom you are supposed to regulate.
—William Swatos, Palm Desert, CA

No one should be allowed to use my private viewing of programs as marketing tools! There are surveys and companies like Nielson who gather this information VOLUNTARILY given by the consumer. And, this box rental situation is a lame ploy to suck even more money out of the public. Prices are ridiculous and not affordable; I myself have not had TV since mid 2008!
—Valerie Justus-Rusconi, Watsonville, CA

Our cable bill has risen to intolerable levels, while quality of service has declined. Europe has cheap & efficient cable/internet. We know it's possible. Let's follow its lead.
—Kenneth Nahigian, Sacramento, CA

Security and savings.
—Michael Kwitt, Warren, MI

My wife and I are retired, living on a small income, and every penny we do not have to spend, helps.
—Stuart Fishelman, Baltimore, MD

Breaking up the telecom monopoly and appropriately regulating the industry is critical to the future of digital technology. These are just tiny first steps.
—Alexander Subotich, ,

No company should be able to sell our information without our consent and I don't mean in any "I Agree" contract that has 200 pages to read.
—Frank Kiernan, Olivehurst, CA

We must not let unscrupulous corporate entities write the rules that govern their industries. The FCC must do the job for which it was appointed, work in the best interests of consumers of communications. This means unfettered and equitable access to the highest quality broadband and Internet services at a fair and competitive price.
—Philip Angus Nunes, Spokane, WA

It's an embarrassment that the US does not have one of the top if not the best internet options in the world! What happen to competition? Options? Service for the people? The Internet is not a privilege, it's a right!
—Ray Gonzalez, Canoga Park, CA

Protecting consumers and serving the public interest is the FCC's core mission. Please fulfill it.
—Craig Dunkerley, San Jose, CA

It's not the business of Comcast to sell my personal info, period!
—Robert Schwartz, Waukegan, IL

Companies using public resources should not be able to sell my private information without my consent, and we should not be forced to rent set-top boxes in order to use their service either. I hope the FCC will act quickly to protect consumers as they have done in the past.
—Kyle de Beausset, Grosse Ile, MI

I am sick of companies that use my information and money against me - and I'm sick o0f cable companies that over-charge and under-deliver! I pay the Universal Connectivity Fee every month and get ignored in return!
—John Blanchard3, Pittsburgh, PA

The internet should be available to all and not controlled by a monopoly and its privacy should be protected.
—Irene Leeg, Santa Monica, CA

For MANY people, cable television is their sole source of entertainment. It SHOULD NOT be so expensive! And our PRIVATE INFORMATION is not for sale by corporations to further enrich their bottom line. ENOUGH.
—Evan Jane Kriss, SAUSALITO, CA

You let Time Warner be bought. No fix that mistake and lower bills and let customers have a voice and a choice. Don't screw this up like everything else you people do!
—Jason Bogosian, Arcadia, CA

Protect my privacy!
—James-Henry Holland, Geneva, NY

We can't let corporative power to run our lives.
—Mary J. Wood, San Luis Obispo, CA

We can purchase separate internet equipment from retailers like Best Buy and Amazon that work with whatever service providers we have. The same should apply to cable boxes for tv. After paying months of rentals, we have probably exceeded their respective retail costs and are overpaying by a lot of money. Boxes should work with whatever company with whom we pay for services. And a day will come soon enough that plugging in or not from Internet to tv will be sufficient or even via wireless that boxes will be irrelevant very soon as companies like Apple make usb connection devices all we need.
—Sandra Myers, West Hartford, CT

Please set me free from 2 year contracts and private DVR boxes. Let my Apple TV go free.
—Elizabeth Shepard, Olympia, WA

If Cable Companies were smart, first, instead of being greedy, first, by lowering fees and ridiculous add-on charges, they might...no, would...find more subscribers. Also, by providing equitable internet service, and/or affordable tier levels for the poor, they would increase the opportunity for all Americans and help them ascribe to possibilities in education and commerce not currently available, making for a greater, stringer, more prosperous America.
—Mike Wann, Chattanooga, TN

This is important to me for two reasons. My privacy should not be in the hands if corporate America. No one has that ?.Secondly, why should Comcast charge us for the set-top boxes which we did not request, nor require —Elizabeth Barrett, Pompton Plains, NJ

stop letting cable companies have a monopoly on the consumer
—Justin Herschel, West Hills, CA

It curbs -- somewhat -- the avarice of the oligopoly's farming of it's customers.
—David Zuckerman, Portland, OR

Reasons are simple fraud and identity theft. Lower the bills on those packages and also on those boxes and cable cards should be FREE. Shame on you!!!!
—Selma Gooding, Hamden, CT

Please vote yes on these proposals.
—Linda Kindoll, Kittanning, PA

Info access and freedom of info choice is paramount to informed population in a democracy.
—G Fries, Homer, AK

As someone who doesn't watch that much TV, I would like an a la carte payment system. And I would like some privacy as well.
—Edward Walworth MD, Lewiston, ME

I expect the illusion of privacy. I hate My cable bill.
—Noah Joel Rynearson, Anchorage, AK

I want to buy not rent cable boxes
—Clyde Martin, SILVER SPRING, MD

We should expect some sort of privacy from the company's, our bills are high any help would be appreciated.
—Frank Curley, Middletown, NY

No ISP has the right to sell my personal information. This is how my credit card information was stolen - twice! And no ISP should have the power to gouge their clients by overcharging them for services.
—Paul Cully, Dover, NH

Because the airwaves belong to us all, not at the expense of all for the few.
—John Horan, Washington, DC

I want my privacy to be protected, the Constitution gives me that right. Deregulation of the cable industry was supposed to lower my bill, it didn't happen. Now we have fewer cable choices which means less competition which leads to fewer choices, if there is a choice, AND higher bills.
—Diane Danby, Mead, CO

i live on $826 a month
—Michael Langlais, Providence, RI

Even the smallest fees are too often too much for seniors!
—LYNDA MEANS, Saint Louis, MO

Comcast is a money grubbing greedy company that also charges for services that aren't valid. They need to be stopped and YOU have to protect the consumer. You work for US, not the cable companies.
—Jim Zahakos, Raynham, MA

It is important because cable tv is a utility in all actuality and is needed in my little town for information. I'm sick of being advertised to death. I cannot even receive cable without the box/i shouldn't have to pay for it.
—Diana Murray, Phoenix, AZ

We work too hard to have to deal with criminal corporations.
—Lawrence O'Connor, St. Augustine, FL

Who will look out for the public if you allow corporate bullying to force decisions which are not in the public interests? Cable bills are already outrageous. And, why is my private information for sale without my approval? And compensation to me for use of my private information? I feel very vulnerable to corporate decisions& money making schemes without any representation to me & my interests & needs.
—Don Machrowicz, College Station, TX

It's the right thing to do, and you know it.
—Robert Granger, Eugene, OR

stop the monopoly on cable boxes
—Warren Steven Cushway, bay city, MI

Monopolies are bad for consumers and progress of democracy. Prices grow sky high and information becomes limited and bias. Competition is good for business and better for consumers. it's beneficial for spread of information, price control, consumers privacy protection and therefore better for democracy.
—Axel Meier, Oakland, CA

Do not allow privacy invasion on the internet. The internet is the one source of enlightenment and knowledge that is not restricted to the wealthy. I cannot afford to pay any more increases for cable service.
—Jane Wolfe, Mansfield, OH

My bill keeps getting higher and the rental on the cable boxes is outrageous.
—Janet Kennington, Los Angeles, CA

The protections that the FCC were supposed to provide have steadily eroded since the "air waves belong to the public" became law. Take this action and keep Comcast out of our personal business.
—Todd Darling, Venice, CA

Please continue to act in the PUBLIC INTEREST. Since when was monopoly the goal?
—Tim Isom, San Francisco, CA

Our country's history is founded on privacy and freedom of information. Please do everything you can to uphold these values!
—Cameron Parham, Havre, MT

I only have TWC local channels and 10 speed internet and I pay $89.00 a MONTH The cable companies are monopolies and should be broken up. Stop stalling. Don't let these big companies decide for you.
—Martha M. Miller, Appleton, WI

In these past few years our government agencies have been doing less and less to protect the people's interests. Please step up to the plate and help us with these pressing issues. Please do this ASAP!
—Amancia Hernandez, Houston, TX

I remember when TV was free! Now corporate behemoths have almost priced it out of our range.
—Michael R Marquardt, Whitewater, CO

I'm already paying a monthly bill, why the hell is my information being shared without my consent. This isnt a free service.
—Michael Caro, buffalo grove, IL

The U.S. economy is supposed to be free market capitalism, right? What happens when a particular industry has a monopoly? Aren't you supposed to regulate them so they don't screw over their customers? You work for the American people, not industry. Industry is who you're supposed to be regulating. Please make up your mind about the type of economy and regulatory system you support.
—Raunette Elkins, Lincoln Park, MI

The purpose of this agency's existence (like all other government agencies) is to protect citizens from businesess who engage in scummy behavior. Please protect us!
—Kathleen Haton, Wheeling, IL

The corporate being is being allowed to make a profit off the private information of all Americans who use the internet. The public has no privacy. It appears over and over and over again that the profits of the corporate being is our governments primary focus and the privacy or even our health and safety is non existent if these concerns interfere with corporate profits. I have no idea what information is being sold and to whom. Can my political information be sold to a group that has different ideas and what will they attempt to do to change my mind? How radical are they? I resent constant ads appearing for a product that I was curious about. I stopped watching T.V. decades ago as I was sick of ads. The corporate being had pushed too far and now the internet is becoming a mine field where one has to watch their step as any information on the internet is can be sold to anyone.
—Anne Wolf, Santa Rosa, CA

I DEPEND on the internet!
—Harley Armentrout, Chino Valley, AZ

IT'S TIME TO GET THE GOVERNMENT OUT OF EVERYONE'S PRIVATE AFFAIRS, UNLESS THERE IS EVIDENCE THAT A CRIME HAS OR WILL BE COMMITTED.
—Bill Lindner, Greenbrae, CA

We are tired of the big communications companies, with their virtual monopolies in some areas, continually taking financial advantage of us.
—Tom Matthews, Cleveland, TN

I am concerned that these measures pass, both as a longtime customer of Comcast and as a citizen who champions communication policy in the public interest. I urge your adoption of both measures.
—Carolyn M. Byerly Ph.D., Adelphi, MD

Keep it simple - proceed as catalyst doing right action.
—William Albin, Grass Valley, CA

Please move forward and end the monopoly on set-top-boxes. Please do not let these greedy corporations give themselves the right to control these consumer policies. The American people have spoken and we are mad as hell. These corporations do not have the right to just do as they please. Lets keep it that way and put a leash and their greed and criminal activity once and for all.
—Guillermina Aguirre, Westminster, CO

Enough of the invasion of our life by these large money-grubbing companies who have only two main objectives: money and power. Your responsibility is to prevent their take-over!
—Roger Walker, East Lansing, MI

Monopolies are UN-democratic. While, on the surface, they appear to be the "Free Market" in action; it is a select few, responsible to the their STAKEHOLDERS whom rake in massive profits. Definitely not the people they extort with outrageous cable charges. The metadata that the NSA have been 'capturing' has been ruled useless for security purposes but for marketing purposes it is a windfall. However, it is PRIVATE DATA!!!! To sum up - both actions are UN-AMERICAN!!!! Protect my data (do NOT sell it to anyone) and lower my cable bill!
—Jon Sheehan, Bell Gardens, CA

Private industry - including corporate media - already earn far too much money from American citizens and provide far too little in return. Stop allowing greed to trump what is best for Americans.
—Lewis Redding, Arcadia, CA

These mega corp's have never had their customers or employees interests at heart because a corp's has no heart please help out us all.
—robert czajkowski Jr., Philadelphia, PA

Hurry up you are moving like a turtle.
—Agostino Notarianni, Goodyear, AZ

Consumers count; companies don't —Robert F Kingsley, Mount Laurel, NJ

Since information has become a commodity, many companies have found ways to get our information without paying us for it, now Comcast wants people to pay them to take our information, and at the same time also pay them for the cable box to access the product we want, and still get our information without our permission, or payment. You can stop this nonsensical situation, and protect the public.
—William Haley, Tye, TX

These proposals protect my privacy and save me money. Two things that the FCC are supposed to be doing for the citizens of this country.
—Gary McGivney, Norwalk, CT

I'm barley getting by on Social Security now. Listening to the rest of us and not the cable monopolies is your job. Please get this done now. Thanks
—Robert C Rand, Pepperell, MA

It is your job to protect ME. Not to protect Comcast. Please stand up and protect the American people (NOT corporations). Thank you.
—Victoria Neff, Ann Arbor, MI

It's only fair!
—Howard Pellett, Anacortes, WA

Privacy is one of the fundamental values of American society. No corporation or other private entity should be allowed to disseminate our private information without our consent. The cable TV companies keep raising the rental prices on the set-top boxes every year (the fee my wife and I pay for the privilege of watching TV on other than our living-room set has doubled since we switched to our current provider - and that was only 10 years ago). Thank you for doing the right thing.
—Nicholas DiMasi Jr., Glen Ellyn, IL

Individual rights to privacy, upon request, should be mandatory from businesses that collect any data on them whatsoever. Cable bills and the profits derived from them are entirely too large considering the lack of alternatives and the difficulty in changing over to them. Any possible reductions in these burdensome monthly charges should be aggressively pursued.
—Timothy Wallick, Huron, OH

I am tire of being gouged by Com-Cast.
—John Pedone, Novato, CA

It's the only moral thing to do
—Rev James Kinney, Solon Springs, WI

Please make watching our favorite channels more affordable and stop this monopoly from selling our private information. That just makes common sense.
—Kecia Coachman, East Orange, NJ

I am on a fixed income, and my cable bill keeps getting higher and higher. I have only basic service and it is still too high.
—Betty Anderson, Bowling Green, KY

Cable has placed its hands into too many of congress' pockets, If they redefine the Communications Act, they must protect the consumer, not the industry. It is not an industry too big to fail.
—Lyle A. Chandler, Lorain, OH

The Internet was founded on net neutrality not to pay for bandwidth Philosophy. Our voices are all important the corporations are trying to drown everyone else out and the greed is insane!
—Stefanie Sellars, Simi Valley, CA

Stop the Comcast monopoly. We are forced to pay such high monthly bills without any other less expensive alternative. Please FCC, prevent Comcast from selling my personal information
—Sandle Dahl, Seattle, WA

Time is of the utmost importance. We the little guy needs this done and right away.
—Bill Snearly, Camden, AR

please thing about the consecvense it actually will have for the world and fredom it will lose.
—Morten Stehr, ,

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—William Kalahar, Atlanta, GA

Monopolies mean ridiculously high prices, which are hard to afford.

Corporations and other moneyed interests have usurped power from the people. It's time we took it back.
—Sharlene Beck, Salt Lake City, UT

Freedom of choice
—Joan Spratford, Fountain, CO

Please end the corrupt practices of internet service providers.
—Lester Earnest, Los Altos, CA

Every year, I receive multiple notices from organizations that offer me the opportunity to opt out of certain types of data collection and sharing. The cable industry should not be exempt from offering consumers the same choices. In an era when intrusiveness seems more and more taken for granted, it's vital to remind legislators that their constituents should not be considered commodities to be traded, against their best interests, in an unregulated market. It is unlikely that any member of Congress or the Commission believes that their personally identifiable information (PII) should be open to view by any business, and consumers should not be treated any differently. Personalization can be accomplished without the use of PII (that's the power of Big Data analytics and predictive analysis), so there's no excuse to require PII from consumers beyond the basic needs of subscription management. The collection, sale, and trading of PII is akin to burglary -- entering someone's home without their permission, taking their private possessions, and using them for personal advantage. It's vital that the FCC prevent that.
—Peter Altschuler, Santa Monica, CA

I'm a person.

The internet is a utility. Period. Don't fold to corporate greed! Stay strong, its the people's choice!
—Phillip Wagner, Eagleville, TN

The government has to protect our privacy from themselves, corporate America should not get a pass.
—Bridget Pikosz, Gilbert, AZ

I think that companies like Comcast will not stop in their efforts to extort consumers to the fullest extent and not taking action to stop it will result in a very slippery slope that will be detrimental to consumers
—Stewart Wilson, Fort Walton Beach, FL

Dear FCC Commissioners: The cable television and telecommunications industry have converged and are almost a total vertical monopoly. Consumers have little choice in choosing providers for cable, satellite, Internet, telephone and cell phone providers. These same corporations are also controlling content and delivery of entertainment, news, information, music, movies, and TV shows by buying or controlling the studios and production companies. Not being able to buy, instead of rent a cable box is one more step of total monopoly control by these giant corporations, who resist any regulation, tax or fee. Please provide a "check and balance to these cable communication giants. Thank you, Mr. Paul Roden, Yardley, PA
—Paul Roden, Yardley, PA

We need strong protection for consumer privacy and to have affordable cable -TV for people.
—Andrea Lee, Richmond,

We have Comcast for basic TV service & I DON'T want them helping identity thieves by disseminating personal information & without our permission on top of it all! The monopoly on the set-top box issue speaks for itself -- the operative word is "monopoly." _Regulated_ public services (like the electric companies) can have monopolies, but we have laws to prevent abuses of monopoly by corporations (they were created in response to the oil companies - remember?).
—Barbara Muehlhausen, Schaumburg, IL

I have been gouged for years by Cox Cable. Last week I paid $22 for 15 minutes of local calls as part of my cable bundle--and no one is protecting me or other consumers from this type of deceptive and predatory billing. Simply enforcing the anti-trust laws and not allowing more mega-mergers will help us rein in these abuses. Please protect us...thank you.
—Stacy Hall, San Diego, CA

We NEED more privacy rather than LESS of the kind our LIAR-in-CHIEF wants to subject the American public to, because he seems to WANT to KNOW everything about us he can find out, so he can do his best to get HIS agenda passed against a total public melt down because we do not like what he wants us to do with our lives. IF he gets his way then the people of America will become virtually SLAVES of HIS WILL and can then control everything we do.
—Donald Mccormick, Portland, OR

We as consumers have been gouged too long. Stand up to the special interests and do what's right!!!
—Warren Woodward, TALLAHASSEE, FL

More choices, less monopolies are what make us competitive.
—Robert Brake, Bronx, NY

If our personal information is valuable, why aren't we being paid for it? It is ours originally, hence the "personal" tag. So why should a company profit from taking what isn't theirs and selling it? And precedent with ending the telephone monopoly that Ma Bell had tells you which way to go on set-top boxes.
—Michael Piotrowski, Ramona, CA

Please serve the public interest. Cable should not be a luxury - but something affordable to all.
—Joanne Sultar, berkeley, CA

We have the worst cable network policies of any in the developed Western democracies. There is no excuse for allowing telecommunication monopolies any further benefit from an ever more corrupt political system. Perhaps if we used antitrust AND solid regulation by government we could stem abuses. Please go forward and establish policies which benefit consumers who are captive customers of companies which do not serve the public interest --- that is the job of the FCC. Chairman Wheeler has been effective so far, let his legacy, and the Commission's work, go forward!!!!!!!
—Joseph Myers, Riverside, CA

The cost of cable service in my area is excessive..
—Ann Brochhagen, Lindenhurst, NY

I am on a fixed income and my cable bill keeps going higher and higher and mergers make this worse! Rates are raised just because they can. So aggravated!
—Maggie A., Green Bay, WI

Broadband privacy proposal is a no-brainer. So your job and pass these common sense measures now.
—Lelia Bogard, coarsegold, CA

No one should have our private information if we don't chose them to have it. Cable companies are taking advantage of us by making us pay rent on the set top boxes. The TV would not work without these boxes so they should just be considered part of the installation.
—Carol Deyo, Bradenton, FL

For heavan's sake will someone stand up for the small guy for a change. Already the cable company's have carved up the USA in to areas where where a single company has a monopoly so that there is no need to compete for clients. Now they are trying to slow down internet transmission speed so that they can charge more for faster speeds. Once again the small man takes a hit. What happened to Governance "BY the PEOPLE - FOR the PEOPLE"? The government should not put CORPORATIONS before PEOPLE. CORPORATIONS are not PEOPLE. If you are alan of conscience please do the right thing for the citizens of the USA.
—Dr. Barry J Farbrother, Guilford, CT

Where is the democracy in having to beg the FCC to protect rights of citizens? Isn't that your job? These businesses are like locusts sucking the blood out of anything remotely like democracy.
—Sandra Holt, Casselberry, FL

Do something in the interest of the people, NOT POLITICIANS & LOBBYISTS!
—Charlie, Angleton, TX

Cable bills are too high, and we are given little choice as a consumer--due to the lack of competition in the marketplace.
—Dennis Behrens, Grand Rapids, MI

The cable companies are already milking us like we were dairy cows, milking us for every dime they can squeeze out of us.
—Marcus Mulkins, San Rafael, CA

This spring my cable bill literally grew each month. Sometimes by under a dollar, and sometimes by a dollar or two. And none of these upticks were explained, even though my services were the same. I am tired of it. I wish I had another choice but Comcast is the only high-speed internet available where I live.
—Sara "testing" Longsmith, Brattleboro, VT

I am old and seeking all the help financially I can get.
—diane lewis, Mandeville, LA

If cable wasn't a monopoly, I'd switch to a different provider that voluntarily followed these policies.
—Michelle Doty, Austin, TX

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Mr. Ronald Gelden, LONGMONT, CO

The industry is out of control! Too many mergers, too few providers, zero accountability or customer service... I live near Rutgers main campus in NJ. I'm forced to use Comcast for everything...and there is zero accountability on their part...ZERO. Stopping their merger was one thing, but turning around and allowing TWC to merge with Charter was just as bad. What are you people thinking? Do you have any accountability? It doesn't appear so. Bills continue to climb while choice goes into the toilet. Why does anyone have to pay for even 50 channels they don't want on the lowest package for cable? Why does the cable provider get to choose those channel bundles for service they "guarantee" but never really works. You can never reach them to complain about your service and turning it off is next to impossible. Have you ever tried to call Comcast and speak to a human being? Tried to cancel your service? Get a tech out to your home? Obviously not... Customers pay far and away too much money for the "service" they receive from these companies to begin with...add the set-top boxes...(hope they send only the # you require and ordered to begin with b/c if not, sending it back and getting that credit on your acct. will be a miracle!)...the dozen plus fees...it's ridiculous! Prices have got to drop if the service is going to survive, I'm seriously considering an alternative like a Fire stick through Amazon...this has gone on too long!
—Tam Black, Austin, TX

If you don't do this, then it makes the FCC appear to be in the grips of the mega corporations. So much for democracy.
—Michael James Lamperd, San Francisco, CA

It is important to protect my privacy and also lower my cable bill. Comcast has a monopoly and needs to be reigned in. My private information should not be for sale.
—Anne, Santa Cruz, CA

When you are on a fixed income every cent counts. Please make the public interest your priority. We're counting on you.
—Margaret Weeks, Sanford, ME

It is Un-American to sell private citizen data
—Rebecca Diaz, San Francisco, CA

I teach online as an adjunct professor, which means I get barely minimum wage and have to pay for my own internet connection. By not taking control of cable pricing, so that companies can continue to exploit its users without recourse, the FCC risks forcing the 80% of college faculty who teach as adjuncts, many of whom teach online, into dire poverty.
—Ruth Heflin, Leavenworth, KS

This represents the interests of the people of the US, not the corporations of the US. Your job is to represent the people with measures like this, so please do your job and pass this measure.
—Bill Piltdown, SF, CA

Comcast provides the worst service at the highest prices.
—Bruce Grobman, Santa Cruz, CA

Privacy is a very real concern. And monopolies, whether for cable services OR equipment work against fair pricing, creativity and consumer interests.
—M Burbank, New Haven, CT

why does everything take so long ?? oh forgot the corporate money pouring in from telecom mega giants
—Kenneth p. Rhines, dighton, MA

Why do I have to pay for a box when I do not need one? Am I not entitled to my privacy which can be violated by the cable company? Who do you work for? Americans or special corporate friends.?
—Patrick Harrington, Salina, KS

In addition to the arguments already presented in the Free Press documents, stalling the renomination of FCC Commissioner Rosenworcel is simply wrong-headed.
—Donald Browne, Golden Valley, MN

we can only protect the consumers by breaking up the big monopolies.
—Kathleen Bourassa, Kingston, WA

Comcast is a monopoly! Very simply it does not have the people's interest at heart.
—Jane Manley, Melrose, MA

I know this would diminish our representatives (sic) retirement contributions but do it for the PEOPLE.
—Harold Manning, Martinsburg, WV

We have a chance to help learning with access to the internet so make it affordable for all
—M, Washington, IL

Cable prices are continually rising for no apparent reason other than they can! I'm on fixed income and cannot afford the cost of being connected to the rest of the world. Please do what you can to lower cable rates. Sincerely Marvin Woods
—Marvin Woods, Cordova, TN

Anything you can do to keep the IP's from gouging John Q to death will be greatly appreciated. Thanks! :-)
—Michael Arentoft, Atlantic Highlands, NJ

Why are you allowing this monopoly
—Joyce Crowley, Morton, PA

My major concerns is that every American should have Privacy protected. No one wants to have governments, companies, or other private citizens selling or unauthorized access to private lives. The other concern is paying exorbitant fees and cable bills for basic cable service. There is too much monopolizing products and services to make even more money from the low / middle class. Chairman Wheeler take your stance and be counted for the majority of American people. It is reckoning day!! Don't delay over this all important issue facing the consumer. Isn't it TIME to make a FINAL STANCE?? Let us know!!! DRH
—David R R, Sevierville, TN

Despite mergers that promised lower cable bills my bill went up and people lost jobs. The cable company cheated everyone.
—Charlotte Pirch, Fountain Valley, CA

Why can't internet users get a fair shake?
—Frank Decola, CHESTERTON, IN

Democracy depends on an unfettered flow of information. In the electronic age it is no longer enough to protect against government intrusion into free speech; government must ensure a competitive environment in the communications industry and that the private sector respects our privacy. I strongly urge you to issue regulations to open cable box and prohibit selling private data on consumers. Thank you for your consideration.
—William D Henderson, Trenton, NJ

Please continue building on the strong record of consumer protection that the FCC has built recently. Thie current Presidential election has been about fighting the power of special interests more than anything else. The FCC should continue to show that citizens mean more than these selfish special interests.
—Jonathan Moretz, Norfolk, VA

The FCC was created to protect the American consumer, so why is it allowing more intrusions into Americans' privacy & more "scalping"??
—Virginia H. Bennett, Honolulu, HI

monopolization is bad enough but SELLING information when you're already strangling everyone for terrible internet speeds is some next level evil that needs to be dealt with. I understand your job isn't "easy" but you have to stand up to them. Take their money and lie to their face if you have to, they have been doing it to their customers for DECADES.
—Blake Goodwin, Memphis, TN

The regulatory structure set up means that cable companies have effective monopolies in their own little fiefdoms, and can set prices (and sell our data!) pretty much at their whim. Please act to help the American public.
—Mary Alice Wuerz, Mission Viejo, CA

Why can't you do something for the consumers. Comcast does not have the right to sell my private information! You must end the monopoly on set top boxes. Consumers demand to be protected now.
—Elmo Dunn, Longwood, FL

Why can't you do something for the consumers. Comcast does not have the right to sell my private information! You must end the monopoly on set top boxes. Consumers demand to be protected now.
—Elmo Dunn, Longwood, FL

I don't have the money since I retired to afford this bill. If it isn't reduced, I will cancel my subscription and go with the streaming networks that only charge $9-10/mo. which would lower my bill to $28 instead of the current $154.34.
—Kathleen S Eaton, Middletown, DE

Stand up for consumers
—Becky D Wharton, Campbell, TX

The growth in cable fees is simply obscene. Take action now to help those who elect(ed) you!
—Robert L. Wesly MD, PhD, Gainesville, FL

We have a right to privacy and allowing any firm to sell or buy our private information is unconstitutional. Also, the monopolistic media in this country has degraded the "third leg" of our country's metaphoric "stool" with its lack of oversight of and truth-telling about the government and free-markets. Your job is critical in ensuring a civil & free society by allowing and encouraging a media free from political or market influences. We are headed down a dangerous path and its your job to fix our stool! Please do so starting with these common sense measures.
—Mr. Don Lemek, Denver, CO

I am forced to use Comcast, and have created my own set top box using the "Cable Card" system they are also trying to do away with. Please protect the consumers!
—Nicholas Wagner, Aurora, IL

So, can we finish this and move on
—Randy G. Whitworth, San Antonio, TX

BECAUSE I WILL DITCH THE CABLE IF IT DOESN'T QUIT SCREWING ME EVERY MONTH...
—Brian Inzer, OXR, AL

My cable bill goes up every year at a greater rate than the inflation rate. It's a monopoly, there is no competition whatsoever and it needs greater controls. Now that Comcast has bought Time-Warner and has access to MY DATA, it appears they may use, abuse and sell it without my permission. Please don't allow this to happen, it is MY DATA not Comcast's data.
—Rae Cousins, Portland, ME

Because i don`t have enough money
—Efrain Sanchez, Hormigueros, PR

Stop the crooked politicians who are taking money from Comcast to further Comcast's agenda. The FCC need to protect us, the consumers from being ripped off.
—Debbie Balasko, Sparta, MI

It's not just the money, it's the control of information that is essential to democracy!
—Ann D Hungerman, Ann Arbor, MI

Other than knowing that cable television was originally conceived to be commercial-free (hence, by paid subscription), there are many of us who could use the monies saved by lower cable prices for other important expenses.
—John Alexander Vergos, Memphis, TN

I'm part of what's left of any middle class here in the USA. We need some relief. Please help us save money on our cable bills and please make the cable company keep my personal info private.
—Deborah S. Lamb, Miami, FL

I live on Social Security which will, in a month's time, no longer cover even my rent. I have a cell phone, which is free to seniors (an "Obamaphone, although the program was initiated during Bush's last term), but the number of minutes that are free are quite limited. I therefore need to use the Internet for casual communication, as well as to make doctor appointments, renew prescriptions and so on. However, my Internet provider (Comcast) does not offer anything affordable to low income seniors. In my area, Comcast has a monopoly on cable; while Century Link offers DSL at a low intro price, it is slower than cable, and the costs to switch are out of the reach of those of us living from day to day with no money to spare. Please follow through with the actions you have proposed.
—Colin M Mansfield, W St Paul, MN

Don't be a typical government agency and kick the can down the road. Cable bills are through the roof. Do something beneficial to us customers.
—Frank Portillo, Walnut Creek, CA

My information does not belong to Comcast to sell.
—Kathryn Mosher, Eagan, MN

Both the proposal to keep Comcast from selling private information without consent and ending a monopoly on set-top boxes should be common sense. No one but Comcast could benefit from the alternatives, at the expense of millions of Americans.
—Mr. Caleb Niederer, Seattle, WA

These unnecessary fees have driven up my bills over $100 each month. I'm getting ready to stop cable altogether because I have no other choice but my one provider. The additional fees for these boxes that I could have purchased 20 times over by now are ridiculous.
—Kipp Hollingsworth, Winston-Salem, NC

INFLATION GALLOPS, YET THOSE OF US ON FIXED INCOMES CANNOT AFFORD IT!
—R Palm, DRIPSPGS, TX

Support our consumer financial rights in the face of oppressive cable co. Goliaths!
—Louis Sebesta, Binghamton, NY

The internet is essential for daily living in the US.
—Ms. Susan Lehrer, Seattle, WA

I'm retired and on a fixed income. However, prices for services continue to rise while SS hasn't given a COLA and does not appear to do so in the near future. So will someone forgo the under the table pay and actually give a care about those who trusted and elected you to office! Please! Just recently Comcast passed on a hike to us(customer) b/c they were alledgedly received an increase /hike from the companies they do business with. Seriously!
—Rosemary Smith-Campbell, Memphis, TN

Cease shilly-shallying about!
—John McPeek, Fairfax, VA

Comcast keeps charging more and more. Why aren't you enforcing anti-trst laws?
—Robert Juelich, Tacoma, WA

My cable bill keeps going up and up. These companies are greedy.
—Lois Garrett, roanoke, VA

This is important to me as i am a consumer living on a budget. i need to have more affordable connectivity options to communkcation other than the cable companies and their unnecessarily high prices. this would allow me to purchase one device at a more afvordable price tbat connects to everything video and Internet-related
—James Marin, Okaton, VA

I value my privacy and would not like to have Comcast to sell private information. And a lower cable bill will be appreciated.
—Heidi Gulatee, ,

Short of mandating and financing local publicly owned fiber optic systems, cable internet has become the minimum needed utility for information services. It is not a frill and should be regarded as a necessity of modern life. As such, the price paid should be capped and tied to actual cost of service and severed from profits above 5%.
—Dave Hart, Davis, CA

No competition for cable services breeds higher costs and no interests in providing better service. We also don't need more "junk" mail after they sell lists to whomever.
—Larry R. Antila, San Francisco, CA

ENOUGH.
—Barbara Sharma, los angels, CA

The original premise for allowing cable was its affordability. The very least the FCC could do is to stop the increases that deter those unable to keep up with this escalation is to stop it where it is.
—Ken Ring, Minneapolis, MN

Protecting the Public's Privacy--the right top be left alone--has always been a American Civil Right honored by all Courts!
—S Spacek, Germantown, MD

I support the FCC's privacy proposal and the end of the monopoly on set-top boxes. These are public interest proposals. There are millions and millions who will be served by this, even if you hear from only a small fraction of those.
—Guthrie Miller, Santa Fe, NM

Please work for we, the people, and reject the financial and political games being played in our Congress. I thought we broke-up monopolies over a century ago.
—Ed Parks, Lawton, OK

It should be self-evident why this is important to me: stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Yvonne White, Kinmundy, IL

This is why I do not have cable TV!
—Carol Mone, Trinidad, CA

Comcast is the worse of the worse. They continually have the worse service and increase charges. It is way past time to reign them in!
—Patricia Daniels, Manassas, VA

Consumers are fed up with the service they're getting and the paucity of choices, not to mention the high cable bills.
—Nita Sembrowich, Cambridge, MA

Make corporations decide whether they are going to be in the common carriage data transit market (including voice and video data) or the content publishing market. They can't be both in any valid definition of an open market.
—Jared Hardy, Los Angeles, CA

The Right to Privacy is in The Constitution...the right for corporations to profit at the expense of OUR Constitutional Rights is NOT enshrined in The Constitution! Not to mention the fact that MONOPOLIES are illegal in the US, so why do Cable companies get fuedal fiefdoms assigned to them where they don't have to compete with each other? Every other business has to compete for customers in the country...what makes Cable companies the exception to that rule???!!!
—Walker Hibben, newport beach, CA

I am a senior citizen on limited income, the internet is important to mel
—Rosemarie Werner, Standish, MI

The constant erosion of the citizens rights must be stopped now!
—Mr John K Harrison, Clifton, NJ

Privacy is important.
—Chris Damon, East Brunswick, NJ

The internet was developed by the Federal government. It belongs to the public. Companies don't deserve the right to regulate the internet for their own profit.
—Jeffrey Rovner, Chicago, IL

It is burdensome, to always have to worry, that, our individual rights to privacy, are always being jeopardized by the private sector, or even by our own government, whose duty is to uphold and protect our rights! Stand up for our rights and quit allowing corporations to monopolize everything at our expense!
—L Bagley, Albuquerque, NM

You are appointed to work for and answer to us - not to the cable companies. Stand your ground and do the right thing; protect our privacy and provide more equitable access to information.
—Sondra Loucks Wilson, Grand Rapids, MI

It's clear from the Presidential primary elections that consumers are becoming more and more vocal in their opposition to the corporate hijacking of federal agencies that should be working for the citizens of this country. The FCC has a mandate to regulate, rather than take orders from the cable industry.
—Mark Schwartz, Northbrook, IL

You give these companies an inch, they'll take a mile. Please, stand up for the little guy.
—Mr. Brock Janson, Colorado Springs, CO

My privacy is important to me.
—Lila Cornell, Cranberry Twp, PA

For those of us who do not go to the movies anymore, cable television is our source of entertainment. Continuing to gouge customers with increased prices can be problematic for many on fixed incomes.
—Joanne Snyder, San Diego, CA

We are SO tired of fighting for what is right vs BIG CORPORATIONS!!! DO THE RIGHT THING! STOP THE BRIBES.
—jana Shiloh, s, AZ

I'm tired of paying inflated prices for substandard "high speed" cable internet service. Where is FTTH, 1Gbs internet service? The U.S. is the laughing stock of the developed world when it comes to high speed internet.
—William B. Hess, Edwardsville, IL

I find Comcast's and other similar corporate behavior to outrageous. This should be a no-brainer. Thank you!
—David Rogg, Oakton, VA

You should be making the rules for Comcast; they should not be making the rules for you - stand up to them!
—Chari Rosales, Naperville, IL

If I didn't have to pay so much for cable i could buy other goods and/or services.
—Dubby Wm J. Hill, Ocoee, FL

Cox Communications makes us rent a set top box, even though a few months ago we were able to receive the channels on our TV without a set top box. Now I have to rent a box for each TV and my TiVos will no longer work.
—Lyle Sanders, Virginia Beach, VA

My private info should not be risked by being sold without my consent just because I watch TV, and my Comcast bill should not be so expensive and always climbing higher whether I change anything or not. End the monopoly on set-top boxes that we are forced to rent each month.
—Shellee Davis, Cotati, CA

I tire of my Bill so high. It not like you do is watch it all Day. You can't watch all the different channel at one time. Cable is a big Joke to the American People. I like different channel but the one I watch and not all the other channel I don't watch why pay for them.
—Jeff Waters, Ocala, FL

Protect my privacy and lower my cable bill.
—Brenda Peppers, Goldsboro, NC

I would like MORE option when it comes to broadband choices in my area. Comcast is the only provider available and I'm NOT HAPPY!
—Susan Detato, Orleans, VT

The United States cannot keep its technological leadership with an internet that looks like it is run by Soviet bureaucrats. We must have effective administration of our internet assets or we will sink to the level of a developing nation, but this time by choice.
—Peter Rogan, Royal Oak, MI

This is omportant because I would like ti live in the United States of America-and Comcast et al makes us all inti United Serfs of Americas, and as sergs we expect you TOM, to keep is safe from corpocracy!
—Gloriana Casey, altadena, CA

Big Cable goes out of its way to make it all but impossible to use any device they don't rent us on our own television sets - this must end now !
—Timothy Liebe, Syracuse, NY

Seniors living on a limited and fixed income should get a break on the extreme cost of Cable. For many of us, this is our main connection to the rest of the world.
—Christopher Lawrence, Spokane, WA

I didn't give my comcast my consent to Dell my private information. Comcast is a monopoly, and needs to be put in its place.
—Arlene Satz, Boynton Beach, FL

I agree with these proposals. Cable bills increase every year and it is getting out of hand. Protect the public interest.
—Mr. R. Michael Ehr, Milwaukee, WI

I don't want my information broadcast, especially not when others get cash for it.
—James T Elder Jr, Olympia, WA

Proprietory set-top boxes are a clearly anti-consumer issue, which we similarly swept away with AT&T rented phones 35 years ago. Set-top boxes are just cash cows for the cable industry that bilk consumers in rentals far more than the boxes cost. Time to eliminate this egregious monopolistic activity and let consumers decide whether to continue rental or buy their own.
—Alex Tolley, Los Gatos, CA

All our privacy is at risk. Help protect it.
—Patricia Jones, Mountain Home, AR

To FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler, Commissioner Mignon Clyburn and Commissioner Jessica Rosenworcel: Thousands of us have written in support of the FCC's broadband privacy proposal and the agency's efforts to end the monopoly on set-top boxes. These are common-sense, pro-consumer policies, but we're concerned they won't move forward if you don't act now. The cable industry's friends in Congress are threatening the survival of both of these measures, trying to force the agency's hand by holding up Commissioner Rosenworcel's renomination and pressuring the chairman to resign after the election. This is no way to govern, but we're concerned their pressure may be working. Commissioner Rosenworcel is reportedly reluctant to move quickly on these crucial measures. Anything worth doing at the FCC is going to take at least a 3–2 vote. You have a chance to go down in history as leaders of the FCC that did more for the public interest than any other. Your decisions over the next few months could cement that legacy — but only if you hold strong. We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Margot Rochon, Austin, TX

Please care about customers, not just industry people who are lobbying you. We will appreciate it. Thanks.
—David Chu, Syracuse, NY

I don't like monopolies.
—Ed zelonis, Minersville, PA

These are only small steps against the stranglehold the cable duopoly have on us. Please grow a backbone and do the right thing for the American people you serve.
—Barbara McDonald, Wyandotte, MI

You are our only shield against the massive power and push of the communication giants.
—Rob West, Los Angeles, CA

The FCC is supposed to protect people who use the cable not just the providers. The FCC is not doing its job. It is acting just like Congress. It's time to take a stand for the people who pay the bills.
—Shirley Powell, Johnson Creek, WI

It is very well laid out in the text above. nothing more to be added, than that private information is just that. Private. It is not to be sold, bartered, jumbled. queried.
—Per-Ola Selander, Kirkland, WA

I'm on a fixed income so every time my cable bill goes up I loose money. It seems to increase a few dollars each month and it is hard to keep up.
—Claudia Schumann, San Francisco, CA

We're seniors living on a fixed income, we can't afford to have giant monopolies picking our pockets and profiting off selling our information. Please protect us from the wolves.
—Deborah Moore, Somers, NY

Cable should be a utility with consumers having access to multiple detective providers over it.
—Pat Smear, San Francisco, CA

Here in the U.S., there is little or no competition; we have the worse customer service, the slowest speeds and the highest prices. I had faster speeds in Iraq. Our systems are abdominal. You allow businesses to screw over customers, why?
—Janice Barnes, Jacksonville, FL

To be a knowledgeable citizen in our current society requires access to public information and that can be best provided through connection to the internet. That has allowed major ISP companies, especially Comcast, coupled with their monopolistic powers to force consumers to pay very high prices and to surrender privacy information which would otherwise be withheld. I urge you to provide the balance that has been denied to consumers by denying these companies access to personal information which is then used for commercial purposes and to eliminate their strangle hold on the devices necessary to access the information stream.
—A L. Mullikin, Peachtree City, GA

Just say NO to Comcast!
—Anton Grambihler, Richland, WA

My privacy and a fair deal is important to me. Being sold and manipulated by big coroprate business is not good for me or you.
—Craig Love, ,

Time to regulate this monopoly!
—Michael Feinberg MD, PhD, Philadelphia, PA

Congress wisely rooted out monopolies decades ago. Is today's Congress AS wise? My cable bill is humongous!
—Craig T. Ponczak, Scottsdale, AZ

I live on a VERY fixed income and can just barely afford the internet I have and I have to have it for school. If you don't finish your job and reject Congress' political games, I won't be able to afford cable at all. I don't connect for TV purposes; I have to have TV in order to get internet.
—Pat Brunson, Las Vegas, NV

Seniors on fixed incomes need these services to be affordable.
—Karen Stephens-Cole, Chino, CA

MSKE IT EQUAL FOR THE MIDDLE CLASS AND POOR TO GET A CHANCE WITHOUT A MONOPOLY LIKE COMCAST !
—Constance M Rodman, Seattle, WA

FCC, please serve the public interest, not collapse under pressure from special interests.
—RJ Boyer, San Clemente, CA

Privacy and fair pricing are important to everyone.
—Kathryn Vinson, Seattle, WA

I'd like to know what the FCC really stands for and represents. Are you an Agency that has been infiltrated by corporate operatives, savages devoted to greed who have no loyalty to our Nation and the American People, or is the FCC still a genuine American Agency run by dedicated individuals who represent the interests of the American People. We shall see by your actions what you really are and stand for.
—Paul Judy, Van Nuys, CA

Stop comcast selling my private information to others. If I wanted my information sold I would sell it myself and not some greedy corporation that sets high prices on the American public. Stop corruption with the cable boxes also. This company is taking advantage of Americans and we are standing up against this.
—Mark LaCompte, timber lake, SD

Media consolidation is driving up all costs in our cable bill.
—Wm Schultz, whitefish, MT

When the FCC voted in favor of net neutrality, it voted in favor of the consumers. I hope it continues this path.
—James Bachman, Saint Charles, IL

As a teacher and mother (& now grand mother) I have fought for the common citizen to have more power and influence over the critical communication systems in place today...this is not just business..it is a responsibility of the businesses we allow to operate in our nation that they serve us well for the purposes we wish and not just charge us to shove down our throats messages products they and other overtly wealthy WANT TO BRAINWASH AND SHOVE TO THE CITIZENS / CONSUMERS. The FCC is there to look after the interest of all the citizens and not allow a few to bulldoze their way over the rest of us and into our pocket books as well as our minds. Our own money should not be allowed to be used to corrupt us with dictated messages by monopolies and gouge our funds with over priced products....My personal info should also be under my control not Comcast or corporate control without my consent. I want money diverted to buy policy and policy makers on our invoice and not collected pretending to be for services rendered for media or as a common carrier of communication delivery and I instead want these funds used to provide us better services we are paying for & not to buy policy that works against these companies own customer base.
—Monica Seymour Mcfeeters, baldwyn, MS

Cable bills are prohibitively expensive and keep rising every single year. We need relief and competition in set top boxes is a way we can get it!
—Karen Young - Writers Guild, Brooklyn, NY

Why isn't it against the law for a company tosell private information, and why aren't avoidable monopolies prohibited by FCC policy? Please honor your implied or explicit responsibility to act in the interest of the American Public.
—Sherman L. Guth, Bloomington, IN

We have the worst service for the highest prices in the world because once again there is no competition. Break up these monopolies and stop making them even more powerful. It’s not right, it’s not fair and it’s your responsibility to control these out of control behemoths.
—Lee Clingman, Portland, OR

you work for US, not the cable companies.
—Barbara Hosmer, Mission Viejo, CA

It took years of hard-fought effort for the FCC to pass even the basic, common-sense net-neutrality laws we have today, and rather than celebrate that their limited scope allows them to continue with much of their corrupt abuse of their customers, these services providers continue to try and circumvent these laws, as well as any others that might limit their profit-potential, regardless of how it affects the American people. For this sort of ludicrous situation to ever even arise, is solely possible due to their corrupt and undemocratic influence over this regulating body, and those in positions to affect its actions, in the form of money and threats. A democratic government, by definition, can only exist as long as every citizen has equal influence in its direction, no more, no less. In these dark times, when wealthy groups of citizens can go unpunished while using said wealth to directly influence our elected officials (and even who those officials are), and indirectly to manipulate the general public, using widespread propaganda to directly control the core knowledge they base their decisions on, our only hope is to acknowledge and fight against this perversion of our country's principle whenever and wherever possible. The most basic principle for any regulating body to be effective has to be that those whom they are set to regulate cannot influence it's direction in any way; as long as that is not the case, the regulating body is nothing but a figurehead to appease the public, while those meant to be regulated have actual control. That they are able to do so publicly to the extent we see today is proof of how far out system has fallen: Those that realize what is happening and are in positions to take real actions against it have a dirty to do so, both to the people they represent, and to themselves. When given a position of power, and the responsibly that comes with it, in the face of injustice, inaction is sin.
—Christopher Kloppinger-Todd, Montgomery Village, MD

We don't have cable and don't want it, partly for these reasons. But most of our friends, neighbors and relatives do have cable for lack of a better choice, and I'm joining them in their protest.
—Liz Gaspar, SHELTON, WA

My cable costs are ridiculously high!
—Bob Lorentzen, Fort Bragg, CA

Why do you hesitate and linger? Why are you not taking action! Are the cable companies paying you off???
—Susie Warner, Beverly Hills, FL

Most of public citizens are struggling to pay their bills. Privacy invasion can be a nightmare that we cannot afford, and cable bills do not need to be predatory. For ONCE, please consider that corporate profits are killing us.
—Faith Mishina, Hilo, HI

The Government is supposed to be governing in the best interest of the nation, DO IT !!
—Anthony G Franklin, Bedford, OH

Selling private information without knowledge or approval sounds like an illegal action, or it should be. Monthly charges are already in place with whatever services you subscribe to, so why the additional monthly charge for the box. Sounds like double billing, and at best it should be a one time charge, and at the very least there should be no monopolies..
—Jean Mobley, Albuquerque, NM

Privacy is important to me. I am a person with rights and duties, not a commodity.
—Deirdre Balaam, ,

It's not capitalism if it's run by monopolies. It's not capitalism if the rules are rigged against consumers.
—Don Bliss, city, CA

It's time to get these two measures passed. Privacy of my personal information is important to me and I expect to be asked to give up my right to it's privacy. I also believe consumers of a product should have as many choices a possible to maintain competition. End the monopoly on set-top boxes and give consumers a choice.
—Warren Hageman, Carmichael, CA

If we don't continue to fight against the Cable companies they will destroy the internet and along with it America. Out once great country is already heading down the tubes and it's due to large corporations being aloud to run wild, break the rules, and make up their own rules. What use to make America great was our ability to make advancements in technology be it digital or not but now we have these fat parasitic companies who are happy to keep things right where they are. Up grade the us digital infrastructure? Why would we need to do that when we can just charge people more for what to most countries is considered archaic? This needs to end or things will only get worse. Big business already has it greed controlling hands on the white house are you going to let them do that to you as well or can you lead by example?
—Brice Benton, Minneapolis, MN

Protect My Privacy The continued assault on our privacy by corporations who have OUR data is disgusting. They seek to monetize our life, by destroying our privacy. These soulless corporations are willing to do anything for monetary gain. Are you comfortable with corporations who have YOUR data selling it, destroying YOUR privacy? Will it take a public interest organization gathering and collating data about your life and publishing it on the internet for you to stop this absurd practice? Lower My Cable Bill Forty eight years ago the Federal Communications Commission's "...Carterfone decision enabled consumers to purchase modems from countless sources." "Without easy and inexpensive consumer access to modems, the Internet would not have become the global medium that it is today." The same applies to "the agency's 1998 decision to let consumers pick and choose their own cable set top boxes. "Subscribers have the right to attach any compatible navigation device to a multichannel video programming system," the Commission declared. "We conclude that the core requirement, to make possible the commercial availability of equipment to MVPD subscribers, is similar to the Carterfone principle adopted by the Commission in the telephone environment." We can expect enhanced features and function and probably services unthought of today by allowing competition for set top boxes. End the cable system monopoly and unchain innovation. By cable companies not allowing this, is this not a violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act?
—Jerry F Koniecki, Hyde Park, NY

With no COLAs for 2 years and being on a small fixed income, we need this protection from higher costs!
—Ms. Niara Isley, Durango, CO

Pro-consumer policies like this one is a step in the right direction that benefits everyone except a very small minority. Take action, America has been bogged down by an oligarchical system where only the powerful win. Where has this gotten America on a world scale? We need policies like these to help the middle class which in turn will help the country. Not only is it common sense, be the person that helps America get on the right track.
—Thomas, Philadelphia, PA

Because I'm a senior citizen and living on a fixed income. Cable bills have become outrageous.
—Sheila Leitner, No. Myrtle beach, SC

Fixed income; get awful channels for too much money and no choice. Unfair.
—Lee Stephanie Roscoe, Brewster, MA

No one should be able to sell your personal information with your explicit consent, & hiding it inside its cable service contracts should BE illegal! And making everyday life more affordable for everyday working folks should be a goal our government & its agencies should ALWAYS strive towards!
—Christina Fahey-Matias, Vancouver, WA

SENIOR'S NEED LOWER BILL'S AND WE NEED OUR PRIVACY PROTECTED
—Katie and Bill, Sheffield Lake, OH

My own set top box would save me money. Not having my info sold would save me time and trouble.
—Lance Vilter, Los Angeles, CA

As a retired teacher, my cable bill goes up year after year while my Soc. Sec. and pension remains the same. Your bill will help with that by lowering my cable bill. I also dislike all the e-mails I get because my information is sold and exchanged without my permission. Please put through your bills as soon as possible. Thank you,
—Ethel Dumas, Wesley Chapel, FL

Between the cable box and modem, I'm paying $15 per month, which comes out to $180 per year! I've been a Comcast customer since 2003, so I've probably spent at least $1500 on these ridiculous fees!
—Jaynie Beard, Harrisburg, PA

Because We are a Democracy. It's time Capitalism learn this and behaves accordingly!
—Kyle Kleckner, Berkley, MI

Privacy matters, and so does having world class, affordable, utility based, basic communications, free from private profiteers skimming so much. Public broadband should always be an option, to keep the private profiteers honest. Chattanooga showed we could get rates more in line with the many other developed countries that do this better than we have.
—Jim Young, Bloomington, CA

My information is mine, not yours or theirs.
—Kyle Kulseth, Sheridan, WY

Busting monopolies and regulating communications is your job for us, not kowtowing to thr corporations.
—Avi Okin, Kamuela, HI

There is absolutely no justification for further delay.
—David Tivol, Sunnyvale, CA

The cable industry has been given free reign to scam it's customers and the government in nearly every merger agreement they've entered. They need to be held accountable.
—Mr. Jason K Morris, West Brownsville, PA

Reject corporate supremacy now!
—Mike Caetano, Fresno, CA

Cable is my connection to the outside world as a formerly hard-working now disabled elder.
—Ria Tanz Kubota, El Sobrante, CA

We the unincorporated people need representation, and you are that representation. Please protect us from the powerful few who have found their legal ways of disempowering and cornering us as a populous dependent on their services. Please speak for our interests, rights, and well-being. Thank you for your courage!
—Eugene Cruz, center tuftonboro, NH

Protect our privacy!
—Joseph Volpe, ventura, CA

There is so little factual information available to Americans - diminishing each year - that access to the internet is imperative if America is to remain less than a police state resembling Russia, et al. Democracy depends on and cannot exist without an informed citizenry.
—Sharon Conn, sandy, OR

We the people look to the FCC, not Comcast, not Verizon, to protect the common good in our democracy. These monopolies must be reigned in; there must be a limit to their influence. And addressing these issues, related to the unfair practices of cable TV providers, is long overdue. Yhr time to act is now.....
—David P. Miller, Elkton, MD

My information is mine...not for sale...no matter how you cut it. When is someone going to face down Comcast and protect the public interest?
—Elaine Whooley, Nevada city, CA

Years ago, I opted out of Comcast's rent-your-cable modem at $8/month forever plan. I have saved $96 a year ever since year 2 when the capital expenditure of my cable modem had been paid off by absence of the cable modem rental fee. I don't understand what's so problematic about allowing consumers to purchase their own hardware for channel decryption. I feel like the Digital Cable Revolution has been another "carrot and stick" (mostly stick) ruse. Now that Digital Cable has arrived, I now have access to several different versions (standard definition, high definition, and other language versions) of each channel. I of course had no choice in the matter. It was happening regardless of my approval. I just want one channel -- the one that comes in High Definition. I think it is just common sense to allow consumers to buy and maintain their own hardware for connection of their television services. I mean, what's next? If they can tell us what decryption box is necessary in our homes, are they going to tell us what TVs we can buy to use their services. Presumably those will be on rental agreements, too. Consumers purchasing their own decryption hardware will certainly cheaper for the consumer. And near as I can tell, with consumer Cable rates going up every year (or at least every other) in marketplaces where the Cable industry has been authorized as a legal monopoly, that Comcast is not going to be hurt financially by allowing users to escape perpetual rental agreements for hardware.

—Michael A. DiZio, Holbrook, MA

The FCC should enact the 2 strong proposals, to protect We-the-People. Thank you for listening to us.
—Chuck, Huron, CA

My Social Security COLA will be 0.02%...My cable bill just went up 25% for the same package!
—John Tilson, Bloomington, IN

Please stop Comcast from selling private information about its customers. We need you to do this. Thank you.
—Sarah Barrett, Downers Grove, IL

We love privacy and hate monopoly. We hope you do, too.
—Roger Overholt, Hemet, CA

Cable companies have no incentive to act in the customer's best interest and routinely seek out new ways to charge more for their poor service. Consumers need an advocate to protect them from the ever including cost of cable.
—Eric Hibbeler, Saint Charles, MO

It seems the only people who matter now a days are large corporations while we individuals keep digging deeper in our pockets. Please remedy at least a part of this.
—Linda Holloway, Jacksonville, FL

The cable television monopolies in this country are a serious and "un-American" problem. It is your job to fix it. Do your job.
—William Tracer, Cordova, TN

Why is everybody wanting to hurt people on fixed incomes. Maybe if you were in the same position, then you would take action. Please finish the job and pass these.
—Theodore Lance, Fremont, OH

We as Canadians are always gettng gouged for services. It is time to stop. It is time to protect Canadians from being exploited.
—Don J Cameron, Winnipeg,

Don't give in to the pressure of the cable companies. Do what are elected representatives won't, represent the will of the people.

Now is the time to do this.....
—Raymundo Martinez, los angeles, CA

It's important to all citizens that Federal Agencies look out for and act in their interests - by 'their' I mean the citizens, not the agency. When this system is betrayed, we've got ourselves an oligarchy
—Sharyn St Clair, Bridgeport, CT

The cable I have and can affordd allows me only local, one gov't, i local gov't and 2 commercial channels. And the high pice!!!!
—MaryJo Matheny, Indianapolis, IN

My bill is outrageous, my speed is pathetic, I am a captive of Comcast with no effective alternative. This is called MONOPOLY! I pay your salary. Please do your job.
—Philip Fregeau, Longmeadow, MA

Monopolistic Comcast needs no favors from government. Do NOT allow the cable industry to sell consumers private information for profit without expressed permission from subscribers and reduced subscription prices in exchange. And lower cable cost overall by ending Comcast's monopoly on set-top boxes.
—Calvin Johnson, Marion, IL

The FCC is for our protection, please do your job!
—Howard Miller, Lakeport, CA

If there is any group with a lower approval rating than Congress and less public trust, it's the cable industry and their "Cooperative Monopoly." The cable industry (and their money) take advantage of our representatives (who are almost always lawyers rather than tech-savvy types). The FCC has stood up for the common citizen with its Net Neutrality and Set top box rulings. It was expected that the unsavory lot that are the cable cabal and Congress would get together to do what's best for THEM, not the consumer. They will undoubtedly also mask their intent with a patriotic-sounding title and obfuscating blibber-blabber in the bill! DO NOT BE FOOLED!
—Stephen Wilson, Pensacola, FL

Please do your job! Protect my privacy and don't allow the cable companies continue to rape us with pricing increases and charging us for a set top box.
—Arthur W Green, N. Ft Myers, FL

I am just so tired of trying to fight against big corporations who have no interest in fairness. The FCC has been asked time and again to stand up to big corporations. I hope they can do so once again. They work for the public, not the cable companies!
—Ellen Zarter, Bellevue, WA

I am tired of paying high costs for lousy service.
—Susan C Wilkie, Lakewood, WA

Is it fair that I have to spend every month $80 dollars for just internet access from Time Warner? I don't think so.
—Maureen Kavanagh, Woodside, NY

The cable monopolies are irresponsible & unaccountable except to their shareholders & their own bottom line. They do not protect the consumers they are supposed to serve (for hefty fees) & they do not deliver the service they claim. We need the FCC to protect our privacy & open up the competition on set-top boxes so we are not forced to pay ridiculous monthly rents on equipment that we wind up paying for many times over if we keep the same service for several years. Thank you for your consideration.
—David J. Lafond, Holyoke, MA

What can I say that hasn't already been said. Russia and China already know most of us intimately, hell the own us. I suppose you all feel that allowing Comcast to open the floodgates by selling (do we get a commission?) our personal information is a good idea. We elected you all to protect us and so far our public officials batting average is not so good so I won't hold my breath in hopes of the obvious.
—Jim Sheldon, Royal Oak, MI

i object to having to rent a cable box for $10/month. if it were lease to own, i could understand...but it is not!
—Tim Brainerd, NATICK, MA

Comcast does not have my respect as a reputable business. They have kept my phone number hostage in that I wasn't allowed to use my landline for approximately 1 week, when switching from Comcast to Verizon, their installer had my son set up equipment for them, & clipped Verizon's cables outside my residence.
—Michele Shipp, Gaithersburg, MD

Privacy is very important to Americans. Please respect us and pass legislation that insures our privacy
—Beverly Ann Conroy, Oak Park, IL

Our cable bills keep rising with no increase in service, and cable companies have an unfair monopoly on the set-top boxes that are needed to conform with their systems. At the rate of $10 or $20 dollars per month, they make thousands of dollars from each cable subscriber over a period of years on an inexpensive piece of equipment that often doesn't even provide the latest features. Cable companies should be required to make their systems work with standard over-the-counter boxes that subscribers can buy instead of rent.
—Daniel Drucker, Southfield, MI

—Chad Sell, Barto, PA

Access to cable and the Internet is critical and essential in today's society. This has become a utility that should be accessible and affordable for all US citizens.
—Leslie Jenkins, West Orange, NJ

I'm tired of my cable provider's constant effort to find one more way to pad their bottom line. I'm particularly angered by their not allowing me to use the "cable ready" tuner in my television set, forcing me to "rent" a conversion box in order to receive all the channels to which I subscribe, so that I will be paying many times over the actual cost of the external tuner.
—Richard Luken, Cincinnati, OH

No one should be forced higher prices and to be forced to rent each month. FCC who's side are you on anyway?
—Renee Bourgea, Vancouver, WA

Corporate domination of the public's DARPA-created worldwide web must be reduced significantly. Our abiity to communicate, work and find work should not be at the whim of Wall Street.
—Woody Woodruff, Lanham, MD

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Barry De Jasu, Montague, MA

Privacy should be sacrosanct!
—Wolfgang A. Loera, Bellevue, WA

Monopolies are ethically dangerous. Only strong government regulation can prevent their use of private information and their unjust price gouging.
—Eugene Bales, Lindsborg, KS

Privacy should be of the utmost importance due to today's world full of scam artists ! Also, because of the very bad economy & huge cable bills, we are all trying to save as much money as possible ! Protect our privacy & lower our cable bills right now !!!!
—Mrs & Dennis Roderigues, Pinellas Park, FL

We need to have cable that is affordable and accessible to everyone. Also, Comcast which already has a monopoly in providing cable services should not be allowed to use it's consumer's private information to make more money. Let their customers decide whom they want to do business with.

Do what is right for the PEOPLE! please...
—Ellen Johnson, Springfield, MA

Selling my personal information or charging monthly rental fees on cable boxes is Wrong!
—Barry LeBeau, West Warwick, RI

The cable industry said deregulation would increase competition and lower prices. After they got their deregulation, they divided up their territory and formed monopolies. It is time to stop this nonsense. I also don't appreciate my information being for sale. If you are going to allow such stuff, you also need to establish ways to track down who gets that information and how it is used so if it is used to steal our identities we can sue the cable companies.

I want my dependents to have better access and lower cost than I have endured; I am 86 and dying.
—Darwin L Hatheway, Hallowell, ME

With geographical monopolies by cable suppliers like Comcast, we're already paying way more than Europe, Asia, etc. But Internet access has become essential for school, work and personal transactions. It's more than enough to be forced to pay exorbitant prices in the absence of competition, but adding the ability to profit by selling my information, and nickel and dime customers with more and more little fees is just insult added to injury.
—Lisa P Vervena, Shoreview, MN

Thanks to Free Press, I can put pressure on my publicly-funded officials to to their job, as follows: FCC, do your job!

There is NEVER a surplus in dollars, when you are existing on Social Security benefits.
—Harold L. Wakefield, Woodland Hills, CA

We need the FCC to do its job and protect the public and public interests. There is no completion in this industry including all other forms of public communication, all are owned by to few and all have monopolistic ties to one another. I've spent the last 45 years working in the business and for the last twenty it has become increasingly hard to tell who or which company I was really working for. It's time to regulate and limit once again the allowed ownership of media in a particular market. One only has to look at one individual, Rupert Murdoch, to witness the offences a single individual can perpetrate when he owns to much in any one place or country..
—Jerry Uhlman, Carlisle, IA

The cost of renting cable equipment is out of control. Comcast charges so much I could buy this equipment for several month's payments. End their monopoly in this area. The FCC should be looking out for taxpayers not greedy corporation.
—Jeffrey Tieger, Fort Lauderdale, FL

Please stand up for regular people. We don't have the money or influence of the big corporations.

—Chico Woodhill, San Francisco, CA

Living in a broadcast signal dark hole I'm forced to subscribe just to receive an offair signal. I only subscribe to basic cable as I have no need to pay for 200 other channels of nothing worth watching. I wouldn't event subscribe to cable if paying a monthly line charge for internet weren't more expensive than the basic cable charge. Not only do they charge me $5/month for a worthless broadband router they want to make my bandwidth available to other comcast internet subscribers when in my signal range. If Comcast can't respect my privacy rights, which apparently don't exist in their greedy minds then I may be forced into the tech-less caste.

I am a senior citizen with a very low income; I try to supplement that with online business, but the cost of my internet goes up EVERY year. I cannot afford for my expenses to go up after than my income (DUH!). I rely on the FCC to stand up for consumers like me and not let cable monopolies price gouge.
—Kae Bender, Lancaster, CA

I think the cable and Internet monopolies should be broken up. There is no justification for these evil entities to have so much control, except boundless greed.
—Brian Brian St. John, Spicewood, TX

What I and my neighbors want--what we have ALWAYS wanted--is an ala carte system in which we are presented with a list of channels; with prices for each channel. In this way; we could buy only what we want; and NOT be forced to pay premium prices for channels we never ever use.
—Valerie Shubert, Seattle, WA

So why is this so difficult for you? People over profits, that's what you are there for. Protect us from the corporate greed, and pass this bill now.

Cost for cable and internet goes up monthly. Service declines at the same rate in Louisville KY.
—W C., Louisville, KY

This is clearly a monopoly that need to be address in a consumer oriented manner.
—Chuck Hedrick, Escondido, CA

Lower bill from Comcast and more competition for cable companies.
—Tim McKeever, Yorkville, IL

The cable costs are getting higher while the quality and availability of channels is getting lower. It's hard enough being on a fixed income as it is without cable mergers (potential monopolies), higher prices for less programming, and someone in another place knowing every time you sneeze.
—Rose Marie Ash, Buffalo, NY

Private information should be just that private. Comcast is already receiving outrageous prices for cable. We have signed an agreement with them to provide this service. If they want to mine our private data they should request it and have us actively opt in. This is beyond the contract they have. Stop this illegitimate sale of our info to greedy corporations.
—Maria Dimond, Rollingbay, WA

Why in the world would I allow Comcast, let alone any OTHER cable company, to have the ability to SELL my personal information without MY CONSENT? After all the FCC is SUPPOSED to be working for ME not the cable companies nor their lobbyists!
—Lisbeth Caccese, Van Nuys, CA

cable companies have no more right to the data generated by my activity online than landline companies have rights to the content of my private conversations over their copper wires.
—Ronald H Skees, Jeffersonville, KY

My town has only one choice for getting cable for my computer. It is neither good nor inexpensive. Faurl to support consumer neutrality will only make matters worse.
—Bert ert Becker, Milford, NH

My cable bills seem to go up even though I haven't upgraded anything. It seems they raise the amount because they can. There is no regulation that prevents this. I wish there were such regulations.
—Helen Templeton, Evansville, IN

We don't need to allow any company to sell private information of their clients. The idea that they think they should be allowed to is surprising. Please act to protect the interests of the consumers/public. Thank you for your action on this matter.

—Travis Macpherson, Seattle, WA

WE MUST HAVE PRIVACY IN THIS COUNTRY.
—Mark Koppel, Greenacres, FL

I'm tired of Comcast using me and their other "customers" as an ATM. We pay exorbitant prices for products and services that continue to get worse and worse. For example, Comcast has put now put much of its programming behind a paywall that extracts fees over and above what we pay for cable service. And this programming can in no way be described as premium. Not only do we pay a fee for cable, but we also pay in the form being exposed to hours of advertising. How is this fair? It's time for the FCC to stick up for consumers!
—Jeanine Center, Ann Arbor, MI

It's important because we are headed for the time of big monopolies controlling everything! Didn't our government deal with this issue years ago? Here we go again. NO MORE MONOPOLIES !!!!
—Linda Schoppert, Napa, CA

When I started with Comcast a few years ago, my Basic TV pkg. was $15. This month, another increase. Now it is over $30. Everyone has a right to privacy & efficiency via the Internet. That is why I do not have Comcast for Internet / e-mail.
—Iris Moore, Yelm, WA

The cost of my internet has started to reach ridiculous prices. I handed Comcast $550 last month and somehow, a month later, my bill has risen by another $400. This is something that needs to happen. We need the internet for daily life now, whether it be fore school, social contact, or for running our businesses, and these cable companies should not be allowed to practically bankrupt their customers like this.

You should be working for the people, not the 1%.
—Hein Moritz, Maryville, TN

Why are you people so slow to protect the interests of the people you are in office to serve? People with civil rights make a strong country. A bunch of megacorporations who run roughshod over the citizenry do not. "Consumers" are not an interest group; they are the people who pay your salary.
—Michelle Gale, Coconut Creek, FL

Comcast has hijacked personal information and needs to be held accountable. If they want my information they should be required to get my approval. I am sick of Comcast padding its pockets and emptying mine.
—Susan Mcdonald, Nashville, TN

I am on a fixed income; retired, and have come to depend on my TV for most of my entertainment. My bill has risen to WELL OVER TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS PER MONTH. I ONLY WATCH A FEW CHANNELS AND, MOSTLY LISTEN TO CLASSICAL MUSIC ALL DAY. IT'S RIDICULOUS TO PAY THAT MUCH FOR STUFF I DON'T WANT. THERE HAS TO BE A BETTER WAY.
—Gloria J Howard, MARANA, AZ

The free flow of information is literally the most important tool for solving any other problem in the world.
—Brian Sands, Palm Bay, FL

Why should poor people pay more so rich people can have a great life? Not the way democracy works, though it seems to be the way our brand of capitalism works. Yuk. Not necessary or fair.
—Ms. Carol Pearl, Seattle, WA

I dropped my cable TV because I need to use Comcast's rental box. My son lives in North Carolina And Time Warner Cable has a $3.25 rental fee per box per month and you cannot buy your own box. This is absolutely Wrong. I also Do Not want Comcast selling my personal information. In Three Bridges, New Jersey, Comcast is the only cable and internet provider. I have no choice and it has been this way for more than a decade. Things have to change, the American Consumer is being ripped off by these Giant Corporations. Thank you for your help on this matter.
—Robert Meyer, Three Bridges, NJ

Privacy must be guarded to prevent abuse by online hucksters. And, monthly fees need to be reduced, especially by their trumped up cable box rental fees--per box! We pay an installation fee and return all equipment when service terminates. The box fee is like a death tax on a family with $20,000.
—Mrs. Barbara McGaffey, Alvin, TX

Enough with Comcast doing whatever they want
—Thomas Hasson, Mill Valley, CA

Monopolies of any kind are the poison that can kill our capitalistic economy. Freedom of choice is the engine to our economy. It is the very foundation of our society. Monopolies in the railroads were crippling the economy in the early 1900s until the Trusts were broken up. Media is the new highway of today and we must keep it competitive.
—William Kendrick, Kemah, TX

Cable companies already have no competition for any reasonable speed of internet access in any given area. If a company has the ability to restrict access to any of their customers they are acting as a de facto monopoly in order to force compliance with inflated prices. They would also be able to control the information that customers can see, which would be acting like any third-world dictatorship. Control the information is to control people's thoughts.
—Ken Puglisi, Cathedral City, CA

Cable companies already have an monopoly. My right to privacy is mine and mine alone. If these companies want to sell my info they should first give me the opportunity to sell my info to them. As far as renting set top boxes, I already own my own modem saving me $10.00 a month. Why should I not get a set top box to save another $10.00 or $20,00 a month. Do the right thing here as well as do it soon!!!!!!!
—John Blomeling, Wyoming, MI

We pay so much more for rather less, compared to other nations - not just cable television, but also, of course, internet service. Lets start here, and continue to lower rates charged by service providers - who are in the eyes of consumers laughing all the way to the bank.
—Robert Breeden, Philadelphia, PA

Please return the FCC to working for We The People, and again place the corrupting special interest lobbies back in second place.

Private information is neversellable
—Peter Reum, Billings, MT

We definitely don't want our private info given away and need our cable bill lowered.
—Geraldine Thompson, SAN JOSE, CA

This is the stuff that makes Americans distrust government. We all know Comcast has a monopoly on cable in this country and price- gouges all of us, yet congress does nothing as usual.
—Jenna LaPlante, San Francisco, CA

A data and cable connection today is to consumers what phone number portability was to telecom customers in the late 1990-early 2000. We should not be subject to restrictive policies and captive device rental fees just because an already oligopolistic industry feels like it and can.
—Matthew Friedman, Lenexa, KS

If we CAN pay less for cable-TV, we should!
—Jason Schulman, New York, NY

Cable companies should not be allowed to have monopoly power over the type of set-top box consumers; they should also not be allowed to violate their customers' privacy. Please press forward with the two strong proposals on the table in spite of the howling lobby of the cable companies.
—Donald Chambless, Montgomery, AL

Big cable cannot be allowed to lord it over their customers.
—Gregory Robinson, Bicknell, IN

You should protect the people not large company profits
—Tim Parker, Puyallup, WA

Because I spend hundreds of dollars a month in cable tv. I could use a little savings.
—Yoav Getzler, Valley Village, CA

I'm tired of BIG business dictating what everyone should do. You work for the citizens & not just the companies.
—Robert Swab, Dayton, OH

Are you protecting the industry or the citizen/consumer?
—Joseph Ross, West Chicago, IL

It is due!
—Edward Haggard, Midlothian, IL

The Right to Privacy is a constitutional principle that is very important to me and to the freedoms we all cherish.
—Harry Squires, Redondo Beach, CA

Spam is becoming a serious obstacle to communication. Selling private information generates spam. Individuals need more control over their own information.
—Paul V Torek, Ann Arbor, MI

The costs does not justify the service cable and satellite companies provide us.
—Richard Eng, Hancock, NY

No business entity should have exclusive access to equipment nor should corporations be able to sell or share any personal information that is required to receive their products or services without their explicit customer "written" consent. That doesn't mean it is buried in some legalize agreement slanted to favor the company/corporation but a simple, clear, and concise authorization hand signed granting consent to use their information. Consumers should be able to purchase their own equipment as long as it meets industry standards for the service being purchased or paid for month to month. As a Comcast customer, I am appalled that Comcast or any other company can essentially lock customers into paying many times over for a device that could be bought and paid for in full and outright. As for privacy of information, comsumer privacy should trump or overrule any corporate gain especially in the digital age and the climate of hacking that has so permeated corporate and governmental America.
—Mr. William D Wilson Jr, Lawrenceville, GA

It's in the constitution
—Sheila Willens, los angeles, CA

We retired people are not getting any interest since the crash so our incomes are about half of what they were in 07. Cable prices are too high for us. Please lower them and regulate this industry.
—Alice Jacques, Phoenix, AZ

Please protect my privacy and give me the option to supply my own equipment.
—Alan Dieringer, Bethesda, MD

It is obvious that there have been too many mergers and policies that support the top of the economic ladder at the expense of the average person. It time to make Life in the U.S. fair to everyone.
—Fred T, Reno, NV

Because no one should have to pay for the company's expenses!
—Patricia Farrington, Syracuse, NY

I'd like to know my privacy is protected, and my checkbook would like to know my cable bill will go down!
—Stephanie D Jackel, Vista, CA

Please stop Comcast from selling the personal information of their subscribers, and ending the monopoly of the monthly fees. In my youth, the FCC was responsible for protecting the rights of our citizenry! And, you have the chance to protect these rights once again! Please act as the responsible advocate you are intended to be!!!!
—Susan Bernard, Los Angeles, CA

I pay $171.00 for cable, phone and internet. I will be cancelling this because I am now retired and this doesn't fit in my budget. It just keeps increasing all the time.
—Nancy R. Neilsen, Louisville, TN

This is so important to me because. I beseech you to do the right thing and vote in favor of helping the people before helping corporate America. Thank you
—Randall Hughes, Alameda, CA

Our modern democracy runs on free, equal access to the internet. We need privacy, low equal rates and open access to information to participate in the economy and the political process. Canle rates are too high to gurantee equal access, and our information is stolen and sold while we don't benefit from it. It seems the cable companies and internet advertisers want it both ways. That's not right. Please help us stop it.
—J Hester, Los Gatos, CA

I don't want internetbobo's decide what I am allowed to read
—Hans Potters, ,

It is time for the FCC to address and pass the rules to stop the Comcast merger and to end the settop cable box monopoly. DO YOUR JOB!
—Daniel E Freese, Plymouth, MN

It is time something must be done to reign in the ever increasing cost of our TV bill.
—Grace Neff, ALBANY, OR

I don't care one bit about the cost of a cable bill because I do not & will not ever get cable or satellite service. HOWEVER, I DO care about privacy & what the corporate entities are trying to slide through. I've said it before & I'll say it again - you are "poking the bear" if you really think that you can control the internet. Once you start flexing your supposed strength with the internet, the hackers & darknet WILL strike back hard. And considering how much the government, airlines, banks, etc. depend on computers, you will, by your actions, bring on the end of your empire. Just some advice.
—Michael Lauren DeSarbe, Keosauqua, IA

I never voted for corporate rule, but of course corporations don't lobby me and lavish gifts upon me. Put people at the heart of our democracy and begin making us a real democracy not an oligarchy.
—Mr. Michael Carnap, Tallmadge, OH

Few things are more precious than our privacy -- that special right that allows us to decide what we want to share and with whom. That right should never be for sale!
—Kent Graham, Moore, OK

I'm retired and on social security.
—William T. Hassig, Mount Prospect, IL

Help the public!!
—Karen Christian, Vail, AZ

I'm tired of being abused and ripped off by monopoly cable companies like Comcast (in my area).
—Duane Mantick, West Lafayette, IN

I do not support my private info being sold by Comcast and I am tired of paying an exhorbitant amount for the box on top of my TV.....Comcast needs to be stopped.
—Charlotte Bradley, Chicago, IL

you are making it unaffordable for the poor, seniors and families who can't afford cable. It is unfair think about YOUR families
—Deborah Bates Drake, Maspeth, NY

I recently switched cable companies for better internet access. The new company does not support cable cards. My computer and tuner card are useless. While I would rather have the improved internet access, I should have to choose between the two.
—R Dwayne Ramey, Nolensville, TN

Cable bills skyrocket while seniors and disabled, like myself, have little other entertainment and contact available to us. I believe that this is due largely to the apparently ungoverned, large monopolistic mergers which have become the rule, rather than the exception, in our society lately. We must end this practice of rubber stamping the mergers of large corporations, which then control such a large portion of product availability. In virtually every case, the consumer loses out.on privacy, on cost of product, and on service quality. Please get mergers and monopolistic practices out of our communications industries!
—Betty J. Van Wicklen, Watervliet, NY

Fairness, that is all any consumer would want from any company.
—Cuxan Valladares, Los Angeles, CA

It's my data, not Comcast's.
—Nina Wouk, 1259 El Camino Real #215 Menlo Park, CA

This is a test for all the great lovers of free trade. If they believe in free trade, then end the monopoly on set-top boxes. If they believe in monopoly for their influence-buying friends in the cable business, then they should have the integrity to own up.
—Mike Dorcey, Emporia, KS

Just do it already. Either you're all talk and no action, or you actually give one about the future of technology. Stop letting big cable tell you how to do things.
—William Randolph Pearce, Beaverdam, VA

Monopolies are not free enterprise. Period.
—Fran Grabenhofer, Addison, IL

Our privacy should not be for sale by our ISPs.
—Tim A, Arvada, CO

FCC supposed to represent the public's interest, not corporate lobbyists.
—Ms. Maureen A. Griswold, San Jose, CA

I am a long time customer who is on the verge of opting out of cable due to high prices. I just can't afford it. Help!
—Kathleen E. Dorce, Pasadena, CA

Keep public interests your priority!
—Althea Harris, Longmont, CO

Don't let corporations take over the internet. It belongs to the American people.
—Kim McDonald, Marysville, WA

Privacy should be written into all internet transactions. The monopolies given to cable companies have lead to constant price increases without the competition needed to keep prices competitive.
—Darrell Noel, New York, NY

Internet is a valuable public utility, it needs to be affordable.
—Ljubica Sefer-Stefancic, New York, NY

Fairness. Setting reasonable limits on what a large powerful company can do to the public it's supposed to be serving. Squeezing every single dollar it can from people it believes have no recourse. I want to believe that they can't get away with it.
—Patricia Gragg, Bellevue, WA

It's important because the information is mine and should be kept private.
—Jacqueline Olmeda, New York, NY

I want my privacy protected and a lower cable TV bill.
—Emily Willoughby, Tukwila, WA

I cannot think of a single good reason why you would allow a company to profit off selling their customers' private information. Honestly, what possible reason could you have? And as for cable bills, well, I'm sick of paying for hundreds of channels we don't watch, in order to be able to watch the half dozen channels we do. These companies are cramming their pockets with our money and giving us less and less of any value. Please do something.
—Marlena Machol, Glendale, AZ

telecoms want to control everything as a monopoly should. BREAK THEM UP!
—Michael Boshears, crestline, CA

stop the monopolies!
—Scott Erickson, Omaha, NE

Our cable bills are ridiculous. There are few alternatives. We have one cable provider and if we find their rates to expensive we have little or no alternatives.
—Mr. Dave Zachar, Queensbury, NY

Cable TV companies are taking advantage of the people. Help us. Thanks
—Rex W. Sanders, Phenix City, AL

I have "cut the cable". But at times (like the Olympics) it creates viewing limitations. This is one of the MOST important issues of our times. Protect citizens' right to privacy and eliminate the outrageous fees cable-TV companies charge! Please!
—Katherine Miller, San Diego, CA

This is very very simple,people can not afford the higher rates
—Shaukat M Basit, Brooklyn, NY

I don't know how it is that anyone in Washington D.C. hasn't yet gotten the message that Americans are sick and tired of the political games everyone there insists on playing rather than doing the work the American public pays you to do. Stop playing political games and stop stalling meaningful reform with unrelated topics. Really, please stop with the nonsense. I want the FCC to protect my privacy and they clearly can do that if they would get on with approving the proposed policy that does just that. And i want my cable bill to be as low as it reasonably can be and the proposal to end the monopoly on the set-top box that I'm forced to rent each moth would help a lot. Both these proposals are excellent and both are just sitting there waiting while political games are being played instead. It is time for the FCC to stand up to the lobbyists and pull the plug on the corrupt political games. Stick to the subject, do your job and move both these proposals forward today. i want the FCC to protect my privacy and to lower my cable bill TODAY.
—Chloe Fessler, Missoula, MT

I don't understand why the FCC is struggling to decide whether to protect consumers or given to the big telecom companies. Comcast should NOT be allowed to sell our private information.
—Lynna Dhanani, New Haven, CT

Regulatory agencies need to regulate for the public good. If they don't, then they have no place in a democracy.
—Eric West, Port Orange, FL

It's time to break-up the cable monopoly.
—Lana Harrison, Newark, DE

We need the "little guy" not just those larger guys.
—Margaret Osbakken, Belvidere, IL

this is important to everyone, to personal choice, and to privacy
—Gerson Debbie Lesser M.D., Bronx, NY

Do this now, you morons!
—Herman Stanford, Poplarville, MS

Are we human beings to the FCC and to Comcast, or animals for slaughter in a factory farm? Comcast will not treat anyone with the respect and dignity the Constitution promotes... You, the FCC must defend us.
—Dan Johnson, Lansing, MI

privacy is the foundation of democracy...one such example is in the voting booth
—Larry Steele, ,

Please protect my privacy. Comcast doesn't have the right to sell my info!
—Wendy Pfile, San Jose, CA

Privacy is paramount in this day and age. Cable companies holding it ransom is indefensible.
—Mr. Bill Merikallio, Aptos, CA

I would really like my privacy protected. There are enough ways to have it hacked, I don't want Comcast giving my information away. Please act and protect
—Marilynn Baldwin, Aberdeen, MD

No robber barons! In any part of the economy!!
—Kim Whitmyre, long beach, CA

You mission should be to support the citizens of this country not those that feed political campaigns with a small portion of there ill gotten gains
—Gary Bechthold, Roseville, CA

Cable has betrayed its mandate. A lower cost is the least you can do to start.
—Tim Harrington, Weston, FL

Once again, Americans need to see Federal regulators working on our behalf, and not looking to line their own pockets when they leave government service for a lucrative industry job.
—Peggy Kenny, Palo Alto, CA

I agree that is time to prptect consumer information and that set top equipment should be optional for consumers to use their own equipment. Part of the famous AT&T settlement in the 1980s allowed customers to buy their own telephones. Shouldn't we be given the same opportunity.
—Paul Lossau, Westchester, IL

I do not think that it is kosher for someone to sell my private information. Honestly, how low can you get! And the cables use this charge to make more money at our expense. This charge should be done away with.
—Wanda Daugherty, Mesquite, TX

To level the power between users and providers.
—Joseph Long, Madison, WI

I'm on a fixed income and need internet and phone service, as my cellphone doesn't properly work in my area.
—Scott Norman Rosenthal, Philadelphia, PA

they already charge for the service. The service requires equipment to operate, so should be included in the service price. tired of being ripped off.
—James Maszczak, Pomona, CA

American citizens are not just markets for giant corporations. We are people. We are voters.
—Dan Parillo, Clifton, NJ

Please follow thru to secure citizens privacy & help low income citizens to have internet/cable access. In many areas of our country, people have to make the choice of food or media. Thank you.
—Sondra Olson, Beaver Dam, WI

The idea that one needs to pester, incessantly poke and prod the regulatory entities that are supposed represent their interests to do just that is both frustrating and ridiculous to me. However since that is the case, I am choosing to taking part of what must be done by giving my support on this particular issue.
—Carlos Hudson-Bey, Cleveland, OH

We need our privacy. Everyone is worried about Government intrusion, I'm more worried about corporations and private entities selling our privat information. It's just not rite.
—Carol Woodruff, Boonton, NJ

I cannot get television without cable or satellite dish, but I am tired of paying for mostly advertisements. I do not think that $150 per month is reasonable for me to pay.
—Claudia Gaisford, Cambria, CA

Consumers like myself care very much about our privacy. You must follow through on standing with us and not mega corporations like Comcast. Lets work together on lowering cable-TV bills and end monthly set-top rental fees.
—Matthew Jerauld, Binghamton, NY

fixed income and disabled.....
—Joanne Earl, Mannsville, NY

Comcast just raised my rate $20 and there's nothing I can do about it!
—Joanne Hunter, Quincy, MA

I had to cut my cable because I couldn't afford it but there are no other options where I live. I rent and am low income. I can't get most channels over the air due to poor reception.
—Kathy Watkins, Cambridge, MA

This is just like the phone company when it USED to be the ONLY place to RENT a phone... No DIfference. Also, PRIVACY is important in the age of all this Identity Theft.
—Jay Silverman, Boca Raton, FL

do I really have to explain to the FCC why this is important. As it is we have no choices in our cable companies and we are all over charged!. At least give us the opportunity to save some money by not having to pay for a box for each TV! I got rid of cable in protest.
—Lisa Rufo, Sarasota, FL

We are forced to give our personal information, like our SSN, to Comcast. When we complain that it's extremely bad to add those to another company's database, and let so many employees potentially have access to them, we are told that the system is setup that way for good reasons and that they are very careful. We have to release other personal information to Comcast, the type that an identity thief wants. IF Comcast is careful and has zero dishonest people able to access the information, it's USELESS IF they are permitted to sell ANY of it.
—Deborah Cunningham, Baltimore, MD

Why should Comcast have a monopoly on the set-top boxes. I don't really trust Comcast to set reasonable prices on the boxes. Why can't this be competitive? Also, I do not want Comcast to sell my private information. Why should they be given that benefit at my expense. Please do not allow that.
—Bob Skinner, Novato, CA

Let freedom ring!
—Anne L Pierce, Haiku, HI

We need open markets.
—Jeff Stookey, Portland, OR

You are morally obligated to keep my information private. We are retirees who are not affluent. My husband retired from the US Navy. After that we both taught school. Anything that can lower our bills would be helpful.
—Priscilla Kinnick, Stillwater, OK

Beside the obvious reasons of lowered costs to consumers, stand up and prove you are not controlled by lobbyists!
—Carolyn C Martin, Litchfield, CT

Protecting my information is very important to me. I hate wasting my time deleting emails that have no relevance to me or my life.
—Erica Wendel-Oglesby, Placitas, NM

This is important to me as I am a single working person. I want my privacy protected; I want my cable bill lowered. I want the FCC to work for and protect the consumers rather than the big companies.
—Sharon J Smith, Evansville, IN

There is little or no competition in the cable industry and I strongly believe that it's about time we got it. The prices are so high I've had to scale back my service or not be able to pay for it at all. Please help.
—Richard Gentile, Massapequa Park, NY

EVERYTHING IS GOING UP ==PLEASE HELP ME AND PROTECT MY RELAXING MIND RELAXER !!
—Saundra Crowell, Smithtown, NY

no accountability, no credibility,I boycott the terrorists mouthpiece!!!
—Gene Webb, Bodfish, CA

This is important because we, as a capitalist society, should be striving for pro-consumer ideals. We should not allow corporate lobbyists to facilitate the monopolization of technologies.
—Spencer Spiegelman, ,

Because it's the right thing to do
—James Boissonnault, Alexandria, VA

I am sick and tired of our corporate controlled government.
—Nancy Woolley, Stoughton, MA

How do I hate Comcast? Oh, let me count the ways. America has become no more than a clearinghouse for greed. Seniors like me, who've worked their entire lifetimes in engaging, intelligent and worthwhile industries are very often not paid in a commensurate manner. I am forced to pay for Comcast, even though I don't want it or need it. I have been doing very well with a cell phone, thanks. I want access to the internet for the information that is offered, but little else. Movies? Pffftt. Game shows? Feh.
—Taylor Teegarden, Martinez, CA

It's important to have affordable and private access. We look to you as having the integrity to work on behalf of the people first... not the Corporations.
—Lee Sanford, Burnsville, MN

internet should be a utility and not a service, as everything is done virtually these days.
—Tom Mills, SALT LAKE CITY, UT

If you let cable companies push you around I'll cry :(
—Hagi Elghahuagi, Calgary,

I've been ripped off for years, when do I get a brake! Whom works for the public. My first complaint to my congressmen. I was paying $60 a month and now its $240. Thanks for nothing.
—John R. Storms, Auburn, MA

No mega mergers! Time Warner is already bad enough solo!
—Jim Corriere, Brawley, CA

First you seem to just LET the internet providers buy other internet providers and become a BIGGER and more powerful internet provider that can a LOT more to get more profits and a greater power to just do what they want even if it is NOT for the interests of their customers. Also YOU seem to want to just LET our LIAR-in-CHIEF get his GRUBBY HANDS on the security of the internet and then can SENSOR what people enter onto the internet that he does NOT LIKE.
—Donald Mccormick, Fairview, OR

I am concerned about privacy (No more Windows 10!) and it is pathetic that Comcast stoops so low to sell customers private information.Something needs done about it NOW!
—Keith Smith, Bulan, KY

My Comcast bill is over $100 a month and I have no alternatives. They also pester you about billing constantly.
—nora lapin, San Francisco, CA

The FCC needs to do the right thing and not sell informatuon. This is obviously a scam for cable companies to make more money, and at our expense.
—Tom Steinmetz, Brecksville, OH

For too many Americans cable is the only way they can access the internet which is no longer a luxury but necessity.
—Carole Plourde, Amesbury, MA

I'm stuck in a monopoly that leverages arbitrary data caps at unrealisticly low levels, hedging their customers who have no other option for broadband. The cost are outrageous just for the connection, let alone the additional cost resulting from the data caps. You need to step in and fix these issues.
—Joseph Testerman, Conowingo, MD

I hate Comcast!!!
—Billy Angus, Hamilton, MT

Cable companies are out of control. Worst customer service on the planet.
—Peggy Alt, Philmont, NY

Companies like Comcast will continue to suck all they can out of the public until someone with authority has the common sense and courage to say no to them. Please say no, now.
—John Gunn, Coronado, CA

PRIVACY
—MICHELE wn DA SANDERSON, Walnut Creek, CA

Dear Chairman Wheeler The FCC is an agency that supports the greater good not the interests of the few. PLEASE ACT ACCORDINGLY
—Ralph Dale Long, Eureka Springs, AR

I don't yet have cable because I CAN'T AFFORD IT.
—Sherrill Futrell, Davis, CA

Keep the Net Neutrality alive.
—Joshua Arnejo, ,

Pleases protect our privacy and lower our cable bill.
—Susan Selbin, Albuquerque, NM

I'm an 80 year old single man. I am struggling to survive on social security on a $ 914 per month benefit! Affording cable is becoming beyond my reach, and the bills continue to increase, as the service gets worse! Something needs to be done to rein in crooked business practices by corporations like Comcast!
—Joseph Spiezio, Clearlake, CA

Just like the phone companies, big cable needs to be restricted to providing service not hardware. This will allow end users more control over their costs and open the hardware to improved capability.
—Dave Newman, Brea, CA

Cable and Satellite providers keep gouging consumers by increasing rates while removing channels like C-Span3, Al Jazeera America, FreeSpeechTV and other channels serving the public interest substituting reality tv shows that only the lowest IQ individuals could ever want to watch.
—Robert Scott, Mesa, AZ

Protect all US Human Citizens from prices which have become way to high for far to many citizen's to afford.
—Caroline Miller, St Petersburg, FL

Personal privacy has never been so important as it is today and it seems every day a new way to invade it is invented. I feel no vendor should have the right to sell the personal information of its customers without their consent.
—Matthew W Gebarski, MADISON, WI

You are a government agency, and should be acting for the people.
—Richard Pasichnyk, Eugene, OR

It is important that my privacy is protected. Cable bills are too high for most people.
—Diana Brunswig-Bosso, Arnold, MO

Please continue to fight for us!
—Darren Curl, Castle Rock, CO

Because cable needs to be more competitive with other viewing options, not less competitive. Higher cable and satellite prices will drive consumers away from these viewing options. Lowering cable prices keeps screen viewing competitive. Competition is the key to the survival of the industry, regardless of political opinion or affiliations. It's about consumer interest and choice, which is the priority of this matter.
—Lorna Immel, Otley, IA

Extortion is illegal.
—Ken Box, Austin, TX

How about giving the little guy a break once in a while. Oh,that's not the way things are done on the elitist beltway.
—mike Streber, De Forest, WI

We already pay huge amounts and then they charge more for the boxes and that should be stopped
—Nancy Bates, Lakeland, FL

Please stop Comcast from selling my private information without my consent, and to lower my cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on the set-top boxes I am forced to rent each month. Thank you for your help in these matters.
—Patrick Fox, Lake Mary, FL

My cable television is my window to the information I need on a daily basis, while living on disability. Yet, even while the cable companies profit margins are extremely high, they continue to stick us with increases that help to boost the salaries of their CEOs and other high ranking employees' pockets.
—Deborah Gostin, San Diego, CA

So tired or Comcast squeezing us for more and more money because they can. I have no other option where I am. Broadband internet and cable should be treated as a utility.
—Anne Griffin-Lewin, Minneapolis, MN

You work for the people and I fail to see how delaying action on these measures benefits those people. Please do your job.
—Gary M. Gibson, Sackets Harbor, NY

Tom, if you're going out anyway, go out with a bang and fix things for the PEOPLE! FUCK THE CORPORATIONS!
—Mr. Chris Calvert, Philadelphia, PA

This is important because the promise of lower cable rates was a complete lie and the Cable companies are gouging consumers threatening to slow down our internet access in order to generate higher revenues and disrespecting the concept of privacy. Imagine a cable bill of more than $125 per month for television? It's crap plain and simple.
—Mike Andrewjeski, San Francisco, CA

We need to have some competition. This is undemocratic . We used to have laws against this. Laws against monopoly.
—Ann Stockdale, Gig Harbor, WA

Some people go around quacking away about "free market capitalism", then do everything they can to stifle it.
—Mike Larkin, Schnecksville, PA

Privacy is essential in a free nation. And monopolies of any kind are destructive to free enterprise.
—e Kadera Kadera, Warrenville, IL

I Resent the idea of Comcast selling my private information without my consent. The concept of them making more money on my account is morally wrong. I also want to purchase my set-top box! A one time fair market fee is appropriate. I'm disgusted with the company and cannot understand why the FCC, allows this to continue. By the way, who do they represent and who are they supposed to represent?
—Sherry Price, Los Angeles, CA

Privacy is supposed to be guaranteed under the US Constitution - that little clause about warrants required for searches of one's "papers". Electronic communications are "papers" in this sense.
—Ed Paski, Blaine, WA

Seniors on fixed incomes can't keep paying high costs like this.
—Mike Gaddis, Highlands Ranch, CO

I am poor.
—Henry M., Hamilton, NJ

My privacy is not negated by the fact that I have purchased a service. The idea is absurd. I am paying for a service, not granting information access or rights for others profit.
—Laura st.Clai, Kerrville, TX

Forget cable: I don't watch TV and my wife is on the bird. But it is outrageous that the anti-government party is trying to govern with an iron fist, socializing costs and misery and privatizing profit.
—Scott A. Weir, Durham, NC

Because our privacy should be first and foremost of your goals to preserve and protect.
—James Dawson, Davis, CA

Break the monopoly and open up our cable to other hardware providers. And yes, my privacy is of utmost importance to me.
—David Paul, turlock, CA

Please protect our private and make our cable bill lower, Now. Isn't that what you would want?
—Judith Arnold, Shelbyville, KY

Comcast has a profit incentive to make sure that we cannot install our own modems in lieu of renting theirs. This is a vertical monopoly and should be illegal.
—Robert James, Fern Park, FL

I want the FCC to work on these rules.
—Aimee Polekoff, Lansdale, PA

I see the same issue with my ISP and their rental only modem to access the internet (ATT uverse) we should have the option to purchase not rent
—Allan Carroll, Lake City, FL

Democracy is dependent on a well informed public. Monopolies, in particular of the telecommunication industry, threaten the publics ability to stay informed.
—Gary Pierson, auburn, WA

The public deserves some kind of control over their internet. And as a utility, corporate control over equipment is no longer an option. Please chose a legacy of progression and give consumers their independence. Thank you!
—Vicki Barnes, Saint Paul, MN

Please don't let them win ! You helped us before, please don't stop now... Thank you, Mr Wheeler
—Lee Stafford, Bellevue, WA

I am a retired person living on Social Security. Please help me by reducing TV costs (also millions of others). Thanks
—Larry G Law, Everett, WA

Big Cable's anti-consumer/pro-monopoly campaign has got to be stopped. Now.
—Thom Fistner, Fountain Hill, PA

I am on a fixed income and cable bills are getting too expensive
—James Beckerson, ,

My cable service is slow and spotty. Despite complaints, there is no improvement is service. Competition is best
—James Ridlon Jr, New Woodstock, NY

What I think of Comcast isn't printable. Wish I had another choice, but I don't.
—Judith Gordon, Evans, GA

Please stop giving in to the inscrutable tactics of Washington government paid by big business special interests. Protect the rights of consumers and general public. Do what's right!
—Thomas McLaren, Fairview, PA

Simply stated? By rejecting true net neutrality, we are moving one step closer to a stratified society that will make the British class system look like amateur hour. Do the right thing!
—John Harkins, Old Greenwich, CT

Private data is private, I shouldn't have to jump through hoops to keep it that way. Also I shouldn't be forced to rent anything if I have the funds to buy it out right.
—Sean Hankins, Mc Gregor, TX

Injustice saturates the soil of this nation for the racists and the ruling class have distorted the narrative and the public dialog. It is fundamental if there is to be a future that that end. Net neutrality is but one essential for the free flow of dialog. As it is the public's airwaves, which private corporations profit from at no charge, must be re-regulated with a Fairness Doctrine. The damage done since its removal to maximize profits for the media owners may be irreparable but it is still worth the try.
—Dale Lehman, Chicago, IL

Selling customer's private info w/o their consent and also artificially high monopolistic prices on set boxes is wrong and unfair to the consumer. Please take action now to change these practices! Thank you.
—Thomas Fura, Queen Creek, AZ

I am sick of corporate GREED determining everything in our society. The FCC should be protecting consumers.
—K Penn, Clinton, WA

Please stop this appearance of cash-n-carry government and work to limit the power of big corps like Comcast These mega-corporations are a threat to democracy!
—David Atkin, Willington, CT

It would be more shameful to delay action on the bill for the benefit of big industry, than to act now for the benefit of the people!!
—Thomas Wahl, Collegeville, MN

Because I have two of those set-top boxes, get rid of the clutter.
—Nigel Thornell, Roseburg, OR

Lowering cable bills would be nice for me in a few years when I can't be so physically active. Couldn't afford it now anyway and don't see that possibility in the future. As for privacy, selling personal information without consent is simply unacceptable.
—Carol Ashley, Park Rapids, MN

You need to act - end the monopoly
—Samuel Durkin, Fairfield, CA

Selling (and profiting from) consumers' private information is against the fact that the information is PRIVATE and consumers should have a say in how it is used. Monopolies are virtually ALWAYS bad. This one surely is costing consumers EVERY MONTH. Please ACT on moving these measures forward. Thank you, Tom Knight
—Thomas E Knight, Hopkinton, MA

Private information should remain private, not sold for profit. Obviously consumers need choices of program viewing. Currently the customer doesn't necessarily have access to their favorite programs without including unwanted listings. Prices should be varied according to personal choice. Fees sneak in rising rather quickly. Cable bills should be reduced. Keep information confidential and charges at a reasonable stage.
—Joanne La Barre, Norfolk, NY

I need the safety and integrity of my privacy.

Mr Rosenworcel, Sir take a step Back. Recall who you are, what you wanted as a young boy. You are in the playground being bullied and FEAR is all you have to lose. Step into that Fear and be the man you dreamed of being. "The only thing we have to fera is fear itself" Let these wise worfs guife you now. Step into Fear,take the TRUE path and move goteeard. We ate counting on you. Sincerely NickiLee Greenwalt
—NickiLee Greenwalt, st paul, MN

It should not even be a question as to whether or not Comcast should be allowed to sell customer data without consent. Any sensible person already realizes this is illegal. Also, allowing actual competition in which set top box you use is an important step in having actual competition in the cable TV industry. One day, we could even possibly have competition in service providers instead of regional monopolies.
—Benjamin Burden, Leitchfield, KY

We pay well over $100 so the low end of cable, without any premium channels; that is exorbitant, especially when many channels are nothing but advertising. The same company can provide the same service to new subscribers for less than half of what we are paying. That is disgusting.
—Elizabeth and Terrence S. McCloskey, LaPorte, IN

The cable industry controls almost all the communication I do. We need protection from it.

—David Klinke, Airmont, NY

I'm tired of paying more and more to get less and less. Comcast is a virtual monopoly in this area, so it makes perfect sense that they should be carefully regulated as one. Tampering with user information and charging outrageous rental costs for their equipment may help to further enlarge their CEO compensation packages, but it really hurts those of us who are on a fixed income.
—George G. Stradtman Jr., Elkins Park, PA

Do your job, don't buckle to industry pressure from Congress.
—Sandra Rasich, Santa Fe, NM

Set top boxes are just another form of bill padding for the cable companies. Congress has been doing almost anything they can to give the cable companies more control over individuals and other companies. Mostly by inaction but also by action. Lets open up the system and stop working toward a Ma Bell type of monopoly situation. Many of us in smaller communities have no viable options.
—Timothy K Boughner, Dodge City, KS

I feel that my privacy SHOULD NOT be "for sale to the highest bidder"!! I ALSO feel that consumers like ME should be able to decide WHICH Cable boxes & receivers I wish to use to access Cable!!!

Dear FCC: I am outrages about Comcast pressuring Wheeler to resign right after the election and stalling the renomination of Commissioner Jessica Rosenworcel. Please act protect my privacy & lower your cable bill TODAY.
—John P Mabey, Berkeley, CA

do it for the people. me, i don't have cable. i was once a comcast subscriber. my experience with comcast was so bad, i cancelled my cable, and vowed never to give them another penny. stand up to them.
—Mr. Dave McSPARRRAN, LOS ANGELES, CA

I hate the way Comcast forces me to pay exhorbitant amounts of money for television and Internet service. TV used to be free and no longer is--I cannot get a TV signal anymore without cable. And Internet is really more like a utility than a luxury. We need it to function in our society these days yet there is no competition where I live do we have no choice. Anything the Federal government can do do lessen the power of telecommunications giants like Comcast over consumers is a just use of government. Government should protect people rather than large corporations.
—Wendy Schon, Madison, CT

Because privacy is big, and neither the NSA (which of course you don't control) NOR private companies should have the rights to sell my information to the highest bidder. Out the blue my bill went from $112 to $176. Think what it does to the average American family, not senators, congress members or commissioners that make much more per month than the average American family $35.000/per year. Do something about it! Cable companies are stealing our monthly payment. Allow local governments to take charge of the Internet by making it a utility!
—Graciela Huth, Los Angeles, CA

Every month our Comcast cable/telephone bill goes up-- maybe just by pennies, but sometimes by a few dollars.

Please don't allow Comcast or any of the other IP/cable company to sell our personal information to others without our consent. The only reason they have our personal information is because we were required to provide it in order to get cable, satellite or IP. That's what monopolies are allowed to do to us, because they own certain territories and no one else can offer the same services in their designated territory. In Europe and the UK there are no territories and customers have the ability to pick and choose the most cost effective and fastest service they want. Because of these monopolies, I can only get 450kb of service and have been told they will NEVER provide anything else for us. This is why competition and no monopolies are so important. Pricing and service would be much cheaper and better with competition. Set top boxes should not be monopolized our choices and the set top boxes we are forced to rent by the month, have not been changed since we were forced to give up our analog signals because digital was supposed to be so much better. Digital is not better and cannot go up and down and around like analog can. If we were going to be forced to accept digital, the law should have been written to make it mandatory that the signals went just as far as analog does so we could still have the choice of using our antennas to receive free TV. The set top boxes we rent are terrible, so don't continue to force them on us. Thank you for your kind consideration and please protect us.
—Joyce Hansen, Ferryville, WI

PROTECTING OUR PRIVACY AND LOWERING OUR CABLE BILL TODAY IS THE RIGHT, FAIR, JUST, HUMANE AND HEALTHY ACTION TO TAKE, NOW.
—Mr. Mary Frank Ann and Graffagnino, TUCSON, AZ

1)I'm on a fixed income and Comcast keeps raising rates. Have reduced to most basic of service, but without competition Comcast prices will price me out of access to the internet or basic TV. 2) About a year ago my email was hacked. I am very cautious about personal information. When companies like Comcast sell personal information chances of identity theft grow expotentially. Please require Comcast to behave responsibly with customer personal information.

—Roy B Tansill, Corpus Christi, TX

It is probably in the big ISPs' best interest that you help keep consumer costs down. Otherwise many more consumers will do what we (and others) have done: cancel cable TV service and use other devices to get most of what we want at a one-time cost.
—Stephen Vandivere, Centreville, VA

The cable companies are raking in money with both hands. They get our monthly fees, and then they get more revenue from the companies who run the commercials.

The FCC is supposed to support and protect CONSUMERS, you know THE CITIZENS, from corporations! So your job!! I want to pay less for cable. More importantly, I want my information to remain private. No corporation, no business, no person should be allowed to share anything of mine without my WRITTEN consent!
—Patricia Araujo, Burlington, VT

Tired of a monopoly's over pricing and bad customer service.
—Robert Beggs, Akron, OH

Cable companies take advantage of their monopoly status to ignore customers needs and do whatever they want to. They know that their customers have now where else to go. Please protect cable customers rights.
—Theo B. Giesy, Norfolk, VA

I pay $73.98 for around a quarter of download speed promised & advertised. They informed me personally (as a matter of policy) the advertised speed was "simply was not available" to me but they refused to consider lowering our cost just because they don't have to. Tough luck. "Sue us." We pay the same cost others pay for full download speeds and get a quarter! This is in your face fraud and has got to change. They lied in advertising and lied about thier right to charge for services not rendered. We have no other competition..only game in town. Just exactly what is it that the FCC does? Is it not your job to ensure competition and lower costs? Apparently we pay the FCC to do exactly what our cable internet provider does...charging us for service we do not get. Is it just because you can?
—Nancy Currah, Casper, WY

This is for ALL the people!
—Paul Saint, Apopka, FL

Stop playing games and enforce the rules that protect us consumers who are paying ever-increasing prices for substandard services!
—Ms. Carol Ortiz, Montgomery, TX

Enforce the rules!!! And apply these rules to everybody, No one should be able to split hairs on the specifics. FCC rules have been in existence since 1934 and worked fine when enforced. So if a new rule is needed, then old rule will no longer apply and should be disposed of completely. If the FCC enforce thoses as well as you have in the past then I vote to leave them just as they are. Personally I believe they haven't enforced past rules efficiently enough to warrant any new variation of them. My take is we all wouldn't be where we are right now if those rules were stringently enforced when they should have been not after the fact like they have been. EAS has been abusing rules set forth for years and nothing has ever been done about them, NSA or no NSA! Rules are rules!!! I've been bombarded by at minimum 7 test broadcasts a month, the rules refer to a least 4 are permitted when no emergency exists. That's all I going to say on this.

Cable companies have a virtual monopoly in the areas that they cover and the equipment needed to receive the signals. This creates autocratic "fiefdoms" that suck the money from the pockets of millions of Americans. AND Comcast uses your data to create a further revenue source for themselves WITHOUT asking or telling you about their schemes.
—Sarah Bellem, Felton, CA

Because the FCC should be about helping consumers, protecting our rights instead kowtowing to the Congressional whores for the cable industry who are not looking out for consumers & how Jessica Rosenworcel leaving instead of Tom Wheeler?
—L Parker, Everett, WA

1 - It's high time for regulating agencies, like the FCC, to step up and defend the consumer-public you are supposed to represent. Corporate trafficking of personal information is rampant. Only agencies like yours have the power to safeguard our privacy. 2 - The archaic equipment-monopoly wielded by cable providers is nothing more than a replay of the stranglehold once enjoyed by the phone cartels. Like "Ma Bell," it's time to bust up the Big Cable's cabal. It is YOUR DUTY (NOT your prerogative) to defend the interests of the public (NOT Big Cable) on both these issues. Only cowardice would motivate any attempt to "run out the clock" on the current administration, to avoid your duty. Only cowardice would explain inaction.

We should have access to cable boxes on the free market. There's no reason for proprietary hardware that we have to rent on top of an already high cable bill that comes with very limited choices of channel packages.
—Joseph J. Pollock, Buffalo, NY

I am a long-time Comcast subscriber and Comcast stockholder. The company should be a good corporate citizen: They should not sell customer information without permission. The internet is the greatest invention in human history, a fount of--and the very sum of all--knowledge. More than anything else, it has the power to promote compassion, end strife, and raise the standard of living for everyone. As such, restricting access through price gouging is at best extortion, and at worst outright class warfare against those most desperately in need of education and empowerment; preventing them from "pulling one up by their bootstraps", as the saying goes. Reselling private information the company itself has no right to should not even bear elucidation in its condemnation.

I can no longer afford cable. Eliminating the monthly charges for set-top boxes would lower my bill and perhaps allow me to reinstate my cable service. The cable companies are taking advantage of consumers and that should not be allowed.

Comcast is not worthy of the power it is attempting to consolidate - not by virtue of "service", or "value", or any other metric. It is effectively a monopoly, and a big, slow, maddeningly incompetent, high-handed and GREEDY one, at that. At every turn the company makes moves that are designed to disempower, frustrate and cheat its customers. (What is more, along with Time-Warner Cable, I see Comcast, through its own respective cable news organ, as largely responsible for having raised Donald Trump to invincibility in the Republican nomination contest, as well as deliberately having interfered in the counterpart process within the Democratic Party.) In short, the company is a monster, like a too-big-to-fail bank, and needs to be cut down to size. In the very near future, we as a nation will either, with the aid of powerfully liberating technological innovations, be embarking on a new phase of public discourse and participatory democracy that will spark desperately needed changes in our own country and the whole world, or, having been denied the liberty to act that is nearly in our grasp, we will find ourselves sinking into a dark night of Oligarchy that will stymie the people's noblest efforts to effect solutions to the massive economic, social and environmental problems now besetting us all. I fervently believe that your decision in the present matter could impinge mightily on the direction that we and the rest of the world will take. I do not believe at all that I am overstating the matter. Please: Rise to meet your destiny; make the mark on history that you'll be proud to have made.

—Ellen B Wilhite, BETHESDA, MD

My privacy is being eroded more every day, and since my largest bill next to my rent is to Comcast, I expect them not to share my information with anyone. And it's long past time our bills are lowered! Our power and gas are just as important as our keeping abreast of what's happening in the world, but they aren't half as much as what Comcast is. Please help us and get this changed. Thank you!

Information Age means that anyone can SELL your information, WITHOUT YOUR CONSENT? That sounds like a violation of the Fourth Admendment. A well-regulated monopoly has proven useful, eg: USPS, telephone (although AT-T break-up), and some utilities - water, sewer. Lowering MY cable bill would be 'nice', but having the 'option' to disconnect would lower it dramatically. Thanks for the FCC!

James K Hadcroft here.
—James K Hadcroft, N. Falmouth, MA

Because I believe that America, while it is doing an absolutely wretched job of it, truly was founded on the principles of equality, freedom, and justice. What Comcast and companies like it are doing spits on all three of those. Equality is thrown out the window by the disgusting, grosse overreach of a corporation, which shows quite clearly that those who are not inherently wealthy have no choice and no voice because Comcast and other corporations simply have more money and therefore more clout. Freedom is absolutely decimated when consumers have no say so in where their private information is going or in how badly they're being price gouged because in many areas, Comcast has monopolize the cable-TV market. And finally, the right to privacy is so inherent in our constitutional laws that even law enforcement agencies must have a warrant before searching your home. It is so inherent that psychologists are allowed to withhold information about patients, even ones who are budding sex offenders, rapists, and murderers, so long as that patient doesn't state or strongly imply they're going to commit a crime. Doctors do not even have to provide information to a SPOUSE, child, parent, or sibling if a patient has asked them not to or (in all cases but the spouse), has not consented to have them given information in the first place. So why is it acceptable for big corporations to pass around sensitive information about their clients, exchanging it as if it were THEIR currency for them to play and bargain with, with no repercussions? It is unacceptable and it needs to stop. I want a country where people matter more than money. It's thay simple.

Comcast is one of the worst companies I have ever dealt with in my life. Constantly raising prices, luring me to sign a contract with them and then they change what their offering in the contract and I have no say. We shouldn't have to sign contracts with them to get lower bills. And the bills are only lower temporarily. The price increases after a few months. Comcast is run by a bunch of con men.

With health insurance costing us mmore than twice our house payment with 5 acres of land, it would be nice to save a couple dollars somewhere to help us afford insurance. Between me and my wife, our health insurance will be over $1,000 per month besides our out of pocket expense for co-pays and prescriptions. You guys are killing us by letting everyone overcharge us. It's just pure greed run amuck.
—Dale Wynn, Westmoreland, TN

My privacy is important to me and because I use Comcast for not only e-mail and cablevision but also as my internet service provider, the potential for Comcast to abuse my privacy is far too large. Please stand up to Comcast and protect American consumers' privacy!
—Mrs. Randy Russell, Fremont, CA

No cable company, and especially the unaccountable corporate giant Comcast, should be given the green light to sell subscribers' private information without their consent. I need you to protect me from this company's efforts to legally extort people's private information, and to stop their monopoly of the cable industry. Further delay is not acceptable -- pease get this done promptly.
—Sigrid Asmus, Seattle, WA

I want to be sure that FCC people are hired to work for us the public,not the people who own the businesses
—Elaine Leach, Nisswa, MN

Private information about Comcast's customers should not be transformed into public information without the consent of individual customers. The no-choice set-top box rental monopoly should end - customer choice should rule here.
—John Gittins, North Brookfield, MA

How is it even a question that Comcast should be able to sell my private information without my permission? Because I subscribe to their service am I to understand that they own my privacy? That is ridiculous! Only a corrupt system could even imagine thinking this is OK. I reject this premise. Comcast has NO RIGHT to sell my private information. And the FCC should make certain that they don't do it. The FCC should pass immediately Chairman Wheeler's proposal that stops Comcast and others from selling customers' private information without their consent. Stop stalling and stop playing games. Pass this resolution today! The FCC has already heard from tens of thousands of citizens that we want strong pro-consumer, common-sense policies. Citizens have made that abundantly clear over these past couple years. Yet Republicans in Congress keep trying to derail progress and protections and keep trying to make the FCC ineffective. The FCC must take a stand and not lose site of their purpose for existence and act only in the public's best interest. Surely protecting individual's privacy should be at the top of the list. I'd also like to urge the FCC to adopt the resolution to end the monopoly on set-top boxes. There are better models available than what the cable companies force us to rent from them and there is absolutely no justification for the monopoly and the price-fixing. End the monopoly and allow competition for consumer choices in set-top boxes. We will not only get better set-top boxes, but we will also see our cable bills get less expensive. Please end the unnecessary monopoly now.

Please keep my private information private. Cable bills are ridiculously high & every 6 months they go up. Please help lower my bill by eliminating my having to rent a set top box for each TV in my house from my cable company.
—Ken Stacey, Hudson, MA

I am retired on a fixed income. I have had no cola for two years now. Prices are going up on food, phone, utilities, home taxes, you name it. I am a disabled Vet so I don't have medical expense except for a few things but I am drowning with all the new expenses. I have to pay more for medicare (which I don't need). I have to pay 72.00 for cable which I am thinking of dropping this year. My phone bill is 62.00, utilities are going up. Gas is down but I don't drive much. It costs $100.00 every time a plumber comes to your house. They wanted 200.00 to mow my lawn the other day, so I refused. I am mowing it at 66yrs old. Everyone sends you e-mails so you can send them money (money to expand social security, money because the system is now money driven not vote driven). I am going to have to go back to work or not have any entertainment in the house. I like to stay informed about politics, but I guess I can use the internet as long as it stays free (Thank You Chairman Wheeler!!!) That is one thing I was glad to see passed! Please help the working and retired being squeezed by the neck by higher prices and stagnent wages. As a woman, I did not get a high a salary as a man, I have less social security. I am still paying my mtg and have bills. Credit cards can charge 24% interest (should be illegal as usury) and we will never get out of our student debt. Congress is not doing it's job, greed has taken over. Due to citizen's united and gerrymandering, they could care less about our vote, they are in safe districts. So screw us! Please help us, we shouldn't have to pay close to 100 a month for cable. Most of the channels they offer, I don't watch, we can't pick just he one's we want. Believe it or not, I am paying 72.00 for the starter plan. The cheapest plan they have. Television used to be free, it still should be free. They have hijacked the system. Thank you for considering my side, I hope you listen to your conscience as you did when you sided with us on the internet. Thank You!
—Marie Fuentes, Albuquerque, NM

Please stand up for and adopt Chairman Wheeler's proposals to (1) stop Comcast from selling users' private information and (2) Insist on ending Comcast's monopoly on set-top boxes for Cable-TV so that our cable bills will be reduced. It would be such a great day if you took action to support the public interest rather than big corporations. The quality of our democracy hangs in the balance when it comes to communication. Please move forward on Chairman Wheeler's proposals. Time is of the essence because the Obama administration ends in less than six months.

I've been working in tech for nearly 30 years, and have been on the internet since the mid 80's. It is now part of the fabric of our modern lives - a delivery device for communications, entertainment, work, health, and safety. We need to assure it is not used against us, or held hostage for a price. It can make or break your ability to earn a living, save a life, keep communications available to everyone regardless of circumstance or ability to pay. Please keep the connections available to all. It's really that important.
—Susan Norton, Salem, OH

This is a time of unprecedented abuse of the system. Large and incumbent cable companies are not only not competing - but making record profits and allowing paid infrastructure to rot. In this "information era", to allow such crucial parts of the infrastructure of this country crumble is indicative of their motive. These companies are neither stewards of the people, nor of the nation as a whole - they need to be regulated.

—Robn Diekow, Sequim, WA

Having had personal experience of just how greedy and unsupportive Comcast is with it's customers (victims?), I humbly ask that the FCC NOT BOW DOWN to bullying from sleezebags like this. This "great nation" needs to stop selling out it's citizen's basic needs to support exploitation for profit PERIOD. Didn't we have to learn to behave at some point in our lives, or did we just go on misbehaving till there was no one left that we had not screwed over? Hmmmmmm
—Gary Di Donato, Olympia, WA

while technology improved, set-top boxes have not. In that same vein, economies of scale for cable companies are not sufficiently passing the savings on down to to the consumer. In-fact, we are bumped into higher internet speeds and then charged for the 'privilege.'
—Matthew Aaron Foster, fpo, AZ

No company should be permitted to monopolize an industry. No utility company should PROFIT from offering up our PRIVATE information.
—Teresa Montilio, Jamaica Plain, MA

I am a Comcast subscriber, and my rates for below-basic economy cable just went up AGAIN. It's time to stop the monopoly!
—James Knoble, Bainbridge Island, WA

Comcast should have no right to artificially boost its revenue streams by exploiting its customers instead of long-term investment.
—Matthew Kuzava, Takoma Park, MD

Make this happen so that the consumer is protected against unfair corporate greed.
—Mark Buck, Lebanon, NH

I live in an area where digital over the air television (DTV) leaves me with only ONE channel and the station doesn't broadcast news, community or emergency information like weather. The price of cable is making it easy to go without and many of the elderly in my neighborhood will go without it due to the sheer economics. It's time to cut the monopoly nonsense and make these utilities affordable for more than the rich!
—Robert Martin, Seymour, CT

Are you going to let Comcast be a monopoly?? They are now poised to take over tim Warner cable my company now and my bill is already to high, WTF are you going to do?? Remember MA BELL???? You scumbags stopped that years ago but now you let these bastards do to the public anything they want and you allow it!!!!!! Stop the monopolies now!!! We will just not watch the flipping tv then not a problem!!! Then what will the scumbags do when no one wants their tv bullshit????
—Dee Noblett, Mechanicville, NY

Please support the individual citizen over the corporation and lobbyists.
—Marcia Kane, Hendersonvile, NC

So much for efficiency in government. I guess those who get donations from the cable industry consider the cable industry as more important than the average user. Already paying for the service but they still want to pimp out the personal information to increase their profits. I guess this version of corporate usery is to be defended against the rights of people who have already paid for the service.
—Sheila Newtown, DePeyster, NY

Comcast is a monopoly in most markets and is ripping off customers. If you're not going to nationalize what ought to be a public utility, then at least you should regulate it so that it actually serves the public interest, instead of being a parasite sucking money from citizens while corrupting our democracy.
—William R. Singer, Portland, OR

Privacy is a human right. And affordable access to communications--which today means the Internet--is crucial to the health of our democracy and economy.
—John Clay, Minneapolis, MN

For what I pay each month for the set top box, I could have bought one 50 times over. I also think it is horrible to sacrifice personal information just to get service. It feels like extortion since we all need an internet connection these days.
—Valerie Clark, Needham, MA

If I have to explain why monopolies are bad...
—Meghan Coffee, Vienna, VA

Access to information is crucial to all of us. Keeping it affordable is your job. Utilizing it is ours. Do your job and I'll do mine.
—Virginia Brown-Nolan, Silver Spring, MD

I am a retired 78 year old depending on Social Security which did not get an increase this year. I can not afford higher TV bills. I watch a lot of TV because I am on oxygen 24 hours a day with a lung problem called IPF. I never smoked and yet I got a lung problem that will kill me in a short time.
—Dennis Radcliff, Osceola, WI

Please protect the American public from unfair business practices. Protect my privacy (business should not be allowed to sell my personal data -- that's my right). Please help lower my cable bill which is very expensive; it costs over $1,200 per year.
—Christy Fusco, Richeyville, PA

Comcast keeps coming up with new charges to add to our bills, but there isn't another choice of provider in most areas. We are now charged for sports channel we never watch, have a broadcast channel fee, and various other fees. Their updated equipment can track us even more closely, which helps in selling our private information. Please put a stop to these infringements on our rights.
—Rita Horton, Lake Wales, FL

It is a really important issue that affects the whole country and its economy (not just the cable providers)
—Michel LEBAS, Seattle, WA

Big corporations should have less influence on our lives, and they must not be allowed to gouge us for what have become virtual necessities today.
—Archie Palmer, Caldwell, NJ

The public is counting on you. Please do the right thing - protect the public!
—Maria Gerber, Catskill, NY

How do you continue to allow a monopoly like this? The FCC is supposed to work for the good of the general public, not the good of corporations. They have zero incentive to make cable boxes that work, even in an age where the technology is possible. Why would they? You can't get something better. And they can charge whatever they want because there ia no competition. Do what's right for consumers and pass both bills today! Sean W. Michel
—Sean W Michel, Sunnyvale, CA

Your actions and inactions are being remembered, as well as being a matter of public record. We are all on it together.
—Sam Inabinet, Virginia Beach, VA

It's bad enough for our private info. to be rummaged through, but outrageous that such access is sold. Both must be stopped.
—Diane Steen-H., Mpls., MN

Tell the FCC to protect my privacy and lower my cable bill!
—R Terrell, Litchfield, IL

We need competition, innovation and openness for a fair, level market. Please finish what you started, and protect our rights and save us some money!
—Beefert Gore Jr, Newark, NY

I'm tired of supporting corporations that just want more of my money while restricting my freedoms. Our private information is not for sale, we are required to give it but that does not make it a commodity for the receiver.
—Allan Young, Novato, CA

Monopolies are bad! Free competition is good! Can't you just do your job without us people having to sign petitions, take out ads, send email, post on facebook? It's ridiculous....You embarrass America.
—Jeffrey Abshear, Fairhope, AL

I had two set-top boxes and recently returned one to lower the monthly bill...I'm on a fixed income.. The price of food and essentials continue to climb. We (I) need the FCC protect my privacy and lower the cable bill for all consumers.
—Timmie Reilly, New York, NY

I am a senior citizen on a fixed income and Comcast has an annual habit of increasing my bill and decreasing my service.
—Chris Croke, Baltimore, MD

My cable bill is the biggest bill I pay every month. Over $250/month. There is virtually no competition in our area, and every year or less there is a small increase in the cost of my cable service.
—, Tallahassee, FL

I'm tired of paying monthly for rental on a desktop box when I should be able to purchase one on my own. No doubt with the fees I've had to pay, I've paid for the box many times over. Also Comcast should not be able to sell your private information.
—Leslie Calambro, Henrico, VA

I'm the next one to cut the cord and find another way to get TV, Internet, renewable energy, and whatever else I need.
—Kent Mollohan, helena, MT

Privacy and budget rank highly in consumer priorities.
—Jill Johnston, Vader, WA

Do you duty. Protect our right to our public communication routes no matter what their form, Guy Liston
—Guy M. Liston, Anchorag5, AK

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Eric Greenius, Campbell River,

Consumers need protection from the big guys who want to sell us to the highest bidder and steal our privacy!
—Richard F. McGrain Jr., Charlottesville, VA

I am tired of being soaked by my cable company and of companies selling my private information without my consent. Stand up with FreePress for us on these matters.
—Dinah L. Bahlman, Phoenix, AZ

Please pass your two proposals that will protect my privacy and lower my obscenely high cable bill. Please don't let the threats from our Comcast owned congress stop you and your commissioners from fighting for these proposals. Stop Comcast from selling my personal information without my consent. My personal information is mine and shouldn't be for sale. Please end Comcast's monopoly on set-top boxes I am forced to pay for each month. I should be able to buy a set-box and not pay a monthly fee. The fees add up to thousands of dollars over time. I hate Comcast.
—, Elk Grove Village, IL

Our cable bill is almost as great as our food bill per month. We need more competition, not less!!!
—Susan Spengler, Palatine, IL

Our cable bill is almost as great as our food bill per month. We need more competition, not less!!!
—Susan Spengler, Palatine, IL

It is time to protect consumers. Enough is enough.
—Sandra Youngs, Okemos, MI

Stop the empire intimidation.....get a conscience and stand up for ethics....PLEASE
—Nancy A Rose, Ashland, OR

Stop playing monopoly WITH MY MEAGER DISABILITY BENEFITS!
—HD Dr. D Chadwell, Delta Junction, AK

Protect OUR RIGHTS!
—Randal James, Bloomingdale, OH

It just is.
—Steven Kostis, New York, NY

I pay $25 a month in my cable bill just to rent set top boxes. Please allow these devices to be purchased on the open electronics markets so we can lower our too high cable bills!
—Lucille Scotti, Marquette, MI

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Kent Bridges, Weston, WI

We have plenty of proof that monopoly tactics don't work for the rest of us and ComCast continues to prove this. You have the power to protect us--if you act now, as time is of the essence.. Please act to protect citizens' privacy and fair competition that should be ours by right.
—Marilyn Deraney, Norwalk, CT

Stop letting cable companies write the rules.
—Deborah Cate, Philadelphia, PA

protect your privacy and lower your cable bill TODAY
—Shirley Hipps, West Salem, OH

I count on you to represent my interests. I need to know that my trust is well placed and not undermined by corporate power.
—Richard J Rinck, Selinsgrove, PA

The excess money charged is used to influence my government to act against my interest!
—Richard Creswell, Lakewood, CO

The internet is the best way for me to get information and I am retired on a fixed income, please help me!
—Mijo John E, Portland, OR

Cheaper prices and unrestricted Internet is absolutely and fundimentally a consumer right. Business should NOT control the Internet for their own profit!
—Bob Hudson, ,

If Comcast is allowed to sell our private information to increase their profits, what's to stop them from doing other, worse things? Our privacy is important to us, and we don't want to be at the mercy of a huge corporation who doesn't care about anyone but their own bottom line!
—Bonnie Jacobson, Reno, NV

I'm living on Social Security and broke all the time.
—Julia M. Faber, Denver, CO

Comcast already has WAY too much power and money as the YUGE monopoly it has become. It needs to be reined in! Don't wait! Do it NOW!
—Martin Wolf, Colorado Spgs, CO

Privacy and anti-monopoly - both American values
—Peter F Brazitis, Hansville, WA

Please! We need the help more than the cable company wealth extraction.
—Chris Grimley, North Wales, PA

I've been forced to rent a set-top box that I never use. That sucks. Also, my information should be mine to control, not a cable company's to sell.
—Adrianne Middleton, Boulder, CO

People's privacy matters - and cable company's have a monopoly and we will live with that. Please protect our right to own our own privacy!
—Brenda Cross, Lake Oswego, OR

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent
—Joseph Clemonts Junior, Woodbury, GA

I don't even have Comcast, but the monopoly has to stop. No one's private information should ever be up for sale.
—Tracy W, Howell, MI

I want my privacy protected. I do not give permission to Comcast to sell information on me. Please uphold this most basic right.
—Gale Simplicio, Morgantown, WV

Please unlock the box. I would like to develop apps and install other video apps on it. It is so restrictive and clunky. It belongs in the 90s it should have never made it into 2016.
—Ryan Pinto, Winchester, MA

Please do not allow corruption to rule.
—Frank L. Hill, North Hollywood, CA

We pay much higher rates for cable than consumers in other countries. Several channels are often pixelated or unavailable. This is what monopolies bring. I absolutely oppose selling my private information under any circumstance. Big Brother Be Gone.
—Teresa Blakely, Columbus, OH

My cable bills are constantly growing, even after I have signed up, and for no apparent reason. You either pay what they ask, or stop service. If you stop service you get a huge bill for stopping prior to some date they do not even mention before you start service.
—Donald Albertson, Bothell, WA

It is enough! Lower our bills today!
—Mary Mobley, Live Oak, FL

The cost of cable usage is really becoming ridiculous
—Shadoe Drury, Connellsville, PA

We are tired of psychopaths and greedy elite in charge of a system that is set up to deprive people of freedom. We are tired of people in positions of power who got there because they will play along with a fascist agenda. We are tired of corporations usurping our rights. So, stop making rules that assume we do not know what you are doing. We do know what you are doing, what your agenda is, and we aren't playing along, and never will.
—Victoria Parks, Worthington, OH

I am tired of paying such high cable bills. If something doesn't happen to help us consumers I will cancel by service with comcast.
—Jan Suttkus, Atlanta, GA

I already cut my service with comcast because of the high bills. I will not sign up again unless something is done to protect us consumers.
—Don Ruiz, Decatur, GA

Our right to privacy is crucial!
—William Robins, Yorktown, VA

... Because GREED is sending me to the poor house!
—D G Mason Jr, Sarasota, FL

Protect the public, not the dishonest greedy cable companies!
—Robert Toxen, Duluth, GA

Cable companies have too tight a grip on internet service and overcharge their customers as a result. Please put an end to this situation and also act to ensure the privacy of American citizens by prohibiting the sale of our personal invormation.
—Joan Parrish, Santa Cruz, CA

No one should profit from my info without my release, and set top boxes should be available to purchase from anywhere.
—Robert Hord, Fort Lauderdale, FL

Please protect the consumers -- not the greedy cable companies trying to monetize us wherever possible.
—Gary Behrendt, Manhasset, NY

Comcast has enjoyed their lucrative monopoly for far too long. Put an end to the beurocratic bull
—Michael Lautner, Dewitt, MI

I do not want my private information shared to whomever. Monopolys abate competition. Without competition only the largest corporation succeeds forcing consumers to pay to high a price. There needs to be reasonable pricing for consumers. The only reason I have a "box" is that I'm forced to have it to supposedly lower my internet bill. Consumers need choices and should not be forced into throwing money away for services & or products they don't need.
—Elizabeth Crumm, Campell, CA

I disconnected because Comcast wanted too much for too little. Why pay for 100 channels i will never watch
—James McIntosh, Ann Arbor, MI

We are a nation of people, not corporations. Our government of, by, and FOR us, not them. Since Comcast and others like them have been allowed to become so large and monopolistic that they are immune to public pressure, it is up to you to act in our best interest.
—Richard Yarnell, Beavercreek, OR

As a Veteran married to a Disabled American Veteran and as a retirees, we don't need cable services to continue to increase.
—Michelle Roberson, Augusta, GA

Why are cable companies allowed to have monopolies? I thought that was against the rules. Are we not following the rules anymore? Where I live there is one cable company. You use them for your broadband Internet service or you go without. So they charge whatever they want. The industry needs to be taken down a peg.
—Geoffrey Horn, Ardmore, OK

Because both things are right and just. Remember we should make decisions base on what is moral and this represents exactly that. This decision is very simple for me to make and also should be for you.Please vote for the people not for Comcast.
—Victor Martinez, Springfield, VA

FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler Honorable , Gentleman Please , Protect my privacy and lower my cable bill today. Thank you for your attent and the consideration with the US , Internet users. Sincerely, Maria Celia Hernandez 8-15-2016
—Maria Celia, Boston, MA

Why do these companies insist on ripping off the public? Please level the playing field and put a stop to the extortion the public suffers from at the hands of Comcast and their ilk.
—Sonia Wilson, Sacramento, CA

My internet is already expensive and not very reliable so, it goes without saying less expensive would be a help. As for my privacy... Another no brainer. My information should NOT be for sale, especially without my written permission.
—Matthew Van Brocklin, Harrisville, NY

When I bought cable services I didn't agree to become a commodity for the cable company with my personal information.
—Rob Shively, Casper, WY

My right to privacy is constitutionally guaranteed and my right to avoid price-gouging is legally guaranteed. Do the right thing and make sure I get what I'm a US citizen to have.
—Kimi Wei, Fair Lawn, NJ

We used to have FREE TV! This is nonsense paying these huge amounts of money if we want cable. Actually you've forced us to NEED cable. Get with it!
—Lynn Morris, Chicago, IL

A very good idea!

—Carlos Oropeza, Somerdale, NJ

since the switch to digital, expensive TV is my only option as I live inn an apartment building which doesn't allow dish service
—Veronica Alleyne, Rochester, NY

This is just common sense. Please put a stop to this by just taking care of this!
—Brian Dilts, Ardmore, PA

I want privacy and lower bills.
—Sue Christiansen, IOWA CITY, IA

Stop Comcast from selling my private information without my consent. End the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Jim Boden, Hartsville, SC

We need true, real competition. Across the board. Now.
—Nathan Stehle, Madison, WI

Comcast has grown too large as it is. Now they want to increase revenue by sharing our data? Or even worse, charging us to keep our data private? NO! Please keep these huge ISPs under control.
—Scott Severn, Londonderry, NH

I don't like being held hostage by a corporation to receive basic internet or phone service.
—Duran N Burby, Haverhill, MA

Much like the old Ma Bell, cable companies have a monopoly. I should be able to buy my own cable box and plug it into a line that I want to subscribe to. Until then, prices will never be competitive.
—Randy White, Washington, DC

The internet is the digital divide, and should be accessible by all.
—Desdemona Bandini, Austin, TX

My privacy is very important to me. Also cable bills have been steadily rising. The internet is a utility!
—Jackson, Vancouver, WA

We have a right to privacy, and to protection from monopolies.
—Michele Reese, Reading, PA

Please, for once, let's consider consumers (voters!) ahead of corporate profit.
—M Strachan Pindar, Boone, NC

I'm having to rent from AT&T a cable box that I can find online for much cheaper. It would lower my bill to remove this unnecessary step and would encourage competition.
—Brandon Owens, Northport, AL

You should do this because it is in the best interests of the American people and that is whose best interests you are supposed to be taking care of..
—Ashley Yonker, Kalamazoo, MI

Inaction is just like saying yes. If you want to be voted out of office, keep doing what you're doing.
—Renee Musicus, Parkville, MD

Please protect our privacy and lower our cable bill.
—Ramesh S. Sant, Roselle Park, NJ

We need to stop monopolies so that there is real choice in selecting products and services.
—Audley McIntosh, Lithonia, GA

My cable bill increased nearly $10 per month recently. That might not be much to someone who has a lucrative job with the FCC, but it's a lot for most Americans who don't see their income increasing enough to keep up with the gouging. It's ridiculous.
—Benita J. Campbell, Burgettstown, PA

My privacy is even more important today when it seems that every day reveals new hacking of personal information that was supposedly protected from access. I do not want my private information to become available without my express consent.
—K Nilsen, Ben Lomond, CA

Lowering my cable bill bill will help me save money so I can have more food in the house.
—Alan D. Jack, Kingsport, TN

Customer privacy is important!
—Ken Sexton, Salem, OR

The unreasonably high cost of cable is a bar to experience most media, except what is on public programming.
—Jacob Victoria, Sacramento, CA

I am on a fixed income as many other Americans. Please help hold prices down for us.
—Debbie M. Piatt, WEST LIBERTY, OH

This country is fast becoming an oligarchy. Monopolies seeking to control our food supply, communications, health and most other critical services seem to have carte blanche to dictate our lifestyles -- at whatever cost they choose. This needs to stop. Now.
—Ms. Nancy Van Iderstine, Van Nuys, CA

Government agencies should be serving the interests of the people and the consumer, NOT the corporations and the wealthy who seek to control the people. Government is put in place by the people, and they are expected to serve the people, period. Get off your butts and do the right thing.
—Eric Patterson, Dayton, OH

Modern life requires inexpensive internet like all European countries have !!
—R Vosari, Darien, CT

I like to watch TV, but now with time warner cable switching my favorite channels from analog to digital, I'd rather not have to pay a nonsensical rental box fee.
—Johnny Kopsi, Menominee, MI

It's getting so expensive I can hardly afford to pay my Cable(Television) bill.
—stuart Getz, Ogdensburg, NJ

Because the run away behavior of corporations affect me.

My cable bill is getting out of hand and as a senior any measure that you can take to cut this cost would really help.
—John Reagan, Port Sanilac, MI

the FCC is our voice please listen!
—Mary F Lasley, Ashland, OR

I enjoy keeping up with what is happening but it is getting so expensive I may have to revert to rabbit ears.
—Rita Bauknight, Lincolnton, NC

It doesn't appear that Comcast is going broke...common sense proposals should be supported by the fcc.
—Mary Bennett, Seattle, WA

Times are hard and life is paycheck to paycheck.
—Michael Ashworth, Charleston, WV

Lower My Cable Bill NOW!!!!!! Wnough is Enough Too Damm Expensive!!!!! The cable Companies are making too Much off the montly balance already!!!!!!!!!! It will help other people to lower their bills.
—Joshua Heffron, New York, NY

I have Charter it is a monopoly for phone tv and internet zone it become june 17 my bill eill go ey upp 65 dollars or more.
—Amy Starobin, Madison, WI

Fixed income and exorbitant prices.
—Keith Sopp, Ontonagon, MI

I'm sick and tired of corporate interests harming the public interest! Also tired of Republicans in Congress holding up appointments until they get their way. This is called the tyrrany of a minority. Obama was elected with 53% of the vote in 2012, but has not been able to get his agenda passed due to Republican obstructionism. We must stop them from being successful! This measure is important to me! I want my personal information to be secure. This measure gives too much power to cable companies!
—Maria Schafer, Granite Springs, NY

Have already paid over $2000 for my cable box. We should not have to "rent" these boxes.....
—Michele Walters, Depoe Bay, OR

Monopolies throughout history have never been good for anyone except the corporation. 99.99% of us suffer so that the CEO can be obscenely wealthy. That's not Constitutional.
—Linda Lee Andersson, Medina, WA

End the greed and sordid actions now.
—Michael C, Kennebunk, ME

We need to protect the PEOPLE and stop passing laws that favor Corporations over PEOPLE. Government needs to notice that not all of us can afford the high cost of phone service, internet service, cable service on top of the high cost of housing, food, medicine, education, etc. Our right to privacy is being destroyed by the rapid advance of technology which the laws are not keeping on top of at the sacrifice of our privacy, our economic stability. STOP letting the industries write the laws and putting in loopholes that sacrifice the public's well being in favor of further concentrating wealth. Congress needs to stop working for industry and start working for the citizens.
—Christina Wilgren, Bedford, MA

Cable companies have near monopolies on broadband and because of that, I don't really have a choice but to purchase their services. Because of that, I'm forced to pay whatever they want, and they are free to sell my information. I could not attain their services, but then I'd be out quality internet services. Please protect consumers like me.
—Ryan Trondsen, El Segundo, CA

The protection of our privacy and our wallets is essential.
—Danilo Yanich, Newark, DE

Please protect consumers' privacy as well as from market strangulation by taking action now.
—Lee Heller, Summerland, CA

We need to work together to implement positive changes in FCC that benefit the privacy and rights of consumers. Lowered cable costs will also make high speed internet access accessable to more households.
—Robert T. Hedden, Trenton, NJ

This is critical as Comcast Business Practices continue to be preditory
—Jeffrey Brooks, San Jose, CA

DO THE RIGHT THING, PASS THIS NOW!
—Lynn Schwab, Black Hawk, CO

We need to assure and protect what little privacy we have left.
—Rickey Black, Indianapolis, IN

It shouldn't matter who the president is for the rights of all americans to be protected (including their personal information). That's what the commission is for, to act on behalf of "the people".
—Maria Blake, San Jose, CA

I trust that the citizens lobby in support of this petition would more than offset corporate self-interest, especially in light of cable being akin to, if not really, a public utility.
—hendrika umbanhowar, Rochester, MN

I'm a 100% Disabled Veteran on a fixed income. Any increase in my cable bill will just diminish my standard of living.

—Sherry Willoughby, Portland, OR

Protect my privacy and lower my cable bill!
—Lynn Ziegler, Punta Gorda, FL

The greatest country in the world has expensive, slow, low-quality home Internet access. This is unacceptable! Taxpayers have given billions to expand Internet capabilities, but telcos pretend they're losing money on our investment. This cannot be allowed to continue.
—Kirk Strauser, Alameda, CA

We are tired of being at the mercy of the cable companies. And...we are tired of having to pay for channels that are in languages we don't even speak. We need to be able to pick our channels!!!!!
—Rob Johnson, El Cajon, CA

I'm retired on a fixed income. I need the info I get from cable (via phone and tv). I do not need incessant sales calls on my phone or at my door, nor the tons of marketing mail that I have to walk a block to pick up from my mail box. PLEASE stop this leak of my personal information so that I can retire in peace and quiet without sales people hounding me all day, 7-days-a-week! I know what I need and can find it without their "help".
—Mary Edwards, Woodland, CA

Pass the bill today!
—Dorothy D. McTiernan, Homestead, FL

Isn't it time to do things that benefit the people instead of monopolies? Isn't it at least part of your job to protect us from them?
—Michael McLeod, FAIRMONT, WV

—Gregory David, St Louis Park, MN

I need lower cable bills, so I can do better for the United States.
—Mark Epstein, Long Beach, NY

We r retired & live on a fixed income
—Bob wolff, Spirit Lake, IA

We also need this because our internet access is one of the slower ones among developed nations and every day we are falling behind because of the obstructionist practices of companies like Comcast and AT&T. It is stunning when you return from Europe to see how poor in comparison internet and cellphone service is in the US. We are being hamstrung in the name of corporate excess profits in a way no other developed country will allow.
—Kim McCartney, Cloverdale, CA

Anytime we have monopolies the consumer looses. The equipment we are made to pay for are old technology and does not help the economy. Allowing consumers to select and pay a one time fee will bolster competition and improve technology.
—Lynda Cook, Santa Clarita, CA

The expense of access is ridiculous.
—Susan Passino, Salt Lake City, UT

We are giving away power to mega monopolies who care about the bottom line as their #1 priority not the people nor the service they are offering.
—Bekki tippens, Colrain, MA

I do.not.like to.be harassed by sales companies with promotion that contains.my personal information.
—Jose Miori, Pembroke pines, FL

It is not only important for protecting people's privacy and to lower the exorbitant prices, but for maintaining net neutrality and for preventing any more media mergers which are always front and center in a media conglomerates wish list.
—Blake Gergen, Everett, WA

I don't want my information being used to increase cable bill profits.
—Gerald Lorenz, Salem, OR

Cable, and cell phone service, in this country is too damned expensive, poorly serviced and slow.
—J B, Oakland, CA

Can't afford to pay for cable TV. I'm a disabled senior and you can't watch t.v. without cable. Stop letting these companies take advantage of citizens lives, especially the disabled and seniors...
—Mr. Can I Yes U Can, Bronx, NY

Please take care of this issue!!
—Mary Driscoll, Denver, CO

The free market and competition have always been friends to the American People and our economy. To deny us access to options in the entertainment industry is nothing more than monopoly building. Let businesses compete in the market: take away their ability to end-run competition by buying your votes.
—Raymond Duval, Galena, OH

Please do something to help consumers not just companies. At least once.
—David Richmond, Portland, OR

I am low-income, on disability, and mentally ill, and I've seen my cable bill go up. It would be nice to see it go down.
—Jon Yoder, Washington, DC

The cable companies require the boxes for their service to work. They want us to get their service and should not force us to pay for a box that they built as the only way to use their service. I don't have to pay monthly for my security companies keypad, which is also a necessity for the service to work.
—Bahram Kaminss, Fresh Meadows, NY

You have two proposals on your "desk". One bears on my right to privacy (what little is left), the other on what amounts to free enterprise. It seems anything but unreasonable to me to require the cable industry to actually ask me before selling my personal information to the highest bidder. It seems entirely "American" to me to allow anyone who can to provide hardware capable of functioning with the cable systems. Who knows, somebody might actually come up with a better mousetrap! And it certainly isn't going he hurt the price if there's at least some form of competition in the cable industry - heaven knows they've done everything they can to eliminate as much of it as possible! Please have the courage to stand up and do what's right for people! You've done it before. You can do it again if you chose to.
—Bede Willenbring, New Hope, MN

The FCC has been operating as a captured agency and a national disgrace. Protect our privacy by prohibiting the profiteering from personal information. End monopoly practices now!
—David Beebe, Petersburg, AK

Free and open communication is the backbone of a free society.
—Peter Everts, Rochester Hills, MI

I don't even get any foreplay from Comcast, just a hard screwing every month. I want the FCC to do its job, and stop playing lap-dog to the cable companies.
—Robert Sievert, BENTON HARBOR, MI

Allowing a monopoly in a free market economy is un-American. Please move forward on this decision.
—Cherie Braun, Raleigh, NC

We have a 2 year contract package for cable internet and phone and they raised it just three months after signing and still keep raising it . Ask them to credit the overcharges and they do nothing . Pay on time and they charge a late fee everytime . This has been going on for almost 20 months now . They won't make their wrong right and we are fed up . This is centurylink Direct tv and they all do the same from what I've seen blogged on the net . Also friends here with the same experience . Please hold them accountable . Make them credit our bills for the scam charges .
—Karen Tweed, Galesburg, IL

Protect my privacy and lower my cable bill!
—Judith Salzman, Tucson, AZ

Don't let Comcast sell information about me without my consent. Let's have some competition in cable-TV boxes.
—John Schwartz, Richford, NY

Please stop the cable companies from gouging customers. We need a break!
—Donna Kittrell, Manassas, VA

The internet is a major part of our lives now. To have people just selling private information would be like being spied on 24/7. Normally this isn't something anyone would accept. Even worse for cable TV to be able to essentially hold a monopoly and offer sub par services for high prices is something that shouldn't even be legal. Competition is supposed to be part of Economic growth.
—Nathan Compher, North East, MD

Please protect my information like you would protect your family. Thank you, Mario
—Mario de'Medici, Portland, OR

Please act to protect consumers!
—Ann Rushton, Sherman Oaks, CA

Both these bills are commons sense laws that will protect the rights of consumers. They will also curtail abusive practices for the sake of excess profit by cable operators. Comcast makes huge profits, a little less will not hurt them or their shareholders.
—Tom Hopkins, Milwaukie, OR

Prices for cable keep going up due to lack of competition. I just had a mid year increase of $13 for the first time and in January it will go up at least another $10, as it does every year. Senior citizens are getting priced out of viewing. Plus our private information should stay private and not be marketed to other companies.
—Lee Winslow, Flagstaff, AZ

Innovation has been pushed to the back of the priority list at cable companies and customers pay for that decision with their wallets and our infrastructure. Please help the economy, infrastructure, and customers by not allowing cable companies to sell private information without consent and end the set-top box monopoly by allowing customers to purchase the set-top box they want to use.
—Gary Ploski, Yorktown Heights, NY

As a Senior Citizen, cable costs beyond what I should have to pay...
—Ralph Guay, Helena, MT

Privacy is more or less sacrosanct. Cable bills are ridiculolus.
—Richard Rice, Eugene, OR

The FCC need to act in unison to protect my personal information and to protect the consumer from monopolies and over zealous calitolism. Cable companies have too much control over the consumer. Choice and fair pricing need to be fostered. The cable companies and the like need to earn thier income not be given a free ride. They are not to profit from selling my information. Consumer information is not a product. Consumers never sold their personal information as would and OEM. Therefore, Comcast and others should not be allowed to profit from the sale of such information. I have never received a check. No amount has ever been settled by me with any organization. I have, however, paid monies for these companies services. So this makes no sense that theses companies can sell my information. There is no fairness here. Only greed, profiteering
—Eugene E. Thompson Jr, Culver City, CA

The United States needs modern Internet service -- Comcast and the rest of the ISP cartel have already stolen so much money from the American People that they must be dismantled entirely.
—Robert Chase, Denver, CO

Being besieged by unsolicited phone calls and emails because the proponents have gotten my private information (including zip code) has been somewhat a nightmare. Please protect our privacy!! And put citizens before large companies. Thank you,
—Margaret Lyons, Palos Verdes Peninsula, CA

Cable bills are outrageous and it makes it very difficult on low income workers and retirees.
—Richard/Karen Ertle, Brighton, CO

I am on a fixed income, but I need my cable to work and for entertainment. I am being priced out of the market by the constant changes being made. And there is no reason to give out my private info to anyone without my permission.
—Catherine Killgore, Norman, OK

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on TV and Internet services!
—Mike, Minneapolis, MN

We have very little choices, and they don't seem to improve the service, it's like they are relying on outdated equipment. It is costing more and the service from all the companies is worse, with no one to turn to for help! It's only going to get worse. Help!!!
—Denise Leonard, Ypsilanti, MI

Both of these measures are necessary to maintain at least a minimum of democracy.
—Hedi Saraf, San Francisco, CA

Cable and Internet should both be Public Utilties just the same as telephone and television were. And our right to privacy should be preserved. There are some things that should not be swept away in the name of "progress". Pay attention to the needs of the public you are supposed to be serving FCC. Don't give in to Globalist pressure on these issues.
—Aeyrie Silver Eagle, Yorba Linda, CA

US is 'supposed' to have free and open markets for ALL goods. No monopolies.
—Bob Lichtenfels, burlington, MA

Easy access to internet is crucial for future of mankind. Make it happen.
—Ozgur Zeren, Shallotte, NC

I pay nearly $100 for a required bundle of phone, internet, and cable (with no premium channels). If I drop phone and internet (which I want to) I'll save $3.15. If I could use a different nearby network, I'd be paying less than $20 for better internet coverage which is all I want. But local rules prohibit my doing business with them. This is so deeply wrong. The FCC is standing in the way of basic, reasonable, controls on cable companies. They respond to consumers as monopolies, which should be illegal. They insist in Congress that they are in competition with one another. They have all the high moral ground of snake oil salesmen and all the legal ground of Boss Tweed. How long do you plan to continue to let Tammany Hall remain in control of the major communication methods of our era? Stop it immediately.
—Catherine Albers, Germantown, TN

It is insane that when we try to pay for a simple service we are forced to pay extra for devices and services we don't want. And in any other industry selling of private info without consent could be considered a crime, but these monopolistic carriers get away with whatever they want because they know they are the only option and they have tremendous lobbying power in Washington. Disgusting.
—Peter LeBlanc, San Antonio, TX

Keep America competitive and lobbyists from corrupting the system and corporations from exploiting consumers without competition please
—Eric Dragoo, Nampa, ID

Cable bills getting too high. Service not improving.
—John Jovino, Sonoma, CA

If cable keep going up I will have to let cable go for some other form of entertainment. And just like you don't want your person information out to any and everyone, neither do I.
—Clarese Williams, Conyers, GA

It is bad enough that the impotent FCC allows "Fox News" to promote itself as a "news channel, "news network", "fair and balanced", and on, when it is seen by journalism schools (and comedians) as a propaganda arm of the Republican Party; but don't allow companies such as Comcast to sell our private information.
—Dr. Jim Hanson, Winter Park, FL

We pay significantly more than other countries for cable. The reason is simple...profits for multinational behemoths. In an age of incredible inequality, why would you allow this?
—Robert Pape, Park Ridge, IL

We pay over $240/month for cable TV and Internet. The cable box rental is part of this outrageous bill. ISPs are already ripping us off. Do not let them exploit us further by selling personal information.
—Kieren Ladner, Chicago, IL

—Mary A. Smith, myrtle creek, OR

My personal information should have the same protections as any patent or copyright.
—David Kozlowski, Santa Fe, NM

Limited income on SSI and so few raises prevent me from being able to budget for a cable service. Please help out.
—Martha A Smith, Morro Bay, CA

Anything worth doing at the FCC is going to take at least a 3–2 vote. You have a chance to go down in history as leaders of the FCC that did more for the public interest than any other. Your decisions over the next few months could cement that legacy — but only if you hold strong. We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Dennis M King, Longmont, CO

This is supposed to be government by, for and of the people...not of the wealthiest and not of big business.
—Greg McNeal, Oakland, CA

Comcast is the quintessential rip-off company.
—Lew Douglas, Oakland, CA

Passage of these two no non-sense consumer bills is a must for the average Internet customer. Especially the senior citizens whgo live on limited income. Please pass therse bills. Ralph Andrews
—Ralph Andrews, Green Bay, WI

My information MINE. Nobody should have the ability to sell it on without my permission. I don't get a cut. Also, it is time to.squash the monopoly the few cable companies ha e on us. The ones that keep them in business.
—Anthony Epp, Kansas City, KS

It's information about me. I don't care if they gathered it while I was using their product, it is me. They want to sell me, my life choices, etc, without my permission and profit from it. Either I get a cut, or they ask my permission. Period. Do something about this. And if you have a chance to open up the incredibly unfairly monopolistic market here then it is your duty to do so.
—Adam Morgan, Orem, UT

We should be able to have more choices with our cable. Be able to buy our cable boxes and have other points of entry.
—Walden Mabry, Glenwood, IL

The internet is educational and a powerful tool to learn.
—Kendra Hunter, Haiku, HI

Please help American citizens protect our privacy. And my cable bill is out of control; their services do not justify their profit margins, or however they are absorbing our monthly payment. Thank you.
—Abigail Jaye, Valley Glen, CA

The cable monopoly is not working. It is hurtful to consumers. I do not want my private information or any information in the hands of the cable and telecom industry.
—G Parson, ENDICOTT, NY

We don't want Big Corps to sell our private information without our consent, and to end the practice of making us rent their set-top box every month each month. Ma Bell did something all too similar ages ago; Big Cable should do the same.
—Lorraine Lavoie, Waltham, MA

Give the business community a chance to continue robbing every one of their money, and they will.
—Fred Coplin, Saint Petersburg, FL

As a work from home self-employed business owner, high cable bills make up a large portion of my monthly income. Internet should be classified as a utility and managed the same as power or phone. It is essential to everyday life and business.
—Dom Price, Marietta, GA

I want to be able to pick what I pay For —MIchael Thomas, South Bend, IN

I think our privacy is being lost and it is in The Bill of Rights. Here it is from a private company and the rates being charged keep rising. People now need the internet to take care of business I hate having to use the library to go on line.
—Mr. Scott Pierce, Portland, OR

WORK TO STAY WITH THESE COMMON SENSE, PRO- CONSUMER POLICIES ON SET-TOP BOXES
—Michael Gregory MD, Santa Fe, NM

Please note that DECADES ago, you liberated phone users from mandatory rental of equipment from the phone firms. This is precisely the same. Unhook the equipment profit motive from Comcast (or any cable provider) and let us use and purchase our own equipment.
—Constance Bevitt, Silver Spring, MD

I've been with Dishnetwork for 6 years and paying therm $14 a month for 2 set top boxes and have paid them over $1000 for boxes that aren't worth 1/3 of that. Even phone companies don't keep charging you payments on your phone when you've paid for it.
—Donna Crane, SanTan, AZ

In "socialist" Europe, one has more than a dozen choices to get phone, tv, and blazing internet for $40 a month. What do we have ? MAYBE 2 choices and around TRIPLE that rate. Free market?? More like quasi-monopoly. Why?? Because corporations are hurting?? They have created the biggest income gap EVER in this country!! It's time for them, the oligarchs, to sell a few homes and live like the rest of us.
—Matt Woolery, La Jolla, CA

Please stop the corruption in D.C. This would be a nice start by breaking up the cable monopolies.
—Jarod Johnson, Ypsilanti, MI

I don't want my personal information to be a commodity in yet another business.
—Tanya Lasuk, Kennewick, WA

A phone company, internet company or cable/fiber provider should not be able to capitalize on its monopoly on your ability to connect to everything else in the world - with your personal information. There should be regulation and restriction on gathering of any personal information. Selling any person's personal information without expressed written permission should be a crime. Neither should they be able to monopolize the type of receiver, modem, or decoder that you attach to your system. They are the provider of the means of communication and often the only provider and should not be allowed to farm their customer's information or interfere with their choice of technology.
—Timothy E Hof, CINCINNATI, OH

I am forced by owner of my office building into using specific cable operator. AND IT IS EXPENSIVE and SLOW - and I am in middle of San Francisco. Cable operator has freedom to sell my private information. I have uncontrolled spam phone calls coming in on all my phones - which are on DO NOT CALL registry. Cable TV box at HOME is also a monopoly. I know I am paying way to much to use the internet and local government channel. Please fight back - for me.
—sue Hestor, San Francisco, CA

Frankly, we hate Comcast: they are the only game in town. Their prices keep many people from having cable and Internet access. I don't want them selling my information for their benefit, while charging me an arm and a leg for their for their products. They are a greedy monopoly right now and need to give up selling our information. I no longer do any business with them for this reason.
—Paula Fougere, Seabrook, NH

KEEPING PRIVATE OUR INFORMATION IS VERY IMPORTANT AS WELL AS LOWERING CABLE BILLS. ACT ON IT TODAY!!!!!
—Connie Sitzman, Antioch, TN

Please... do SOMETHING to help
—Bernadette Zupan, Tamarac, FL

DirecTV, Comcast, and AT&T all compelled Citizens that NEEDED (I am an IT Professional, and before retiring did a good deal of "Defence Work" that REQUIRED a high-performance, encrypted, secure connection. I still do computer security work and some consulting with Defence Contractors - the equipment I require CANNOT have built in "back-doors" accessible to lord only knows who and my data MUST be secure - and this is MY responsibility. These multi-national corporations FORCED customers to PRE-FUND THEIR INFRASTRUCTURE COST. Now that they are in the clandestine personal information gathering and selling, to persons unknown, business - THEY WANT TO LEASE US INSECURE EQUIPMENT THAT WILL FACILITATE THEIR UN-CONSTITUTIONAL EAVESDROPPING AND THE SALE OF THE DATA TO PERSONS UNKNOWN. THIS IS A NATIONAL SECURITY THREAT OF THE HIGHEST ORDER!! As an American Citizen, I have the Constitutional right to equip my computer network, and the machines on that network, as required by my privacy needs, security oaths, and my RIGHT to operate MY computers on MY network on MY private property in the wat I see fit - not some commercial, sneak-thief, corporation bent on invading my personal AND PROFESSIONAL PRIVACY! Clients in the EU, the UK, Canada, and others NO LONGER TRUST THE INTEGRITY OF AMERICAN VENDORS, PROFESSIONALS, AND "CLOUD" RESOURCES - AND WITH GOOD REASON. I am having to route my communications through France, Germany, and other EU nations - to the extent possible - to avoid the disclosure of proprietary information regarding new inventions, discoveries, technical discoveries (some related to our National defence) as possible; but cannot do this lawfully in some situations. AT&T, that has maintained a TOTAL MONOPOLY over our communications services in now trying to FORCE customers into a new 2 year agreement to switch to "uVerse", pay $9 extra per month for a "wireless router" (totally insecure) that THEY CONTROL, UPDATE, AND SECRETLY GATHER WHATEVER INFORMATION THEY WANT, WHENEVER THEY WANT, WITHOUT MY CONSENT OR KNOWLEDGE AND SELL THAT DATA TO THE Communist Chinese, Russians, North Korea, anyone with a checkbook. Meanwhile, AT&T has reduced our "service set" of features by over ONE HALF, while almost doubling prices. The top speed I can get is 6.5Mbit, yet FOR THE EXACT SAME PRICE FOLKS SIX MILES UP THE ROAD ENJOY 20Mbit TO 40Mbit SERVICE FOR THE SAME PRICE - $59 per month. In Romania, and most other EU countries customers get 50-60Mbit service for $20 per month, with legally guaranteed privacy. In Japan, 100Mbit service costs $20 per month. WHY ARE WE BEING ROBBED? BECAUSE THE MONOPOLY WAS NEVER REALLY BROKEN UP, AND WE ARE BOUND IN SERVITUTE.
—William Wilkinson, Watkinsville, GA

Big cable companies seem to think they should be in control and that John Q Public exists for the soul purpose of lining the cable company pockets. Their reign needs to end! It's time for Congress to support the FCC for the good of the people, not the cable companies. Do you know who your Congressman supports? Tell them to support FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler in his work to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent and to end the monopoly of set-top boxes, which would, in turn, lower our cable-TV bills.
—CJ Houghtaling, Middlebury Center, PA

Please do this. Our Cable bills are way too high. The Cable company , in the future will also target us with Ads.
—Bakermanb@yahoocom Baker, milton, NY

I'm tired of being jerked around by what should be illegal, the closest thing to a monopoly that exists in the US! The price of internet is too high, and they have free reign to set the costs. FIGHT FOR US.
—Nicole Mikeals, New Castle, PA

sick and tired of companies running ours government
—Phil Copeland, Louisville, KY

Please vote the public interest.
—Arthur Keller, Palo Alto, CA

Monopolies are tolerated in a competition-driven free market because they provide necessary public functions. They do not exist to bilk the public or defraud the public.
—Dwain Wilder, Rochester, NY

If you can't lower my cable bill, then ALLOW FOR COMPETITORS!! There is no competition for Comcast!!!
—Angela Haynes, snellville, GA

My "high-speed" Internet service is only 3Mb, yet costs $50/month. The speed has actually gone down from 7Mb over the years, but the cost has gone UP.

Please! Be STRONG, Hold fast to Public Interest. Throw down HARD on Political GAMES. Help US/us.
—Donna Besser Stone, Boynton Beach, FL

The FCC's agency mission is to protect the nation's public airwaves and the public communications that travel through them. At the same time, its mission is to enhance development and quality of those communication pathways and transmission lines, by encouraging private-sector contributions and innovations, but not at the cost of protection of the public's interests and privacy and of their access to a truly competitive market. If carrying out this agency mission means immense pressure from the lobbyists for the giant telecom companies, so be it. The FCC's leaders must stand up to this sordid pressure and act and do what is right and what it is supposed to do: protect the nation's communication airwaves from private-sector dominating control and monopoly. Thank you. Rudolph Gartner
—Rudolph Gartner, Chicago, IL

Quit protecting the mega profits of monopolies .
—Michael Smith, Yakima, WA

The desire for privacy should be self evident. On the cable box issue, I see no reason why I should be forced to overpay to rent a set-top box from my cable provider when I could choose to buy one on the open market and save myself some money. Cable providers already over charge for service and force you to buy channels you do not choose to watch as part of a "package". Cable providers already over charge for service and force you to buy channels you do not choose to watch as part of a "package" The set-top box racket is just another way to make you pay more than you need to for service. Please do your job and and end these practices.
—Lloyd Adams, Houston, TX

It is not your information to sell, You allowed a merger to take place that should not have. We need small companies competing for business not no choice.
—Tim Zemba, Los Angeles, CA

Cable TV is a defacto monopoly in this country with Comcast especially in the eastern part of the country. Not only are there prices outrageously high but allowing them to sell my private information is adding insult to injury. I am a small business and allowing Comcast to act as a monopoly is a financial hardship. I do not operate a monopoly and I would never sell my customers private information. Please act to end their monopoly and selling of private information. Thank you.
—Robert Hennessey, FRANKLINVILLE, NJ

If network providers are monopolies, then they must be regulated. The FCC must force the industry to build multiple network options everywhere in order to foster competition and, thus, to avoid regulation as a utility. If in reality only a single company can deliver true broadband network services in a particular region, then it must be regulated as a utility.
—Payam N Minoofar, Ventura, CA

cable is much to high. with one company you get more then another at times and might even pay less with the other company for more channels and or faster net. I think it's rediculus
—Wayne Foster, South Paris, ME

My privacy is valuable to me. Additionally, cable companies have charged far too much for far too long.
—Sean Kennedy, Healdsburg, CA

I'd love to buy my disabled, house bound friend internet access which she cannot afford. Trouble is I can't afford it either! PRIVACY + ACCESS NOW PLEASE
—ML Fowler, South Colby, WA

I myself do not utilize Comcast. I refuse to pay to watch television. I can't afford it either. I do know many who use Comcast and would be beside themselves if unrelated topics are a part of getting what they do pay for.
—C Nichols, Chandler, AZ

I should not be reliant upon the cable companies for my DVR or to view on my tv. Open up competition and break their monopoly on these devices. As for my private information, I am always opting out of company's sharing of my information. I want my internet privacy as well.
—David Paul, Turlock, CA

Congress is suppose to work for the people.

I am retired living on a fixed income. The internet is my only source of communication with my community. Please don't destroy my only source of information by making it unreasonable for me to afford.
—William A Lansville, Barstow, CA

We collectively have no power to change the way cable companies do business. I support this proposal.
—David Berten, Pittsburgh, PA

When PC makers were forced to provide alternatives to Microsoft Explorer as a browser, it was done to prevent a monopolistic practice - if you buy a piece of hardware that can run many different types of software, you shouldn't be forced to use just one. It should work the same the other way around - when you subscribe to a service such as cable TV, you shouldn't be forced to pay for just one hardware device (and a perpetual rental, at that!) when devices that are on the market are capable of doing the same job. It's the same logic. Please end the set-top box monopoly.
—Phillip Chonigman, Hartsdale, NY

As a retiree, I simply cannot afford the unnecessary charges that FCC is addressing.

Dear Mr. Wheeler, I do applaud your actions to protect the information of me and other fellow citizens. I also applaud your actions to open the market on set top boxes. I believe that the government and its agencies are there to protect and support all of us and not just the big business interests of the country.
—Thomas E. Wisniewski, Parkland, FL

Because you should listen to the people
—Jason Bartz, Lexington Park, MD

Take control of this monopoly!
—Shane Beers, Redondo Beach, CA

Yes, please lower our cable bills. But ONE MORE THING: Please require Comcast to also include C-SPAN-2 and C-SPAN-3 in my Basic Service!
—Timothea Papas, Evanston, IL

Cable bills for all services are outrageous. Time to end the greed merchants' protections by collusive government.
—Richard Morgan, BELLINGHAM, WA

The FCC needs to advocate for and protect the public interest, not grant power to companies whose main interest is their own bottom line.
—Robert Helmick, Rathdrum, ID

It is very important because this has been a long time game but republicans, who misleading our country just only to make sure their pockets are full of easy money, we cannot allow this type of game to continue, our privacy & lower cable bill are 'Priority'.

cable companies are quasi-monopolies! Don't let them take advantage of users that don't have an alternative!
—Ron King, Oklahoma City, OK

If you don't stop these immoral, unacceptable practices, Who Will?
—Elmer A. Anderson Jr., M.D., L.A., CA

Since the era of deregulation television and radio have become almost unwatchable...until the internet came around. Now, television has to compete with lots of other sources on many playforms and it's never been better. (Commercial radio is mired in the past, it may be a while before we hear much change). That said: comapnies like Comcast are squeezing the consumer by becoming bloated nigh monopolies. As such my bill (I save you the story but they basically harranged me into this service) is now 100/mo. And I only use the internet...at a pretty basic speed compared to the rest of the world. When it comes to cable, I have very few alternatives and given Comcast's record for customer service (or lackthereof) it's past time something be done. I inplore the FCC to consider action. Thank you, Nick Brunner
—Nick Brunner, Sacramento, CA

The pricing is outrageously high given the profits of the parent corporation. It should be a utility. Instead cable service is exploitation, legalized theft.
—Mr. William Ray, willits, CA

As a consumer, and a voter, I should have the right to expect my information is NOT given (sold) to other marketers without my consent (It shouldn't be an 'opt out'- it should be 'opt in'). Further, I shouldn't have to pay forever for a product that I can purchase at a given price (box). I am further disappointed with the level of consolidation in the telecommunications industry. It removes all competition and dis-incentivizes the companies from any improvements- it garners them guaranteed customers through monopolization. I am counting on the FCC to work harder for the consumer! Here in midtown Manhattan NYC, I have no choice who I want to give my business to. I am stuck with an expensive and lousy Time Warner (soon to be Charter, because yet another merger was permitted!). Innovation, as well as better pricing, comes from competition- NOT monopolization.
—Stacy Rauch, New York, NY

Finally something for the masses. Do it already!
—Brian Fullerton, Erie, PA

Do the unexpected. Watch the corporate interests panic. Watch the people dance in the streets.
—Barbara Hill, San Benito, TX

Consumers should be central in marketplace regulation - stop suppliers from trading our private information without the consumer's consent, and lower cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on the set-top boxes we're forced to rent.
—Rick C Dacosta, fonthill,

Comcast is expensive and should be broken up like MA Bell.
—Bob Hibbits, Gig Harbor, WA

We need to stop the dreadful trend of trying to run government at a profit. No, government does NOT need to be run 'like a business'....the two have fundamentally different purposes!
—Sadie SullivanGreiner, El Cajon, CA

Our cable bills are way too high, the companies have monopolies or in some areas duopolies. We shouldn't have to pay for these boxes, and they shouldn't be able to sell our private info. The latter is a violation of privacy and probably privacy laws.
—Dorothy Rocklin, Melrose, MA

Our First Amendment is essential to a clear conduit for a informed democratic citizenry.
—James Par Zino, Holly Ridge, NC

We need competition in the cable industry. What we have is monopolies. Open up the field, let companies compete.
—Edward Vaughn, Everett, WA

Renting set top boxes for eternity is the same as renting phones until the 1980s, a practice designed to inflate fees for a monopoly.
—Ben Johnson, Smyrna, GA

Internet access is necessary for everyday functioning. We need it for earning income, education and personal enrichment. It should be safe for us to use, and that includes protecting private information that might make us vulnerable to predators. It should also be affordable for everyone. It is not a luxury.
—Tracey Polyflavour, ,

It's time to stop the corporate giants, such as the cable industry's practice of buying politicians to get their way to abuse their customers trust. Please protect my privacy; junk commication and identity theft is out of control.
—Gary Holm, tampa, FL

costs are off the charts
—Glenn Phillips, Seattle, WA

1. Keep private information private. 2. End the rental fee on cable boxes.
—Margery Armstrong, Great Neck, NY

Treat the cable companies like the public service business they are supposed to be, not the profit hogs they are.
—Ron Farnsworth, West Townsend, MA

I am appauled the cable company is receiving payments from US and then selling OUR personal information for profit! The phone companies are equally liable for this disgusting and illegal act. I'm so sick of ALL of it. You are responsble for the demise of our freedoms and our country.
—Dee Preston, lantana, FL

Personal information should not be able to be resold without permission. This is not only a privacy concern but also a security issue. On top of that this information could include medical searches and other informaton that should not be shared or sold.
—David Foor, Lombard, IL

Cable Companies have been Gouging their Customers for Years, The People Paid For Developing the Internet not Corporations!!!
—Richard F.Burger, cotati, CA

I'm nearly 76 years old with a limited income. I just learned that I will need a new prescription at $500/month. I can barely afford cable/internet now, don't know how I will do it in the future. Please do your part to protect consumers like me.
—Mary T Slayter, West Dennis, MA

I am retired a live on SS. I cannot afford cable anymore .
—Marilyn Livote, Buena Park, CA

Your responsibility is the the PEOPLE of the United States who pay your salary and the FCC expenses. NOT your friends in the cable industry who are trying to leverage additional profits by selling confidential information and by monopolistic practices - something that was supposed to have been outlawed 60 years ago
—Liz Amsden, Los Angeles, CA

Privacy and price are incredibly important in this changing world.
—William Sweeney, New York, NY

IN Alaska we have NO competition and GCI cable is a deceptive business model.FCC allowed them to own a local station in Anchorage which is conflict of interest.Also GCI will not LOWER cost of their service to low income and they are the only choice. Also in AK over the air is not made available in many areas leaving the only choice GCI-a bait and switch and capped internet company.Low income in AK means no services.
—Skylar Phoenix, Homer, AK

Because it is my data and my money.
—Edward Drapkin, tucson, AZ

—Jim Prah, Chapel Hill, NC

MY PRIVATE INFO IS NOT FOR SALE, AND WE ALREADY PAY EXCESSIVELY HIGH CABLE RATES!
—R Honeck, cincinnati, OH

Privacy is becoming a premium, if I acquire a service from company x thatd is all I'm intrestred in, it is not in my best untrest that they further profit from my information, services, inquiries, needs, to benefit, that is not what I'm payong for. Also other companies shouldnt profit of that knowledge without my consent. For example: just purchased a new notebook computer with windows 10, it brought already installed 120 companies that would track me from my usage on windows 10. How does that benefit me, it is a invasion of privacy. Don't let cable and internet companies also do this.
—Rafael E. Umana, mia, FL

I heartily appreciate the work you have done on the public's behalf, and wish voters had done a better job winnowing out Congressional puppets of big telecom, so that your job would be more straightforward.
—Frank Glass, Albany, OR

I do not like Comcast--they are already knocking on my front door and filling my mailbox with their crap.
—Doreen Stratton, Doylestown, PA

Comcast has been getting away with charging BS fees for years. Lets put some money back in my pocket.
—Joe Cates, Minneapolis, MN

It's time for the FCC to work for the people and not the corporations!
—J Solni, Akron, OH

It's important to protect private information no matter what, unless consent is given. This is especially important as we struggle to maintain the democratic nature of the Internet and keep it from becoming an avenue for profits. Please take action and do your job. Thank you.
—Patricia Sandoval Sralla, SAN ANTONIO, TX

My cable bill is currently twice my electric bill and I receive only the most basic and what is supposed to be the cheapest cable.
—Larry D. Rafey, Argyle, FL

My internet is no less important than my telephone or my post office box. No one should have the right to see--much less to sell--my communications data to anyone.
—Burley Herrin, Stewardson, IL

Prices go up as service and value received decline. My personal information becomes another commodity to sell. Shameful.
—Mike Berger, Imperial, MO

I am not getting the mbps that are in my contract. I have no other options for internet service in my area.
—Melissa Rosen, Los Angeles, CA

There is no good reason why Comcast should see anyone's private information. It's private for a reason! They, and all cable tv/internet providers already charge far too much for their services and do not need to make any more money off my back. LOWER OUR BILLS AND KEEP OUR PRIVATE INFORMATION PRIVATE!
—Sandy Sargeant, Rowlett, TX

My cable bills grow every year and my income does not.
—Judith Bergson, Somerville, MA

Let's not become China!
—Garrett Hayashida, San Francisco, CA

Cable is now necessary, so it needs to allow all to afford it. Take the action that helps people.
—Ken Walsh, Alameda, CA

We view monopolies as bad things in this country for a reason, please stop the abuse from cable companies, it makes no sense to rent a piece of equipment forever on those outrageous charges. And since these companies are monopolies by default their privacy policies should be scrutinized and regulated, they can't be allowed to sell your information without your consent, and it should opt-in not opt-out.
—Carlos Ravelo, Stamford, CT

The right to privacy is a fundamental concept of the Constitution. Without it we are no better than some of the communist countries. Internet providers should not be allowed to systematically collect any information, especially Sensitive Information from its subscribers. It was illegal for the phone company to eavesdrop on its customers, it should be illegal for the Internet providers to effectively eavesdrop on its customers. the setup boxes used by cable TV, as well as the modems used by certain IP providers should not be proprietary. It is too easy to identify each of these setup boxes/modems using Internet protocol. There is no reason other than financial gain of the companies to make these devices proprietary. They are ripping off the consumer. In some cases the consumer has no choice other than to use that company. I am requesting that you act now and approve both the FCC Privacy policy and cable set up box recommendations.
—Joe Allen, Memphis, TN

I want to be able to buy my own cable box, not pay rent. That's an important point for me.
—Jim Fenner, Troy, MI

I want my privacy protected and need you to stand firm on not having it shared with data seeking corporations that want to see something. Thank you,
—Eileen Mitro, Ukiah, CA

Monopolies must be regulated for the good of our populace.
—KGH Nicholes, Martinsdale, MT

You are here to protect us, the taxpayers who are often gouged by big monopolies. Please do your jobs and advocate for us. Stop being puppets of the industry, as that is often how it appears.
—Grace Wu, Sacramento, CA

Lower cable bills and privacy? You need to hear why this is important to me?
—Robert Covelli, Santa Fe, NM

Common sense laws to protect the consumer. Who would have thought of such a thing ??
—Norman D Brooks, Leesburg, GA

Comcast prices are atrocious.
—Ronald W. Hull, Houston, TX

Corruption in USA government is hurting people like me with little to no money.
—Susan Boyce, Myrtle Creek, OR

The FCC has finally turned its focus from the monopolistic cable companies to the needs and rights of the American consumer. Please continue with this trajectory and you will be remembered as the FCC which championed consumer rights—the task to which you were appointed.
—Howard Bornstein, Lake Oswego, OR

I am sick of the cable industry ripping us off. Do what is right for us
—Carson J Heldmann Jr, Catonsville, MD

To much for to little
—Edward Bradly, Ridgewood, NJ

Last night, I was just thinking about how high my cable bills are. And, that I really need my telephone, TV and computer. And, that there are no options. Government 'of the people,, by the people, and for the people'. The FEC needs to stand up to both protect our privacy and lower our cable bills.
—Michele Sherriton, Hollywood, FL

Costs for consumers should be going down, not up. Privacy of all U.S. citizens and that of consumer data must be off the table for sale, consumption, or monetization in any other form without the express written consent and direct permission from each private citizen, on a per-case basis.
—Carl Gren, Chattanooga, TN

Government is supposed to protect the people, not huge corporation and multi billion dollar fat-cats. Regulatory agencies such as yours are supposed to protect me, so please do the right thing for the millions of Americans in this country that need your agency to fight for us. Please vote NOW to pass your privacy proposal and to end the monopoly on set-top boxes. You can be my hero, just by doing the right thing.
—Greta Buckman, Knoxville, TN

My bill is WAY to high!
—John Anderson, St. Louis Park, MN

The cable companies have too much unwarranted control over what we see, hear, and have access to over the internet and through television. They cannot be allowed to use this over-inflated privilege to control our personal information as well.
—Florindo Troncelliti, New York, NY

Simply to gain access to media (not just entertainment) the public is essentially blackmailed into renting equipment for service. In the USA, citizens pay more for less in internet and media availability than any other developed nation. The FCC has it within its power to turn this around.
—Tobie Helene Shapiro, Berkeley, CA

A free press is what has made We the People, work for all. Neither party, unfortunately ,tell the truth to the people. We have to rely on independent tv stations. Bill Moyers, Cenk Yuger of Sirius Xm radio. And shows like Redacted. We have To thank Ronald Regan for deregulating the airways.

Its about us, citizens of the US.
—Rufus Morison PhD, Bristol, TN

You need to get with the 21st century and actually listen to your customers.
—Dr Ian M Bird, Madison, WI

Every time I eliminate "packages" to get my cable bill below below $100/month, it manages to creep back up above that amount; but the service itself gets no better, with lots of reception errors and occasional outages.
—John Fowler, Santa Monica, CA

Living on a fixed income, I am particularly impacted by the lack of competition from telecommunications industry. In fact, I've been priced out of the cable industry's monopolistic pricing.
—Tom Poe, Eden Valley, MN

These proposals are clearly the right actions in defense of consumer interests, which I take to be the Commission's mandate. Please follow through while the opportunity is present.
—Gordon Lutz, Holden, ME

I'm tired of having my information and my privacy sold to the highest bidder every time I subscribe to a cable service, and what they are charging is outrageous. It is far past time to reign in this inexcusable behavior.
—Thomas Scarpinatto, Portland, OR

Freedom
—Richard Musk, NEWTOWN, CT

Government should work for its citizens, not for corporate profits.
—Elizabeth Bartlett, Jarrell, TX

The cable monopolies are hurting competition and innovation in the cable industry. Please help pass these common sense policies!
—Daniel Zachs, Minneapolis, MN

Common sense must prevail not politics..... Stop Comcast and the monopoly on set top boxes... Help us with the cable bills..... Thanks

I am retired and am on a (low) fixed income.
—MARIANNE KRANZ, Lake Hiawatha, NJ

Stop Comcast selling our private information without our consent. Stop set-top box monopoly and milking us under your regulation.
—APeery, Gorinchem,

My privacy is important to me so I don't want any ISP that I use to sell ANY personal information without my consent. I would also like to lower my cable bill for TV and Internet. An unrestricted Internet would be ideal. Please don't let corporations "run" or pressure our rights as consumers by passing legislation that is one sided. Please take action to STOP Comcast and the monopoly they hold. Why can't we have a choice who provides our Internet and TV service? This would surely drive process down and the compitition would hopefully increase Internet speeds. Do you know where America ranks in Internet bandwidth? It should be an embarrassment to the FCC.
—Thomas Dee, Wheaton, IL

Stand up for the public rather than selling out to business, please. Their greed continues to diminish the quality of my life. I pay $120 per month for worse TV reception over cable that I had for free before unelected officials gave the analog spectrum to business, and I still have to watch the crap advertising. STOP the giveaway! Keep the net as neutral as you can. Please.
—Kurt Harper, Shepherdstown, WV

The Action Is Needed & The Time Is Now!
—Blue R. Brown Jr., Keene, NH

I am in a rural area and we have no choice but the big companies who take full advantage. For example they have an offering of 55Kb coverage , with 5KB between 6a-2a, 50 KB between 2a-6a. That is not fair business practices but out and out gouging. ENOUGH IS ENOUGH IS ENOUGH!!!!!!!
—Cathy Balan, camptonville, CA

If we want American culture and freedom to survive we MUST HAVE ACCESS TO THINK OUR THOUGHTS ALONE AND TOGETHER IN PRIVACY.

Because cable bills go up almost every billing cycle. It should stop.
—Shirley Russell, Norcross, GA

Cable is out of control
—Martin Webber, dallas, OR

I'm tired of cable being the only source and raising prices because they can. Help is much appreciated.
—Andrew Groh, Dallas, OR

Please do your job for the consumers. Common sense must prevail in denying Comcast the ability to sell my private information without my express consent. Common sense also dictates that consumers not be forced to rent set-top boxes from monopolistic cable companies. Please do the right thing and move these proposals forward.
—Jim Siderits, Rialto, CA

IT'S TIME TO HOLD FRAUDULENT MONOPOLIES ACCOUNTABLE FOR THEIR ACTIONS.
—Bill Lindner, Greenbrae, CA

this is common sense which of course means that it probably isn't good for the old profit line. Common sense is getting so rare that it might be headed to go the way of the Dodo bird. Let's get these measures passed!
—Dave Scanlon, Mpls., MN

FCC, YOU MUST to protect OUR privacy and lower OURcable bill TODAY.
—Elaine Balgemann, Mesa, AZ

I'd like to feel that none of my information is seized and disseminated until I hit the "Send" tag. I'm irritated that I'm being so closely tracked and monitored that the advertisers are calling me when I decide NOT to submit a partially completed form. Within minutes !.!.!.!
—Kirk Taylor, Yelm, WA

Let's just try doing the right thing for the people who actually pay your salary. I just got rid of cable because I refuse to pay twice for crap that I can watch for free. As far as privacy is concerned, I will also opt out of any agency that tries to use my information for any purpose other than what I explicitly authorize. Privacy must be the default right of every citizen!
—Stephen P. Karnisky, Rochester, NY

This important because Increasing TV Bills have begun to put a larger strain on my family's finances.
—Graham Braly, Rocklin, CA

Yes, get it done. The cable bill is outrageous.
—Renee Nichols, Pendleton, SC

Please put some controls in place. Things are getting out of hand in every direction. We need stronger consumer protection laws now.
—Mr. Dave Scassa, Cedar Park, TX

At some point the consumer needs to be getting the break not Big Business. Too much profit off of those forced to watch a plethora of commercials on regular TV or pay fees to big cable for all those channels one never watches!
—Michael Ernst, Highland Park, IL

The cable industry has a monopoly, which gives little to no choices. Our privacy is of no importance to these companies who stay awake nights trying to find more ways to increase costs to customers. Customers who are long term and loyal customers are charged more than new customers so the industry can bait them into contracts. With so few choices and so little regulation of these companies, we look to the FCC to protect us. They're robbing us blind, providing substandard service, and compromising our privacy. Is there anyone care about the consumer anymore? Do your job; protect the consumer.
—Maryann, Fort Lauderdale, FL

This spiral needs to end now! Average people need action fast!
—Mary Paolazzi, McMinnville, OR

The People need support, not the corporations.
—Mohan Attar, Berkeley Springs, WV

My cable company has overcharged its customets and refuses to return the money they stole from me. Why should they get any favours!
—Rob Sebastian, Akron, OH

I remember when TV was free! What happened?! Make decisions for citizens, not corporations...I thought that was your task.
—John D David, Houston, TX

Comcast charges egregious rates and is selling their customers on top of it? Most other internet businesses trade their customers' info for seemingly free services. At least customers can opt-out/not use that service if they are not interested. Comcast customers have no such option.
—Matthew Braun, Champaign, IL

My time and my money are valuable to me & my family.
—Thomas G. Dahl, New Port Richey, FL

About time for the FCC to work for citizens and not just corporate interests.
—Thomas Peterson, Windham, ME

I am so tired of the cable companies charging what they do because we do not have a real choice.
—Rudy Avizius, Cherry Hill, NJ

It is a privacy issue and Comcast makes enough money from all the charges they add to our bills.
—Mario Mere, Novato, CA

I believe that US Citizens deserve to be protected from Big Cable. You are the only organization that has that power. Use that power to help us!
—Ken Anderson, Boulder, CO

Being a college student having internet is a must but prices can be outrages. For the basic pack with very slow speed I'm having to pay $60 per month which is very high specially when can barely afford food.
—Marcelo Vidal, Milford, CT

the FCC should not be held hostage by a Congress that's itself unable to get anything accomplished. Please continue making progress on behalf of consumers to try to roll back some of the unwarranted and dramatic rate hikes from the cable industry over the past two decades.
—Scott Francis, Moorpark, CA

I do not believe Comcast should be able to sell or provide my private information without my direct consent. As well renting set top boxes should be an option, not a requirement. There needs to be choices in set top boxes, just like there is with any other consumer electronics except set top boxes.
—Joe S Samples, Austin, TX

We should all have a right to privacy. Please protect it.
—Susan Morgan, Austin, TX

The cabler industry is far too much in the control of a very few corporate giants. The FCC need to take steps to protect American citizens from their monopolistic practices
—William Gilbert, Cerrillos, NM

Because of requirements to bundle and no competition, phone service Internet and PBS and cable news are $200 a month for seniors on a fixed budget
—Laurent Hourcle, Saco, ME

I'm a consumer on a fixed income who can't afford to keep paying higher bills. And who wants their information to be sold without their consent? That's ridiculous!
—Robin Sinyard, Atlanta, GA

I can't afford these outrageous rates!
—William A. Dolly, Mc Alpin, FL

I pay Comcast every month for internet access. They shouldn't be allowed to charge me money and then turn around and sell my information. That's double dipping. And monopolies are only good for monopolists and corrupt politicians.
—, Round Rock, TX

Cause Cable Service is a monopoly they made Microsoft split up for just what companies like Comcast are becoming! Now they are trying to make even more money by selling information that we already are paying them to protect this is an outrage!
—Eric R Stemmerich, Ligonier, PA

My identity belongs to me, not my cable company. I'm on a fixed income so I can't afford extra fees.
—Sybil C Malinowski Melody, Jerome, AZ

How can a non-life form entity like a corporation be more important then People? Corporations come and go, People are forever.
—Mitchell Slatin, Lakewood, CO

please protect our privacy by not allowing Comcast to sell private information. Karen Bradford
—Karen Bradford, Greenwood, IN

C'mon, FCC, DO THE RIGHT THING. Help the PEOPLE, not GREEDY corporations!....
—Bill Hutchinson, Keene, NH

Dear FCC....Please HELP to STOP the proliferation and onslaught of junk phone calls! The phone calls persist and have become extremely abusive in content & nature! Please do all you can to eliminate and ban the "selling of our private and financial information"! I DO NOT NEED TO BE MARKETED TOO! Despite the "do not call" list our family is continually bombarded by unsolicited telemarketers! FCC Please do your job and go down in history as doing something for the common person! Corporatization (oligarchy) must NEVER come to pass in this country! Please save "us" from corporate greed! Thank you, James Paulson
—James Paulson, Camarillo, CA

Media corporations are trying to muscle subscribers into accepting severe and unnecessary disadvantages. Only government regulation can stop this racket and break up the oligopolies that deliberately DON'T compete, leaving customers with NO CHOICES. Is this capitalism? THIS IS FEUDALISM, with Comcast's crusty buttocks parked on the tattered old thrones corporate jokers were so careful to preserve from the first Medieval Age. Welcome to the "new" economy.
—Steve Ditore, Seattle, WA

The public must come first or there is little reason to have the FCC at all.
—Shelley Snow, Paso Robles, CA

stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Norma Nichols, honolulu, HI

Rampant industry-led monopolization and blatant disregard for the FCC's rulings is an insult to everything we as citizens choose to support you on. Take a stand against shady politics, anti-democracy lobbyists, and corporate power plays.
—Robert C. Jasper, Hesperia, CA

The US has the slowest Internet speeds and highest prices, please help change this.
—Will Schein, santa cruz, CA

It is your job to protect democracy not the rights of greedy wall street taliban thugs who are trying to destroy our country
—Gay Norris, st.louis, MO

The airwaves, the cyber space,belong to the people; not to greedy monopolistic businesses, like Comcast...
—Art Fogg, Hickory Hills, IL

Let the market decide. Not monopolies .
—Alan a Arnold, Hamilton, NJ

I want to be treated fairly and not have my private info sold by a large conglomerate.
—Chester Vidacovich, St. Bernard, LA

Cablecards are OK but consumers don't have exposure to the concept and it doesn't have the public exposure to succeed. The gatekeepers to access this technology - the cable companies themselves - have a vested interest in seeing it fail. "CableApp" as an upgrade is a good idea, but I would rather see price regulation and prevention of data cap/usage fees. Also, it's a given that people assume their data shouldn't be resold and aren't even aware of the extent of the exposure they suffer at the hands of their ISP.
—Casey Fipps, Chicago, IL

The American consumer is getting jacked on these cable bills, give us a break!
—Greg M. Schwartz, San Diego, CA

An open internet via net neutrality is a basic utility that everyone should babe access to. We are a third world country when it comes to fast, affordable internet services and that is largely due to these large cable companies with effective monopolies in their regions. They don't compete with each other and therefore each is able to reign supreme in their own area. It needs to stop.
—William Eldridge, Eugene, OR

Imagine having to "rent" a radio to listen to broadcasts!!!! And, please, let's keep our "stuff" private. Thank you for representing the PEOPLE of America, rather than catering to big business interests.
—Mike Jaureguy, South Chatham, MA

I feel VERY strongly about not letting any co. Use my private info except to provide the service and to deny any unnecessary controls over service or equipment. Look at the array of better, less expensive phones when we were allowed to buy our own phones apart from Tel co.
—David Kerrigan, Corona del Mar, CA

The United States was founded to ensure the well-being of everyone involved vs the long standing European style of the privileged few profiting in perpetuity at the expense of those "below". Help the US live up to these ideals. Help humanity keep making progress.
—G Scott Clemson, las vegas, NV

My private information is exactly that...private. Let's keep it that way. Also monopolies are illegal.
—Joan Stephenson, Windsor, CO

Protect our privacy!
—Luanne Anderson, Chinook, WA

The light is on. You guys are playing dirty cards and supporting corporate agenda's.
—Debra Thatcher, Idaho Springs, CO

Protect citizen's rights, not corporate profits.
—Mr. David White, Arlington, MA

like many older people, my only source of income is social security benefits. cable internet via time warner takes way to big a bite for anything decent as opposed to super slow.
—Jesus B Ochoa jr, El Paso, TX

I don't own a TV, but added a basic cable subscription to my internet subscription plan as part of a promotion to lower my cost. Comcast did not disclose in advance that there would be a charge for the set-top box which I could not refuse, even though I will not plug it in. This charge eats up half of the savings that were used to promote this bundle. There is no other industry where customers can be forced to take and pay for a device that is useless to them as a condition of providing an unrelated service! Comcast's functional monopoly on broadband internet in my neighborhood means I have no alternative; I can hold the set-top box and accept the charges including financial responsibility for any future failure to return the unit, or I can pay even more money for the exact same entry-level broadband internet service. Something has got to give.
—Ms. Denise Conner, Newark, DE

I do not want my information up for sale and we do not need Monopoly's!!
—Bruce Carlton, Mill Valley, CA

It's the right thing to do!
—David Favello, Walnut Creek, CA

I am tired of the monopoly my cable company has!
—Shannon Borthwick, Winthrop, MA

I need the FCC to work to stop Comcast from selling my private information without my consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those boxes i'm forced to rent each month. Thank You, Pamela de Maigret
—Pamela de Maigret, Los Angeles, CA

My cable bill is high enough and I see ads Time-Warner merged w/Charter. Whatever happened to the laws AGAINST monopolies?????!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
—Ann Burkes, Endicott, NY

Comcast and other large cable companies use their monopoly to price gouge. This is especially true in many areas, like where I live, where Comcast is virtually the only option.
—Robert Crozier, Mobile, AL

Selling private information for profit to other companies to spam you should be illegal for this reason: Common Sense. If you care about your constituents, you would take action to protect the powerless consumer against huge telecommunication companies looking to nickel and dime the consumer.
—Dan Vogt, Vista, CA

privacy.
—Tim van Amburg, Orangevale, CA

citizens with low incomes should have access to cable. after all, the basic principles by which the web runs was funded by citizen tax dollars. it's highway robbery to allow private corporations that benefited from citizen payments to now gouge their benefactors. thank you.
—Nona Glazer, Portland, OR

Dr. Richard Kuczkowski
—Dr. Richard Kuczkowski, Valley Cottage, NY

I want to end the invasion of our privacy. In addition, current pricing of cable services is outrageous and climbing every year. Thanks, in advance, for taking a stand for the consumer with protecting our privacy and lowering our cable bill. D. Roger Houston
—Roger Houston, Aptos, CA

It's hard as is paying bills. A few bucks saved could really help.
—James Janovsky, West Hills, CA

Of the 100+ channels bundled from my provider, I only use 20 or fewer. I should not be forced to pay for the others. And I should not be forced to pay for my personal information to be sold without my permission.
—Dinah Lea Jentgen, Las Cruces, NM

Rates are ridiculously high, keep rising, and in the US we pay more than other industrialized nations.
—Glynden Bode, Houston, TX

I'm pro-consumer, anti-monopoly.
—Brad Furst, West Lafayette, IN

Free net equals free Press.
—John h Loftus, New York, NY

The infrastructure of cable & fios have been paid for by the public. The telecommunications corporations should not be able to abridge the public's right to free speech in any way.
—Lauren Russell-Pank, Highland Park, NJ

Please protect the consumers, and support these common sense, fair policies that help American families.
—Carrie Hagan, Pittsburgh, PA

In addition to set-top cable boxes, please also include satellite receiver boxes for those fortunate enough not to subscribe to cable.
—F, Albuquerque, NM

People deserve privacy.
—Mark Harrison Jr., Bedford, IN

Stop the megacorps
—Kimbo Mundy, Albuquerque, NM

Every U.S. citizen’s information has never been less private than it is right now, at this very moment! Protect the people who elected you to represent them, not the lobbyists that pay you to be their puppet. Stand up for the right to privacy for the sake of the citizens of our country.
—Anthony M Rogers, College Park, MD

Citizens of the United States pay some of the highest rates if not the highest rates for communications. As a government agency I urge you to protect consumers.
—Donna Snyder, Hamburg, PA

I don't want cable companies selling my private information and I want to purchase and own a set top box of my choice from a competitive market.
—Thomas Smith, Clearwater, FL

This is important because where I live I cannot watch TV without a cable connection.
—Kathy Shimata, Honolulu, HI

The American consumer needs your protection. Work for the people not the big money corporations. If you don't protect us who will?
—Peter Michael Podesta, Fernandina Beach, FL

Since the dawn of the Internet age mega companies like Verizon Cox, ATT and Comcast have been providing inferior service and gouging consumers to provide over inflated salaries and benefits to their CEOs and their boards of directors. It's time that these companies with they're near monopoly power and who are above the law because of their lobbying power serve their customers and not Congress.
—Al Meda, Atlantic Beach, FL

I'm retired on a fixed income; ever rising costs make life more difficult all the time.
—Noel Eaves, Red Bluff, CA

The FCC's important actions should be pro-consumer, and not be beholden to special interests, either political or corporate. The FCC ought to defend the rights of individual citizens, and our public access to "the air waves" -- no matter what media they flow through. This is an extremely important mission, impacting elections, free press, free speech, freedom from monopolies, and access to information and news--the lifeblood of our society--regardless of income. Please help the FCC be all that it can be for all United States citizens, by quickly taking action to 1) prevent our personal information from being sold, and 2) fostering healthy competition by ending the monopoly (and forced perpetual rental) on DVRs and set-top boxes. Allow the market to--freely--decide. Heck, take all of 'em over and convert tv/radio/cable/internet & whatever's-next to a public utility! Just kidding, you probably can't do that. And wouldn't want the hassle anyway. But hopefully it made you smile. Even a wry grimace -- I'll take that. Have a great rest-of-your-day! Peace and love, Lori Kingery Urbana IL, USA!!
—lori Kingery, urbana, IL

Privacy is the key.
—Alan Steven Gonzalez, Minneapolis, MN

It is obvious this is beneficial for our people in all aspects and it would be nice if our government protected its people not the 1%.
—Barbara Selig, Roswell, GA

We need choices so we can have more control over what we pay and also need to protect our information.
—Maria Garcia, Miami, FL

I pay $168.75 a MONTH for expanded basic cable thanks to Comcast's monopoly and business practices. This is outrageous. Please act! Thank you.
—Jc, Alameda, CA

These two proposals present a golden opportunity for the FCC to move quickly and effectively in the public interest. Positive action will be a great credit in the public's perception of the Commission's legacy.
—Mr. Curt Dunnam, Trumansburg, NY

I STRONGLY object to having to pay $13.98 every single month, year after year, for two boxes that I could have owned outright years ago had I been allowed to purchase them. Please STOP the rip-off of the public NOW!
—Nancy Seats, Saint Louis, MO

Do your job!
—Karen Hennigan, West Grove, PA

This is very important for expanding consumer free trade, and also for individuals like myself that are underserved and overcharged routinely by cable giants (in my case AT&T Uverse).
—Jeff Dorman, Satellite Beach, FL

We need a free and open market for set top boxes like we had a few years ago, all of these companies are talking about letting them merge so things will be better. They want to have a monopoly so that we have to take their inferior equipment. They need competition so that the equipment gets better instead of worse. I do not want my private information being sold to anyone, unless I am the one selling it.
—Joe Martyniw, Saint Louis, MO

I am retried and need a lower bill
—Harold Phelps, Westland, MI

We already pay way too much for cable and then they expect us to pay monthly fees for those set-top boxes!
—Julian Yerena Jr, Parlier, CA

We already pay way too much for cable and then they expect us to pay monthly fees for those set-top boxes!
—Julian Yerena Jr, Parlier, CA

Please support the free market and stop protecting Comcast's monopoly. As more political communication (like presidential debates) moves to the cable networks, having cable is not just a luxury, but an essential part of being an informed citizen. Cable TV and broadband internet should be available to all at competitive prices.
—Bryan Wegman, San Jose, CA

It's time the Federal government started performing its Antitrust duties again. Broadband cable companies are among the worst anticompetitive actors in the U.S. today. They need to be reigned in. A large part of your job is to protect consumers against communications monopolists.
—Lonny Eachus, Spokane, WA

Just too many Americans are living paycheck to paycheck while slipping into greater debt; every reduction in our monthly debt payments would make our lives a lot more manageable.
—Douglass Turner, Alfred, NY

Dear Sirs, Access to the internet has become a necessity comparable to electricity and water. Please do your best at making this commodity affordable to every household in in the US. Thank you.
—Guido Laudisa, Beverly Hills, CA

My cable bill is ridiculous. I live in a rural area and there is only one provider. We do not have broadcast t.v. as our service area is too small and no one will install a translator to reach our area. I also strongly object to these companies selling their subscriber lists and other private information to third parties. Please take action now. J. G. McPhee
—Joe McPhee, Telluride, CO

monopolies must end]
—Peter S Mulshine, Phillipsburg, NJ

My cable and internet bill comes to over $212.00 a month, that is outrageous and does not include any movie channels.
—Barbara Kantola, Niles, MI

I'm a senior trying to keep my expenses as low as possible.
—Ms. Courtney Cazden, Lexington, MA

Privacy is important.
—Daniel Leventhal, ,

The privacy issue is obvious. Could not care less about cost but I know a few who do.
—Ralph M. Shannon, Hudson, FL

Comcast is not on our side. Do not give in to them!
—Arvin Blakeney, Centennial, CO

protect my privacy!
—Stephanie Schueler, Chesterton, IN

Please eliminate the cable industries monopoly on set top boxes. Allowing the cable companies to control these devices leads to few options available to consumers as well as less innovative solutions. Opening the market would drive competition amongst compainies, inspire new features and functionality, and empower consumers. The current closed ecosystems benefit the cable industry at the cost of consumer choice. Please end the free handout to the cable companies.
—Jonathan shkiele, Chicago, IL

I am planning to not use the internet for anything but video, basically fun, because my financial security is under assault at every level, not even the IRS or the DNC are safe. I have my cable company raising my bill every few months, and now they have told me I no longer qualify for any specials. So that means in a few months my bill will go up, and I have no recourse. Is that really Capitalism? Make the internet a utility, so it can be controlled by local commissions.
—Dawn Stanko, Dublin, OH

1984 is not my idea of way to live life
—Phillip Gordon, london, VA

Please lower cable bills to help the low income seniors living on low fixed incomes
—Paul Frizane, Mesa, AZ

Americans spend more on media than any other county and get less for our money. I expect the FCC to support customer fairness.
—Chris OMeara Dietrich, Campbell, CA

Please stop the corporate abuse! The middle class is suffering from corporate America!
—David Toledo, Hollywood, FL

We shouldn't have to pay monopoly bloated prices for cable service
—John Thomas, Hillsborough, NC

Please protect our privacy and lower our cable bills!
—Ethan Burnham-Fay, Hopkinton, MA

It is outrageous that COMCAST should be allowed to sell their customers' private information without the consent of those customers. It is a blatantly unfair practice that customers should be forced to rent set-top boxes when those items are available on the open market at a lower price than COMCAST's rental fees accumulated after a short period of time. Instead of protecting the monopolistic and high-profit practices of COMCAST the FCC should focus on insuring public access to reasonably priced cable services.
—Mark D. Normand, Hatfield, MA

Access to the internet is becoming unaffordable. We cannot afford to pay the prices asked for cable TV.
—Ed Werth, Dallas, TX

YOU Comcast are the only provider we have in our area. We pay $94 a month just to have some entertainment. We are in our late 70's and retired. it is not ethical for you to charge so much.
—Mr. Darlene Kirby, Magalia, CA

Mr. Wheeler. As citizens of US democracy we have right to our personal data privacy and free competition. Please act on both proposals positively. Thank you. Kirill Kravchenko
—Kirill Kravchenko, Silver Spring, MD

I don't watch TV, and only subscribe to cable service for internet access. Over the years I've seen my rates skyrocket--most months of the year my cable bill (for internet ONLY) is higher than my utility bill. This is outrageous price gouging, and it someone needs to take action to get it back under control.
—Lisa Talev, Austin, TX

I'm retired & on Social Security, These monopolies are gouging the public with high rates & poor service! We need lower prices! How about some regulation for crooks!
—Charlene Boydston, Pahrump, NV

Cable is too expensive up here.
—Wm Schultz, whitefish, MT

LOGIC. LOGIC. LOGIC. N-O-T GREED = DEMOCRACY DEMOCRACY NOT OLIGARCHY.
—Ms. Roslyn E. Walker, Marina del Rey, CA

I run a small internet business. The whole thing is based on the fact that I have the same access to potential custoners
—Ted Krever, New York, NY

I am on a fixed income so it is important that the FCC works to stop companies from selling our private information and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set top boxes we are forced to rent each month.
—Irlean Keyes, Mc Millan, MI

Looking out for the most is more important than helping the already huge.
—Linda Hamil, Marshall, MI

I don't want anyone to have access to my info!
—Francine Cohen, Havertown, PA

As a single, self supporting senior on a very limited income, I would like to look forward to being able to watch television and access the internet, but if the charges continue to escalate as they have, and in fact if they are not lowered, I can foresee a time when I will not. That time is not at all far in the future.
—Gail McMullen, Los Angeles, CA

Free and Open internet is the only net for America, leaders of the FREE WORLD.
—Haikeem-Olajuwon Stewart, Augusta, GA

I've been renting an old DVR from Verizon for about 6 years. The fee is about $15.00 a month. Therefore, I have paid over $1000 for an old piece of equipment that was ever worth more than a couple of hundred dollars. And I continue to pay! This is outrageous.
—Nicholas Nicolaides, Sterling, VA

This really needs an answer?! Obvious.
—Jeffrey Holzer, Randallstown, MD

I've got one choice for cable in my town. It's a monopoly. The only thing I've ever received from the various corporations that have bought and sold my cable account is - a higher monthly bill and "tiered pricing" for transmission speeds. It's ridiculous. Please do your job. Stand up for us consumers.
—Michael Moon, Costa Mesa, CA

Comcast has proven they do not care about corporate morality. We need to make sure that we let them know what is fair to everyone. Comcast is the biggest entertainment company in the US and they only care about their profits. The Olympic coverage is proof of their intent of a monopoly.
—Matthew, smyrna, TN

Survival, and combating monopoly
—Thomas Rippolon, putnam valley, NY

Fees for what comes through the atmosphere are obscene and obscenely high. I'm of an age when what came through the old Victrola my Grandmother had was free since it came through the "ether" as they called it then. Why are we paying these fees when they have so much funding from advertisers? The only ones benefitting from this kind of economic control are the advertisers and the cable/satellite/wi-fi owners. STOP IT NOW!!!!
—Cassinelli J. Robert, Sacramento, CA

I don't use a cable company supplied decoder, I use a TiVo. In spite of existing regulations, they haven't made that easy, or convenient. They regularly use their near monopoly position in this market (at least where I live) to harm customers.
—Gordon Williams, Fairbanks, AK

We have a right to privacy. Selling private information without my consent is completely unacceptable! We also need lower cable-TV bills. Ending monopolies would ensure that we have competitive pricing available to all.
—Gloria Flynn, Las Vegas, NV

Privacy for law abiding citizens is a natural born right.
—Marilyn Hackett, Franklin, VT

It is important for me to know that public servants work for the people.
—Maria D Fernandez, West Hollywood, CA

My cable bill keeps escalating, my choices are stagnant at best and filled with useless fluff. I am held hostage by a monopoly.
—Donlon Mcgovern, Portland, OR

Cable companies have too much power and I am paying ridiculous prices because of their monopoly.
—Todd Rogers, Akron, OH

Consumers are vulnerable to corporations squeezing the life out of our communication networks, devices, and peripherals. FCC, please do your best job to protect us and stop monopolistic, oligarchical corporate behaviors that hurt regular people. Expose their cozy corruptions of our political systems while you are at it. K? ThankU, All. Much respect for the good work you have managed to do so far...
—Charmaigne Scott, Salinas, CA

Let us protect the consumer and not the Cable Companies! It is long time to cut the LITTLE GUY a BREAK!!! MICHAEL P ABRAMS
—Michael Abrams, PARKESBURG, PA

DON'T LET REPUBLICANS STOP THIS!!! CABLE BILLS ARE BECOMING TOO HIGH FOR MANY OF THIS AND THAT IS WRONG! WE KNOW REPUBLICANS ARE RESPONSIBLE! DO YOUR JOB!
—Maggie Schafer, Boulder, CO

Monopolies kill competition so the only game in town is preset by the biggest corporation. Selling information that is not for sale i.e. private info sold without consent should be illegal. Isn't this covered by the Fourth Amendment? Do not submit to the political games of Congress - they have one agenda and it is not about representing the best interests of the people of this country.
—Julie Smith, Dexter, MI

Actually do what's best for the people who elected you for a change. Not a big corporation. It's my personal data and my money why should o have to use there cable box. This sort of thinking it's stagnating innovation To please a few lobbiests.
—Justin porter, east palestine, OH

Everyone is sick of big companies- and the power they always exert against the marginalized.
—Steve Vetter, Boise, ID

Because my data is my own property, and I need to know who gets access to it and to know as well why they are getting access and what is it going to be used for. There has to be transparency in all this process.
—Redona Kajmaku, ,

I'm already in a situation where Comcast has a monopoly on the Internet in my area. The costs are so much higher if I chose individual companies as my providers, so I am relegated to getting a Comcast "bundle" in order for my bill to be in the $200/month range instead of the $300/month.
—Cheri Gaspero, Monee, IL

I'm on a fixed income. Cable and internet bills are going through the roof. Us older people need a break
—Troy Tackett, Huntington, WV

Because it's the right thing to do!
—Robert Gaynor, Clear Lake, IA

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Alfred Denny, Oak Ridge, TN

I urge the members of the FCC to do everything in their power to protect consumers.
—Karola Spring, Lakewood, CO

We need open competition.
—Kirk Preston, Alden, NY

They are making plenty of money and still try to get more from us. I urge you to stop them. They should not be sharing our information without our permission either and this needs to be stopped as well. Stand with the people they are trying to prey on and stop them!
—Kimberly Aicone, Olympia, WA

You have to see the problems here. This is very clearly a monopoly. On top of that, how can you allow this company to sell our information - something we never agreed to. Please stop Comcast, a company that year after year scores poorly in customer service, but that many of us have no option to leave.
—Sara Crane, Seattle, WA

This is a no brainier, as to why it is important to the all people, who's privacy is in jeopardy, and who can afford higher cable bills?
—Jill gloger, Chicago, IL

I am concerned why the FCC is still waiting to address the privacy issue with cable companies. This privacy has to do with the inability to choose my own implement for viewing movies, TV, etc.. and the fact that my name and address are not considered private enough to keep them secure.
—Shirley Sharan, Fort Wayne, IN

Don't you think we are paying enough; most likely too much? Are your salaries contingent upon how much these companies are paid? Then reduce our costs as consumers now!
—Vincent Newman, Hollywood, FL

Do not give in to this kind of blatant power play that is inimical to the interests of the people you serve.
—Laura Horowitz, Pittsburgh, PA

Tired of not having competitive prices. I fully support the broadband privacy proposal and your efforts to end the monopoly on set-top boxes.
—Belinda Jones, Westbrook, CT

Fast reliable internet is now the backbone of our lives.
—Mark Arntson, Seattle, WA

I am so done with corporate america
—David Theen, Englewood, FL

This is important to me because it does seem to be a very real invasion of privacy issue. And lowering the cable is desirable.
—JoAnne Orr, Wooster, OH

Americans are being overcharged for everything and cable is one of the biggest offenders.
—Glen Conkling, Euclid, OH

I can barely afford the Internet as it is!
—linda hunt, Berkeley, CA

Comcast isn't the only TV service provider to gouge customers on control box fees.
—Michael L. McQuown, Philadelphia, PA

Keeping more money in the hands of the populace creates a better return.
—Susie Cassens, Fort Pierce, FL

This is critical. You need to protect my rights before those of giant corporations that consistently want to trample them for their own benefit. I have no other way to fight them and stop them.
—Michel Pronovost, ,

Don't like big corps.
—Hugh Fitzpatrick, ,

We need competiton not corporate communism
—Arvind Rangan, Houston, TX

I am a disabled single parent, and both my daughter and I are in school so we can become employable. Our internet costs over $100 a month!!! I live on only a thousand and cannot afford the internet we need to build a future. This is unconscionable!
—Carissa Daniels PMB 134, Bremerton, WA

Please work for consumers and not Comcast!
—Cathy Bangerter, Bothell, WA

Cable companies are monopoly's and they should be very regulated for the public good over profit.
—Connie Godin, Barre, VT

Comcast is the most hated company in the United States and has committed fraud regarding a situation with me. I will never allow such a company to rise to monopoly status without my 2 cents (ie a company without competition, too big to fail and certainly too large to be held accountable)
—Mike Kress, Ypsilanti, MI

Protect the citizens of the US. Stop selling out to corporate.
—Tammy Causey, Jefferson, OR

I have just basic cable and pay well over $30 a month just for basic TV channels. Please consider lowering the cable bill for basic channels.
—Ms. Renee Klein, Marina del Rey, CA

It is the right thing for the consumers.
—Bee Johnson, Atlanta, GA

Privacy is important because of identity theft considerations.
—Thomas Brady, Spokane, WA

As a "senior"cable customer and one who is on a fixed income, I am dismayed at the abuse of consumer privacy by the cable industry and especially dismayed at our constantly rising cable rates. The proposed policies would help protect consumers in very important ways! Please stand up to Congressional and industry pressure and their political games during this important time. We need our privacy protected and our cable rates lowered!
—F R Neely, Huntsville, AL

We value our privacy and our cable bill is outrageous. Time Warner has doubled our cost over the last 3 years, including the rental of the set-top box.
—James Hart, South China, ME

I cancelled my cable 7 years ago because I couldn't afford it then, even the cheapest "basic" cable. I live in a HUD affordable housing for Seniors building where I paid a "one-time fee" of $65.00 for WiFi and it is my only for of news and entertainment.
—Amber Joy, Seattle, WA

It's time to protect the American people and do what's best for us.
—Manetric L. Douglas, Indianapolis, IN

Do what is best for consumers, not corporations. Yet another example of corrupting influence of money.
—Gordon Lange, Kihei, HI

One: I have a right to privacy. The FCC should be defending it. Two: my cable/ internet monthly bill is $160. My cell phone monthly bill us over $200 for a household of three. And we don't even have half the premium channels available on cable, and only one of us maximizes cell phone apps and usage. Ridiculous that our communication fees should be this high. FCC should be fighting for citizens like us.
—Nancy Murphy, Maryville, IL

My husband and I are seniors on fixed income 1/4 of what we made three years ago. We shouldn't have to be poor.
—Nancy Craft Lopez, Westville, NJ

We have a right to privacy [period]
—Theresa Lepine, Woodridge, IL

Comcast already ignored the regulations requiring them to create a decoder to replace set-top boxes. Seriously, if buying cable television and internet and telephone is a legitimate reason to allow a company to sell private billing information, then how is it that we can prosecute people who steal our mail to sell the same information to criminals? The FCC must protect the people, not the corporations who aren't HARMED by being required to treat people with respect. People ARE harmed when their private information is sold without their permission. Get your priorities right.
—Stephen Joseph Hutchison, Aloha, OR

This is important for the average American citizen where the cost of living is going up everyday yet salaries are at all time low. Cable is a basic entertainment many wish to have. Please help provide the Americans what they desire.
—Brenna Matejka, Katy, TX

Cable companies have a monopoly on and monitor our usage, that needs to be stopped, big business in the US have to much unquestioned power!
—Bill Polesnak, Troy, MI

I should not be forced to rent anything I do not request like the set-top box.
—Jeanene Bergeron, Half Moon Bay, CA

listening to the people is a win win for both parties.
—Doloris Mikkelsn, Sutherlin, OR

Tell companies also not to add copyright protection to their broadcasts so that I don't need proprietary software just to decode channels that I supposedly am paying for. I cannot distribute the signal within my own household without having a set top box at each TV. That isn't fair use, it is attempting to force me to buy additional services. That would be both useful and save me money. If you need an example, look at what Time Warner does when you attempt to purchase anything beyond the 'basic' package to all of the other channels that I pay for in the way of copyright protection. I paid the money to purchase a box that uses a cable card to distribute the channels within my home on my internal home network (Homerun Prime), then I find out that it can't automatically distribute those signals to all of my Smart TVs because the software to remove the copyright from the live channels doesn't exist. Instead of being able to watch TV from any TV in my house, I am restricted to a couple of TV manufacturers or my PC because Windows Media Center is one of the few pieces of generic software that can actually remove the copyright and display live channels on-the-fly. Why does Time Warner broadcast with copyright protection anyway? Didn't I pay for the service to watch those TV channels?
—Patrick Stroud, Kernersville, NC

It is not OK for Comcast to sell our private information without our consent. It is time for the monopoly on set-top boxes to end as well.
—Jennifer Waters, Tucson, AZ

Since the early 1970s, I have had cable TV installed in my apartments and now my home. My guess is that over the years I have paid cable companies 10s of thousands of dollars. And now they want to capitalize on my loyalty. NO WAY! The greed being exhibited by the cable companies regarding the sale of my private information and the continued monopoly on set-top boxes is appalling. Stand up to them - tell them ENOUGH! Protect my privacy and lower my cable bill.
—Mark Cronin Ritter, Utica, NY

Poor people need to have cable access at low costs and decent speeds for finding work, and for entertainment and communication purposes. The poor are people too, not animals!
—Leonard Greene, Bluefield, WV

We used to have to rent the telephone company's phone! That was outlawed a few decades ago. Talking landlines here, and Princess and other on-the-wall phones. Also, the phone company monopoly was broken up, and Big Bell was gone, and the Baby Bells were born. Monopoly is the problem with cable TV, and a cause underlying wretched service and blatant overcharging.
—Martha Knight, Port Allegany, PA

our rights are being step on and makeing us pay more then we should cable use.
—Carl Moore, santee, CA

It's time to stop preying on the poor by repealing policy that's greed driven.
—Liann, Pittsburg, CA

The internet is the great equalizer of our era. It has the potential to empower any individual motivated enough to seek out the knowledge and resources it provides. 21st century Americans need easier internet access to thrive and compete in a global digital marketplace. Please don't let monopolistic corporations limit and inhibit this essential utility.
—Matt Watrous, Lansing, MI

My privacy is important to me and my Direct TV cable bill has been going up at an alarming rate, this needs to stop.
—Mr Gary Dean Cox, North Richland Hills, TX

to much of our private is getting lost or so they say ie a security breach or the transfer got hijacked, as for set top boxes just another gimmick to pinch the consumer for more outrageous profit for a service that is lack luster slow and doesn't compete with other countries. stand for the consumer not the monopolies that are the cable industry
—Chancellor Ibberson, Rochester, NY

The cable industry needs to be controlled by the laws of free trade. Please recind the monopoly on set-top boxes, and stop the sale of my private information.
—Stan Zeichner, Columbus, NJ

Privacy is important to me and also my cable bills are highway robbery!
—Linda Graham, Redford, MI

Please act in the interest of the public!!
—Paul Harrison, Edna, TX

Because it's the right thing to do for the American people
—Pete, Yucca Valley, CA

I am on social security..cable bill just went up again. They have added a charge to bring sports to me. They told me it is what the channels charge them. REALLY ?All I get all day is calls from liars and thieves. I always report to the do not call list. I have had the same dig. box for 10 yrs ..still paying. Perhaps I will get a little raise in my ss in a couple years. I worked for Comcast and I know of some of their little tactics to get more money. pease help us FCC ..you are our only hope. protect my privacy and get the crooked politicians out of it.
—Sandra McDaniles, Bloomington, IN

Start working for the PEOPLE instead of the greedy corporate telecom companies.
—Jim Yeaman, Montgomery, AL

I am sick of the cable companies constantly raising rates, then offering me lower rates if I will give them my information. I want my privacy.
—Richard Monahan, San Jose, CA

Please do what is right for your consumers and citizens!
—J martin, Henderson, CO

I am a senior whose sole income is social security. I only watch about 10 - 15 channels a month but my cable bill is $228 a month. The is a chance that I could move in the next few months to get lower rent but I will be forced to either pay off the remaining balance on my outrageous Comcast bill or re-up for another 2 year contract. This is wrong. Consumers should be able to pay for just the channels they actually want. I am subsidizing hundreds of channels that don't interest me in the slightest. Please refuse all merger requests from cable and phone companies. What we need is far more competition, not less. Please protect our privacy. I don't want any ads from anyone.
—Gloria Valoris, Sacramento, CA

Because we all use cable and should not have to pay more than our fair share for it.
—Ms. Linda A. Heath, Grafton, OH

I am old and live alone. Electronic means are the only method I have for keeping in touch with the world and my grown children who live in other states. Comcast and ATT have me by the short hairs and they know it. I have to continue my subscription even though I cant afford it.
—Forrest Hopping, Fresno, CA

No cable monopoly, lower the bills and protect customers privacy.
—Rafael Ormino, Silver Spring, MD

I am a Senior Citizen and the cable bill keeps going up and I keep signing for less and less. When will it ever end? TV and my favorite shows are important to me but I can not afford it. Please help.
—Katherine E. Cunningham, Pittsburgh, PA

Businesses should not sell our private information unless we have consented individually. Cable and forced eternal rental of a TV box is ridiculous. We should be able to choose our cable company and or buy a box. Done
—Linda Jung, Harlem, GA

We have generally slower speeds and higher rates than many other countries. Yet that isn't enough for our current near monopolies. Please act on what you have started.
—Philip Kuhn, Raymond, MS

We need digital freedoms !
—Jordan Poole, Philadelphia, PA

Each and every citizen has a Right to Privacy and to not being price gouged by our current cable monopoly system.
—D Lancon, Tujunga, CA

I don't want to live in a plutocracy.
—Roberta Richardson, Golden, CO

If both these measures are not adopted, we isolated seniors will lose our cable service.
—Mabel and Don McElhaney, Hillsborough, NC

I do not want my private information sold by Comcast. I do not want to pay for a set-top box rental by my cable company.
—Sandra Fujita, Kaneohe, HI

The FCC has NO BUSINESS selling my private information to anyone, nor to take any action to further increase already outrageous cable bill costs! The outright thefts that the traitors who have engaged in such abominable, manipulative acts, attempting to force the FCC to do their bidding at any and all costs, should be fined and punished to the highest extent of the law! We the people of this nation do not need to be further mistreated by the greediest amongst us!
—Janiece D. Staton, Beaverton, OR

Please, I can't afford what the company's which are a monopoly are doing to my financial. No raises, bonuses for government employees who do poor or criminal activities. I'm going from upper middle class to being poor. No joke this true.
—John Shea, Glenshaw, PA

Selling my information without my consent should not be permitted by any group, corporation, or business. Paying 100+ a month for internet and corporate driven media is not democratic.
—Jonathan F Crissey, Leander, TX

I want my privacy protected! and I want a lower cable bill. These are not outrageous demands but common sense steps for consumers. Thank you.
—Ann Collins, Saint Louis, MO

Selling my private information without my consent is, on its face, bad policy. Don't allow it. Also, a monopoly on any electronic device surely tends to delay efficiency and innovation in this area of technology. Again, it's bad policy.
—Bob Filipovich, Helena, MT

A rip-off should never be legal.
—Rolf Radicke, Bristol, PA

I support lower cable bills & privacy. NOT monopolies and more junk mail for stuff I can't afford to buy!
—Connie Cavara, Pittsburgh, PA

Stop letting telcoms rip off consumers and violate our privacy. Thanks to endless mergers there is no competition so we cant vote with our dollars. We need tbr FCC to do its job.
—Jessica Janecki, Durham, NC

The United States Supreme Court has ruled that the right to privacy is implied by the constitutional right to be secure in one's person and possessions. My personal information is my possession. All government agencies, including the FCC, are established to protect the rights and privileges of the people. Please protect our right to privacy.
—Patrick Chapman, Cedar City, UT

We are retired and the cost of living isn't going down. The politicians that want to give everything to corporations also want to cut retirement t benefits. Enough is enough.
—Barry Landson, Bend, OR

Just because people are forced to pay a certain amount for something, doesn't mean that it is worth the price. I can walk away from an over priced garage sale but I can not walk away from a monopoly situation of big telecom gouging its customers and selling info. PRIVATE INFORMATION IS PRIVATE!!!!! In case you were confused.
—Chris Gibbon, ,

I would like to say there is at least ONE federal agency that is honest and has the public good at heart... as it should.
—Steven Yerow, Jersey City, NJ

I do not want anyone selling my private info without my consent.
—Duane Young, Stoneham, MA

I am not fine with the huge bills for my cable...I think we should have more choices....and local government supplying services...may be a good choice !
—Daryl Pullen, Boise, ID

The cable companies make huge profits on our ever increasing cable bills. They have no business selling our personal information to third parties. Ending the monopolies in cable boxes will introduce competition which has proven for years to reduce costs and improve service.
—Jeff Odell, Irvine, CA

I'm on a very limited budget as a retiree.
—Anna Ansari, New York, NY

I support the FCC's broadband privacy proposal and the agency's efforts to end the monopoly on set-top boxes. You should too.
—Jon Connell, Brooklyn, NY

These are common-sense measures that benefit consumers without overturning some basic business model. Our private info should not be a salable item for companies we patronize, nor should forced rental be an acceptable add-on to our cable service.
—Brian Bland, santa monica, CA

my cable bill just for internet connection is obscenely high. also would love to keep my private information PRIVATE.
—Roberta Schepps, guerneville, CA

Comcast is too powerful and ordinary consumers have no real power.
—Jessica Clem, Spring, TX

I applaud your attempts to protect my privacy and lower my cable bills. These are important issues to me because I worry more and more about identity theft and access to information as we have no access without cable here on our island. Please continue to use my name and that of others that support your efforts on our behalf. Thank you so much.
—Deana Shelby, Anahola, HI

You okay ed encryption for basic cable TV now OK options to buy cable TV equipment instead of leasing it. The pre Greene v att days are over, and not need to be rehashed.
—Will, San Antonio, TX

We happen to be a member of "We the People"!
—Bob and Inge Owens, STUART, FL

The monopoly on set top boxes must end
—Robert L Branham, House Springs, MO

Dear FCC THANK YOU for defending American citizens and consumers. Today internet and telecommunications are are essential public, common goods. I have just come from Europe and am shocked and frustrated by the cost, opacity and avarice of oligopolistic communication companies. Now, they are intruding into our private lives and undermining the FCC itself. Please do not let Comcast intrude and exploit its dominant position to the detriment of ordinary Americans. Please Commissioner Rosenwor el, hold fast to FCCs principles. Resist the cable lobbyists! You have our thanks. Sincerely Jessica Gress-Wright
—Jessica Gress-Wright, Orange, CA

The FCC is supposed to work for the public
—Andrea Cassidy, Berkeley, CA

Fixed income ,don't have the money that they would require —Benjamin Chavez, Henderson, NV

Privacy is a fundamental right recognized by law!
—Dan Coplan, mdr, CA

Consumers do not need to have their privacy rights bought and sold to any bidder because multibillion-dollar corporations want to make even more money. Please protect consumers by taking action for their privacy and for their ability to reduce costs of communications.
—Veralene Campfield, Quincy, IL

Selling private information is the lowest ebb of profit pirates in the cable business, lower our cable bills and refrain from information sales.
—Pam Leighton-Burwell, Austin, TX

Cable is no longer a luxury but should be controlled like water,and electricity. The for profit big companies are squeezing us and limiting our free Choice and privacy.
—Duncan Jones, Lathrup Village, MI

Those who purport to believe in capitalism should champion competition in the set-top box market and should oppose monopoly control of cable service.
—Laurie "Ryan" Norton, Durango, CO

As a retired couple, it is important to us to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month also to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent.
—Kirk & Donna J P Mendenhall, Magna, UT

Because, even though I have kept the same service, my cable company wanted to raise my monthly rates by almost $50, until I called and threatened to cancel! That shouldn't be allowed!
—Donna Turiano, West Palm Beach, FL

These are common-sense, pro-consumer policies and that should be all the justification the FCC in its watchdog capacity should need to move forward QUICKLY on these proposals!
—Vern Maresh, Albuquerque, NM

Protect us from rate increases.
—William Jaskowiak, Eau Claire, WI

Catering to big corporate media conglomerates has got to stop! People deserve better. Please act in our interest instead of the interests of big money.
—Be Erickson, Westlake Village, CA

NO to selling our private information, sans our consent! Make it an illegal and punishable infraction!
—Polly Tarpley, Poulsbo, WA

Third world nations have better service at lower prices. Pretending these rates are warranted is laughable.
—Nan Ayers, Richmond, CA

There are not many options to get internet where I live, so I am forced to pay a high cost for a low bandwidth, which is absurd. Corporations just take our money, and they take advantage of us. We should be protected from this greed. The privacy issues comes when they sell our information with all the data mining they do, yet we still get charged a premium to use the internet. These type of practices need to stop.
—John Davalos, Bakersfield, CA

The Dmark should be the outside wall and carriers should have no say inside that nor should they have access to our usage patterns. This includes freedom to supply my own modem and to determine what information I am prepared to share with those to whom I connect . It's also time that companies like Comcast be required to supply itemized billing so we can see what each service is costing.
—Tom Leonard, Kailua Kona, HI

My cable bill is going through the ceiling. Why? I thought all this new technology was supposed to make things more efficient and cheaper? We have the worst service and the highest cost of the developed world. I was in Europe recently and they have much better services for much less money. I will have to cut the cord soon as it's costing too much!
—Robin Bergman, Arlington, MA

Cable companies are gouging consumers.
—Amber Cornett, Knoxville, TN

monopolies are bad and cable companies make enough as it is.
—Charles C Marye, germantown, MD

Companies should not be allowed to give/sell personal data to 3rd parties without permission. It is our information and we should control who gets iit and what they can do with it. SetTop boxes are a commodity just lite computers and cell phones. No company should have the right to requite that we rent the same box from them they we can buy on the open market. They are selling a service which should not be an open invitation to gauge the public for all they can get.
—Jim Kistler, Westminster, CA

Regulation is healthy for a fair and productive market. Please protect me, you are my voice in the world of mass communications.
—Jonathan Ohlen, Middletown, CA

If I ever can afford to subscribe to comcast again, I sure do not want them to sell my information to ANYONE!
—Dianne Bryant, Yuba City, CA

Do what is RIGHT & JUSTICE prevail for the consumer instead of us being roughshod over by Corporate America! They have ruined this Country enough that their greed and corruption may already be irreversible for a correction! Help the Consumer...will ya for goodness sake!
—Dianne Jacobs, Tucson, AZ

PLEASE !
—Rodd Ringquist, Forest Lake, MN

I do not want my privacy compromised in yet another way for the profits of big corporations. Do NOT use my confidential information in any way that compromises my privacy. And please lower my exhorbitantly expensive cable bill while you're at it, please!
—Edward R. Treuting, Emeryville, CA

consumer protections should outweigh corporate profits at ALL TIMES!
—Jeffrey Falkenstein, Cave Junction, OR

My privacy is of the utmost importance to me as living in a free democracy should entitle me! Cable companies should not hold a monopoly over us consumers.
—Patricia Page, Virginia Beach, VA

I need basic cable to get news and information. The cost to me for no-frills basic Comcast cable television is $38.09 per month. I live in an apartment where there is no other choice. Some of this amount is called "fees" of one kind or another. Billing is opaque and difficult to argue. Can you lower my monthly bill? At age 79, I live on a limited social security income. This Comcast bill is way higher than my electric bill.
—Elizabeth Walker, Santa Rosa, CA

It is important to me for those of you who have family know it is one of the things that keeps family's together. Entertainment!!!!
—Jennifer Alford- Alford-Eichelberger, MIDDLE RIVER, MD

Please protect the privacy of us consumers and stop the outrageous charges our cable companies are forcing on us just to access the Internet. Thank you.
—Ann T. Fathy, San Diego, CA

It is a civic duty to ensure that ALL citizens should be treated equally, including those who are unable to afford some of the means of communication that some of the "better" endowed citizenry" take for granted.
—Roger Hancock, Aurora, IL

These are policies that every cable consumer can support. Cable providers have certainly demonstrated that they will use every trick available to increase their charges while their customer service ratings are among the lowest of any industry.
—Jon Hannahs, Chicago, IL

Stop believing all the lies that big business leaders tell you they are going to do for the consumer. They're all lies. I want you all to stop being so gullible. You're public servants. Public...the little guy...remember? That's who you are working for, not some golfing buddy.
—Nancy Zaman, Los Angeles, CA

Cable and internet service providers were given carte blanche from their beginnings, and the FCC has the power to REASONABLY regulate their activities, in protection of consumers. Financial losses due to identity theft cost over $24 BILLION in 2012. Allowing cable providers and ISPs to sell consumer data will further erode the few protections consumers should be given. The FCC MUST stop the monopolies and their unethical business practices. Congress doesn't just fail to act, they interfere by arguing for their cable/ISP lobbyists, rather than their constituents. Please, please balance the power. Don't let cable companies or ISPs sell our data, and please, rid us of the monopolies. You're our only hope.
—Kimberly Black, Denver, CO

People cannot afford cable anymore & this is just one more example of corporate corrupting government agencies. Pleasw stand up for real live people, not wealthy businesses.
—Linda Ehrisman, Gasquet, CA

what gives them the right to sell my private information.
—Patrick Adams, shawnee, KS

Too many of these large corporate companies find too many ways of overpricing and overdoing unneeded or unwanted services. And to think privacy should be compromised or taken away, though customers have full legal right to privacy and not selling the customers out as 'public domain' is just deplorable and lousy business. You won't see me giving any business to Comcast, and it won't be Verizon either, as their situation is about lack of FiOs accessibility and Comcast's bullying monopolizing scheme. There's one cable company that is worth it, but Comcast has the monopoly in this area, with no competitive choices.
—Beth MacDonald, Greenfield, MA

I'm tired of being gouged, monthly, with extravagant fees for equipment and services. REIN THESE MONEY-MAD CREEPS IN!!!
—Dorothy G. Wilkinson, Hollywood, CA

You are betraying the people by leaving us open to hacking, etc. A lower bill is the right thing to do in this economic climate.
—Adele Galloway, Winfield, KS

I want to have the power over what personal information a company can and can't use. I want to have a say so don't give companies a free hand using my personal information. Please protect my privacy!
—Walter Thompson, Santa Rosa, CA

This would be great PR for you and greatly appreciated.
—Sherrie Rozniecki, Delaware, OH

Cable bills keep going higher & people like me get less for in spite of increases. Keep our cable affordable & do not give cable companies the right to sell my personal information.
—Evelyn Sepulveda, New York, NY

Why am I forced to pay for cable TV I dont even use, just for access to the internet? And I have to do business with this monopoly because nothing else is an option. Please stop the madness ;)
—Rob Goodenow, Topsham, ME

keep my living costs down, nothing but advertising on cable and too many channels I don;t watch and have to pay for. we should be able to choose what channels we want and pay a decent rate for them
—Calvin Varner Helen Zika Dan Wilson, Betty Wilson, Mansfield, OH

Privacy is a right, and we're losing it more each day. Stop the intrusion into citizens lives and help save Democracy in the process.
—Charlene Davies, Spokane, WA

Invasion of privacy is unconstitutional. Congress should not have a right to deny our rights.
—Jack Lloyd, Spokane, WA

Invasion of privacy is unconstitutional. Congress should not have a right to deny our rights.
—Sharon McHugh, San Ramon, CA

My cable television bills are way to high and my wife wants to drop Comcast and switch to an old fashioned antenna which will pay for itself in one month after we drop cable. We will be limited to local broadcast channels within 60 miles of our home but it will be worth it with all the fees and taxes. The FCC needs to protect consumers and not huge media conglomerates who have monopolies.
—Timothy Alstrum, East Hartford, CT

I'm a full-time wheelchair user. I do not drive a car. I live in a city that has bus transportation and very little snow so that I can get around at least a little. But it also rains nine months out of the year and has plenty of hills so along with the computer stuff I'm doing I watch TV because it keeps me company. It makes me feel less alone. But I'm on a fixed income and the cable companies have reduced the number of stations available on my tier twice so I'm down to about half of the number of channels I had when I signed up, with no reduction in price! I'm basically being charged more that I was when I signed up for half as many channels. Believe me when I tell you I am not inclined to go to iron tier, but I don't want to be without television access either. The world is changing to vast and they need a way to keep up with it in real time. I use the Internet a lot to as I help manage a lab for people with disabilities but I can only take care of part of the picture. People need to be in use TV without being scalped as far as prices. Thank you for listening.
—Tom Ross, Seattle, WA

Cable companies have pretty close to monopoly power. My apartment building owners do not like satellite connections (they think they do damage cable connections don't) and forbid me from having them-- so I have no choice but cable. Please do not enhance my cable company's monopoly power over me.
—Ken Perry, Oxford, OH

It is beyond outrageous that any company can sell my personal information, especially without my knowledge or consent. I strongly urge you to prohibit this practice and keep my private information private.
—Jeff S, Ogdensburg, NY

There is no real competition outhere where customers can choose between various companies for a better rate and service. Only the big companies seem to have their monopolies and sticking you with large bills and poor service. I remember when cable internet first took off. There were so many local comapnies who offered better service and price for customers to choose from. Just about all of them were bought and merged into this massive money hungry monster we see today. Finish what you have started and do it for the American people. Just about everyone is sucking the blood out of us. DO THE RIGHT THING!!!!
—Arafat Khaskheli, Spring, TX

Both of these issues are part of the very reason the FCC exists. Do the right thing: put us before the corporados' insatiable greed any prying.
—T Jeffries, ,

We deserve fair prices and a free and open internet. Make it so.
—Joseph Barlow, Indianapolis, IN

i am an older woman and can barely pay my cable bill for internet and phone - i gave up tv because i simply can't afford it. If the internet starts costing or costs keep going up, pretty soon i and many millions like me will be cut off, and that's only going to increase the need for expensive government resources. Please do you job
—Rev Louisa A. Dyer, Weaverville, NC

Say no to the cor
—Deborah Brody Chen, Cromwell, CT

We should have a right to privacy and not be subject to corporate monopolies and lack of competition
—Victoria Crampton, Bozeman, MT

This is common sense. Just do it already.
—Deborah Crohn, Portland, OR

I NEED TO SAVE MONEY
—Mr. William Ruch Jr., Cranbury NJ, NJ

Please, our privacy needs to be protected. Cable/TV is way too high. Ending the monopoly on the set top boxes we must rent would help lower our costs.
—Deborah Peterson, Indianapolis, IN

I have paid over $3,000 for my AT&T set-top boxes over the past four years, in addition to $9600 for content & Internet access. This is way too much for TV & internet. And the cost keeps increasing. Please help!
—Lee Lindsey, Cypress, TX

We need a free press that's accessible to all. That can't happen when corporations who have no interest in serving their stakeholders increase prices and decrease services in order to profit themselves and their shareholders.
—Cindee C McCallister, Costa Mesa, CA

I don't like getting unsolicited phone calls, mailings etc. And, as I am retired, welcome any reduction in bills.
—Ms. Catherine Loudis, San Anselmo, CA

I support the FCC broadband privacy proposal. It is crucial to sustain the integrity of the internet.
—Gloria E Donohue, San Francisco, CA

My personal information is private and should not even be collected, let alone shared. Forcing consumers to rent overpriced boxes is a prime example of crony capitalism. Free market be damned, as long as cable companies keep "contributions" flowing.
—John Persico, Buffalo, NY

I am already besieged with phone calls, mail, and email from parties that have no business contacting me. Privacy invasion and identity theft are growing in a scary fashion. The FCC has not been proactive enough in protecting consumers in this area. This needs to change immediately.
—Dr. K Stahl, Fort Lauderdale, FL

We need competition in cable not one company that can charge as much as they like to customers.
—Bernadette Belcastro, FLORAL PARK, NY

Cable rates are sky high!
—Dick Gatz, Lexington, KY

Getthisdone= tired of paying and getting little in return
—Nanette Wizov, Penns Grove, NJ

As a consumer, I know that prices keep escalating as we have fewer choices. Monopolistic mergers keep taking more money out of our pockets. As a citizen, I believe that I have a right to control my private information. If I am OK with letting it be sold, then the profits should belong to me.
—Sandra Stein, Ithaca, NY

Keep our private information private. Why should a private company be allowed to profit from our information?
—Batya van Messel, New York, NY

The FCC should be watching out for the interests of the consumers. It's time you do your job!
—Ginny Corwin, Middleton, WI

Monopolies are supposed to be illegal in this country and no one should have the right to sell your information without your consent.
—J Belcastro, Floral Park, NY

End the monopoly and leave my information private
—Cindy curran, bowdoinham, ME

This is important because the cable companies charge us way too much for tv. Ehst was once was free basic channels is no longer. And unless someonevsteps in its only going to get worse
—Kelly Bechtel, ,

Cable fees are killing us... I remember when the only tv was free over the air and we had to suffer through commercials. Now we still suffer through commercials but pay a premium for the privilege. Cable TV needs to be affordable for all because television provides the nation with important information often vital to us as a united nation of diverse people.
—Paul G Ecklund, Marietta, GA

MOST MEDIA COVERAGE IS TOO VIOLENT PLEASECREDUSE VIOLENCE IN THE MEDIA. THANK YOU
—MICHELE DAwn SANDERSON, Walnut Creek, CA

I spend more money on watching TV than I do on my car payment. This is wrong.
—Lynn Levine, Minneapolis, MN

My personal habits are mine, they shouldn't be up for sale.

End political games. Citizens vs corporat interests
—Linda Medeiros, Cloverdale, CA

I value my privacy, especially when I'm online.
—E Mothershead, Mesa, AZ

This is about the PEOPLE, not the corporations. Please represent us.
—Sandra V. Mueller, Livingston, MT

I have a limited income, and I need to save up for more important things like buying a car which I'm saving my hard earned money for. People like me depend on cable and broadband today as a way of life in today's America. People with limited incomes shouldn't have to bear the cost of more unnecessary higher cable bills.
—David Broden, Framingham, MA

These cable prices are out of control. Already I have turned off my TV. What is next? This isn't the America I grew up in where the rich become richer at the expense of the working class citizens. Prices must be lowered.
—Pamela Sheridan, Woodstown, NJ

Duh! Really? C'mon, personal liberties AND privacy are cornerstones of our freedom. Get with the 21st century, eh?
—Joe Cooper, Austin, TX

Costs are unreasonable.
—Linda Norton, College Station, TX

If prices don't come down, our family will have to cancel cable. Groceries and medicine come before cable.
—Mariko Yannacone, Palm Bay, FL

Privacy is important to me. If Comcast can sell my data, it puts me at greater risk of identity theft.
—J M, Columbia, MD

Help make this a government by the people, and for the people.
—Dwight Tuinstra, Potsdam, NY

I want freedom of choice regarding set-top boxes, which will lower my cable bill and allow me greater choice for viewing. Also, no providers should be able to sell private information about me without my consent. My right to privacy should not supersede a cable company's assumed right to profit off of information I did not agree to share.
—Anthony Glover, Bronx, NY

Please, monopolies are un-American!
—Maria Jacobson, New Ulm, MN

Because of cable's high prices, we did away with our cable. Comcast does not have the right to sell my private information.
—Michelle Lever, Kansas City, MO

A lot of us are housebound and depend on regular Television, which has been ruined by cable. So it is only right that we pay low premiums on our cable bills considering that we are having to pay for something that for many years we got free! I can barely afford my cable! But it is all I have!
—June Arnett, Dallas, TX

My cable bill is larger than my car payment. Something ain't right.
—Larry Sullivan, decatur, GA

We already have little real choice in tv and pay exorbitant rates. Are information should not be allowed to be sold and there must be competition in the set top box industry.
—Jeremy Sohn, Plainfield, IL

It makes dollars and "SENSE"!
—Robert Baxter Jr, Clarkston, MI

My family will be unable to afford the continued abnormal high cost of cable TV with internet and will be moving to an all mobile/cell phone plan.
—Julius Tasselmyer, Trucksville, PA

You drag you asses every time there is something to do for the working or middle class. Delay, compromise its getting old. Do you damn job for a change.
—James Norgrove, Winter Park, FL

I am tired of these internet and telephone companies running over the rights of the American people.
—Lj Lombardo, Beaumont, TX

I think it should be obvious to all of you why this is important to me.
—Dave Benson, Aurora, OH

We have been losing our privacy in our personal business and lives increasingly. Please pass the FCC's Broadband Privacy Proposal and stop the selling of our prrsonal information by Comcast and others. Also please stop the monopolies including of set-top boxes for cable service.
—Victoria Bower, Puyallup, WA

I am on SSI and I pay $56.00 a month for basic Internet as it goes up Every 6 months when they want you to take TV & phone service , You Decline and its goes up It is All I have , just a computer and I can't pay any more for so little.
—Alita DeMarco, Ypsilanti, MI

We rely on you to protect national interests over special interests. Please do your best!
—Deborah J. Miller, Austin, TX

It's REPUGNANT that you vote along Political Party lines instead of representing the best interests of your fellow citizens. How much money did you get when you sold your souls???
—Dr. Jeffrey Paul LaGasse M.D., Freeland, WA

Individuals have no bargaining power against giant enterprises. We rely on you to protect our interests.
—Alvin Goldman, Denver, CO

As a senior citizen, my income is limited, while cable tv is my main means of aquiring information and entertainment, it is becoming increasingly unaffordable.
—Sunny Payne, Philadelphia, PA

Please do the right thing about privacy and cable boxes.
—Onka Dekker, Washington, DC

We are all aware where this is going Internet providers won’t rest until the government’s net-neutrality rules are dead! Kindly do you job and stop the hypocrisy. thank you
—Sharon Scanlon, Cherry Hill, NJ

Already there's too much of OUR activities being logged, sold, 'dig-data processed' for further, future more effective suasions upon us against our wills. Please allow the American citizens to have access to, to consume some information & entertainment without having the details of our activities being 'big-data-ed' for some else's goals & bottom-line.
—Umar Bell, Whitefish, MT

Selling our information without option or consent is unethical and not in the public's best interest. Legislation to protect citizens from monopolies was enacted for very good reasons; serve citizens
—Jamie Myers, Fort Collins, CO

I believe in PUBLIC ownership of PUBLIC resources. If we can't have that, then we must not tolerate monopolies. Please protect access and privacy.
—Pamela Williams, Boise, ID

Please take action to end the monopolies that cable and satellite companies have in the United States. Consumers have no true choice. The cable and satellite companies seems to have complete control over certain areas which means they can charge anything they want. This situation is the opposite of a free market.
—Susan Burton, Columbus, IN

Lower cable bills mean I can help my family more financially. Please do your jobs and finish what you started!
—Christian Bryant, Detroit, MI

Stop huge mergers and big money interests from denying free and easy access! The internet is not for the Wild, Wild West!
—Eric John Fry, Dallas, TX

Don't force us to rent the boxes! It's highway robbery on a monthly basis!
—Karen Hewelt, New Baltimore, MI

I want my privacy protected.
—Virginia Jastromb, Northampton, MA

I am a disabled senior, and I can barely afford cable TV now, and it's all I have to keep me company during the day, and warn me of bad weather. Please help me so I won't have to give this up.
—Patrice Ann Shay, Byron Center, MI

FCC, please stand up to cable industry and their friends in Congress. Let us preserve democratic forms of communication.
—James Donaldson, Okanogan, WA

FCC, please stand up to cable industry and their friends in Congress. Let us preserve democratic forms of communication.
—James Donaldson, Okanogan, WA

This is a matter of common sense and fairness
—Sharon Crane, Cody, WY

I cut the cord years ago and use a ROKU with 700+ channels currently only paying for NETFLIX and HULU. High rates are why!
—David J Miller, Gilford, NH

I have cable to listen to the news (not Fox) and C-span but, they keep raising the cost and as a senior, I can't afford it. I'm not alone. We are being forced to subsidize non profitable channels and pay for the set-top boxes. You can end the monopolies and the selling of private information. Please do so before the end of the Obama Administration.
—Margaret Wilson, Green Bay, WI

Money is tight as is with a min wage full time job without renting something so superfluous.
—Jason D Carlisle, Indianapolis, IN

For many working people cable tv is a huge source of entertainment but the cost is becoming prohibitive! A few companies monopolize the industry and hold us hostage.

Too much profit.
—Marianne Amann, Ingleside, IL

Stop the Greed
—Rick Foster, Lynch Station, VA

Media companies keep merging and sucking up more power at the expense of consumer privacy and choice. Buck the trend. No one else has the power to fight back.
—Lawrence A. Swain, Temecula, CA

My privacy is not yours to take.
—Hanna Kutcher, Sylvania, OH

I need the cost of cable to be lower
—Maria Mota, ,

I'm sick of the lack of Anti-Trust enforcement. Your next move will be to Ireland? T.U.R.D.S.
—Yara Mello, Yelm, WA

My personal information is not for sale and I wont allow the likes of Comcast, Verizon or the like to arbitrarily steal my information and sell it to their "3rd party partners. That would be total BS if the FCC allows this kind of crap to happen.
—Donald L. Burg, Pomona, CA

During the last 4 years, my cable bill has doubled...without ANY adjustments on my part. As far as I'm concerned it's a monopoly. I have two choices in my area, and that is true all over the country,..some have only one choice. I am absolutely opposed to bundling manipulations.
—E Muriel Schlecht, Tewksbury, MA

My privacy should not be sold without my consent..
—Geri Nolan, Milwaukee, WI

I'm a retired school teacher and I live on a fixed income that does little or no adjustment for inflation. Therefore, it is getting harder and harder to make ends meet. It would help if Cable and dish bills could remain relatively small.
—Mr. Wayne Flick, Cimarron, CO

Right now my Comcast bill is between $155-169, mo. & that is way more than I can afford. When I moved into this senior housing unit, I was told that we HAD to use Comcast, as the company that owns these units, "Interstate Realty Mgmt., aka The Michaels Organization, I was told that they contracted with Comcast/Xfinity to provide our tv, telephone & internet providers. Being a senior citizen on a fixed income, & was quite ill when I moved in 2 yrs. ago, I did nothing about what I consider to be a monopoly that I was forced into. It began around $99/mo. & now it is so very much more. PLEASE help me & all others who have been forced into using Comcast or nothing. Protect us from this huge, heartless MONOPOLY. Thank you so very much!!!
—Elizabeth Juvet, Cloverdale, CA

My privacy is my business, not comcasts nor att's. And no monopoly is wanted or needed in a free and democratic society.
—Mark Bachelder, San Anselmo, CA

This monopoly is corrupt and takes advantage of the American people!
—Anita Vogel, Orange City, IA

In spite of what radical capitalists will insist on, every single thing should not be turned into a commodity. Our right to privacy is certainly one of those things.
—Gary Alderette, Santa Rosa, CA

1) No corporation should be allowed to sell anyone's private data without that individual's consent! Our privacy should be protected by Constitutional law, and if it isn't, we need an amendment to safeguard our personal data, just as much as our bodies! 2) Cable monopolies are bad for this country! Such monopolies keep the costs of service artificially inflated, halt technological progress, and corrupt the local governments that support these monopolies! Also, cable companies that have monopolies are notorious for terrible service!
—Linda Lee, Atlanta, GA

FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler has two strong proposals on the table: one would stop Comcast from selling your private information without your consent, and another would lower your cable-TV bill by ending the monopoly on that set-top box you're forced to rent each month. Please protect my privacy and lower my cable bill TODAY.
—Joe Ayers, Racine, WI

I have a right to free access without monopolies strangling the air ways.
—Michael House, Salt Lake City, UT

We can only get tv reception through cable tv and it is too expensive
—Carol Gordon, Los Angeles, CA

I'm retired and getting SQUEEZED.
—Mr. David Audette, Saint Helens, OR

Internet access is now so ubiquitous in our society that it is nearly a necessity. One cannot get a job, do research for school, or locate certain services without an internet connection. Do the right thing, protect the internet from companies like Comcast
—Brian Wagnon, Springfield, MO

I am very concerned about privacy. I think big companies like Comcast should need my permission to sell my private information. I'm a Comcast customer. They probably know all kinds of personal stuff about me. It's not good to think they can sell that information to someone else.
—Joshua Sperry, Oakland, CA

I am housebound so all my social interactions are through electronic media. Privacy and cost are very important to me.
—Katherine Lake, Marshalltown, IA

I am a senior citizen, of course, living on a fixed income. Comcast just raised my cable/phone/internet bill by $35/month. I can't afford that! I am currently trying to decide what I want to give up...cable/phone/internet? Food? Prescriptions? Giving birthday and Christmas gifts to my children and grandchildren? Please do whatever you can to keep cable bills down.
—Linda Ahart, West Roxbury, MA

This is important for every obvious reason. Not only is it ludicrous that we pay four times the rate of nearly any country in Europe for inferior service, it is just another greedy slap in the face from our corporate overlords.
—Denver Davis, Captain Cook, HI

I am paying 192.00 a month for basic cable service.
—Ed Gould, Chicago, IL

Cable costs are outrageous; further erosion of our privacy ifor someone's commercial gain is deeply depressing.
—Dr Nora J Klein M.D., houston, TX

The FCC doesn't seem to understand anymore who they work for, and what their responsibilities are. Please protect the people's right to privacy. Many thanks.
—Caroline Good, sherman Oaks, CA

First, selling private customer information is bad enough but doing so without a) notifying the customer & b) not having the customer's approval before hand is simply egregious. Its things like this that keep me from getting cable. Second, another reason I don't have cable is the "extras" they charge for that they know you'll to pay or no cable service for you. The FCC should remember they're supposed to protect the customer not the provider(s). Pretty Simple!
—Pat Palmer, Indianola, IA

from the start we were told that if we agreed to help pay to run the cable lines that we would have a voice in the process. We were told that we would be able to choose individual channels to control our bills. The cable companies have enough power, they should not be able to sell our personal information
—Joan Ludvik, Lumberton, TX

I'm tired of geting Concast ads in the mail and email. And you are tasked with helping us, the consumers: please lower our bills!
—Vic and Barby Ulmer, Saratoga, CA

For all of the above reasons. Kathleen —Kathleen Nelson, Denver, CO

My personal information is not for sale by the non-competitive cable company that I am stuck with in my community… and I should be able to look to a competitive pay-TV set top box. Pass the new rules now.
—Bernard J. Couming, Stoughton,, MA

duh..?
—Frank Maiorano, Brooklyn, NY

Thee FCC job is to protect the public interest, not promote the private sector. The private sector is doing fine.
—Jeff Goodwin, Los Angeles, CA

It is extremely important that you stop Comcast from making more money by selling private informaton. You have also been ask time and again to force these companies to stop gouging people so that their CEo's can get even richer. I don't want my personal information to be sold for any reason, and it's way past time to make them lower their prices so that it is more affordable to low and fixed income Americans.
—Carol Quick, Bloomfield, NM

Cable costs are too high so we get our TV and radio over the air. Many people we know have also rejected cable due to exorbitant costs and limited choices. Our privacy is essential.
—Cheriel Jensen, Saratoga, CA

Because you must stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent. You can also lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Lila Berman, Tucson, AZ

I care about my privacy. It should not be legal to sell my private information without my consent. I thought it was the job of government to protect the people not corporations.
—Elizabeth A. Senhen, San Diego, CA

We need more oversight and control of our personal data that these companies collect. When it comes to personal data we should have an opt in system where you are assumed to opt out of data collection and selling of personal info. Instead you should have to opt in to programs to sell and share your data. This only makes sense in light of the constant hacking scandals, we the people cannot expect these unknown third parties to protect our valuable information.
—David Lira, Manvel, TX

Internet access has become an essential component for anyone living in the US. The internet was created to facilitate universally equal access. Unfortunately Service Providers are working to limit access to those who can pay the most. They would render the only level playing field in the world, into a sad pay per view tv channel. I urge you to protect consumers' privacy, regulate fair pricing and ensure quality service. Thank you Brent Supperstein
—Brent Supperstein, Colorado Springs, CO

Cable and ISP companies may be the future of commerce. They must be fair.
—Gregory A Nasif, Brookline, MA

Like the modem for high-speed internet cable (which we once had to rent forever), consumers should have the option of supplying their own set-top box.
—Morrow Frank, Bellingham, WA

I strongly believe that shopping Comcast strengthens innovation and supports start-ups and smaller companies. And as the US serves as a role model for most other democracies, your decision has a large impact on European countries!
—Dr. Matthias Doblies, Glienicke,

For too long the cable giants have monopolized the agenda. It's past time to reign them in!
—Herb Long, ASHLAND, OR

As a senior surviving on Social Security, the $11.75 per month I pay for the rental of the set top box is a major hit on my tiny amount of disposable income. No company should be allowed to sell any individual's private information with out consent. Your vote literally affects each day of my life. Please think about me and place your vote in the interest of the consumer over the corporation. Thank you.
—Michal Bouilly, Camarillo, CA

compared to the rest of the world, cable is too expensive already

Corporations exist to serve us citizens, not the other way around -- unless one is an acolyte of the sociopath and misanthrope Ayn Rand (as are Paul Ryan and so many of his fellow Republicans).
—AJ Averett, Potsdam, NY

Comcast having less cash and in so less political clout =win win
—stafford Carter, Bremerton, WA

80 yr old retiree-vet-fixed income-live below poverty lever, & there are a lot of us,,peace
—Frank G Sandoli, akron, OH

We have been over charged for years now is the time to end the unfair business practices!
—Lee Taylor, Port St Lucie, FL

Comcast is already a monopolistic menace. They never should have been allowed to merge with a TV network, and now they want to sell our information as well? They shouldn't be allowed to bully a government organization by making threats, either. We need you to stand up for what's right, if you don't, who will? We spend on you to exercise the power we do not have as individuals over ruthless, power-hungry companies like Comcast.
—Nancy Norbeck, Lawrenceville, NJ

So may of us are on fixed incomes that we need lower cable bills.
—James van Maanen, Boca Raton, FL

Opening the ubiquitous "cable box" to competition would increase competition, so we'd get a better product at better price. Recall how such moves improved the telephone industry- when we no longer had to purchase the phones from the phone companies, the phones immediately got better AND cheaper.
—John R. Vigna, New Kensington, PA

Cable bills are outrages! The cable co. make enormous amounts of money just on renting us the cable boxes alone. These companies are to large and should not be allowed to become any larger.
—Ann I. Aurelio, West Sayville, NY

Laws such as the bills presented before you are what was supposed to make this country great. It is a shame we have went so far the other way and we do not even realize it. Please do the right thing.
—Timothy Clark, Paducah, KY

WHY? would you allow Comcast to make a profit by selling our private information? WHY? It is just plain wrong and smacks of corruption at the highest level of government agencies
—Ron Kaminski, Patchogue, NY

Cable bills are entirely too high. We're tired of paying for things we don't need.
—Elizabeth McDonough, Alexandria, VA

The FCC's regulatory policy decisions also affect those of us in the electronic universe outside US physical borders. And while our methods may differ, we face the same issues that you are dealing with. Hopefully you will continue to serve reasoned public interests over those of Comcast (et al), and not let them control our shared "airwaves". Thank you for all you do.
—Alex Burton, ,

Chairman Wheeler, you can stand with the masses against the power and influence of the almighty dollar. Comcast and other Big Corporation's only concern is to control and maintain their own oligarchies, for their own greedy benefits. They are in zero way concerned about how they would negatively impact us. They already gouge us with these outrageously high rates, and poor service. Because they recognize that they are the only game in town, and they take advantage of us, accordingly. Stop their abuse of the masses. Do not give them anymore power and control over us, as we have no recourse against them.
—Arturo Blake Sr, Mount Prospect, IL

I'm tired of corporations taking precedent over citizens. America wasn't founded by Comcast.
—Michael Neeman, Dayton, OH

I don't have cable any more. Didn't want Comcast as my provider.
—Mike Kostich, Milwaukee, WI

Cable and Satellite companies are out of control.. Pricing is outrageous. You need to get a handle on this.
—Ivey, Clinton, ME

We need protection from big business greed and power
—Nancy Blastos, Redlands, CA

I AM DISABLED.GOING OUT IS A STRUGGLE OF PROPORTION .BY BUYING CABLE ITS ACTUALLY GIVES SOME ME HAPPINESS ! THE PRICE OF CABLE IS VERY EXPENSIVE AND TAKES AS LONG TO PAY AS WHEN WE ARE TURNED O FF AFTER A FEW MONTHS OF NON PAYMENTS
—Brian T Bayer, williston park, NY

It is the job of the FCC to protect the consumer from big cable companies, not to frustrate and block our protections. Remember, if the GOP gets its way your agency will be eliminated entirely as will your jobs. Get it done!
—Paul Apollonio, Garden Grove, CA

The cable companies & big telecom have monopolies in our cities. They have managed to pass local laws that prevent cities to provide high speed internet to their residents & businesses.
—Carl Hearne, North Canton, OH

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Mrs. Wilkie Little, WINSTON SALEM, NC

Soon to be on retirement income only;, will no longer be able to afford cable and there are no free over the air channels in my vicinity. We need to curb prices in every way to continue access to information and entertainment for seniors.
—Janet Smoker, Corvallis, OR

Cable rates are through the roof! Stop allowing super-monopoly cable conglomerates to rip off consumers!
—Janis Lentz, Ocala, FL

I can't even afford cable TV, we watch off of a digital antennae.
—Kelly Small, Schoolcraft, MI

Consumers should NOT be forced to pay the never ending rental fees for set-top boxes. After a few months rental fees, boxes are bought and paid for and the fee becomes gravy for telecommunication companies bottom line.
—Denise A Hickey, Orono, ME

We're moving from simple obstruction into Neo-Fascist obstruction, the kind that leads to all sorts of unpleasantness for those who are doing the obstructing. Please tell Republican Congressmen that many Americans feel that this year may be the final straw. Tell them to give up the corporate alignment before it is too late. Because once things start to go bad, you can't pull them back.
—Joseph O'Shaughnessy, Downers Grove, IL

Don't let them bully you into allowing them to invade our privacy and set their own rates. We are counting on you to protect the rights of the consumer and not allow the cable bill companies to increase their profits at the expense of our Constitutional, as well as other legal rights.
—Anita McInnis, Bellflower, CA

Help me! Government and corporations are targeting and taking away virtually everything I have. I am losing my freedoms, my cultural connections, my food, my healthcare, my privacy, and my sanity. Please do what you can to save me.

—Barry G. Davis, York, ME

No one is protecting the people from corporate abuse. This has to end.
—Thomas Moore, Philadelphia, PA

Because of monopolies there are only two internet providers to my home and both are expensive. I would love to have access at a reasonable price and to be able to use it for my grandchildren!
—Dr. Judy G. bramlett, Meadows of Dan, VA

I don't have cable because I can't afford it. If the bills were lower, maybe I'd change my mind.
—Cris D'Angelo, Tampa, FL

Good grief, people, do your job and protect our privacy . . . what's left of it . . . from further corporate marauding!
—Maura Stephens, Spencer, NY

OMG !
—Lynn Levin, Bayonne, NJ

Private information is by it's very nature private! Let's keep it that way.
—P S Wright, pottsboro, TX

There is a reason I ditched all cable/satellite providers, and this is it. The price is too high, and the providers hold all the cards. Ask anyone about how to run with Comcast and they'll say "after 12 months of the promotional price (what it really should be) just call them and threaten to quit, they'll lower the price a little". Just that should tell you a little about how they operate. Add in the Lobbying, and dirty pool they play on the public they really need to be brought back into line. I know they (mostly) operate by the letter of the law, but certainly not the spirit of the law. Lets adjust these laws and bring them back to where they should be. I think its time again for another round of what occurred when Bell was split up.
—Howard Robinson, Saratoga Springs, UT

End the cable monopoly!
—Shad N, Lansing, MI

As cable companies consolidate, they raise fees once or twice a year. People's income does increase at that rate.
—Edwina White, Sacramento, CA

You cannot have a true democracy and we have never had one, unless ALL citizens have the same opportunities to be part of deal. Enough with exceptionalism and private clubs for the wealthy. Cable companies are thieves. I have fired them.
—Rosemary Graham-Gardner, Manhattan Beach, CA

August 16, 2016 Chairman Wheeler / Commissioner Rosenworcel: Please pass these two measures. Both make sense for the American people. Privacy is at the very heart of our democracy. Yet each day it is eroded by corporate policies which hold privacy in very low regard and do little to protect U.S. consumers / citizens. The forced renting of the cable boxes is not only anachronistic, it's monopolistic. We no longer are required to rent phones from the phone company. Why should we be compelled to rent set-top boxes from cable and satellite TV companies? Greed is the simple answer. The boxes cost very little to produce. Yet, consumers are forced to pay $12 a month (on average) to rent one box. In a given year, the average U.S. consumer pays approximately $144 to rent a single box -- a single box which most likely costs no more than $100, possibly less, to purchase outright. Please pass these two common sense measures. Peter J. May
—Peter J. May, La Habra, CA

I have no viable internet choice in the area where I live; so am stuck with a monthly bill of $140. TV commercials are disgustingly voluminous! End the monopoly on end set top boxes and above all protect our private information
—Karen Doulin, Brooksville, FL

This government MUST become "for the People". You have a great opportunity. Act now against big business and act for the people. You CAN do it!!
—Daryl Peterson, Welch, MN

Privacy is of utmost importance and saving money is something we all want to do.
—Gary Hopkins, clinton, IA

It is the responsibility of the FCC to protect the rights and best interests of citizens. Despite efforts to the contrary, we all know that Comcast is not an individual but a corporation with interests that do not always include the best interest of the individual. Please prevent Comcast from invading our privacy and profiting from it.
—Mary Susan Martin, Haddonfield, NJ

It. Just. Is.
—S-3 Burton, Conway, SC

Living on a limited income means anything that lowers my bills is of the greatest importance. I don't need excessive charges on my computer or the spreading of my world to strangers.
—IHM Ann Sister Mary Ann Ford, Hamtramck, MI

US citizens have a right to their privacy, and we need to stop paying for what used to be free!!
—Laurie Mauro, Lakewood, NJ

Why is it that when your cable company is taken over by another one that your cable bill automatically goes up in price? Also, our private information should not be able to be boughy and sold with out our consent.
—Elizabeth Boynton, Temple Terrace, FL

Cable companies regularly engage in predatory practices on their customer base becaus they're protected by their natural monopolies in their various markets. It's time to introduce more competition so consumers have a chance to receive ethical service that's worth the money we pay.
—David Rigby, Oceanside, CA

Vote in favor of ordinary people, not companies!
—Johannah White, New Orleans, LA

THere's NO reason whatsoever for these companies to be allowed to have a monopoly on offering these services! And NO company with as much info as the cable companies gather-WITHOUT MY PERMISSION!!!!- should be allowed to sell,and even make a whopping profit from MY personal info, it to anyone, anywhere. THey really shouldn't be allowed to collect that kind of info, period! Why should they be allowed to charge extra for a box that means without it I can't get their services? I suspect it's an end-run around current fee regulations they have adeptly circumvented with these box rentals;the boxes should just be included as normal equipment. You represent THE PEOPLE, not the providers, and thank you for doing all you have done so far, it's been awesome to see and appreciate. We really DO have a right to privacy, though the actual laws are vague onthis issue- we can MAKE it a law by actively protecting our right to privacy. Thank you for assuring our privacy and reasonable charges and getting rid of a ridiculous monopoly-which is truly unconstitutional.
—Linda Decker, Pleasanton, CA

My private information is Mine! And cable/internet prices are out if control! I switched to basic canle and internet to save $25 a month, but the price creep has wiped out that savings. I haven't had that kind if increase in pay, come in niw!
—Lisa Canning, San Diego, CA

We already pay too much
—Brandon Landas, Leesburg, VA

I guard my privacy and so should comcast
—Celeste Lightheart, Scarborough, ME

With everything being so expensive we need a break.
—Julie orosco, San Antonio, TX

I have an expectation of privacy when purchasing goods and services. I am against having companies like Comcast holding a gun to my head forcing me to accept their "terms and conditions" which include selling of personally identification information and marketing information. Stop Comcast and any/all companies from using every scrap of data they acquire from sales and services being used against consumers in attempts to generate more sales.
—Glenn Hawkins, Poulsbo, WA

I want my privacy, why do I have to have it taken away from? If Comcast is going to sell my private information, do I get to profit too? What benefits are helping me and my family if I allow companies to have their way to make money off of my private information? It does not take one to have a Ivy league education to see that there is a monopoly going on with the set-top boxes and we are forced pay climbing fees every few months where it is ridiculous to put customers in a dictatorship environment. The government expects US citizens to be informed and educated citizens and consumers, yet we have to pay a high price to get news and educational information. Please help to protect unethical business practices and to lower cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly. Thank you for reading my plea. -Dawn Feintuch
—Dawn Feintuch, BRONX, NY

The power and abuse of consumers by cable companies has gone of for far too long.
—Yuana Blanke, Chicago, IL

My communications bill is extremely high and my privacy is important to me!
—Ann Kelly, Mount Laurel, NJ

Privacy and choice are important parts of freedom. Cable companies should not be able to sell or share my info without consent. Also the set-top box rental is an unfair practice that costs more than it should.
—Chris Fernando, San Jose, CA

Freedom of the press and related media is important to me.
—Joel S. Trupin PhD, Marshfield, VT

I'm tired of companies making money from my private information. I'm tired of rates going up when we don't have a decent interest rate to keep in step and I'm tired of monopolies! Please FCC, help we consumers out!

Access to an open, neutral, and affordable Internet is essential for everyone to fully participate in our current Society. No one should be being left out or restricted from access due to Class or Financial status. Protect our First Amendment rights and provide the 21st Century Telecommunications Utility that is essential for American's prosperity, education, & security.
—Teresa Montague, Clifton, ME

costs keep rising. cable companies acquire other cable companies and raise the rate.
—Leland Jay Baldwin, Norwalk, CA

My personal information is owned by me, not the cable industry. Any information I've given them was given in strict confidence in order to honor a contract. As a customer I have proprietary rights to my personal information about myself. i have a right to my self, the identity of myself, and all information pertaining thereof. A contract does not give the cable industry rights to my person nor should they have rights to my information. Monopolies have/are screwing up the normal flow of business competition which has ultimately made prices fixed and/or increased. This has nothing to do with business costs. Business is based on supply & demand by the consumer, not! by the business. When a business demands a consumer to not only pay exorbant prices, but gives the consumer no rights to choose... doesn't that reek of Stalinism?
—I J., North Adams, MA

Everythin should not be a available for sale such as life, dignity, privacy and harmony in society.
—Syed Fazlurrehman, Ontario, CA

If they sell my information, I would think that I would get the money. It seems crazy that a company can take my information sell it for money, and I don't get the money? WT- Under No circumstance do I want my personal information being sold - especially if I am not getting the money for the sale of my information.
—N Avery Litin, Minden, NV

The injustice of your agency not finishing what it started can't be underestimated, the protection of my privacy and the concurrent lowering of my cable bill would address it.
—Jamesm M Nordlund, Moorhead, MN

As a citizen I thought that I was entitled to privacy as spelled out in the privacy laws of this country and to a certain amount of anonymity. Please do not let them sell my information to anyone. The Set top boxes are a joke too. The set top boxes are monopolistic reduce or eliminate competition and limit my choices in the free market. When you ultimatly do return to private life don't you think that you your family and friends are going to be subject to these same policy decisions that you make now and when they ask you why you passed it what shall you say? Break up the comcast and verizon and other communications monopolies so we can have a competitive less expensive innovative america instead of "It's A wonderful Lifes" Potters ville with one bar and one bank and one agent to rent a house from I want to live in George Bailies Bedford Falls where there are a couple of each.

—Eugenia A. Patterson, Kingston, WA

For God's sake, can you do your job and look out for the PEOPLE for once?
—John McCarthy, Holbrook, NY

My TW bill for TV and Internet connection has shot up to over $200/mo. I am past retirement age, on a wholly inadequate fixed income. Anything that can be done to help prevent my forced disconnection from the world due to obscene costs would be welcome.
—M S. Epstein, Los Angeles, CA

Telecom providers are really common carriers. They shouldn't get to read the mail.
—Edward Mills, Bellevue, WA

It's not fair and it's wrong. Corporate America at it's best.
—Lois Manoli, washington, MO

Customers are being gouged by cable companies, and manipulating the internet speeds to charge more for faster speed. Cable was supposed to be controlled to minimum pricing when it first was allowed on commercial airwaves. Now it's impossible for everyday folks to even subscribe. It should be a utility, and not a free market entity.
—Peggy O'Neil-Rosales, Long Beach, CA

My husband and I are on Social Security, We need lower cable bills. Our food and medicine is very expensive and more important than TV. We seldom go to movies in theaters. Cable television is our only "fun" activity. Please lower the cable bills. Please don't let Comcast sell MY private information without telling me. It is MY information, not theirs so they can make un Godly sums of money. It is MY information. MAKE COMCAST lower the obscene cost of cable.

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month. Verizon is just as guilty in rentals. In addition, the hard drive in DVRs run all the time even when the unit is powered off wasting large amounts of energy every day.

Comcast is notorious for overcharging its customers. Please don't let Comcast make even more money from me by selling my private information. Thank you.
—Jeffrey Gross, Swarthmore, PA

Because the cable companies are the absolute worst capitalism has to offer. Their executives should be locked up and the key thrown away.
—Daryl Odefey, Denver, CO

The cable and direct broadcast companies help themselves to customers wallet much more than anything else they do... Regulation and municipal networks are the answer. Please, step up and regulate companies that put their profit above ALL things, for the citizens/customers that government is supposed to serve.
—Stephen Wyman, Georgetown, TX

I don't think that the cable companies should require me to rent expensive equipment and sell my personal information either.
—B wells, Independence, OH

Comcast overcharges us and then sells our private data. It's adding insult to injury.
—Vicki Cintron, newton, MA

Please pass your two proposals that will protect my privacy and lower my obscenely high cable bill. Please don't let the threats from our Comcast owned congress stop you and your commissioners from fighting for these proposals. Stop Comcast from selling my personal information without my consent. My personal information is mine and shouldn't be for sale. Please end Comcast's monopoly on set-top boxes I am forced to pay for each month. I should be able to buy a set-box and not pay a monthly fee. The fees add up to thousands of dollars over time.

Privacy IS important to EVERYBODY!!!! If you need to have it explained to you then you're obviously a moron & should NOT be in a position of overseeing the issue.l))
—Audrey Jordan, Arlington, TX

I understand that the FCC can prevent ISPs from selling one's private information without consent and open up a free market in cable boxes to help competition lower prices. I want to strongly support these proposals. I am especially disturbed by the way that my private information is misused. Every time I make a purchase or even contact customer service by Internet, it seems that I get a flood of spam e-mails on related topics and I get served advertisements for weeks afterward. It's not just disturbing, it is bad business, reducing my inclination to use the Internet. Unfortunately, the bad actors don't see this, and are rapidly ruining the Internet. I hope the FCC will take commonsense steps to stop this.
—Joel Swadesh, Albuquerque, NM

Protect our privacy
—a voter who votes Beverly Eckman-Onyskow, Cave Junction, OR

For far too many years, government agencies have supported corporations over citizens. Please break that trend and support main stream Americans instead of corporations. Especially stand firm in preventing companies that provide prison phone calls and internet services from paying commissions (kickbacks) to local and state facilities and governments.
—Linda Polk, Joelton, TN

Without cable or satellite dish, I cannot receive television signals in this part of Oregon. However, the charges for cable have gone up to more than double what I originally contracted. It is time for the FCC to rein in cable companies. Also, I would appreciate having the FCC protect my right to privacy and prevent communications companies from selling my information without my prior consent. Please institute pro-consumer policies as soon as possible. Thank you.
—Jane Cothron, South Beach, OR

This is very important because big cable companies always overcharge my family for the most absurd reasons and my equipment only works half of the time when I just want to watch something on demand. And when we would get our bills by them they would put more on our bill for some reason and my mom always has to call to complain about that but they just do it regardless. So please FCC lower our bills and stop having cable companies charging us for unjustified reasons because they want more money out of their customers.

Protect privacy now
—Micah Wilger, Galesburg, IL

Monopolies are harmful in many ways. FCC should protect consumers, not monopoly suppliers.
—Geoffrey Bruce, Arvada, CO

The cable companies are digging their own grave. Due to their effective monopoly and intransigence they are making more of us cut the cable and just stream and go back to broadcast TV. Privacy is dead, but at least I don't want to have my information be something a cable company gets money for and I don't.
—Steve Lewis, Reading, MA

im legally blind, why am i being forced to rent a device that i cant use fully? its used to change the channel, thats it. the CVAA has no "teeth" no enforcement, no penalty. so why am i penalized by being forced to rent a device in perpetuity that i cant use fully? mediacom even strips out descriptive audio from channels they carry on their system. i should be allowed to BUY a cheap "channel changer" or better yet, the FCC should reverse its decision to allow encryption of BASIC cable so i can go back to using the tuner built in to my tv.
—Paul Milton, albany, GA

Having to rent the cable box costs me $120/yr. After 3 years I have paid $360 for a box that cost more than my TV. I am also extremely annoyed that they "Sell" my information. At the very least if you won't stop them from giving out my information without my consent I should be compensated every time they do share it.
—Debbie Blair, Boca Raton, FL

cost of cable is to high and they select the channels that we have to watch or not, don't want 2/3 rds of there programing but have to pay for it anyway
—Jerry Burrier, blaine, MN

Since there is less and less competition in the cable and internet scene and since companies seem more than willing to abuse their customers, it is vital for every american citizen that you step in and put a stop to the abusive practices of these companies.
—Thomas Matthew Hibbard, South Lyon, MI

I'm trying to live on just my Social Security.
—Jackie Rader, Bullhead City, AZ

Consumers need choice! There is no technical reason why we should be required to rent our cable boxes from the carriers, and good reasons that we should not. As a blind consumer, for example, I would love the opportunity to buy an accessible (talking) cable box, instead of the fully graphical, inaccessible modelsI am required to have by Comcast/Verizon/etc.
—Luke Davis, Philadelphia, PA

Privacy should be the same inn the virtual world as it is in the physical one.
—Joshua Goracio, Payson, UT

My only choice for cable and internet is Comcast. Their prices are unreasonable and I'm forced to work with them until "cord cutting" becomes a more viable option. Please don't give them any more control.
—Mr. Robert Kelly, Tuckerton, NJ

Our cable & phone bills are OUTRAGEOUSLY high. They make hand over fist and do nothing to upgrade their systems.
—Dawn Rohner, Fort Lee, NJ

The monopolistic power of cable companies such as Comcast and Time-Warner has gotten totally out of hand. Your Commission is the only counterbalance to them. We hope you will start exercising your regulatory power to reign them in.
—James Damon, Chapel Hill, NC

Monopolies and price controls by mega corporations in the communications industry are the furthest thing from "consumer-based" as it gets. The cable providers are always looking for another way to collect and profit at the expense of the consumer. Please stop them from going down that road, thanks.
—Jean Goldsborough, Reading, VT

My 4 adult children cannot afford to subscribe to cable television. Ending the monopoly on set-top boxes will help a little in making television possible for them. Please help in any way you can to once again make television possible for everyone.
—Carol Miller, Ann Arbor, MI

Constitutional rights and fair and honest economy! We the people pay taxes that the corporations drain that leaves us deprived! It's time for an egalitarian economy that protects our democracy!
—Norma Pearson, Fairburn, GA

The free flow of information is crucial for democracy and economic justice. We should either have public infrastructure, or else private providers should be regulated as utilities.
—Donald Winslow, Shawnee, OK

I have been a cable subscriber since I became an adult, and I feel like I've been being scammed for years! The same was true back in the days when I spent a ridiculous amount for a modem because I had to rent my modem from the cable company providing my cable. That change alone has saved me hundreds of dollars, while improving the quality of my internet experience. The same will be true when I no longer have to rent a set-top box for cable TV!
—Mark Swiecki, Lincoln Park, MI

The cost of just BASIC cable runs $100/mo. This is highway robbery. The cost keeps going up while millions of people haven't been getting a cost of living raise in their income. STOP THIS MONOPOLIZING BEHAVIOR NOW!!
—Lisa Hansen, Phoenix, AZ

Stop Comcast from selling our private information w/o our consent. LOWER our cable -TV bills by ending the monopoly on set-top boxes we're forced to rent monthly. LOWER our cable TV bills because we are paying THROUGH THE NOSE FOR NO CONTENT.
—Joyce Loewy, Sunnyvale, CA

This company has almost no competition and should be bound by clear rules in the consumer's interest. It is especially important to set up clear and firm policies as technology encroaches on our privacy.
—Lisa Gualtieri, Encino, CA

In proclaiming that Americans have the right to ownership of their papers, the Founding Fathers intended to establish a right to privacy. However, at that time the closest word to "privacy" was privy, which meant going to the bathroom. Of course that made no sense at the time. Undoubtedly, they intended to establish that citizens have ownership of their personal information as well as to any writings not intended by the author for public consumption. Frankly, it is beyond "creepy" to shop on retail websites only to return to social media and find ads for the items you just looked at. Preserving Net Neutrality and curbing the outrageous profits the digital media monopolies makes by selling information that belongs to it's customers is the least the FCC can do for American citizens. You should also adopt regulations allowing any municipality to offer internet and cable services to keep the costs reasonable and competitive. Please consider taking these actions to protect this public utility from being used against us and without our permission.
—JM LaVassair, Ardmore, PA

Comcast/Xfinity cannot continue to charge us for a DVR box that is limited by what you tell us! We need much more options to choose from!
—Rusty Greer, Nashville, TN

I am an older woman on social security and television is my main entertainment. I can not afford my basic cable and internet connection. I know television is a luxury, not a need but I should be able to have it.
—, Fort Collins, CO

I am a retired single man raising 2 grandchildren on limited social security income. Please reduce my outrageous, limited choice bundled cable choice and obscene monthly charges.
—James G Whitehead, Mount Clemens, MI

monopoly is not healthy
—Scott Clark, Greene, NY

I've been a Comcast user for a decade or more. This is an issue I feel strongly about.
—Don O. Noel Jr., Hartford, CT

The cable bill it not something I can afford already & that cable box costs extra.
—Gary Holcomb, Minneapolis, MN

Civil rights are important and defendable; reasonable billing rates are especially important, while monopolies tend to charge whatever they want in the absence of competition, which is of course, unacceptable.
—André Marier, Brossard,

The privacy rule in particular is critical!
—Michael Inners, Grand Isle, VT

I believe the internet should be a public utility, available to all at reasonable prices. Accepting the cable companies' arguments mean that we are instituting a regressive tax on the poor.
—Helen E Roland, Davis, CA

Be known as a true American hero protect the people and the internet. Comcast could not be any worse for service and product.Please don't sell us out like our politicians.
—Vic Oberle, Aurora, CO

This is really important because my cable bill keeps going up at least every six months. I'm really tired of paying $120 a month for cable bundle.
—Patricia Mihalic, North Olmsted, OH

I'm on a fixed income and my cable bill has increased over 25% in two years after I dropped some channels to lower the bill. I need help and you folks are in a position to do so! Please do your jobs.
—Ken Franklin, Panama City, FL

Internet needs to remain free as a way for people everywhere in the world to communicate and share culture, ideas and news to everyone, everywhere. The internet should not be chopped up and sold to the highest bidder to break apart into soulless bits of a bad product.
—Oscar Petersson, ,

When I first went online (dial-up), the big concern was protecting oneself from others with bad motives. Registration wasn't required on many sites, and when it was, there were no address checkers, etc., to verify the info one registered with. Now, registration is required almost everywhere. One's ISP exerts pressure to use their portals. Every bit of info about us is tracked and the big concern is how that tracking info about us is going to be used. Every one of us online is, in effect, a cash cow as info about our behavior online is collected and sold. To whom? For what purpose? We have no idea. Privacy policies are vague or even deceptive and full of loopholes. This pervasive selling of our information negatively affects the original promise of the Internet. As for set top boxes, we long ago stopped having to lease our phones from AT&T and other phone companies. Why are we being required to lease equipment for broadband and cable TV? It's another way to "milk" us, and it needs to stop. And so does the cynical game-playing designed to delay and ultimately defeat the current proposals to require our consent before our info can be sold and to end the set-top box monopoly.
—Linda Risinger, Covina, CA

Comcast should never be given the right to sell private information without informed consent, and we elect people to Congress for the purpose of representing our interests. If you have the power to lower our cable bills, it behooves you to do it. The cost of living is out of control, and many of us are suffering because of it,
—Suzanne Jarnagin, Jamaica Plain, MA

This action is in the best interests of all consumers. Don't let corporations hijack the democratic process.
—Ralph Bruechert, Grosse Pointe Park, MI

As an American citizen I expect to have my privacy protected.
—Gloria Wigert, ocean grove, NJ

Chairman Wheeler, you are taking steps in the right direction and I applaud your efforts to protect the privacy of individuals and breaking up monopolies. This is good for individual consumers who want their privacy protected and good for the economy as a whole as monopolies have devastating effects on economic efficiency.
—Tobias Conn, ASHLAND, MA

FCC Commissioners need to stop prioritizing their own personal gain over the will of the people.
—Matthew S Melin, San Diego, CA

Please get it done!
—Carolyn Pullman, Wharton, NJ

Not only is renting the box a scam but my cable bill has more than doubled over the past five years. For someone on a fixed income I will have to live without TV if the rates keep rising without explanation. Cable companies have taken the lead of government and if you are poor, well, tough shit.
—Kevin J. Gosztonyi, Bethlehem, PA

I'm a Disabled Senior on a fixed income paying for the same service on different devices I.e., Internet at home and on the phone, cable channels on the phone. One bill for home and cell charging for multiple phones lines and multiple cable boxes.
—Akilah Graham, Denver, CO

As a long time member of the American Civil Liberties Union privacy is of vital importance to me.
—Naomi Cohen, Gap Mills, WV

My cable internet bill runs over $65/mo. That's just for internet. Compare that to rates in Europe, where the service is much better. Cable is a de facto monopoly. I'm very tired of being shaken down by my cable company.
—Dean Poirier, DULUTH, GA

Prove that the government is of the people, not of the lobbyists!
—Ernest Renaud, Tonawanda, NY

When services vital to everyday life, employment, shopping, ordinary entertainments is offered with a proviso buried deep in a TOS/EULA, there really is no choice. Cable companies and ISPs have a near-monopoly on communications services we all rely on daily for tasks essential to modern life. I do NOT consent to having my personal information collected and sold, and I do NOT trust corporations to not "re-associate" purported anonymous data with my name, address, and who knows what else they "have on me." It feels like being a criminal, when more often, it is the data-collectors who are using my information to take away my choice, my privacy, and my peace of mind. So I urge the FCC to adopt binding restrictions on what, when, and how peronsal data may be sold. In addition, cable companies, and some ISPs, are reaping a windfall in the tens or hundreds of millions of dollars annually from saddling us with set-top boxes that do little for viewers, but which allow providers to control quality (down-converting HD video shot that way to SD, unless a fee is paid). I should be able to buy a compatible box from a third party and save the inflated rental fees Comcast charges me monthly (almost $12). Let us have real competition. Who knows, someone other than Comcast may have a better, cheaper way of doing the same things. Thank you.
—William C. White, Seattle, WA

Our personal information belongs to us, the consumer, and not the cable companies. Please stop Comcast from profiting on information that does not belong to them. This is outright theft, and invasion of privacy. Also, please stop Comcast from making consumers rent set-top boxes that are not necessary. That goes for VoiP modems that can only be rented and not purchased, as well. Comcast is already raping the American consumer with its monopoly. Enough is enough! Stop Comcast please!
—Douglas Tubach, Canton, CT

I just cancelled my Comcast account because they raised their rates. I stream video from my Roku & don't miss the garbage on TV at all.
—Deborah Suslovic, South San Francisco, CA

Corporations should serve the needs of the people and not the people serve the excessive desire for corporate profit.....
—Larry Bernard, Jemez Pueblo, NM

i feel i pay for commercials more than anything prices keep going up and up. nothing offered to loyal account holders. i do not wissh my private information to be out for everyone
—John Selvey, Winston Salem, NC

We may live in a very public world today, but selling private information without consent is an egregious wrong that needs to be righted, and forcing customers like me to pay for renting boxes needs to end. The cable companies have too much monopoly or near-monopoly power throughout our country.
—Alexander Clayton, Denver, CO

Do this for the people not the corporations.
—Jerry K F Chilson, Enumclaw, WA

because it's costing me too much money & it needs to be AFFORDABLE for the masses
—Sherrie Munday, longmong, CO

FCC needs to do it's job. Disgusted by paid off politicians doing the bidding of greedy corporations.
—Sara Kathleen Ogden, Hohenwald, TN

Let me get my own box with the features I want instead of just what they want to give me.
—Mr. Jim Porter, Binghamton, NY

I depend on the internet to do business daily. It must be affordable.
—Leo Diener, McAllen, TX

The airwaves are SUPPOSED to belong to THE PEOPLE. Advertising on pay-TV should be enough. Programming should be FREE--but if that doesn't happen, at least make it harder for companies to monopolize the market.
—Allyson Drucker, North Haledon, NJ

Our economy is built upon free market competition, and, though there are circumstances which require some level of free market modification, it should be opened up whenever possible to maintain competitive pressures and positive outcomes for consumers.
—Ed Orme, Norristown, PA

My privacy needs to be protected. I am forced to use the monopoly, Comcast, if I want internet and TV. Don't let them sell my private information. I had no other safer choice! Dpon'tr let ANY company sell my private information. I have been a victom of identity theft. Don'r make things worse for me. Also, break up this monopoly!
—Margaret Wood, West Milford, NJ

I pay waaaaaay too much for cable and Internet from a company with the poorest quality customer service.
—Jeremy Ball, Acworth, GA

This is a basic right compliant with standard POTS Telco service granted over the years. Why should ISP's be treated any different? They shouldn't. Please vote to uphold mine and all Americans internet privacy and don't place a "For Sale" sign on internet traffic. Thank you FCC and Tom Wheeler!
—Greg W Cox, Pearland, TX

Big money controls politics. Please don't allow it to control cable communication. Please stop Comcast from selling private information without individual consent ad break up the cable TV monopoly. Keep completion in the market place to keep costs affordable to all.
—Sheila Trujillo, Denver, CO

Every day a bit more of our privacy is eaten away. Only through YOUR action can a portion be saved! As a 100% disabled veteran, what little income I have is most precious and the cost of my home entertainment and communication takes a huge part of it.
—Ronney West, Goldthwaite, TX

As, ought to be obvious to anyone, Cable is too expensive, and privacy is very precarious both to hackers, and the institutions of business and government!
—J Steven Livacich, Redlands, CA

Privacy is fast becoming an action of the past. Do not let that continue.
—Barbara Haines, Palm Bay, FL

Where is the competition for internet in my state. Two companies. The rates are way too high.
—Edward Imbier, Belmont, MA

It's the right thing to do!
—Samantha Heatherly, Long Beach, CA

I want what I do on the internet to be private. I want my cable bill to be lowered. I hate the extra charges.
—Alin Boughousi, Glendale, CA

As a senior citizen on a fixed income I am inundated daily with solicitation via computer, smartphone and regular mail with targeted advertisements that has been obtained by purchased data. The constant bombardment that is truly nonstop affects and invades my daily life. The FCC can save me money and also supports my privacy by passing Chairman Wheeler's proposal. Please take action now!
—Gloria Brand, Boca Raton, FL

please prevent big industries from using their customers information as a product to be sold.
—Chris Carrozza, Drexel Hill, PA

Our private information should be sold to no one!! Also, monopoly in the cable industry MUST BE STOPPED!!
—Marlene Magone, Prospect, CT

Communication infrastructure must never be controlled by the private sector.
—Danny Dyche, Hillsboro, OR

I PAY FOR TOO MANY CHANNELS I DON'T EVEN WATCH BECAUSE I HAVE NO INTEREST IN WATCHING THEM.
—Tracy, Egg Harbor Township, NJ

—Mike Brenner, brockport, NY

Please act to protect consumers and their privacy. You hold the power to protect us all.
—Deja Lizer, Asheville, NC

Allowing cable companies to continue their predatory mistreatment of their subscribers is about as anti-American as a government agency can get. Tighten up on Comcast and their corrupt partners ASAP.
—Andrew May, Emmitsburg, MD

Our cable bills are insanely high, the monthly fee for the boxes is theft, and so are all the extra charges they put on, PLUS we literally have NO CHOICES in the programming we want.
—Cheryl Liniman, Cleveland, OH

Our lives and work actives today relies on affordable and reliable computer access and TV - cable cost have reached uncomfortable levels with poor service to boot. Please address these issues and help consumers get fair treatment.....We are not cash cows.
—Gary Tomlin, Aledo, TX

Reform and choice are needed so we are not forced to pay hundreds of dollars just to watch a few favorite TV shows. We are forced to pay for packages of channels they select. We were forced to pay for cable years ago when we had to pay for cable or use a box to get basic channels. Some of us in home sub-divisions are forced to use the cable company selected by the builder. In my case, it is Charter which I dislike very much. My choice is AT&T U-Verse which is not available in my subdivision. Bring choice for provider and cheaper packages for channels.
—Betty Gilbert, Simpsonville, SC

Because I have a right to my private information, and Comcast is gauging us on the cost of a bunch of garbage on Television.
—Judith Kelly, Buzzards Bay, MA

Please think about the value of America. We need to build this country together to make better life not for the few rich person.
—Peter Kang, Mukilteo, WA

I'M SENIOR WITH LOW SS AND RETIREMENT INCOME! I'M PAYING FOR THINGS I DON'T EVEN USE!
—Ms. B Merritt, Flushing, NY

We all want our personal information to be private, and not disbursed to anyone without our knowledge. We expect the Fcc to stand up for these rights as well as other than exorbitant prices for Comcast sevice; so please do all you can to protect our rughts and costs from Comcast
—Marian Krewson, Bellevue, WA

Our family needs to count every dollar we spend. Don't make us waste more money on cable/internet than we already are.
—Mimi Foust, Cleveland, OH

Internet monopolies-NO. Release of our private information-NO. Lower Bills-YES. The consumer shouldn't be the one screwed, while mega-billion companies have huge profits.
—Jill Levin, Asheville, NC

WTF!
—Skip Vena, Woodland Park, CO

Comcast's treatment of its customer is simply outrageous. What they charge for cable and broadband verges on monopolistic practices.
—Tippy Young, Sacramento, CA

I am who decides what to share with the public not the companies and I am the one that also if I want to make a profit of my information at least is my information not anybody else life
—Marina Colombo, San Antonio, TX

I have had a small website that I would like to be effective in competition with the big websites.
—Bill Donohoe, Austin, TX

I'm in no need of hundreds of channels I have no interest in watching or paying for.
—Joe Russo, Rye, NY

My information belongs to me. It is not a give-away to a corporation, because they know they can get it for free, because they bought enough congressmen.
—David Whelan, Bondi Beach, None

the price of cable keeps going up endlessly my income does not. The programming is repeated endlessly with little new content so why the high pricing especially when you have to subsidize programming that few are interested in but are forced to pay for please do something about this.
—Scott Wilson, Cleveland, OH

cuz I'm, paying attention.
—Carter Andrew McLaughlin, los gatos, CA

The cable bill takes a huge portion of my paycheck every year and I do not like that! More so since I have things forced onto me like a set-top box. The cable bill and set top box make me feel like a prisoner of the cable industry which is truly uncomfortable and should not be the case in the first place. I am also very much against my personal information being sold by a huge corporation with no scruples!! I urge you to work in the favor of the public interest and vote to pass these two bills. Thank you very much!!!!
—Akschith Bhagavatula, Greenville, SC

Cable bills are out of control with no real competition. Consumer protection is needed.
—Debbie Chambers, Beverly Hills, FL

Because, while Congress won't give those of us on Social Security a substantial raise, they continue to allow these mega corporations to rake in billions of profit on the backs of those who can least afford it.
—Linda Ford, Puyallup, WA

I m using lost of internet so do some think about it
—Satyam verma, ,

Plz low the charges its too much
—Satysheel yadav, ,

Because my private and personal information has become a commodity, which I can't opt out of...I've tried, believe me. Nightmare. Privacy has vanished? Thanks for your time
—Christine M Peterson, HHI, SC

Please do what your jobs require: regulate near monopolies like Comcast to protect consumers' privacy and cable costs.
—Will Baldwin, New York, NY

Not only would it be unamerican if my private information is sold without my consent and my cable bill continues to be outrageously high due to the monopoly that only a handful of companies have onset-top boxes, it would ultimately limit my acess to important and lucrative business opportunities that these same companies enjoy only because they can afford to. The next step is charge us more for the service we already have, thus pushing more Americans out of the process of earning a decent living wage and providing the even the most basic of necessities for their loved ones. We must stay active and vigilant whenever the gap between the top 1/10 of 1% and the other 99% is constantly widening by leaps and bounds.
—Lukman Lateff Taylor, ,

Iit is important because I am tired of being gouged by these corporations
—Tom Stark, Colo. Spgs, CO

Please stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Diane Riffitts, Mullica Hill, NJ

Protect our privacy and stop the Comcast monopoly.
—Gregory Comerford, Gurnee, IL

Protect the consumer. It's in the benefit of us all.
—Daniel Canales, Humble, TX

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Johan van Kesteren, Ferndale, WA

Paying for a service means I should have a choice whether my information is sold. This is not the same as opting in to use a free service (which is also debatable).
—Sasha Neri, Chicago, IL

you just can't sell private information
—Timothy A Thomas, Spokane, WA

With privacy in America on the verge of extinction and the second largest protest in United States history (the largest one in over 50 years) taking place not long ago because of public knowledge of the governments alarmingly prolific unwarranted surveillance, if public approval is something you want to be part of your legacy as chairman of the FCC I think it would be in your best interest to stop Comcast from being the next big business to sell our private information. I think they have enough money don't you?
—Mark Arrington, Fredericktown, OH

monopoly allows this company to say anything and delivr nothing for an ever increasing price.
—Lorraine Alfini, denver, CO

The time is NOW1
—John D Smith, New York, NY

Privacy and respect of what our country needs, keep prices reasonable to retain customers. It seems power and control is the new government thing.
—Pamela Mckinney, Rapid City, SD

I am an Asian-American and always frustrated about the lack of narratives that speak to the lives ofpeople who are non-White and are indeed Americans. In 1942 if demographics are right America will begin having as many of us as there are White people. I fear that we are nowhere near ready to be multi-cultural. FCC needs to help America change.
—Anita Alcantara, Chicago, IL

Do what's right for a democratic nation and work to expand basic internet access to the millions who have NONE; to the same level of easy, affordable access as TV.
—Joel Goldfarb, Kihei, HI

This needs to move forward regardless of corporate based obstructionist politics that have plagued the last eight years of our Government.
—Robert M Profitt, Salem, OR

Miss Doris Thomas is a executive producer of the Divine Diva Talk Show in Philadelphia, Pa at the local Public Acccess Center, PhillyCAM. I am very interested in Comcast Corporation having a monopoly on the video programming and television and media creation for the Delaware Valley and national media arena. Miss Doris Thomas is a Black female and veteran who is seeking funding support , such as state of the technology and equipment for video production, film productions, and digital media creation. Furthermore, I am requesting the feasibility study for revenue sharing from Comcast Corporation for the arts, entertainment, spiritual, sports content in the Delaware valley and national revenues . These revenue sharing strategies will provide better video productions from us as digital media creators of diversity. I am requesting 50% of the 8 billion dollars that Comcast received from profits last year! Miss Doris Thomas will gladly set up an appointment to dicuss the revenue sharing strategies, Miss Doris Thomas will be sending the FCC and Comcast Corporation information and my diversity as a video and television programmer that we are demanding land, building, video technology, and media diversity. Miss Doris Thomas grew up in Philadelphia,Pa and I attended Villanova University and Cheyney University of Pennsylvania with a Master in Education Administration.since 2001. I will be sending you my transcripts and fact check my military service in the Pa Army National Guard from 1992 through 1998. I do not want my private information sold and I want my revenue sharing rights and content developer management rights.

Ms. Marlene H. Dortch, Secretary
Federal Communications Commission

Washington, DC 20554

Re: MB Docket 16-42, Expanding Consumers' Video Navigation Choices

Dear Ms. Dortch,

Enclosed please find the signatures and comments of nearly 12,000 Free Press members urging the Federal Communications Commission to stop Comcast from selling private information without consent, and to lower cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on the set-top boxes consumers are forced to rent each month.

The petition reads:

> To FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler, Commissioner Mignon Clyburn and Commissioner Jessica Rosenworcel:
>
> Thousands of us have written in support of the FCC's broadband privacy proposal and the agency's efforts to end the monopoly on set-top boxes. These are common-sense, pro-consumer policies, but we're concerned they won't move forward if you don't act now.
> The cable industry's friends in Congress are threatening the survival of both of these measures, trying to force the agency's hand by holding up Commissioner Rosenworcel's renomination and pressuring the chairman to resign after the election. This is no way to govern, but we’re concerned their pressure may be working. Commissioner Rosenworcel is reportedly reluctant to move quickly on these crucial measures.
> Anything worth doing at the FCC is going to take at least a 3–2 vote. You have a chance to go down in history as leaders of the FCC that did more for the public interest than any other. Your decisions over the next few months could cement that legacy — but only if you hold strong.
>
> We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Best,

Candace Clement
Internet Campaign Director

Monopolies are not good for a "Free Market". Private information is just that: Private!
—Andreas Ohland, new port richey, FL

You need to protect us against abuse from big business. That's your job.
—Brian D Gregory, Bremerton, WA

congress is supposed to work for THE PEOPLE! not BIG CABLE.
—tom swem, dayton, OH

I can't afford cable TV now!
—William Cramer, Lancaster, WI

It's not about politics, it's about the rights of the people.
—Hillary Colby, Aurora, IL

This issue should be above politics this effects millions and millions of Americans. This is for and about the people.
—Derek Blackshire, Jacksonville Beach, FL

Communication through the internet is vital. The Internet was developed with public funds. It is not owned by private interests. It should be treated as a public utility.
—Victoria Headley, Winchester, VA

Comcast ALREADY has too much power/influence in the world for God's sake!
—Mark Vincent, Wilmington, NC

IF I SOLD YOUR PRIVATE INFORMATION I WOULD BE ARESTED !!!!!!!!!!
—Eddie Hines, Saint Paul, MN

The government needs to act in the interest of consumers, not companies.
—Kevin Kirk, Hampton, NJ

Time to help the people first!! Blessings!!
—Will Agee, El Cajon, CA

I'm poor. Fuck you very much.
—Don Pew, Girard, OH

Protect my privacy. It is my constitutional right
—William Chavez, Sacramento, CA

Privacy is critical to all citizens.
—Paul Lindsey, Cheyenne, WY

I both want and expect quality programming and affordable prices. This is possible, with proper regulation(s).
—LK Woodruff, Rosemount, MN

Monopolies are bad for their customers and hence for the country! Years ago the government broke up Bell Telephone, so why are you now allowing monopolies to thrive?
—Karen Kirchdoerfer, Orefield, PA

How can you allow a corporation to sell our private information without our consent?
—Janet Tache, Penn Valley, CA

We spend so much more for cable in this country than any other country. This is unconscionable.
—Bridget Wolfe, Newport, OR

Limited income-bills are way toooooo high.
—Joan Borame, El Cerrito, CA

I deserve to have a lower bill for my cable, and not to be tricked by corporate people.
—Brian Runyon, Cincinnati, OH

there are things that are right and things that are wrong. Big business will always choose profits and ignore the right and wrong.
—Robert Miles, nashville, TN

They continually sell my info away & get nothing in return but more heartache
—Raleigh Atkinson, Pasadena, TX

Because I do business with cable does not imply my info can be sold to others!
—Thomas Zachary, La Crescenta, CA

it's just one more example of how our country is being manipulated by corporations.
—Janet Bautista, University Pl, WA

No more waiting...keep the Internet FREE and stop the Mega Telecomms to stop raising their rates.
—Sheila D, Willmar, MN

People enjoy their privacy. Also, it's always nice to watch TV when it's getting cheaper.
—Lennart Grol, ,

Privacy is paramount, especially with a company with a consumer reputation as hostile as Comcast's.
—Aaron Mitschelen, Frederick, MD

French and Korean internet users pay roughly half what we do in the oligopoly-bound U.S. Swedes pay 1/6 our cell phone bills. Let's stop being a third world nation!
—Mark Dempsey, Orangevale, CA

It is unconstitutional to breech someone's privacy as in selling private info. Without consent. Comcast is the most expensive cable company I have ever dealt with and I will be dropping them asap. I can barely afford to put food on the table, pay for my utilities and taxes, let alone a huge cable bill. PS. I work full time as an R.N. in a hospital.
—Brita Light, Camden, ME

Privacy is one of the most important civil rights which is recognized and protected by the US Constitution. We must protect privacy at all costs!
—Eva Malhotra, Sierra Madre, CA

Please stop letting the large cable companies control the outrageous pricing schemes such as cable box renting. They make enough money as it is and rule with their lobbist.
—Susan Jett, Seagoville, TX

please do the right thing.
—David Levine, New York, NY

Saving democracy from oligarchy and monopoly
—Barry Anderson, Kill Devil Hills, NC

People are more important than corporate profit
—Patricia Moore, Charlotte, NC

Public Interest.....
—Tony, West Palm Beach, FL

Comcast and other cable providers have proven that they cannot be trusted with the local and regional monopolies they have bribed their way into.
—Ben Adler, San Jose, CA

These are just two of the reasons that I DO NOT have cable! Wouldn't it be nice to be able to subscribe to ONLY the channels that I want to watch? No, please don't hit me!
—O Lamoree, Fort Lauderdale, FL

Our agency in deciding what we want broadcast or shared is invaluable. That power should lie with no one but the individual.
—, Washington, DC

It's bad enough that there is a practical monopoly so we need protection from these corporate crooks!
—William Royal, Sun City Center, FL

people, not greed
—Mary Mahoney, Boston, MA

My information belongs to me, unless I give permission to use it. Set top boxes are just like a telephone-I pay for use of the network, how I access it is my choice. Open the market for competition so consumers can choose.
—Sander Shipper, manhattan beach, CA

This is important to me, and to every citizen who relies on commercial Internet providers to provide them access to the Internet and entertainment channels.
—Joshua S. Freeman, Irvington, NY

Monopoly interests are ruining our economy and need to be curtailed!
—Byron L Davis, Salt Lake City, UT

You exist, I hope, to represent the interests of the people of the United States of America, not the profits of mega-corporations. I hope you take your REAL reason for existence seriously.
—David Casker, Johnstown, PA

Because cable and internet in the United States is incredibly overpriced. In Finland the cable and internet can cost only about €34,00 and that includes a land line phone, basic cable, and internet that is 100mbps and with no data cap. Comparatively in the U.S where you would pay maybe $50,00 and thats the 'low' price for JUST cable television and probably about $60-70 for internet that is MAYBE 60-70mbps with a datacap imposed? Its ridiculous.
—Jade Angela, Memphis, TN

Protect My Privacy and Lower My Cable Bill TODAY!!! Finish what you started!!!
—Walden Simper, San Diego, CA

Because I own my private information, not companies I do business with. It is time to end these heavy-handed tactics by a monopolistic industry. If they want to retain their monopolies, they must submit to regulation or make room for true competition which has a way of sorting things out on their own.
—Mike Sirois, Lawrence, MA

Privacy is important. Our lives are already disrupted by all the data leaks, why make that a profit center too?!
—Russel Brooks, Walla Walla, WA

I use the internet a lot and my privacy is important to me.
—Janet Benner Ph.D., Goleta, CA

So tired of monopolies taking us for a ride! Do your job.
—Johanna Fears, Louisville, KY

Cable bills are too high
—Janet G Heinle, Santa Monica, CA

The cable company - Cox, never leave a balance the same -it gets higher with each month -everytime they "make a deal" they never keep it - and continue raising prices - I am 85 and can no longer afford their shenanigans, but need cable/Internet for it is an integral part of my life at this age
—Toni Gilmont, San Juan Capistrano, CA

Privacy is important to everyone.
—James Mahan, Seattle, WA

Because...
—Tawney Morris, Saint Louis, MO

I have Comcast for TV, but I really don't like them. SDD
—Mr. Shelley D. Dahlgren PhD, Issaquah, WA

Because it time to level the playing field and stop Comcast from selling our private information. Maybe you can do something good for the people.
—James Hyman, Saint Petersburg, FL

My Cable Bill is $89 a month and a lot of those channels I never watch, with the new set top box that would break up the channel for what I'm looking for.
—Nicholas Dumdie, Dundee, IL

I value my privacy and financial security
—Paul Christensen, Minneapolis, MN

Privacy is pivotal and non-negotiable. The monopolies can charge without impunity. This is un-American, illegal (why are there so many monopolies if they're illegal??) and unethical.
—Patricia Perron, Seattle, WA

sick and tired of government agencies playing monopoly games
—Alexandra Moffat, Orford, NH

Looks like you need to prove you're not a DINGO again?
—Jeffrey A White, Forest Grove, OR

I am tired of sharing my info in order to use applications online, no one should have o give up friends emails, pictures or photos to use an app or website. And cable should become cheaper it is a rip off! Charging to rent equipment necessary to use the cable should not be extra! I haven't had cable in over 7 years and unless things become fairer to the consumer I won't ever go back.
—Tina Mizhir, Port Chester, NY

Please end the monopoly of required set top boxes and implement these common sense laws.
—Andrew Pabon, Chicago, IL

This is a strike against the corporatocracy and for democracy. After all, the FCC is a government (of, by and FOR the PEOPLE, remember?) agency. Please reestablish this in your agency. You promised.
—Lawrence Jacksina, Charlottesville, VA

Too many people I know have had disastrous results of their primacy compromise with identity theft, etc.
—Diana Madoshi, Rocklin, CA

Our privacy should be protected and not sold to anyone or any agencies also lower the cable bills so customers can enjoy the shows and not how they are going to pay for your services
—Glenda Lilling, Port Chester, NY

I am paying for their services, not for them to sell my information as well as the ridiculous fees we are paying to use the services.
—Ruth Berry, Lady Lake, FL

The city of Everett, Massachusetts has been locked into an exclusive cable agreement with Comcast for last decade (although I believe that agreement may have just ended or may be ending, details about this are hard to find). Instead of receiving competitive pricing, the result has been higher pricing, poor service and aging infrastructure. Surrounding cities like Malden and Chelsea have other options, like Verizon Fios available. In Everett, however, cable is monopolized by Comcast and we, the consumers, suffer. This industry needs oversight and needs a change from business as usual.
—Timothy Venezia, Everett, MA

Protect My Privacy and Lower My Cable Bill TODAY
—Jerry Huhn, Charleston, SC

We need consumer's interests to be considered over mediz profits.
—Stuart Garrison, Los Angeles, CA

I don't understand why you would delay passing these 2 regs. I hope you're not involved in any ' revolving door' shenanigans.
—Al Cohen, hummelstown, PA

Fair rates!
—Paul Safr, Janesville, WI

It's very simple; corporations don't want to compete, they want to control. You're job is to enable competition, not control. I don't mind fair costs for cable. I do mind inflated costs so that they can control. If Comcast had put as much monies into their service as they do their lobbying, there wouldn't be anywhere near the number of complaints.
—Ronald Drahos, Bloomington, IN

My information is for my service, not to sell to third parties. And if there's a monopoly causing my cable bill to be too high, then do something about it!
—Adam Bradley, Berkeley, CA

Our cable bills are too high. The bills should be reasonable like gas or electricity. Not out of control montrosity.
—Ms. Kim Kensler, Toledo, OH

This is just common sense stuff. We wonder why the public hates the government?
—Jeffery Hogan, Killeen, TX

Mr. Wheeler do not let Congress mislead you. They are working for the corporations involved, not for the People of the United States of America. Keeps us united by stopping this sham Congress is so constantly fighting for. They are suppose to represent US! You do, so please, we have your back.
—Brenda Boudinot, Painesville, OH

Please protect my privacy, and please lower my cable bill by ending the monopoly on the box I'm forced to rent. You've acted to protect consumers in the past, please do so now
—Tracey Fleming, Fort Worth, TX

My private information is that, private. It is your job to protect Americans privacy. Letting comcast having any of my information would be devastating.
—Gwendolyn Brody, Port Townsend, WA

My Comcast bill has been outrageous for just basic cable and internet. It costs them virtually nothing but they gouge us monthly. Beware, the sales reps speak with forked tongues.
—KATHLEEN SISSON, Kent, WA

It's wrong to have a monopoly in ANY industry. Thank you
—Dawn Skindziel, MILL CREEK, WA

You know that the cable companies are robbing us right and left. Give the citizens some relief.
—Harold Waters, Houston, TX

I pay way too much for cable as it is. Please have comcast lower our cable bills!
—Thomas Ronan, Phila., PA

Our privacy is very important to us, as well as lowering our cable bill because we are Seniors on a monthly income where every dollar needs to be accounted for !!!!
—Theresa Roderigues, Pinellas Park, FL

Corporations do not need protection from free markets, stop supporting the stealing of taxpayer's money.
—Scott Yetman, ,

Please protect us the consumer from these corporations and the greed. We need more choice and lower costs. Please end the monopoly on set-top boxes we are forced to rent each month and allow us a choice. Don't let companies like Comcast, Verizion to tell the FCC how to do it's job. Please act now and Protect My Privacy and Lower My Cable Bill TODAY
—Lawrence C Nordquist, Norwood, MA

Mr. Chairman: This is very important to me. Protect my constitutional rights! Thomas Madden
—Thomas Madden, Springfield, VA

All of you are presently commissioners - - there is NO decent reason to hold off on this - - please do your job, while you're in office.
—Larry Bright, Ypsilanti, MI

The US is losing the communication battle. I am sick of monopolies take my money.
—Nancy S, ,

Make them stop profitting off my life info and let me have the option I have in every other aspect of my consumerism to buy what I use. I'm not forced to rent cars or my residence or my laptop or my phone.
—Rachel Whitcombe, Davis, CA

We're supposed to have a right to privacy. Why are people selling information about me, increasing the risk that my identity can be hacked?
—Jeff Becker, Easton, CT

Your job is to serve the US people. Do your job!
—Susan Meiers, Macomb, IL

WTF, FCC??? Why is it so hard for you to do what the PEOPLE overwhelmingly want? Threatens your future employment?
—Bill Haegele, philadelphia, PA

I live in an area with limited options and can't even get a broadcast signal (in Seattle!). After years of frustration with Comcast, we cut the cord and are without even medium speed access. Beats being a slave to Comcast but looking forward to rejoining the 21st century again.
—David Robinson MD, Seattle, WA

I'm a Comcast user and will not appreciate them selling my information. If that isn't protected, then all of our information will be laid out before the world!
—Len Lindgren, ELGIN, IL

You should represent pur interests. Thank you.
—Francisco Koch, North Hills, CA

It is in the public interest.
—Carlos R Rodriguez, Vero Beach, FL

I have an idea. If the FCC doesn't want to work for The People, maybe the FCC doesn't want to exist at all. After all, without paying to operate the FCC, industry can have everything they are asking the FCC to give them. So The People have to pay twice. For wishy washy FCC regulations, and then bad internet and bad privacy security. Without the FCC, we only have to get run over once, not twice. So how do the folks at the FCC feel about their jobs? I am so tired of consumer agencies working for big industry. They were created to make the working relationship between industry and The People more even. If the FCC doesn't perform that function then what do they exist for?
—Marguerite Val Tara King, Earlton,, NY

The FCC has recently done an unprecedented job of reforming a monopolistic and manipulative industry. Cementing those gains now will produce long-term benefits for consumers and the country as a whole.
—Douglas Samson, Ithaca, NY

Every time I get a cable bill there are new and different charges. It takes forever to reach a "person". I am paying almost paying $200.00 for phone service, internet, and cable. I do not have premium channels. I do have an additional latino package and almost every month they change channels that are added or deleted.
—Gloria Linda Maldonado, Redwood City, CA

I've got more fees on my cable bill than I do channels. It's ridiculous.
—Stephen Quarles, Atlanta, GA

Cable bills are too high. I remember when TV was free and had fewer ads as well.
—Walter Birdwell, Port Isabel, TX

The public need to be protected from the monopolistic cable companies.
—Jo Anne Fannin, Willoughby, OH

DO YOUR JOB! STOP THE STALLING! ARE YOU PART OF THE CORRUPTION??
—Karen Laakaniemi RN MSN, PENSACOLA, FL

The cable companies can continue to offer poor service because we have handed them a quasi monopoly. Privacy is eroded in the name of profits and control is cemented by insisting on the company's own set top boxes. We all complain, even the FCC, but only the FCC and our congress can change the system.
—Saundra Foderick, Zimmerman, MN

I am a senior on a fixed income and I can't afford high priced internet service. Please finish what you started for all of our people. Thank you. Sincerely,

I am a working senior, working still at 67 because programs that should be 20$ a month are 6o$ and up. For gods sake start working for the people and not the ones buying your. Votes . Congress is so corrupt. Washington is turning over in his grave.
—Delilah J Shank, Colma, CA

Comcast is making enough money, thanks.
—James Mahan, Los Angeles, CA

Do you want your private info sold as a commodity
—Regina Hamaker, Princeton, WI

Broadband internet is under siege from all sides. From monopolists abusing their power in multiple forms to spying technology that seeks to monetize our private lives. We need a new era of strong regulation and control to firmly and irrevocably establish individual rights versus corporate corruption.
—James Milnthorpe, Phoenix, AZ

I fear corporate take overs and rip offs
—Lorraine Please enter your last Kirk, Nederland, CO

(1) My personal information is owned by me ... not by anyone else. It is not for sale and is not to be shared without my consent. (2) My family and friends spent top dollar to purchase "cable ready" TV's several years back to get rid of the bogus cable charges for the boxes and remotes only for them to magically reappear. Get rid of them!
—Lisa Pereira, Stratford, CT

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Chris Curley, Richmond, VA

Cable bill is too high already!
—Glenn Wright, Oneonta, NY

By selling my private information and keeping the proceeds for themselves, corporations are robbing me. I should have the option of buying a set-top box, which over time would save me money instead of enriching cable companies.
—Jeanette West, Bradenton, FL

As U.S. citizens we're supposed to be free people, part of being free is having privacy. No one or company should be able to capitalize off of the citizens personal information except the citizen the information is for. And a person shouldn't be forced to either choose between letting a person or business do what they want with that persons personal information or not use the person or businesses service, website, etc. If an online company is a business they need to either charge a reasonable fee or give the user the ability to forfeit their personal info. If something isn't done about the cable companies, satellite TV, and telephone TV providers even lock on customers they're going to end up losing customers, so if you want to protect them anyway you can, talk some sense into their heads, although since they're traded companies their only concern is maximum profit and stock value so it'll probably be a waste of time. And the number one thing, REIGN IN THE ADVERTISING INDUSTRY! They're not even advertisers anymore they're personal info and data thief's, that do nothing but brainwash the public.
—Enrico Pelausa, Manassas Park, VA

Outside the US, other OECD countries give cable providers no favors: no monopoly, no contracts. A user can change companies from one day to the next, get better service, and pay about what 1/3 Americans pay. Why can't the FCC require competition in the US?
—Homer Ferguson, Nashville, TN

DO THE RIGHT THING FOR THE 98% AND PROTECT CONSUMERS !!!
—Howard Miller, Ventura, CA

We are private citizens - please respect that. Business practices should understand that.
—Suzanne Kuffler, Woods Hole, MA

Cable is going to price itself out of the market. I'm a retired widow with a passionate interest in staying current. I'm thinking of dropping my cable service and finding better ways--more cost efficient and more pertinent.
—Elaine Leggett, Austin, TX

We're already paying for cable networks we don't want. At least let us save some money.
—Mark Hillenbrand, Oak Lawn, IL

I canceled Direct TV, land phone, and internet (all bundled with CenturyLink) because of the high cost. Then I am bombarded with enticing lower cost packages from all (for a finite time). I need the FCC to help me.
—Butch Blawd, Minneapolis, MN

Invoke anti-trust laws and break up Comcast!
—Peter Veits, Burnsville, MN

I'll appreciate you taking a pro-consumer position on the broadband privacy policy and set-top box monopoly...and, say, didn't the US pass some very stringent rules about monopolies a couple of decades ago? Did they just disappear through attrition?
—Faith Freewoman, Rochester, NY

I dis bit an exception to the 3th amendment.emand that my electronic writing and messaging bee confidential, Commitment to electronic form
—Peter Butt, San Pedro, CA

I don't want an Internet provider, for example, Comcast, selling my personal information, and this should be against the law. I also hope the FCC would end the gouging of customers who are forced to pay a monthly fee on cable boxes, such as DVR devices. Customers should be able to purchase and own their own boxes. Right now customers are paying over $20 per box, per month--I spend more than $40 per month on just two DVR.
—Nancy Gutierrez, PALM DESERT, CA

I do NOT want my private info out there, and would love to pay less for cable.
—Rob B Campbell, New York, NY

Among the reasons why cable rates should be lower is so a larger portion of the US population is able to view vital programs that enhance their knowledge of voting and the issues facing the nation.
—Frank Chorba, Overland Park, KS

I count of the FCC to keep cable prices fair and to protect my privacy.
—Sarah G, Glendale, CA

PEOPLE over Profit, Please!
—Jim Lykins, Scappoose, OR

Our privacy is important to us. It is also important to Comcast to sell without our consent so it can make even more money off of us. We are held hostage to exhorbitant costs due to the monopoly it holds. Along with customer (non)service representatives that have outright lied to me personally more than once. If my husband wasn't such a baby, I would just have Netflix.
—Paula Cronin, Hooksett, NH

Please act in the interest of consumers and our freedom, rather than in the interests of business.
—Mary Tasillo, Philadelphia, PA

The FCC has no control over the cable industries becoming monopolies, but you. do have the power to ensure the public interest is served by voting for these commonsense measures.
—Harry Lewis Michaels Jr., Fort Collins, CO

The internet is the lifeblood of the economy--protect access for everyone
—Elizabeth Butler, Henderson, KY

Enough of the shenanigans! Please, Chairman Wheeler, keep up the fight to reign in the monstrous greed and reckless behavior of the cable giants. We have paid too much for too long, and it's time to break up the stranglehold. Thank you!
—Mary Hager, Leverett, MA

Cable cos. keep charging more and more and giving us worse service, making us pay extra for channels that were once included in a "standard" package. The switch to digital TV has made this much worse. In addition, we pay for numerous duplications of channels in the various add-on packages, and we now have to pay for digital adapters to get anything on an older TV. As for broadband, which also comes only from the CATV cos., the service is poor and over-priced. It is much better in numerous other countries (although it was invented here). I pay for "up to" 50 Mbs, which I get nowhere but on a test site. Sometimes I get as much as 7-8 Mbs. Unually, I get less than 1 Mbs. Is this false or deceptive? We need much more competition in the CATV and broadband industries.
—Jerald Vinikoff, Mechanicville, NY

big conglomerates & big money is killing America. Big government does nothing to protect US citizens against big corporate greed!
—Phyl Morello, White Pine, TN

Also ban cable cos from charging monthly fees for required equipment! SHAME ON YOU!
—Julie Adelson, Santa Monica, CA

COMCAST needs TO BE STOPPED!-and cable box rent is outrageous!-my 94 yr old mom has a cable box that is 9yrs old-out of date!-she has paid for the entire box many times! but Comcast still bleeds her money!
—Thomas A. Guaraldi, Houston, TX

The Internet and TV are foundational to our country's growth. Telecom monopolies have proliferated at the cost of consumer choice and technological progress. It's time for that to stop.
—Alan Harris, Houston, TX

I consider internet privacy of an extremely primary nature — a digital interpretation of several aspects of the Bill of Rights — and they must be protected at all cost.
—Kenneth Skillman, Lutz, FL

I'm a college student living off the dollars of my deceased father. Time and money are running out, I don't watch TV, I study and I look for work every day. I DON'T NEED TO PAY FOR CABLE WHEN I ALREADY PAY FOR SERVICE IN GENERAL

—Eleanor Kaye, Hallandale, FL

I hate getting ripped off by cable companies. Certain large cable companies rent/lease cable boxes at about $10 each month. These companies also charge for use of cable cards should one be lucky enough to find a device with this feature.
—Kenney Phillis jr, Denton, TX

Please don't let monopolies charge extra for service or sell our private information without our consent.
—Alice Trexler, arlington, MA

I'm tired of paying a monthly rental for my set-top box. Why should I have to when so many such devices are available on the open market for a one-time charge? We're not wealthy and that monthly charge for the STB is killing us. Please open up the purchase of third-party set-top boxes to the competition and end the cable companies' monopoly on these devices and forcing their customers to rent this readily available equipment from them. That just isn't right.
—Herb Schulsinger, Valinda, CA

My information is MINE. With the rising cost of connecting to the internet, I may, as far too many American's, no longer be able to afford it.
—Tamara Carpenter, Kalamazoo, MI

Comcast is a dragon.
—Carl Weiler, Ferndale, MI

As a senior on a limited budjet it is crucial that our rates are lowered to a level that is affordable without compromising our level of service.
—Capolarry Mack, WBL, MN

We need to end monopolies...PERIOD!
—Paul Paul Neeley, Antioch, IL

I want my privacy guaranteed and I want an end to the monopolistic practices that Comcast employs.
—Jusef White, Fremont, CA

My personal information belongs to me solely, no matter what some greedy corp. insists otherwise. Any use of customer personal info. by comcast must be on an opt-in basis only, which would force that excrement to be transparent about their practices, at least in this respect.
—Joe Weis, Reedley, CA

Cable is a monopoly -time to break their control
—D T Ptak, Delevan, NY

Its time for consumer's rights to take priority over industries' interests. No, you can't let them sell my info. Why is this even a question? What happened to the anti-monopoly, anti-trust measures in this country?
—Jason McDonald, Oklahoma City, OK

Businesses which provide home/small business Internet service have captive customers, with few choices. They MUST be regulated Tightly as common-carrier monopolies working in the public interest, convenience, and necessity, unless/until real, vigorous competition for the physical layer of Internet service becomes a reality.
—Nick Kratz, Pasadena, CA

Freedom...
—Mr. Michael Krall, Lander, WY

These are times when a global market produces global sales harassment and expands the risk of fraud through identity theft. It becomes exceedingly difficult to properly manage one's digital foot print when vendors and corporations sell personal information. It is bad enough that they want this option at all, it is totally unacceptable that they should sell personal info without their customers'/clients' notification and consent.
—Noreen Winningham, Skokie, IL

Cable bills in the U.S. are ridiculous especially compared to other nations.
—Ronald Wharton, Columbus, OH

It's unamerican, free up the bonds of this monopoly
—Ben Kapek, Spokane, WA

Comcast has no right to sell my private info and cable-TV has forever cost too much!
—Larry S Powers, South Berwick, ME

I can't even afford cable. I can't even afford the taxes for cable. The fact that cable prices keep going up so fast and faster than the taxes is insane. I think the fact that cable is so expensive is why so many people download movies and shows illegally.
—Travis Sullivan, Grand Island, NE

We get poor reception, quality, options, and customer service. For all this we pay dearly compared to the rest of the world. What is wrong with this picture? Monopolies perhaps? Shameful.
—Lillian Feierabend, Cottonwood, CA

Privacy is of the utmost importance. As is opening up the STB business. Please move on this now
—George E Hitz Jr, Sudbury, MA

Paul Ryan and Marco Rubio decided, because of the price of gas, which I buy maybe once a month, that I didn't deserve a COLA this year. My cable bill went up anyway! Maybe none of this matters, as I will have to drop cable or my prescription medications soon!
—Lewis Litzinger, Tallahassee, FL

Please, be on the side of us consumers.
—Karl Heinz Kremer, Rochester, NY

I am writng to urge the FCC to vote on and pass rules that would 1) stop Comcast (or any cable/internet provider) from selling a consumer's private information without the express consent of the consumer, and 2) end the cable-TV provider monopoly on ownership of set-top boxes that force consumer to rent these devices on a monthly basis. There is no social benefit basis for either of these practices. They exist solely because of the market power held by the entities involved and are procticed to extract more revenue from consumers rather than somehow improve service. Bill Schramm schrammwe@gmail.com
—William Schramm, Oak Ridge, TN

Dear Jessica Rosenorcel, please take immediate action to pass the measure and prevent Comcast from selling our private information and also from becoming a monopoly. You are our only hope! Do what is the right thing.
—Gogian Yee, MONTEBELLO, CA

Please protect and help consumers.
—CL Doyle, Bronxville, NY

This sort of thing is supposed to be for the benefit of the American people, not commercial interests.
—Jeff Harrison, Worley, ID

Because WE PAY some company/corporation to PROVIDE A SERVICE OR PRODUCT to us, does not mean that that entity should assume it is automatically granted the right to take our private information -- which they have ONLY because it is needed to conduct activities directly related to the delivery and/or servicing of said paid-for product or service -- and give it away (i.e., favor trading) or sell it. They have NO built-in right to do such. Additionally, unless there is a valid patent reason to constrain a consumer to the use of a particular/specific amenity/tool that is required to receive and use a service or product, then said amenity/tool should be subject to competitive acquisition and pricing -- after all, these same companies that want the government to protect their interests are the same ones that scream about keeping government out of the "free market place". Seems that they should not be allowed to have things both ways. Competition is good for the country, and good for the consumer. I'm hoping you will support the FCC's broadband privacy proposal, and its efforts to end the monopoly on set-top boxes (FYI - my cable rates have skyrocketed in the last 3 years due to consolidation of the industry -- we need MORE competition, not less). Thank you for your consideration in these matters.
—R Shandor, San Diego, CA

I do not have the money and power, that the people that see you so often, have.
—Andy McGinnis, Milton, FL

Cable companies have an unfair monopoly that threatens our privacy and our wallets. Please stop them.
—Ms. Jan Kimbrough, Valley Village, CA

Your charter is to serve the public interest. It is NOT in the public interest to have personal information sold to corporations without the individual's consent. Please resist these attempts of congress persons who have sold out to corporate lobbyists to change your rulings. Corporatists pay lip service to the merits of competition, yet when it comes to pricing of set top boxes, they inconsistently favor monopolistic policies.
—WK Kent Wilson, Portland, OR

Do your job.
—Patricia M. M. Williams, Lewes, DE

Why would the government allow the selling private information without user consent? Why is that even an issue? What good are those annoying security questions, if Comcast can sell the answers?
—LL Price, Kearney, NE

The public's private information is not for sale, please finish protecting our privacy. The Monopoly's you are allowing are allowing the prices to sky rocket also. Please protect the public before helping Corporations. Thank you.
—L Yaco, San Francisco, CA

The FCC is chartered to act in the public interest, which occasions opposing powerhouse operators like Comcast. I am asking the FCC to do its job.
—Germain C Giner, Chicago, IL

The FCC and Congress need to stop kneeling before the telecommunication corporations and start listening to the American people.
—Terrance Kelly, King of Prussia, PA

Freedom of thought is dependent on a reasonable expectation of privacy. The minute everyone thinks someone is listening to everything they say or write, we lose creativity and we lose the constitution of the United States of America.
—Christian McCarty, Seattle, WA

Generally speaking privacy is very important to me. I try to avoid posting too much on the internet that could lead to people bothering me and don't really want companies that I pay for services to decide they want MORE money and sell my info.
—Ben Loukota, Newtown Square, PA

My cable bill is ridiculous! I thought it was common knowledge that monopolies are bad. Why is the Cable Industry allowed to keep one? Is it because of the campaign donations they give you?
—Alan Wojtalik, Baltimore, MD

It's like a lot of other issues, there's a lot of talk what can be done to make things better, but damn little in getting something done!
—Steven Oakland, Ames, IA

Monopolies lead to abuse of power - and the role of a federal agency in a democracy is to protect the people, not the powerful. Please stand up for us. This is about so much more than saving a few dollars on cable TV bills - it's about equal access to information, education, jobs, and opportunity.
—Ria Megnin, Dayton, OH

It's way past time to put American families first. Please do the right thing for all Americans instead of just corporations.
—Shari Wildschutte, Concord, CA

No more monopolies in the cable industry...you must stop Comcast from selling our private information and no more set-top boxes.
—Darrell Schmidt, Rose Hill, KS

Your supposed to be working for the american people, stop taking bribes and "Do Your Job"!!
—Stephen Mcquade, dudley, MA

Please protect my privacy. Also, if our justice department won't take action against the monopoly of Comcast, I hope the FCC can stop them from charging rent on cable boxes.
—Meredith West, Chicago, IL

Monopolies cost consumers. NO reason for one to exist except to unfairly benefit business.
—Elizabeth Molsen, Newtown, PA

We must find a way to end monopoly capitalism, worldwide, one way or the other.
—Warren Colison, Minneapolis, MN

We need more diversity of internet providers and other media.
—Melissa B Peters, Henrico, VA

Ending the monopoly would improve the entire nations economy by providing competition and innovation, etc. We as a nation need to improve our infrastructure, we are not even on par with other countries!! AND I want my information kept private, they do NOT have my permission to sell my information. And I would very much appreciate a much lower bill, or at least the option to use another companies more competitively priced service. Thank you!
—Kim Hensley, Sacramento, CA

Privacy is paramount in one's personal life. Consequestally, personal information should not be permitted to be sold or otherwise shared. In addition, competition in terms of hardware which will meet required performance standards should be encouraged, not restrained thought captive equipment rentals.
—R R Schneider Jr, Bethlehem, PA

Cable companies have no right to threaten our privacy for their own profits. Nor do they have the right to jack up cable prices like a monopoly.
—Anthony Straka, Wappingers Falls, NY

Because monopolies are illegal and you are the only entity that can enforce this! Free competition is better economics anyways!!
—Joanie Kenney, Fort Collins, CO

There is no decent reason to delay voting.
—Marvin Feil, Newton, NJ

Comcast has repeatedly abused its monopoly in my neighborhood by claiming to keep our rates the same, while adding bogus new fees and using its customer service department to bait and switch trapped consumers. Please step in.
—Judy Ford, San Anselmo, CA

supposed consumer protection; do your job or get out of our way
—R Kim, Prescott, AZ

It's tiresome the number of companies profiting from selling information about me that I have never and will never do business with.
—Eric Ashley, Fort Lauderdale, FL

I'm one of those folks who has "cut the cord" for financial reasons. I do sometimes miss cable, but as long as the providers can run roughshod over my privacy and my bank account, I'll be getting by without them.
—Kathryn A. Burns, Austin, TX

My privacy is of the utmost importance. At present the cost of cable service is outrageously expensive and something must be done to reduce the cost.
—Hon. JD Krutick Craig Hon. Joyce Krutick Craig L.L.M. (Ret.), Torrington, CT

As the most modern of public utilities the web needs to be nurtured as a public trust, not skimmed as a Republican venture into mind and wallet control
—John Heigl, Lady Lake, FL

I was abused and cheated by Time Warner. I am now trying Direct TV. The only choices I have are Hargray(haven't heard anything good about them) and direct and dish. So deregulation has given us monopolies with their high prices and abuse. We are all very fed up with the high prices and abuse.
—Diana nadanyi, Bluffton, SC

I don't think it is fair to provide subpar service and expect people to pay more for what they should already get for the high prices they are already paying. You cannot doing anything in American society without having online access and it should be considered a public utility.
—Arica Dawson, Holly, MI

My personal info is not for sale
—John W Lawler, Magalia, CA

Monopolies are bad for the country.
—Matthew Dooley, Pittsburgh, PA

You know what to do Wheeler. Protect our internet freedoms and stop stalling renomination of Rosenworcel.
—Jeffery Young, Rochester, NY

We're consumers.
—Lester and Judy Hoyle, Cave Junction, OR

Privacy is part of our freedom to communicate that enables radical discussions regarding how people want society to change. This is fundamental to the kind of conversations that created the prosperous democratic civil society that many around the world envy, and no less vital to the kind of free thinking we need to adapt founding principles in the context of evolving technologies. The powerful should not have the power to know and track everything that the less powerful think. We all do better when common people feel safe to express themselves privately and find ways to address problems they might not want shared publicly.
—Brian Ashman, Saint Paul, MN

OF COURSE the privacy of people's internet usage should inviolable. That should not even be an issue, it should be taken for granted by all parties.

Privacy cost and competition
—Charles Woodward, Belleville, WI

My Cable Bill.....and my Privacy.....
—Fogerson Margot, Belleville, MI

The only thing worse than a bad government is bad business. I, as an American, have a right to my privacy and my property. These companies are threatening to take both away from me, and I won't have it. It is your job to listen to the people, and the people are saying hold strong, and don't let these big companies centralize not just your, not just mine, by the liberties of ALL Americans.
—Colum Cross, Albany, NY

Cable companies have been ripping off their customers for far too long and it needs to stop. There must be more competition, including freeing up the last mile, eliminating the set-top box monopoly, increasing broadband access to outlying areas, and forcing them to use the money we are forced to give them to provide low-priced access for schools and libraries.
—Richard R Gingras, Quinton, VA

The consumer is in danger of getting screwed even more than currently. The FCC should be defending the people, not enabling their being gouged. We already have slower and more expensive internet service than any other industrial power: a national disgrace.
—S Fleck, Chapel Hill, NC

My cable bill is expensive and i don't have premium channels. For what i pay i should be getting everything they have to offer. Selling my info? I don't think so. It's not enough to over charge but to take money for my info that you have no right to sell? Belly up boys. It's time to stop screwing the ones who put and keep you in business. It's called appreciation.
—Barbra Morman, Mount Pleasant, TX

I had to discontinue TV cable because it's become too expensive to maintain.
—Leon S. Miller, St. Petersburg, FL

This is all too obvious. What is Comcast the NSA now? And leave us a few dollars for other expenses. The cable industry has enough profits for a thousand years.
—Bruce Monnier, Durham, NC

From the advent of the telegraph onward, public communications and broadcast media have always been prey to the controlling influence of private interests to the detriment of the public at large. If we let this happen again with the Internet, given the demise of journalism, we can expect grave damage to our democracy itself.
—Sam DeLeo, Denver, CO

Freedom entails privacy.
—Kimberly Jecker, frisco, TX

The cable fat cats are an oligopoly bordering on a consortium-monopoly. Hence, they need to be rigorously regulated as either a public utility or a common carrier. P.S. to Ralph Nader: Sorry I ditched your campaign in '08, bro. I now know that you would never have sold out to Hillary like Bernie did. All my best to the PIRGs!
—Terry Gruzebeck, Minneapolis, MN

My freedom matters. If they can sell me, they can sell you and yours.
—Michele Brophy, King Ferry, NY

Limited income. Comcast should Not be able to sell our private information!
—Mary Snow, Columbia Station, OH

I take measures to keep my info private but cannot protect myself from internet service and other media providers without your help. My cable internet and TX service has increased 50% over the past 4 years, including rent on the cable box. I need your help to obtain fair pricing instead of the monopoly extortion to which I am subject in my rural town.
—Ms. Jo Ann Duman, Texarkana, TX

The internet is now utilized by almost everyone. Keep it open to all.
—Patricia Silver, Berkeley, CA

Replace the FCC with real Americans who actually protect the people instead of what we have now.
—Mr. Joseph Sandy, Clarksburg, WV

I am tired of being robbed by these corporations. You are there to regulate them and represent the people. It's time to do your job.
—Lester Sheran, Powder Springs, GA

Please support the action to prevent Comcast from increasing rates for poorer service and speed and prevent their selling of private information to make even more money. Comcast has to be restrained! I am a retired low income individual and I need the protection of this action .Please control Comcast's monopolistic actions now!
—James E Baker, St. Paul,, MN

I can't believe that you would let political pressure block you from moving forward with measures that are so clearly in the public’s interest. Please step up and protect the people.
—David W Etherington, Eugene, OR

Most Americans rely upon television and/or the internet not just for entertainment but more importantly for information, shopping, banking, and communication (like this message). Political power is shifting to the public interest over 'big telecom' corporate influence. Do the right thing. Thank you.
—B Suel, Neotsu, OR

The cable industry is acting much as the old Ma Bell did when she was in the catbird's seat. They provide a service and forbid the ownership of the means to access it. Only a monopoly can behave in this fashion. On the personal information front, I gave my information to Comcast for the purpose of hiring them to provide a service to me, not for them to sell me to the highest bidder. Please make them get my permission to sell my personal information. It's not too much to ask.
—Robert Post, Villas, NJ

These are basic measures that as a consumer we should have. Please follow through on these proposals.
—Michael Schmitt, Portland, OR

You're suppose to protect us from monopolies, not Comcast profits!!!
—Clifford Johnson, Minneapolis, MN

As a senior on a limited income, my 'supposedly' freedom's are being "Stripped' by 'the SUPER RICH' everyday. DO YOUR JOB, PLEASE!!! STOP THE 'Mining' of "the 99%" population's Money.... No more rent seeking from legacy outfits unwilling to innovate. Free market means industry responds to market demand--not legislates monopolistic advantage.
—Brian Driggs, Glendale, AZ

Internet service is a utility, like the phone companies. My information is just that, MY information, not my ISP's.
—Mick Curth, Aurora, CO

Please work for the people on this.Every year or every other year,rates go up.No matter what cable company you have.Their profit margin exceeds from one year to the next while we pay more for their service.Enough greed has to stop for the sake of us little people.
—Stephen Smith, Bethlehem, PA

I am paying a ridiculous amount each month for very basic cable and internet service, with no chance of reducing the bill since the better rates are only given in bundles. Currently, I am forced to rent a) router, b) a modem, c) digital converter box, even though I have a HD, smart TV. Having only been able to find a part time job for the last two years, it is ridiculous that I should have to pay over $105 A MONTH. I need internet service to look for better jobs. I need basic cable so that I can at least watch the local news because without the stinking digital converter, I can't even get local TV stations on my TV. Do the right thing by THE PEOPLE, of whom I am a part, and end this monopoly and protect my/our privacy! Thank you.
—Ms. Holly McDuffie, Los Angeles, CA

I am disabled and on a fixed income.We do not receive cost of living increases yet my cable and internet bill continues to go up and my TV service is not very good.Please help me and others like me.

I value my Privacy!
—Terry Dailey, Fargo, ND

I may have to give up cable and Internet all together if the prices don't stabilize, in the last 3 months my cable bill has increased 3 times currently it cost me overy $160.00 a month for cable and Internet services. I am on Disability, something needs to be done. I am paying for the same channels just to have access to discovery, history and create channels. This is outrageous. Do something for us, the consumer!
—Sandra James, Jasper, AL

Technology has given corporations the means to invade and abuse privacy in ways that have never existed before, and they show every sign of exploiting these powers, with no regard for the rest of us. Only government, in many cases the FCC can stop them. Please make sure you do. The issue of the cable box monopoly is less profound but still vital. Like any monopolists, cable companies will offer inferior products (that use more electricity than they need to just because the cable company doesn't have to pay its customers' electric bills) and gouge customers so long as they can get away with it. They mustn't be allowed to.
—Mark Lloyd Baker, Globe, AZ

This is important to me because Comcast has no right to sell my private information without my consent and I don't consent. My information is mine to sell and they should not be able to deny me any communication service if I refuse to let them sell my information and especially without compensationg me nor should any shoddy, arbitrary, or illegal contract methods allow them to engage in the sale of my private information. Comcast should not be able to sell my information, even if it relates to marketing. I also ask that the FCC does do something to reign in the profits of cable companies, it is my understanding they make money hand over fist, do seem to have a bit of a monopoly and are working to reduce competition and possibly are using this to charge more than they should as I believe my cable bill is too expensive and Comcast especially seems to be in the habit of offering less services such as NFL coverage, expensive pornography rentals, modern cable features, and restrict online television access a bit as well and charging more to get basic cable and cable services in general.Other cable providers have offered the NFL service free that I know of and cable packages cost less with other providers. I believe the renting of set top boxes is just a form of exacting funds from consumers because renters pay more than people who buy set top boxes and if it costs $200.00, although I dont know how much a set top costs as of 2016, renters could pay a $1,000.00 and still owe next months rent for the set top and have to return it when they are no longer customers. This seems like financial extortion to me and a burden for low income people. Plus my set tops have been burning out faster then when I was a child. Ive been through three Internet boxes which burned out and 2 set top boxes for cable as the last one was better than the one we replaced three years ago. So buying boxes isn't exactly good either but at least it costs the consumer that much less for cable. I believe any set top box I own should be good enough for any cable provider. Better compatibility between set tops and every cable provider in America would be a further improvement.
—Jeffrey M Rivard, Framingham, MA

Don't cave in to Big Telecom's obstruction and abuse of their power. Do the right thing for the American people whose interests the FCC ultimately serves.
—Mr Ulysses S Lateiner, Somerville, MA

I do not like the media, the police, large corporations and government breach my right to privacy and confidentiality. Their should be a public inquiry and financial compensation for me and those affect by the FCC and Congress. These people should be indicted and prosecuted to the full extent of law. I want justice for over 30 years of abuse of power.
—Christopher Huggins, niagara falls,

I'm a consumer, not a product. To sell my personal information, especially retroactively, is unethical. It's giving people no choice whether to disclose what they read, view, and how they think; this is especially unfair in communities where there is only one internet provider and where the poor cannot purchase a "luxury" service to protect this information. This is the most intrusive action I've ever seen short of a court order. If this passes, I'm sure lots of people will be looking forward to buying YOUR personal information. If this thought is unnerving, it should be. Being forced to rent a set-top box from the service provider is a stupid practice. However I think it's one that will be disrupted by the marketplace once video over IP cable providers can compete with cable operators...which will only happen if there is true net neutrality. If Comcast is allowed to impede data flow or extort money from these other providers before allowing them to flow effectively on their networks (should NOT be allowed), then forcing Comcast to open the set-top box to force more competition is a must. Again, cable providers are often the ONLY option in communities, so a monopoly or a duopoly exists and the government must regulate these industries to create competition since it fails to exist on its own.
—Kevin Berwald, Renton, WA

The cable companies are calling the shots, all to benefit them. Everything they do is to increase their profits to the detriment of the consumer. Needs to be turned around.
—Joyce Kidd, Beverly Hills, CA

Our cable bill has doubled in three years - service goes out every month or so, and we only view 20% of what's offered (it's not humanly possible to watch over 100 channels). Meanwhile, the cost of living rises and incomes stay the same or decrease. If we want high speed internet, we don't even have an alternative. Isn't it time this communications monopoly cut the public a break?
—Roberta Marley-Merchant, Lancaster, PA

This is important to me because monopolies of any sort are bad. They are anti-business, they are anti-consumer and they are anti-american.
—Joshua Dowdell, Lanham, MD

It's time to let the consumers choose what programming they want ala cart versus these expensive package deals that include many channels that no one wants or needs. High definition TV channels should be included with no extra cost. There should be no extra costs to stream or data caps. By now all of these companies should have the capability to stream as much data as necessary.
—John Horvatic, San Jose, CA

My bills for TV and online services are going through the roof. I urge you to break up the monopolies once and for all.
—Paul McDowell, Santa Barbara, CA

Please support the consumer in this matter. Thank you. It's unfortunate, but we cannot depend on Congress to support the American people given the undue influence of lobbyists.
—Walter S. Jakielski, Marseilles, IL

Broadband and net neutrality is the new platform for free speech in our democracy. It is critical that the FCC help protect the public's interest !
—Brad Buckner, Littleton, CO

The FCC does not work for the benefit of private capital, but to guarantee fair and beneficial use of the public resources owned by the nation as a whole. Please move forward immediately to protect privacy and end the monopoly on set-top boxes. Thank you
—Peter Fraterdeus, Galena, IL

I have always had a strong belief in one's right to privacy on the internet, in an age where privacy is steadily eroding in the physical world. Cable companies like Comcast would prefer no one have any privacy whatsoever, because it's in their financial interests as for-profit corporations to do whatever they can to earn money off you. This is the path that leads to increasingly dramatic abuse of one's customers, and the FCC desperately needs to limit their power. They should not be above the law.
—Andrew Fortune, East Bridgewater, MA

Please protect these common-sense, pro-consumer policies
—Jonas Hansson, Malmberget,

I'm tired of cable companies running rampant and uncontrolled. I'm tired of their monopolistic ways growing unchecked. This needs to end.
—Brent Metcalf, Urbana, IL

Consumers, ie ordinary citizens, need protection against mega corporations. If the government won't support our interests, then nobody will. Everyone needs phone service; almost everyone needs internet and TV service. We cannot protect ourselves individually. Huge monopolies must be closely regulated in the public interest.
—Colleen James Clark and Cox, Cambridge, MA

I am allowed to buy my own modem while my internet connection is from Comcast, so why should I not be allowed to buy my own cable TV box? My privacy is of paramount concerns, and I should be able to tell any company that it cannot provide my personal details to anyone else.
—Sterling Proffitt, Keswick, VA

It is bad enough that the federal government in general and the FCC in particular have allowed monopoly control by companies like Comcast, Time-Warner, AT&T, etcetera, to exist forcing most customers in having little choice as to TV and ISP services, at least stand up and take some of their control over captive markets away and support privacy of customers and competition and choice for customers as to the hardware they use. The increased competition in cable boxes will be very much like what happened when control of phones was wrested from Ma Bell (AT&T), opening up the market for competition and innovation.
—David Waratuke, Round Lake, IL

Should have been done years ago!
—Jim Bell, San Diego, CA

Companies cannot treat the American people like slaves, they don't own us and should not be able to sell our information for their profit.

—Mary, M.I., NY

Privacy is important and monopolies need to be stopped.
—Lisa O'Donnell, Stillwater, OK

I spend $240 a year to rent a cable box that is worth $150. Consumers need FCC protection from predatory cable companies.
—John Carr, Centerport, NY

I absolutely hate having no choice. It is not a free market when a company holds monopoly power over people. It is not fair and it is not competitive. This is the problem with politics overshadowing market pressures.
—Michael H Forster, Portland, OR

Comcast and AT&T have put forth a horrible idea which deserves to be buried under a rock. It is nothing but a power play to take over our media and tell us what we should watch. Nobody will go for TV or digital media after this. I predict that file sharing will reach new heights and many will use proxy servers to hold onto whatever minimal privacy they already have. These options will cause Comcast and AT&T to scream bloody murder, but somehow I doubt that the American people will vote in favor of armed invasion of Tonga or some other tiny island country. We also have the question of the fact that this is the "World Wide" web and that social norms for the USA may be vastly different than those of Hong Cong, Paris or Kiev. Who gave Comcast/AT&T the right to block channels or otherwise interfere with content from those countries? Another thought: a study by Gwava showed that 205 Billion emails are created every day. If the average email is 1000 bytes, then you are looking at 205 Terabytes every day. In the end, people will find a way to get on the "fast" internet and circumvent the throttle on the slower streams. This will render any such laws/methods as academic and used only by people who are technologically illiterate. Programs like TOR will become mandatory, and this ham-handed approach to "ruling the internet" will end.
—Steven Robbins, Londonderry, NH

Protect people's privacy and lower our cable bills now. Empathy is needed for people not monopoly.
—Ross Lockridge III, Cerrillos, NM

Security of my private information is crucial to me. Please don't sell it.
—Chris Nazarro, Austin, TX

Television, radio, Internet, newspapers are the vehicles through which a population learn and keep informed about their democracy and the rest of the world we all live in. Cable rates are sky high and getting higher-unaffordable by millions-especially younger citizens. An informed public is an imperative for democracy. We need your help to put the safety and well bring of our country before the mega profits of the cable companies.
—Lynn Demitrieus, New York, NY

We nee our privacy and need more competition between cable companies to improve service and decrease costs.
—Patrick M. Malone, Findlay, OH

Your job is to stand up for and protect the consumer against unfair practices by mega corporations. If you give in to them, who is left in our corner? And who are you then working for?

It's time to end the set-top box Monopoly and lower my bill. These two proposals are in the best interest of all consumers in this country.
—F Lashmet, Kansas City, MO

My private information is mine. To sell what is mine without my consent or due process, is theft. It is the duty of government in general and the FCC, in particular, to protect the governed from unwarranted intrusion.
—Joel E Grace, Big Flats, NY

The public needs protection in area rightfully a consumer protection. The FCC is the agency responsible.
—LuMarion Conklin, ,

Please take positive action on the two measures before you. The measures benefit the public. It is time for courage and giving a voice and economic power back to the citizens of our great country.
—Janice Absher, Spokane Valley, WA

Keep our prices low and keep companies fair.
—Tonya Stoddard, Boise, ID

The industry's requirement that we RENT settop boxes is as regressive (and repressive of technological innovation) as Ma Bell's erstwhile rule that we lease phones. Look at how many careers and fortunes were made when ATT was forced to step into the '80's. We can have a compatable burst of innovation today. Cut our chains and watch us take off! (I have no ties to any entity that might profit from this rule...but I'd like have the opportinity to!)
—Elinor M. Walker, Rockville, MD

I am a 70 year old senior. The internet is crucial to me for addressing medical issues and other banking and financing controls. I leave on Social Security and a small pension. I already have to pay Comcast $100.00 a month for basic Internet only, and there is nothing they can do to lower it. My Wife uses it to work at home at night. I refuse to use it for Phone and cable service. when I had that with Comcast it was up to $278.00 a month and they would not lower it for me. So we dropped them except for the internet. Please stop this madness. Sincerely, Thank you.
—Joseph Fell, Naugatuck, CT

my info should not be for sale. Comcast is trying to become a monopoly and control not only cable but the internet for their profit.
—Frank A Warthan Jr, Kennesaw, GA

As a senior on a fixed income, I need you to stick up for Main Street. PLEASE!!!
—William Korbel, WATERLOO, NY

Fairness. Their exorbitant prices are price gauging. $99 to be able to watch TV for a month. I call that gauging.
—Donald L. Anderson, HARPSWELL, ME

I demand that my privacy is respected. Also, because I am on a fixed income a reduction in my cable bill would benefit me so I may use that money for medication or food.
—Howard Hayward, West Bridgewater, MA

I am 87 and sometime before I die I would like to pay cable bills based on competition not on monopoly. It's disgraceful that all my life I have had to put up with bad service and high prices. Those in charge like to bleat about capitalistic competition but it exists in very few places.
—Diane Olson, Santa Monica, CA

Because we the people think the FCC should do its job. You represent all Americans not the 1%. You all get paid good wages and benefits, so quit taking bribes from the 1%. Quit being greedy at expense of the 99%.
—Lynn M Ketchum, Madison, WI

Over the 5 years I've been a comcast customer, I've seen my rate rise without any appreciable improvement in service. This monopoly Comcast enjoys will soon prevent me from using their service anymore, once it becomes unaffordable. You must step in and curb their monopolistic ways. Please make competition and lower prices a reality.
—B Franz, East Orange, NJ

I am sick of the never ending monopoly and choke hold these companies have on us!
—Eric Grebs, Carlsbad, CA

it is outrages Comcast is selling our information they need to be reined in on all
—Betty Smisek, Saint Paul, MN

I deeply resent being held hostage by the cable industry monopoly. There is only one available service provider in my area, and I have NO CHOICE but to subscribe to them. The costs keep rising, and I am forced to pay up or do without. We need some relief from this greed by any means possible, and not having to rent their set-top boxes would be a start. Also, why are they allowed to sell our private information without prior consent??? We should have the option of OPTING IN instead of being required to opt out!!
—James Cavallo, Lambertville, NJ

Monopolies represent the ability to impose "private taxes." I've actually written about this in my book "The Covenant of Democracy: Should Gov't Be Run Like a Business?" Ch. 5. I have the support of an excellent economist who does both policy and crunches the numbers. He was initially skeptical but then he looked at the graphs, and the numbers. If this gets on mainstream TV, Drumpf will send the "second amendment people" after me. And since the handgun called the "5-7" can pierce a class three vest, I'll be doomed.
—James E. Roper, Holt, MI

Monopolies are never fair -- Capitalism is supposed to thrive on competition! Privacy is guaranteed in the Constitution!!
—Aaron St. John, San Diego, CA

I'm tired of deleting unwanted solicitations, and advertising slowing my computer, and unsubscribing from e-mails. It happens whenever I research anything slightly related to anything. I live in a HUD senior co-op. Cable TV is supplied as part of the monthly payment. I have to pay a separate bill each month to rent the box to feed the cable to my TV. I bought the TV and can access any online TV service except the one already paid for with a $45 adapter. The cost of a few month's rental for the box to get service from anyone else. Seems like renting the glass to get a drink of water I paid for.
—Tom Ozzello, Saint Paul, MN

Cable is too expensive. TV used to be free.
—Iliana Sonntag, San Diego, CA

Please stand up for us!
—Diane Kopan, chicago, IL

I don't want my private information sold to anyone. Comcast now charges in the hundreds for cable and t.v. We pay the highest for the slowest internet. Please stop them. We need to have options for the cable t.v. boxes, they are ripping us off badly.
—Jeanne Shaw, Denver, CO

I am a senior citizen and the rising costs of cable are getting difficult to manage. Please take action on this. Thank you!
—Pamala Thomas, Santa Monica, CA

Please rectify the failed promised of lower cable-TV bills immediately!
—Jeanne Klein, Lawrence, KS

Information is free. Don't let a megalithic company take that freedom from me.
—Tanner Fleming, Bellingham, WA

I don't want the cable monopoly to stop the FCC from doing the right thing for the consumer. We should be able to choose what set top box we use to watch tv, and who gives out our private information.
—Chris Rayback, San Diego, CA

I'm tired of my cable bill going up so regularly and much of it is the "rent" on the cable box and the DVD recorder I'm forced to use. Please finish what you have started!
—Deadra Wright, New Braunfels, TX

The FCC is there to make sure the public is protected from preditory corporate policies as well as making the business of "communication" a fair level playing field. It's time that we, as Americans actually enforce the regulations that are put into law. I'm tired of hearing about "over regulation" when the fact is, corporations like Comcast thumb their noses at the law every day.
—Daniel Breitbach, Napa, CA

—Paul Palla, Greencastle, PA

I've lived in Paris, where cable service is better--and cheaper. Why shouldn't ours be?
—David Ball, Northampton, MA

Cable's way too expensive! Allow "ala carte" ordering.
—Mr. Michael S. Callaway, Upland, CA

Who do you support? It isn't like the cable companies are going to go broke any time soon. So who does look out for the public? Comcast, and the others, can look out for themselves. Which is exactly what they are doing right now!
—Randy Juras, Homer Glen, IL

Our ability to live peaceably and productively depends on the quality of the information we have regarding various threats to and the means by which we might—again peaceably—overcome them. This makes information, and the internet, as a means of informing ourselves, the very first line in providing for the common defense. Please act to defend a free and open internet—and access to it—as it is by means of such information that our chances for survival and ensuring our enduring progress as a people and a nation will be significantly improved.
—Matthew Herschler, Northampton, MA

I am suddenly getting ads for baby products because a neighbor who steals WiFi signal is pregnant. We are all being spied upon in our own homes, and government regulation is necessary to stop these abuses. The monopoly on set top boxes is anti competitive and stifles the free market.
—David Carter, redlands, CA

Cable bills are way too high. Customers should not have to pay extra for something that is necessary. Cable companies need to charge fair, not excessive, prices.
—Eleanor Earley, Covington, GA

This 2016 election has shed a bright light on the fragility of American democracy which is under attack from numerous quarters. One is the destruction of privacy; another is the consolidation of media and communication. It is not just about bills; it's about freedom.

—Ricardo Mendez, L. A., CA

My privacy is absolutely essential to my ability to pursue my interests freely, explore new or controversial ideas, and enjoy myself without the fear of exploitation. Please move forward on the proposals to keep Comcast from selling my private information without my consent and unlocking the cable box monopoly. This is a very important issue for me and my family, and I appreciate your courage in standing up for people like us.
—Joe Miranda, Garden Grove, CA

The internet belongs to the people and we should be charging the to use it, not giving it to them to screw us with.
—Lowell Young, Mariposa, CA

My private information is just that - PRIVATE. it is time our government starts protecting our privacy instead of giving large corporations rights to steal it and do with it what they will.

As an active internet user with two teenage children (one of whom I am just delivering to his first year in college) we are appalled at the high cost of Internet service!
—Stephen Couche, Portland, OR

Holding and marketing my private information is an invasion of my privacy. There ought to be a law against it. Monopolies lead to unfair trade practices and obstruct democracy, and they should be illegal.
—Lucinda Hannon, Avon, CT

The future of competition is at stake, we need to strip the Cable incumbents of their ability to dominate the set-top box business. If this was standardized and open to competition this would lower costs for many consumers. In addition, the Cable incumbents must be restricted from selling my personal preference information. That is an invasion of my privacy at its core.
—Mr. Vincent M. Oddo, Atlanta, GA

Given the recent court cases and votes, it seems clear that many, many people are in favor of breaking the monopoly that large companies hold. I live in an area where I have NO choices about my cable provider (only Comcast), and even then, the service is spotty particularly with regard to internet. In addition, I would like to know about how cable companies and internet companies can and do use information about me in their sales. People should know how their information is used! I urge you to stand behind these proposals that will make the lives of consumers measurably better. Thank you.
—Alecia Magnifico, Dover, NH

Many low-income families are paying cable companies a significant amount of money for cable, a necessity for their school age children, college level youths and simply every day living....these dollars go to BIG MEDIA, instead of families and individual, who are often challenge to make ends meet. The options available from cable companies is extremely limited, no box, no cable... or choose to pay a price for "bundle" offers, channels and programming you do not need nor necessarily use. Take the top-box away! Help families save $ for important needs instead. Also, help us keep our privacy...it matters!

Monopolies stop so much economic expansion. Comcast shouldn't worry so much about getting permission because they will have plenty of people that won't care. Just let us who don't want our info sold have the choice to stop it.
—Gabrielle V Pla, Kapaa, HI

Monopolies are against the law. Enforce the law - break them up or put price caps on their rates!!
—Nick D., Westlake, OH

We live in a society where the FCC no longer protects the privacy rights of Americans. Our information is sold without our consent. I expect our government officials to do more than protect corporations and their monied influence on Washington. It is time you protect PEOPLE instead of CORPORATIONS. I thank you for your consideration of this matter. Lynn from Kansas
—Lynn Mittelstadt, Eskridge, KS

My personal information is not a commodity. Limit what can be shared with other companies. Put constraints in place today!
—Vic Cutler, Omak, WA

PLEASE STOP LETTING THE CABLE COMPANIES BLEED CONSUMERS TO DEATH! My husband and I are retired and we don't even have even have TV ---that is NO TV---- and our cable bill is still $65. per month! $20 for basic telephone service and $45. for the cheapest internet connection. Giving free rein to cable companies to monopolize services and charge what they want will simply further impoverish and disenfranchise more and more Americans until this country truly becomes unrecognizable as a decent place to live. Don't cave in to rampant corporate greed which is destroying this country and consigning children, the elderly and other vulnerable minorities to second class citizenship and being further exploited by the sale of our private information without our consent. Thank you

If Congress was actually doing its job and fairly representing the people then it would not be necessary for the FCC to act, but because the Congress seems to only value what legislation means to corporate bottom lines and not the effect that these have on the people, that it is necessary for the FCC to act as a regulator for the public good as it was intended to. Our government should not be in the business of establishing and protecting monopolies. There is no need for the cable industry to be a monopoly. It has only gradually become that way through mergers which our government has allowed. This has only served to limit competition and innovation and has put the U.S. cable infrastructure behind most of the developed world, not to mention that much of what is there has already been heavily subsidized by the government already, so the people should get some say in what the government has invested in since it was supposedly don't in the interest of the public good. The public also needs some return on the government's investment other than being overcharged by greedy companies who are using the public good as a means of soaking the taxpayers in the form of tax breaks or subsidies for bigger corporate profits.

price gouging is just another way to say over charging. Over charging is just another way to say robbing. Robbing is stealing
—james Smiley, Mocksville, NC

We need cheaper UHS broadband by landline and all other comm methods. Seniors can't afford UHS/Fios/cable & a cell phone to access our SocSec accounts by internet. This is a massive problem for we who depend on Social Security for our food, medicine & comfort. Thank you for your time and attention to this vital matter. Yours truly, Mr. Brett Greisen
—Mr. Brett A. Greisen, New York, NY

The charges just go up and up and services go down.
—Arlene aquino, Conroe, TX

Despite all its PR posturing, Comcast is a monopolistic octopus with no interest in anything other than profit. It needs to be reined in.
—Stephen Carrillo, Albany, CA

We know this has been a tough fight against big lobby and Chairman Tom Wheeler had acted strongly for the public interest. We need you to carry it all the way through.
—Mercedita del Valle, Port Townsend, WA

Please remember your public protection mandate. Act now to prevent corporate interests from overtaking citizen rights and FTC failures to stop the consolidation of mega corporations that are now offering monopolies in all markets to control decisions that are affecting consumer costs and access. Thank you.
—Marya Roddis, Chama, NM

Americans pay more money and get lower quality sevice than any other country on earth from our cable providers who are monopolies which is against the law.
—Andrew W Lazin, Winter Springs, FL

Personal privacy is of the utmost importance to me. I don't want my info sold period.
—Tom Hagen, Tacoma, WA

I am a senior on a limited income. TV is still one of the less costly entertainments I have access to. But not if Comcast had its way. Cable bills will keep going up, up, up. They don't need my money as much as I do.
—Harriet Rzetelny, Dennis, MA

It's unbelievable what cable companies charge in the US compared to almost all other countries. And the speed at which we can access the internet is so slow compared to those same countries. And yet we pay an amazingly large sum for what we do receives and they are so greedy that they want to charge even more to increase the speed. Greed is destroying our nation and the world.
—Sandra Brady, Pinellas Park, FL

The internet is marvelous for promoting freedom and creativity. But restricting what we can access via internet reduces freedom and creativity. I don't want internet service providers to limit my internet choices.
—Daniel Kendrick, Pleasanton, CA

PRIVACY is an essential American right.
—Neal Madnick, Flushing, NY

Government (that means YOU) should be working for the people, not corporate profit.
—Marguerite boyens, Stone Mountain, GA

I feel the cable industry is one of the biggest consumer ripoff industries in this country. Time you did your job and watchdog what they have done to American consumers for all these years. It is after all supposed to be the peoples' airways. Why then are we being charged outrageous prices with so little choice for what we want to pay for watching? and then to have my private information which they require in order to get connected. All a huge con on all of us! STOP IT NOW AND JOB YOUR JOB!
—sheila goldmacher, Berkeley, CA

Let's drag America out of last place in regard to the quality of its cable service among the industrialized nations of the world.
—John Franzen, Lancaster, CA

and to the plutocracy for which you stand...
—Mitchell Diamond, Sunnyvale, CA

We are spending a ridiculous amount on programming that we do not want, support, or use. And too, our privacy is important. We need better rules when it comes to how cable companies bill us and we need protection against invasion of privacy.
—Eleanor Holden, Austin, TX

My info is private and let the market price set top boxes!!
—Charles Courant, Belfast, ME

Government agencies should work for the benefit of the country, not just its corporate interests. Comcast and others have no trouble making money and then spending it to lobby - the average Joe is at a truly staggering disadvantage. When I was in law school nerlry 40 years ago, I actually took a course on anti-trust law - it's not fashionable today. Please vote to enforce that concept.
—David L Orensetin, Pittsfield, MA

Your agency is all that stands between the people and the greed of corporations. Please DO YOUR JOB!!!
—Judith I Fordham, Coburn, PA

Please stop Comcast from selling my private information without my consent. Also lower my cable TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes I am forced to rent each month. Thank you as I live on limited resources.
—Cyndy Parker, Hoquiam, WA

Come on prove whos side you are on —Peter, Hazel Park, MI

Information is a right, not a luxury to be traded on the stock market by the rich. Stop the cable monopoly.
—Barry Kipp, san diego, CA

My privacy should stay private and companies should not profit off my privacy
—Stephanie Martinez, Schertz, TX

We need our government, on every level, to start working for us. It's shocking that Americans have to pay the most for internet/cable and get by far the poorest service. You need to start changing this.
—Lyn Lowry, Longmont, CO

Cable is way too expensive
—Emily Van Alyne, West Richland, WA

this is important to me because I'm retired, living on small fixed income, and our cable/internet fees are way too high. Comcast is my ISP - the only broadband available where I live - and they charge way too much for way to little. Our top download speeds don't come close to what's available in other countries. Corporate control of government is ruining our country.
—Bennett Hoffman, Tallahassee, FL

I want to see a government agency that continues to care more about the citizens than the corporations. You have done that in the past with the net neutrality decisions, and these future decisions would help continue that trend.
—Matt Pollari, Roseville, MN

Please act in favor of the consumer. Big business seems to bully their way into policy makers pockets too often. Please switch things up on them and act in favor of the American public.
—Preston Seyle, Riverside, CA

Being on limited retirement income, excessive cost relief would be welcome. Privacy protection is also crucial to my safety.
—Judy Watkins, Denton, TX

Broadband privacy is important for all and high costs restricts access to the wealthy.
—Theodore Eyrick, League City, TX

My cable bill exceeds my power and water bills combined. WT Heck is going on here? And stop selling my info to the highest bidder.
—Richard Faulk, Laguna Beach, CA

Enough is enough when the US politicians are going to stop from being so corrupted , —Yitzhak Y'rush'lme, Las Vegas, NV

And open and reasonably priced Internet is critical to our future. The things we rely on through the Internet grow exponentially: commerce, education, government access, and much more. Please pass these proposals to ensure the most valuable Internet possible.
—Michael Kelly, Rockford, MI

I don't have cable. It's too expensive and the contracts too oppressive. If that's changed it would be a whole new world for me and my family. We'd have to be sure, though, that our privacy would be protected.
—L J Ruede, Fort Worth, TX

This issue is extremely important to me both on a financial and privacy level!
—Terry Jassmann, Cedar Crest, NM

Only the US pays the ridiculous amounts it does to cable companies. Protect the citizens, as is your job - cable companies should take reasonable, not exorbitant profits.
—Cynthia von Hendricks, Albuquerque, NM

A stable and open Internet is the global community at formation, please be diligent when address these issues. Thank you for holding your office of leadership.
—Richie Wells, Missoula, MT prevent fascism

—Francis Hall, Duluth, GA

Cable is so Expensive!!
—Matthew Blaha, Kennesaw, GA

Just like with any bullying maneuver, prove those cable industry`s friends that you`re much more stronger than that and finish what you started, for the sake of all of us.
—Methusi Leg, ,

Our Comcast bills are outrageous! Please do something! I demand that all companies that provide paid services to me honor my right to maintain my privacy and control my personal information. Comcast has no right to sell it to the highest bidder!
—Peggy Deras, South San Francisco, CA

FCC stand strong, for the people. It's so important.
—Anthony Brasunas, San Francisco, CA

We MUST have real competition in the cable industry. These cable companies do whatever the hell they want which means customer service is the WORST, and at price gouging prices. Competition will lower the price we pay and improve customer service. Right now, I despise my cable company, but there is no alternative.
—Paul Antico, Los Angeles, CA

I should have the option to purchase a cable box like I do a phone.
—Donna Chernecki, Millburn, NJ

I'm a retired citizen and I need to keep more money in my pocket, so having options to not rent a box is a great way to save money.
—Ron H., Cleveland, OH

FCC, we're counting on you! So important to break this monopoly!
—Tony Brasunas, Alameda, CA

People over profits!
—Rich Moser, Santa Barbara, CA

Please end the forced renting of the set-top box and please keep my private information private. Thank you for standing up for consumers.
—Clare Lewis, Natick, MA

Eliminating the industry's monopoly on set top boxes will stimulate competition and help lower cable fees. Cable companies overcharge consumers.
—Eduardo Ojeda Jr., Lakeland, FL

WE have a right to privacy. Enforce it.
—Lynn Price, Humble, TX

When I started with cable, no such box was needed. The wire from the cable connected to the TV. Rather than get a clumsy box that does not seem necessary, I dropped cable and switched to an indoor antenna that gives me digital signals without a box. The box is a rip off.
—Jose D. Alfaro, Maywood, NJ

Cable charges are outrageous. Security goes without saying!
—Candee Henderson, Thomasville, GA

Privacy of my personal information is paramount to keeping my records safe and my personal details secure.
—Richard Kunz, Methuen, MA

Monopolies raise one citizens rights in the market place above all others distorting the economic equilibrium of supply and demand, all to enrich one person or company. The common interests of so many, in protecting our private information and restoring a free market, must outweigh the special interests of a very wealthy few. The US claims to be a democracy, and the guardian of a level free market economic playfield. This is where we either live up to, or sell out, on that promise.
—Mr. George Robertson, Seattle, WA

Privacy is a RIGHT!
—Stephen&Joan Parks, Bailey, CO

This is a bold grab to create a monopoly and is against the free market
—Laura Thomas, Alameda, CA

FCC, Chairman, TOM WHEELER: PROTECT MY PRIVACY AS AN INTERNET USER AND LOWER MY CABLE BILL TODAY!
—William G Gonzalez, Suffern, NY

Privacy is important to me and everyone.
—Joan McGrath, Franklin, MA

The FCC has the obligation to work for the benefit of all Americans, not for giant corporations.
—Mr Dana Craig, Norwood, MA

Cable should not be free to charge what they want. Give the consumers a break and right to choose.
—Thomas D Rose, Portland, IN

We have the highest internet rates in the world. Do not help the corporations anymore. Why do we have to keep fighting the same battle over and over?
—Lorna Paisley, East Dubuque, IL

Basic fairness. Do your job and help the people, not corporations.
—Ray Bellamy MD, tallahassee, FL

Because i want to see MY government work for ME for once.
—Mark L. Ulrich, Sheboygan, WI

The cable companies, in my case Charter Cable, have had outrageous pricing policies and have taken advantage of the consumer.
—Mr. Dan Rich, Atascadero, CA

As a senior with limited means to explore other entertainment options, I'm largely dependent on cable TV. Reducing my monthly bill would be a great help.
—Bill Mathews, Santa Fe, NM

CAN'T AFFORD TV NOW!!!! GETING WORSE ALL THE TIME!!! WHEN ARE YOU GOING TO STOP MERGERS AND CORPORATE CONTROL OF OUR PUBLIC AIRWAVES AND NEWSPAPERS,RADIO-WAVES!!!!
—Rob van Horn, SURPRISE, AZ

I am not rich
—Stephen Courim, Brownwood, TX

Comcast should be allow to make money unethically, or monopolically
—Mr. Larry Watson, Colorado Springs, CO

You work for the people, not the telecom industry.
—John Doucette, Providence, RI

How about a little something like "freedom from tyranny."
—Rochelle Werfel, Phoenix, AZ

Cable companies are a monopoly cartel.
—Mrs. Susan C. Acosta, Inglewood, CA

I'm tired of receiving phone calls from criminals. Stop Comcast.
—Marsha Shaiman, Seattle, WA

We need you, the FCC, to stand up for the American people and get some control over these monopolistic companies.
—Brian Mirkay, Linden, VA

You are appointed to preserve the best services for we, the people! Delay and blocking of such common-sense measures only confirms in people's minds that this government is not working for them. Take action!
—David Norlin, Salina, KS

Corporations increasingly not only take money from customers to make a profit, but take their personal information to make a profit without permission or compensation as well. The FCC needs to stand up and take action to stop telecommunication companies from using people as a corporate commodity without their permission or compensation.
—Greg Wingard, Kent, WA

we the PEOPLE are sick & tired of your corruption
—Brian Laddy, Fort Mill, SC

Should not yield to the demands of venal politicians.
—Louis C. Harris Jr, Cherry Hill, NJ

My information is my private information and is not for sale. If this doesn't pass then I won't need cable at all.
—Carole McFadden, Boise, ID

We are retired, on a fixed income. Cable bills continue to increase. Every dollar counts in a fixed-income household!
—Suzanne Hirai, Wood Village, OR

I am retired and on a fixed income. I cannot afford the huge cost Charter makes me pay every month! The other available alternatives are just as bad !! I need Internet access to do my volunteer work! Help consumers !
—Gray Zischke, Wausau, WI

Comcast wants $30/month in exchange for not being allowed to spy on us and sell our personal information. Only Comcast knows for certain, but do you think Comcast currently makes $30/month per customer selling our information? I don't, and I hope our information is not worth that much to marketers. If it is worth that much, that just makes the intrusion that much more offensive. $30 is what Comcast wants now to get their foot in the door for this charge. If they are successful in getting this approved, what will they want in a year, or two, or ten? Since they can spy on our internet activity, and we have no real alternatives, we are faced to pay protection. Instead of, "$100 per week and we won't burn down your store," its, "$30 per month and we won't spy on you and sell what we find to the highest bidder." Maybe in a couple of years it will be $100/week. Plus, we have no way of knowing if they are keeping their end of the bargain. At some level, no one will pay it, and they will be back to the current situation of their being free to do whatever they want. Broadband should be a regulated utility, just like phone service is--correction, like phone service used to be.
—David Fink, Los Angeles, CA

the amount for cable related services keeps going up bit our wages are on the decline.
—Steve Willard, Minonk, IL

Really.... this should be an easy choice. Comcast has been consistently the worst quality of customer care and you would let them sell my personal info....they can't run their own company....do I hear breach ??? Why support a monopoly unless their is good reason and the public is deriving benefits. With the clear need for better web access for all let's move the ball forward. Don't let politics be the deciding factor, please.
—Alan Kadish, Corvallis, OR

Lower my bill
—David Helinski, Broken Arrow, OK

As a person who is visuallyimpaired I face the prospect of having a set top box that I might find usable with one cable provider, but that of another much different. I believe they should be interchangableso that if I find equipment that works for me I can use it with other providers should I wish to change. I'd also appreciate greater enforcement of accessability rules on the internet. Terry Chaney
—Terry Chaney, Royal Oak, MI

My bill has just continually increased-if priced do not go down many people will continue to cancel and use streaming services!!!
—Heather Clark, Gaylord, MI

I use Time Warner Cable service, which Comcast tried to buy. The monthly bill is almost fifty dollars. For this I am supposed to be getting 15 gigabytes of data. This is routinely monitored and averages 13 gigabytes. Before the two year service contract was up I was paying $37.00-$39.00. At the end off the contract the price seems to jump all the way up to $49.99. Unfortunately most other cable services charge the same amount. If I didn't need this computer to look for a job. It would be disconnected. So I am against Comcast I only wish I could do more. Bernie Bukoskey 11 Highland Ave. Tonawanda, NY 14150-3901
—Bernie Bukoskey, Tonawanda, NY

JUST DO THE RIGHT FURSHLUGGINER THING ALREADY!
—Neal Umphred, Redmond, WA

I turn 65 this month but despite having made it to that 'landmark' age, I will not be able to enjoy the "golden years" - well, at least with cable tv, that is. The bankers, Wall Street and massive, FAR-too-powerful ove-sized corporations (just like Comcast) already destroyed our economy in a crash to rival the Great Depression - many of us lost anything remotely resembling retirement and are lucky if we didn't also lose our homes. I would like to be able to afford at least SOME form of decent entertainment since the giant corporations took over our world and became more important than people - AND, I would like to do so WITHOUT being spied upon while actually having to PAY for what once was, AND STILL IS, "the Commons." Unfamiliar term to you? I'm not surprised ... Cable services should be simple, straightforward, and AFFORDABLE WITHOUT INVADING OUR PRIVACY! Corporate takeover and corruption have forever changed life for the "baby boomer generation." I think you will see a massive number of households unplugging from ANY CABLE AT ALL if the costs go up any more (who in the hell can afford it?!) and, quite frankly, being complicit with corrupted government agencies, officials, and politicians in uber-spying on us all is equated to me as ILLEGAL!!! We can't afford it and won't stand for it - I am willing to bet thousands upon thousands of us will do exactly what I will do ... UNPLUG! I'll be DAMNED if I am going to pay someone money I DON'T have, to SELL me the COMMONS THAT I ALREADY OWN, to make it EASIER FOR GOVERNMENT TO TRACK ME AND SPY ON ME ILLEGALLY! Ain't happening at ANY price. For once since the millenial rolled around, can ANYONE ANYWHERE in government just DO THE RIGHT THING?!
—Pamela Overholtzer, Moscow, ID

Monopolies are always unfair to the consumer. We must break them up, or keep them from forming. Also as a disabled senior very reliant on cable/computer access, this bill is a severe hardship for me.
—Norma Marshall, greensboro, NC

Monopolies cannot exist in a truly democratic nation!
—Nicole Fountain, Oakland, CA

Your agency must work for us, America's telecommunications services consumers, not the providers of those services, whom you are supposed to regulate.
—William Swatos, Palm Desert, CA

No one should be allowed to use my private viewing of programs as marketing tools! There are surveys and companies like Nielson who gather this information VOLUNTARILY given by the consumer. And, this box rental situation is a lame ploy to suck even more money out of the public. Prices are ridiculous and not affordable; I myself have not had TV since mid 2008!
—Valerie Justus-Rusconi, Watsonville, CA

Our cable bill has risen to intolerable levels, while quality of service has declined. Europe has cheap & efficient cable/internet. We know it's possible. Let's follow its lead.
—Kenneth Nahigian, Sacramento, CA

Security and savings.
—Michael Kwitt, Warren, MI

My wife and I are retired, living on a small income, and every penny we do not have to spend, helps.
—Stuart Fishelman, Baltimore, MD

Breaking up the telecom monopoly and appropriately regulating the industry is critical to the future of digital technology. These are just tiny first steps.
—Alexander Subotich, ,

No company should be able to sell our information without our consent and I don't mean in any "I Agree" contract that has 200 pages to read.
—Frank Kiernan, Olivehurst, CA

We must not let unscrupulous corporate entities write the rules that govern their industries. The FCC must do the job for which it was appointed, work in the best interests of consumers of communications. This means unfettered and equitable access to the highest quality broadband and Internet services at a fair and competitive price.
—Philip Angus Nunes, Spokane, WA

It's an embarrassment that the US does not have one of the top if not the best internet options in the world! What happen to competition? Options? Service for the people? The Internet is not a privilege, it's a right!
—Ray Gonzalez, Canoga Park, CA

Protecting consumers and serving the public interest is the FCC's core mission. Please fulfill it.
—Craig Dunkerley, San Jose, CA

It's not the business of Comcast to sell my personal info, period!
—Robert Schwartz, Waukegan, IL

Companies using public resources should not be able to sell my private information without my consent, and we should not be forced to rent set-top boxes in order to use their service either. I hope the FCC will act quickly to protect consumers as they have done in the past.
—Kyle de Beausset, Grosse Ile, MI

I am sick of companies that use my information and money against me - and I'm sick o0f cable companies that over-charge and under-deliver! I pay the Universal Connectivity Fee every month and get ignored in return!
—John Blanchard3, Pittsburgh, PA

The internet should be available to all and not controlled by a monopoly and its privacy should be protected.
—Irene Leeg, Santa Monica, CA

For MANY people, cable television is their sole source of entertainment. It SHOULD NOT be so expensive! And our PRIVATE INFORMATION is not for sale by corporations to further enrich their bottom line. ENOUGH.
—Evan Jane Kriss, SAUSALITO, CA

You let Time Warner be bought. No fix that mistake and lower bills and let customers have a voice and a choice. Don't screw this up like everything else you people do!
—Jason Bogosian, Arcadia, CA

Protect my privacy!
—James-Henry Holland, Geneva, NY

We can't let corporative power to run our lives.
—Mary J. Wood, San Luis Obispo, CA

We can purchase separate internet equipment from retailers like Best Buy and Amazon that work with whatever service providers we have. The same should apply to cable boxes for tv. After paying months of rentals, we have probably exceeded their respective retail costs and are overpaying by a lot of money. Boxes should work with whatever company with whom we pay for services. And a day will come soon enough that plugging in or not from Internet to tv will be sufficient or even via wireless that boxes will be irrelevant very soon as companies like Apple make usb connection devices all we need.
—Sandra Myers, West Hartford, CT

Please set me free from 2 year contracts and private DVR boxes. Let my Apple TV go free.
—Elizabeth Shepard, Olympia, WA

If Cable Companies were smart, first, instead of being greedy, first, by lowering fees and ridiculous add-on charges, they might...no, would...find more subscribers. Also, by providing equitable internet service, and/or affordable tier levels for the poor, they would increase the opportunity for all Americans and help them ascribe to possibilities in education and commerce not currently available, making for a greater, stringer, more prosperous America.
—Mike Wann, Chattanooga, TN

This is important to me for two reasons. My privacy should not be in the hands if corporate America. No one has that ?.Secondly, why should Comcast charge us for the set-top boxes which we did not request, nor require
—Elizabeth Barrett, Pompton Plains, NJ

stop letting cable companies have a monopoly on the consumer
—Justin Herschel, West Hills, CA

It curbs -- somewhat -- the avarice of the oligopoly's farming of it's customers.
—David Zuckerman, Portland, OR

Reasons are simple fraud and identity theft. Lower the bills on those packages and also on those boxes and cable cards should be FREE. Shame on you!!!!
—Selma Gooding, Hamden, CT

Please vote yes on these proposals.
—Linda Kindoll, Kittanning, PA

Info access and freedom of info choice is paramount to informed population in a democracy.
—G Fries, Homer, AK

As someone who doesn't watch that much TV, I would like an a la carte payment system. And I would like some privacy as well.
—Edward Walworth MD, Lewiston, ME

I expect the illusion of privacy. I hate My cable bill.
—Noah Joel Rynearson, Anchorage, AK

I want to buy not rent cable boxes
—Clyde Martin, SILVER SPRING, MD

We should expect some sort of privacy from the company's, our bills are high any help would be appreciated.
—Frank Curley, Middletown, NY

No ISP has the right to sell my personal information. This is how my credit card information was stolen - twice! And no ISP should have the power to gouge their clients by overcharging them for services.
—Paul Cully, Dover, NH

Because the airwaves belong to us all, not at the expense of all for the few.
—John Horan, Washington, DC

I want my privacy to be protected, the Constitution gives me that right. Deregulation of the cable industry was supposed to lower my bill, it didn't happen. Now we have fewer cable choices which means less competition which leads to fewer choices, if there is a choice, AND higher bills.
—Diane Danby, Mead, CO

i live on $826 a month
—Michael Langlais, Providence, RI

Even the smallest fees are too often too much for seniors!
—LYNDA MEANS, Saint Louis, MO

Comcast is a money grubbing greedy company that also charges for services that aren't valid. They need to be stopped and YOU have to protect the consumer. You work for US, not the cable companies.
—Jim Zahakos, Raynham, MA

It is important because cable tv is a utility in all actuality and is needed in my little town for information. I'm sick of being advertised to death. I cannot even receive cable without the box/i shouldn't have to pay for it.
—Diana Murray, Phoenix, AZ

We work too hard to have to deal with criminal corporations.
—Lawrence O'Connor, St. Augustine, FL

Who will look out for the public if you allow corporate bullying to force decisions which are not in the public interests? Cable bills are already outrageous. And, why is my private information for sale without my approval? And compensation to me for use of my private information? I feel very vulnerable to corporate decisions& money making schemes without any representation to me & my interests & needs.
—Don Machrowicz, College Station, TX

It's the right thing to do, and you know it.
—Robert Granger, Eugene, OR

stop the monopoly on cable boxes
—Warren Steven Cushway, bay city, MI

Monopolies are bad for consumers and progress of democracy. Prices grow sky high and information becomes limited and bias. Competition is good for business and better for consumers. it's beneficial for spread of information, price control, consumers privacy protection and therefore better for democracy.
—Axel Meier, Oakland, CA

Do not allow privacy invasion on the internet. The internet is the one source of enlightenment and knowledge that is not restricted to the wealthy. I cannot afford to pay any more increases for cable service.
—Jane Wolfe, Mansfield, OH

My bill keeps getting higher and the rental on the cable boxes is outrageous.
—Janet Kennington, Los Angeles, CA

The protections that the FCC were supposed to provide have steadily eroded since the "air waves belong to the public" became law. Take this action and keep Comcast out of our personal business.
—Todd Darling, Venice, CA

Please continue to act in the PUBLIC INTEREST. Since when was monopoly the goal?
—Tim Isom, San Francisco, CA

Our country's history is founded on privacy and freedom of information. Please do everything you can to uphold these values!
—Cameron Parham, Havre, MT

I only have TWC local channels and 10 speed internet and I pay $89.00 a MONTH The cable companies are monopolies and should be broken up. Stop stalling. Don't let these big companies decide for you.
—Martha M. Miller, Appleton, WI

In these past few years our government agencies have been doing less and less to protect the people's interests. Please step up to the plate and help us with these pressing issues. Please do this ASAP!
—Amancia Hernandez, Houston, TX

I remember when TV was free! Now corporate behemoths have almost priced it out of our range.
—Michael R Marquardt, Whitewater, CO

I'm already paying a monthly bill, why the hell is my information being shared without my consent. This isnt a free service.
—Michael Caro, buffalo grove, IL

The U.S. economy is supposed to be free market capitalism, right? What happens when a particular industry has a monopoly? Aren't you supposed to regulate them so they don't screw over their customers? You work for the American people, not industry. Industry is who you're supposed to be regulating. Please make up your mind about the type of economy and regulatory system you support.
—Raunette Elkins, Lincoln Park, MI

The purpose of this agency's existence (like all other government agencies) is to protect citizens from businesess who engage in scummy behavior. Please protect us!
—Kathleen Haton, Wheeling, IL

The corporate being is being allowed to make a profit off the private information of all Americans who use the internet. The public has no privacy. It appears over and over and over again that the profits of the corporate being is our governments primary focus and the privacy or even our health and safety is non existent if these concerns interfere with corporate profits. I have no idea what information is being sold and to whom. Can my political information be sold to a group that has different ideas and what will they attempt to do to change my mind? How radical are they? I resent constant ads appearing for a product that I was curious about. I stopped watching T.V. decades ago as I was sick of ads. The corporate being had pushed too far and now the internet is becoming a mine field where one has to watch their step as any information on the internet is can be sold to anyone.
—Anne Wolf, Santa Rosa, CA

I DEPEND on the internet!
—Harley Armentrout, Chino Valley, AZ

IT'S TIME TO GET THE GOVERNMENT OUT OF EVERYONE'S PRIVATE AFFAIRS, UNLESS THERE IS EVIDENCE THAT A CRIME HAS OR WILL BE COMMITTED.
—Bill Lindner, Greenbrae, CA

We are tired of the big communications companies, with their virtual monopolies in some areas, continually taking financial advantage of us.
—Tom Matthews, Cleveland, TN

I am concerned that these measures pass, both as a longtime customer of Comcast and as a citizen who champions communication policy in the public interest. I urge your adoption of both measures.
—Carolyn M. Byerly Ph.D., Adelphi, MD

Keep it simple - proceed as catalyst doing right action.
—William Albin, Grass Valley, CA

Please move forward and end the monopoly on set-top-boxes. Please do not let these greedy corporations give themselves the right to control these consumer policies. The American people have spoken and we are mad as hell. These corporations do not have the right to just do as they please. Lets keep it that way and put a leash and their greed and criminal activity once and for all.
—Guillermina Aguirre, Westminster, CO

Enough of the invasion of our life by these large money-grubbing companies who have only two main objectives: money and power. Your responsibility is to prevent their take-over!
—Roger Walker, East Lansing, MI

Monopolies are UN-democratic. While, on the surface, they appear to be the "Free Market" in action; it is a select few, responsible to the their STAKEHOLDERS whom rake in massive profits. Definitely not the people they extort with outrageous cable charges. The metadata that the NSA have been 'capturing' has been ruled useless for security purposes but for marketing purposes it is a windfall. However, it is PRIVATE DATA!!!! To sum up - both actions are UN-AMERICAN!!!! Protect my data (do NOT sell it to anyone) and lower my cable bill!
—Jon Sheehan, Bell Gardens, CA

Private industry - including corporate media - already earn far too much money from American citizens and provide far too little in return. Stop allowing greed to trump what is best for Americans.
—Lewis Redding, Arcadia, CA

These mega corp's have never had their customers or employees interests at heart because a corp's has no heart please help out us all.
—robert czajkowski Jr., Philadelphia, PA

Hurry up you are moving like a turtle.
—Agostino Notarianni, Goodyear, AZ

Consumers count; companies don't
—Robert F Kingsley, Mount Laurel, NJ

Since information has become a commodity, many companies have found ways to get our information without paying us for it, now Comcast wants people to pay them to take our information, and at the same time also pay them for the cable box to access the product we want, and still get our information without our permission, or payment. You can stop this nonsensical situation, and protect the public.
—William Haley, Tye, TX

These proposals protect my privacy and save me money. Two things that the FCC are supposed to be doing for the citizens of this country.
—Gary McGivney, Norwalk, CT

I'm barley getting by on Social Security now. Listening to the rest of us and not the cable monopolies is your job. Please get this done now. Thanks
—Robert C Rand, Pepperell, MA

It is your job to protect ME. Not to protect Comcast. Please stand up and protect the American people (NOT corporations). Thank you.
—Victoria Neff, Ann Arbor, MI

It's only fair!
—Howard Pellett, Anacortes, WA

Privacy is one of the fundamental values of American society. No corporation or other private entity should be allowed to disseminate our private information without our consent. The cable TV companies keep raising the rental prices on the set-top boxes every year (the fee my wife and I pay for the privilege of watching TV on other than our living-room set has doubled since we switched to our current provider - and that was only 10 years ago). Thank you for doing the right thing.
—Nicholas DiMasi Jr., Glen Ellyn, IL

Individual rights to privacy, upon request, should be mandatory from businesses that collect any data on them whatsoever. Cable bills and the profits derived from them are entirely too large considering the lack of alternatives and the difficulty in changing over to them. Any possible reductions in these burdensome monthly charges should be aggressively pursued.
—Timothy Wallick, Huron, OH

I am tire of being gouged by Com-Cast.
—John Pedone, Novato, CA

It's the only moral thing to do
—Rev James Kinney, Solon Springs, WI

Please make watching our favorite channels more affordable and stop this monopoly from selling our private information. That just makes common sense.
—Kecia Coachman, East Orange, NJ

I am on a fixed income, and my cable bill keeps getting higher and higher. I have only basic service and it is still too high.
—Betty Anderson, Bowling Green, KY

Cable has placed its hands into too many of congress' pockets, If they redefine the Communications Act, they must protect the consumer, not the industry. It is not an industry too big to fail.
—Lyle A. Chandler, Lorain, OH

The Internet was founded on net neutrality not to pay for bandwidth Philosophy. Our voices are all important the corporations are trying to drown everyone else out and the greed is insane!
—Stefanie Sellars, Simi Valley, CA

Stop the Comcast monopoly. We are forced to pay such high monthly bills without any other less expensive alternative. Please FCC, prevent Comcast from selling my personal information
—Sandle Dahl, Seattle, WA

Time is of the utmost importance. We the little guy needs this done and right away.
—Bill Snearly, Camden, AR

please thing about the consecvense it actually will have for the world and fredom it will lose.
—Morten Stehr, ,

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—William Kalahar, Atlanta, GA

Monopolies mean ridiculously high prices, which are hard to afford.
—Nancy Dennett, Sonoma, CA

Corporations and other moneyed interests have usurped power from the people. It's time we took it back.
—Sharlene Beck, Salt Lake City, UT

Freedom of choice
—Joan Spratford, Fountain, CO

Please end the corrupt practices of internet service providers.
—Lester Earnest, Los Altos, CA

Every year, I receive multiple notices from organizations that offer me the opportunity to opt out of certain types of data collection and sharing. The cable industry should not be exempt from offering consumers the same choices. In an era when intrusiveness seems more and more taken for granted, it's vital to remind legislators that their constituents should not be considered commodities to be traded, against their best interests, in an unregulated market. It is unlikely that any member of Congress or the Commission believes that their personally identifiable information (PII) should be open to view by any business, and consumers should not be treated any differently. Personalization can be accomplished without the use of PII (that's the power of Big Data analytics and predictive analysis), so there's no excuse to require PII from consumers beyond the basic needs of subscription management. The collection, sale, and trading of PII is akin to burglary -- entering someone's home without their permission, taking their private possessions, and using them for personal advantage. It's vital that the FCC prevent that.
—Peter Altschuler, Santa Monica, CA

I'm a person.
—A Philips, Kalamazoo, MI

We need access and fairness, period.
—Robin Pappas, pocono manor, PA

The internet is a utility. Period. Don't fold to corporate greed! Stay strong, its the people's choice!
—Phillip Wagner, Eagleville, TN

The government has to protect our privacy from themselves, corporate America should not get a pass.
—Bridget Pikosz, Gilbert, AZ

I think that companies like Comcast will not stop in their efforts to extort consumers to the fullest extent and not taking action to stop it will result in a very slippery slope that will be detrimental to consumers
—Stewart Wilson, Fort Walton Beach, FL

Dear FCC Commissioners: The cable television and telecommunications industry have converged and are almost a total vertical monopoly. Consumers have little choice in choosing providers for cable, satellite, Internet, telephone and cell phone providers. These same corporations are also controlling content and delivery of entertainment, news, information, music, movies, and TV shows by buying or controlling the studios and production companies. Not being able to buy, instead of rent a cable box is one more step of total monopoly control by these giant corporations, who resist any regulation, tax or fee. Please provide a "check and balance to these cable communication giants. Thank you, Mr. Paul Roden, Yardley, PA
—Paul Roden, Yardley, PA

We need strong protection for consumer privacy and to have affordable cable -TV for people.
—Andrea Lee, Richmond,

We have Comcast for basic TV service & I DON'T want them helping identity thieves by disseminating personal information & without our permission on top of it all! The monopoly on the set-top box issue speaks for itself -- the operative word is "monopoly." _Regulated_ public services (like the electric companies) can have monopolies, but we have laws to prevent abuses of monopoly by corporations (they were created in response to the oil companies - remember?).
—Barbara Muehlhausen, Schaumburg, IL

I have been gouged for years by Cox Cable. Last week I paid $22 for 15 minutes of local calls as part of my cable bundle--and no one is protecting me or other consumers from this type of deceptive and predatory billing. Simply enforcing the anti-trust laws and not allowing more mega-mergers will help us rein in these abuses. Please protect us...thank you.
—Stacy Hall, San Diego, CA

We NEED more privacy rather than LESS of the kind our LIAR-in-CHIEF wants to subject the American public to, because he seems to WANT to KNOW everything about us he can find out, so he can do his best to get HIS agenda passed against a total public melt down because we do not like what he wants us to do with our lives. IF he gets his way then the people of America will become virtually SLAVES of HIS WILL and can then control everything we do.
—Donald Mccormick, Portland, OR

We as consumers have been gouged too long. Stand up to the special interests and do what's right!!!
—Warren Woodward, TALLAHASSEE, FL

More choices, less monopolies are what make us competitive.
—Robert Brake, Bronx, NY

If our personal information is valuable, why aren't we being paid for it? It is ours originally, hence the "personal" tag. So why should a company profit from taking what isn't theirs and selling it? And precedent with ending the telephone monopoly that Ma Bell had tells you which way to go on set-top boxes.
—Michael Piotrowski, Ramona, CA

Please serve the public interest. Cable should not be a luxury - but something affordable to all.
—Joanne Sultar, berkeley, CA

We have the worst cable network policies of any in the developed Western democracies. There is no excuse for allowing telecommunication monopolies any further benefit from an ever more corrupt political system. Perhaps if we used antitrust AND solid regulation by government we could stem abuses. Please go forward and establish policies which benefit consumers who are captive customers of companies which do not serve the public interest --- that is the job of the FCC. Chairman Wheeler has been effective so far, let his legacy, and the Commission's work, go forward!!!!!!!
—Joseph Myers, Riverside, CA

The cost of cable service in my area is excessive..
—Ann Brochhagen, Lindenhurst, NY

I am on a fixed income and my cable bill keeps going higher and higher and mergers make this worse! Rates are raised just because they can. So aggravated!
—Maggie A., Green Bay, WI

Broadband privacy proposal is a no-brainer. So your job and pass these common sense measures now.
—Lelia Bogard, coarsegold, CA

No one should have our private information if we don't chose them to have it. Cable companies are taking advantage of us by making us pay rent on the set top boxes. The TV would not work without these boxes so they should just be considered part of the installation.
—Carol Deyo, Bradenton, FL

For heavan's sake will someone stand up for the small guy for a change. Already the cable company's have carved up the USA in to areas where where a single company has a monopoly so that there is no need to compete for clients. Now they are trying to slow down internet transmission speed so that they can charge more for faster speeds. Once again the small man takes a hit. What happened to Governance "BY the PEOPLE - FOR the PEOPLE"? The government should not put CORPORATIONS before PEOPLE. CORPORATIONS are not PEOPLE. If you are alan of conscience please do the right thing for the citizens of the USA.
—Dr. Barry J Farbrother, Guilford, CT

Where is the democracy in having to beg the FCC to protect rights of citizens? Isn't that your job? These businesses are like locusts sucking the blood out of anything remotely like democracy.
—Sandra Holt, Casselberry, FL

Do something in the interest of the people, NOT POLITICIANS & LOBBYISTS!
—Charlie, Angleton, TX

Cable bills are too high, and we are given little choice as a consumer--due to the lack of competition in the marketplace.
—Dennis Behrens, Grand Rapids, MI

The cable companies are already milking us like we were dairy cows, milking us for every dime they can squeeze out of us.
—Marcus Mulkins, San Rafael, CA

This spring my cable bill literally grew each month. Sometimes by under a dollar, and sometimes by a dollar or two. And none of these upticks were explained, even though my services were the same. I am tired of it. I wish I had another choice but Comcast is the only high-speed internet available where I live.
—Sara "testing" Longsmith, Brattleboro, VT

I am old and seeking all the help financially I can get.
—diane lewis, Mandeville, LA

If cable wasn't a monopoly, I'd switch to a different provider that voluntarily followed these policies.
—Michelle Doty, Austin, TX

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Mr. Ronald Gelden, LONGMONT, CO

The industry is out of control! Too many mergers, too few providers, zero accountability or customer service... I live near Rutgers main campus in NJ. I'm forced to use Comcast for everything...and there is zero accountability on their part...ZERO. Stopping their merger was one thing, but turning around and allowing TWC to merge with Charter was just as bad. What are you people thinking? Do you have any accountability? It doesn't appear so. Bills continue to climb while choice goes into the toilet. Why does anyone have to pay for even 50 channels they don't want on the lowest package for cable? Why does the cable provider get to choose those channel bundles for service they "guarantee" but never really works. You can never reach them to complain about your service and turning it off is next to impossible. Have you ever tried to call Comcast and speak to a human being? Tried to cancel your service? Get a tech out to your home? Obviously not... Customers pay far and away too much money for the "service" they receive from these companies to begin with...add the set-top boxes...(hope they send only the # you require and ordered to begin with b/c if not, sending it back and getting that credit on your acct. will be a miracle!)...the dozen plus fees...it's ridiculous! Prices have got to drop if the service is going to survive, I'm seriously considering an alternative like a Fire stick through Amazon...this has gone on too long!
—Tam Black, Austin, TX

If you don't do this, then it makes the FCC appear to be in the grips of the mega corporations. So much for democracy.
—Michael James Lamperd, San Francisco, CA

It is important to protect my privacy and also lower my cable bill. Comcast has a monopoly and needs to be reigned in. My private information should not be for sale.
—Anne, Santa Cruz, CA

When you are on a fixed income every cent counts. Please make the public interest your priority. We're counting on you.
—Margaret Weeks, Sanford, ME

It is Un-American to sell private citizen data
—Rebecca Diaz, San Francisco, CA

I teach online as an adjunct professor, which means I get barely minimum wage and have to pay for my own internet connection. By not taking control of cable pricing, so that companies can continue to exploit its users without recourse, the FCC risks forcing the 80% of college faculty who teach as adjuncts, many of whom teach online, into dire poverty.
—Ruth Heflin, Leavenworth, KS

This represents the interests of the people of the US, not the corporations of the US. Your job is to represent the people with measures like this, so please do your job and pass this measure.
—Bill Piltdown, SF, CA

Comcast provides the worst service at the highest prices.
—Bruce Grobman, Santa Cruz, CA

Privacy is a very real concern. And monopolies, whether for cable services OR equipment work against fair pricing, creativity and consumer interests.
—M Burbank, New Haven, CT

why does everything take so long ?? oh forgot the corporate money pouring in from telecom mega giants
—Kenneth p. Rhines, dighton, MA

Why do I have to pay for a box when I do not need one? Am I not entitled to my privacy which can be violated by the cable company? Who do you work for? Americans or special corporate friends.?
—Patrick Harrington, Salina, KS

In addition to the arguments already presented in the Free Press documents, stalling the renomination of FCC Commissioner Rosenworcel is simply wrong-headed.
—Donald Browne, Golden Valley, MN

we can only protect the consumers by breaking up the big monopolies.
—Kathleen Bourassa, Kingston, WA

Comcast is a monopoly! Very simply it does not have the people's interest at heart.
—Jane Manley, Melrose, MA

I know this would diminish our representatives (sic) retirement contributions but do it for the PEOPLE.
—Harold Manning, Martinsburg, WV

We have a chance to help learning with access to the internet so make it affordable for all
—M, Washington, IL

Cable prices are continually rising for no apparent reason other than they can! I'm on fixed income and cannot afford the cost of being connected to the rest of the world. Please do what you can to lower cable rates. Sincerely Marvin Woods
—Marvin Woods, Cordova, TN

Anything you can do to keep the IP's from gouging John Q to death will be greatly appreciated. Thanks! :-)
—Michael Arentoft, Atlantic Highlands, NJ

Why are you allowing this monopoly
—Joyce Crowley, Morton, PA

My major concerns is that every American should have Privacy protected. No one wants to have governments, companies, or other private citizens selling or unauthorized access to private lives. The other concern is paying exorbitant fees and cable bills for basic cable service. There is too much monopolizing products and services to make even more money from the low / middle class. Chairman Wheeler take your stance and be counted for the majority of American people. It is reckoning day!! Don't delay over this all important issue facing the consumer. Isn't it TIME to make a FINAL STANCE?? Let us know!!! DRH
—David R R, Sevierville, TN

Despite mergers that promised lower cable bills my bill went up and people lost jobs. The cable company cheated everyone.
—Charlotte Pirch, Fountain Valley, CA

Why can't internet users get a fair shake?
—Frank Decola, CHESTERTON, IN

Democracy depends on an unfettered flow of information. In the electronic age it is no longer enough to protect against government intrusion into free speech; government must ensure a competitive environment in the communications industry and that the private sector respects our privacy. I strongly urge you to issue regulations to open cable box and prohibit selling private data on consumers. Thank you for your consideration.
—William D Henderson, Trenton, NJ

Please continue building on the strong record of consumer protection that the FCC has built recently. Thie current Presidential election has been about fighting the power of special interests more than anything else. The FCC should continue to show that citizens mean more than these selfish special interests.
—Jonathan Moretz, Norfolk, VA

The FCC was created to protect the American consumer, so why is it allowing more intrusions into Americans' privacy & more "scalping"??
—Virginia H. Bennett, Honolulu, HI

monopolization is bad enough but SELLING information when you're already strangling everyone for terrible internet speeds is some next level evil that needs to be dealt with. I understand your job isn't "easy" but you have to stand up to them. Take their money and lie to their face if you have to, they have been doing it to their customers for DECADES.
—Blake Goodwin, Memphis, TN

The regulatory structure set up means that cable companies have effective monopolies in their own little fiefdoms, and can set prices (and sell our data!) pretty much at their whim. Please act to help the American public.
—Mary Alice Wuerz, Mission Viejo, CA

Why can't you do something for the consumers. Comcast does not have the right to sell my private information! You must end the monopoly on set top boxes. Consumers demand to be protected now.
—Elmo Dunn, Longwood, FL

Why can't you do something for the consumers. Comcast does not have the right to sell my private information! You must end the monopoly on set top boxes. Consumers demand to be protected now.
—Elmo Dunn, Longwood, FL

I don't have the money since I retired to afford this bill. If it isn't reduced, I will cancel my subscription and go with the streaming networks that only charge $9-10/mo. which would lower my bill to $28 instead of the current $154.34.
—Kathleen S Eaton, Middletown, DE

Stand up for consumers
—Becky D Wharton, Campbell, TX

The growth in cable fees is simply obscene. Take action now to help those who elect(ed) you!
—Robert L. Wesly MD, PhD, Gainesville, FL

We have a right to privacy and allowing any firm to sell or buy our private information is unconstitutional. Also, the monopolistic media in this country has degraded the "third leg" of our country's metaphoric "stool" with its lack of oversight of and truth-telling about the government and free-markets. Your job is critical in ensuring a civil & free society by allowing and encouraging a media free from political or market influences. We are headed down a dangerous path and its your job to fix our stool! Please do so starting with these common sense measures.
—Mr. Don Lemek, Denver, CO

I am forced to use Comcast, and have created my own set top box using the "Cable Card" system they are also trying to do away with. Please protect the consumers!
—Nicholas Wagner, Aurora, IL

So, can we finish this and move on
—Randy G. Whitworth, San Antonio, TX

BECAUSE I WILL DITCH THE CABLE IF IT DOESN'T QUIT SCREWING ME EVERY MONTH...
—Brian Inzer, OXR, AL

My cable bill goes up every year at a greater rate than the inflation rate. It's a monopoly, there is no competition whatsoever and it needs greater controls. Now that Comcast has bought Time-Warner and has access to MY DATA, it appears they may use, abuse and sell it without my permission. Please don't allow this to happen, it is MY DATA not Comcast's data.
—Rae Cousins, Portland, ME

Because i don`t have enough money
—Efrain Sanchez, Hormigueros, PR

Stop the crooked politicians who are taking money from Comcast to further Comcast's agenda. The FCC need to protect us, the consumers from being ripped off.
—Debbie Balasko, Sparta, MI

It's not just the money, it's the control of information that is essential to democracy!
—Ann D Hungerman, Ann Arbor, MI

Other than knowing that cable television was originally conceived to be commercial-free (hence, by paid subscription), there are many of us who could use the monies saved by lower cable prices for other important expenses.
—John Alexander Vergos, Memphis, TN

I'm part of what's left of any middle class here in the USA. We need some relief. Please help us save money on our cable bills and please make the cable company keep my personal info private.
—Deborah S. Lamb, Miami, FL

I live on Social Security which will, in a month's time, no longer cover even my rent. I have a cell phone, which is free to seniors (an "Obamaphone, although the program was initiated during Bush's last term), but the number of minutes that are free are quite limited. I therefore need to use the Internet for casual communication, as well as to make doctor appointments, renew prescriptions and so on. However, my Internet provider (Comcast) does not offer anything affordable to low income seniors. In my area, Comcast has a monopoly on cable; while Century Link offers DSL at a low intro price, it is slower than cable, and the costs to switch are out of the reach of those of us living from day to day with no money to spare. Please follow through with the actions you have proposed.
—Colin M Mansfield, W St Paul, MN

Don't be a typical government agency and kick the can down the road. Cable bills are through the roof. Do something beneficial to us customers.
—Frank Portillo, Walnut Creek, CA

My information does not belong to Comcast to sell.
—Kathryn Mosher, Eagan, MN

Both the proposal to keep Comcast from selling private information without consent and ending a monopoly on set-top boxes should be common sense. No one but Comcast could benefit from the alternatives, at the expense of millions of Americans.
—Mr. Caleb Niederer, Seattle, WA

These unnecessary fees have driven up my bills over $100 each month. I'm getting ready to stop cable altogether because I have no other choice but my one provider. The additional fees for these boxes that I could have purchased 20 times over by now are ridiculous.
—Kipp Hollingsworth, Winston-Salem, NC

INFLATION GALLOPS, YET THOSE OF US ON FIXED INCOMES CANNOT AFFORD IT!
—R Palm, DRIPSPGS, TX

Support our consumer financial rights in the face of oppressive cable co. Goliaths!
—Louis Sebesta, Binghamton, NY

The internet is essential for daily living in the US.
—Ms. Susan Lehrer, Seattle, WA

I'm retired and on a fixed income. However, prices for services continue to rise while SS hasn't given a COLA and does not appear to do so in the near future. So will someone forgo the under the table pay and actually give a care about those who trusted and elected you to office! Please! Just recently Comcast passed on a hike to us(customer) b/c they were alledgedly received an increase /hike from the companies they do business with. Seriously!
—Rosemary Smith-Campbell, Memphis, TN

Cease shilly-shallying about!
—John McPeek, Fairfax, VA

Comcast keeps charging more and more. Why aren't you enforcing anti-trst laws?
—Robert Juelich, Tacoma, WA

My cable bill keeps going up and up. These companies are greedy.
—Lois Garrett, roanoke, VA

This is important to me as i am a consumer living on a budget. i need to have more affordable connectivity options to communkcation other than the cable companies and their unnecessarily high prices. this would allow me to purchase one device at a more afvordable price tbat connects to everything video and Internet-related
—James Marin, Okaton, VA

I value my privacy and would not like to have Comcast to sell private information. And a lower cable bill will be appreciated.
—Heidi Gulatee, ,

Short of mandating and financing local publicly owned fiber optic systems, cable internet has become the minimum needed utility for information services. It is not a frill and should be regarded as a necessity of modern life. As such, the price paid should be capped and tied to actual cost of service and severed from profits above 5%.
—Dave Hart, Davis, CA

No competition for cable services breeds higher costs and no interests in providing better service. We also don't need more "junk" mail after they sell lists to whomever.
—Larry R. Antila, San Francisco, CA

ENOUGH.
—Barbara Sharma, los angels, CA

The original premise for allowing cable was its affordability. The very least the FCC could do is to stop the increases that deter those unable to keep up with this escalation is to stop it where it is.
—Ken Ring, Minneapolis, MN

Protecting the Public's Privacy--the right top be left alone--has always been a American Civil Right honored by all Courts!
—S Spacek, Germantown, MD

I support the FCC's privacy proposal and the end of the monopoly on set-top boxes. These are public interest proposals. There are millions and millions who will be served by this, even if you hear from only a small fraction of those.
—Guthrie Miller, Santa Fe, NM

Please work for we, the people, and reject the financial and political games being played in our Congress. I thought we broke-up monopolies over a century ago.
—Ed Parks, Lawton, OK

It should be self-evident why this is important to me: stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Yvonne White, Kinmundy, IL

This is why I do not have cable TV!
—Carol Mone, Trinidad, CA

Comcast is the worse of the worse. They continually have the worse service and increase charges. It is way past time to reign them in!
—Patricia Daniels, Manassas, VA

Consumers are fed up with the service they're getting and the paucity of choices, not to mention the high cable bills.
—Nita Sembrowich, Cambridge, MA

Make corporations decide whether they are going to be in the common carriage data transit market (including voice and video data) or the content publishing market. They can't be both in any valid definition of an open market.
—Jared Hardy, Los Angeles, CA

The Right to Privacy is in The Constitution...the right for corporations to profit at the expense of OUR Constitutional Rights is NOT enshrined in The Constitution! Not to mention the fact that MONOPOLIES are illegal in the US, so why do Cable companies get fuedal fiefdoms assigned to them where they don't have to compete with each other? Every other business has to compete for customers in the country...what makes Cable companies the exception to that rule???!!!
—Walker Hibben, newport beach, CA

I am a senior citizen on limited income, the internet is important to mel
—Rosemarie Werner, Standish, MI

The constant erosion of the citizens rights must be stopped now!
—Mr John K Harrison, Clifton, NJ

Privacy is important.
—Chris Damon, East Brunswick, NJ

The internet was developed by the Federal government. It belongs to the public. Companies don't deserve the right to regulate the internet for their own profit.
—Jeffrey Rovner, Chicago, IL

It is burdensome, to always have to worry, that, our individual rights to privacy, are always being jeopardized by the private sector, or even by our own government, whose duty is to uphold and protect our rights! Stand up for our rights and quit allowing corporations to monopolize everything at our expense!
—L Bagley, Albuquerque, NM

You are appointed to work for and answer to us - not to the cable companies. Stand your ground and do the right thing; protect our privacy and provide more equitable access to information.
—Sondra Loucks Wilson, Grand Rapids, MI

It's clear from the Presidential primary elections that consumers are becoming more and more vocal in their opposition to the corporate hijacking of federal agencies that should be working for the citizens of this country. The FCC has a mandate to regulate, rather than take orders from the cable industry.
—Mark Schwartz, Northbrook, IL

You give these companies an inch, they'll take a mile. Please, stand up for the little guy.
—Mr. Brock Janson, Colorado Springs, CO

My privacy is important to me.
—Lila Cornell, Cranberry Twp, PA

For those of us who do not go to the movies anymore, cable television is our source of entertainment. Continuing to gouge customers with increased prices can be problematic for many on fixed incomes.
—Joanne Snyder, San Diego, CA

We are SO tired of fighting for what is right vs BIG CORPORATIONS!!! DO THE RIGHT THING! STOP THE BRIBES.
—jana Shiloh, s, AZ

I'm tired of paying inflated prices for substandard "high speed" cable internet service. Where is FTTH, 1Gbs internet service? The U.S. is the laughing stock of the developed world when it comes to high speed internet.
—William B. Hess, Edwardsville, IL

I find Comcast's and other similar corporate behavior to outrageous. This should be a no-brainer. Thank you!
—David Rogg, Oakton, VA

You should be making the rules for Comcast; they should not be making the rules for you - stand up to them!
—Chari Rosales, Naperville, IL

If I didn't have to pay so much for cable i could buy other goods and/or services.
—Dubby Wm J. Hill, Ocoee, FL

Cox Communications makes us rent a set top box, even though a few months ago we were able to receive the channels on our TV without a set top box. Now I have to rent a box for each TV and my TiVos will no longer work.
—Lyle Sanders, Virginia Beach, VA

My private info should not be risked by being sold without my consent just because I watch TV, and my Comcast bill should not be so expensive and always climbing higher whether I change anything or not. End the monopoly on set-top boxes that we are forced to rent each month.
—Shellee Davis, Cotati, CA

I tire of my Bill so high. It not like you do is watch it all Day. You can't watch all the different channel at one time. Cable is a big Joke to the American People. I like different channel but the one I watch and not all the other channel I don't watch why pay for them.
—Jeff Waters, Ocala, FL

Protect my privacy and lower my cable bill.
—Brenda Peppers, Goldsboro, NC

I would like MORE option when it comes to broadband choices in my area. Comcast is the only provider available and I'm NOT HAPPY!
—Susan Detato, Orleans, VT

The United States cannot keep its technological leadership with an internet that looks like it is run by Soviet bureaucrats. We must have effective administration of our internet assets or we will sink to the level of a developing nation, but this time by choice.
—Peter Rogan, Royal Oak, MI

This is omportant because I would like ti live in the United States of America-and Comcast et al makes us all inti United Serfs of Americas, and as sergs we expect you TOM, to keep is safe from corpocracy!
—Gloriana Casey, altadena, CA

Big Cable goes out of its way to make it all but impossible to use any device they don't rent us on our own television sets - this must end now !
—Timothy Liebe, Syracuse, NY

Seniors living on a limited and fixed income should get a break on the extreme cost of Cable. For many of us, this is our main connection to the rest of the world.
—Christopher Lawrence, Spokane, WA

I didn't give my comcast my consent to Dell my private information. Comcast is a monopoly, and needs to be put in its place.
—Arlene Satz, Boynton Beach, FL

I agree with these proposals. Cable bills increase every year and it is getting out of hand. Protect the public interest.
—Mr. R. Michael Ehr, Milwaukee, WI

I don't want my information broadcast, especially not when others get cash for it.
—James T Elder Jr, Olympia, WA

Proprietory set-top boxes are a clearly anti-consumer issue, which we similarly swept away with AT&T rented phones 35 years ago. Set-top boxes are just cash cows for the cable industry that bilk consumers in rentals far more than the boxes cost. Time to eliminate this egregious monopolistic activity and let consumers decide whether to continue rental or buy their own.
—Alex Tolley, Los Gatos, CA

All our privacy is at risk. Help protect it.
—Patricia Jones, Mountain Home, AR

To FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler, Commissioner Mignon Clyburn and Commissioner Jessica Rosenworcel: Thousands of us have written in support of the FCC's broadband privacy proposal and the agency's efforts to end the monopoly on set-top boxes. These are common-sense, pro-consumer policies, but we're concerned they won't move forward if you don't act now. The cable industry's friends in Congress are threatening the survival of both of these measures, trying to force the agency's hand by holding up Commissioner Rosenworcel's renomination and pressuring the chairman to resign after the election. This is no way to govern, but we're concerned their pressure may be working. Commissioner Rosenworcel is reportedly reluctant to move quickly on these crucial measures. Anything worth doing at the FCC is going to take at least a 3–2 vote. You have a chance to go down in history as leaders of the FCC that did more for the public interest than any other. Your decisions over the next few months could cement that legacy — but only if you hold strong. We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Margot Rochon, Austin, TX

Please care about customers, not just industry people who are lobbying you. We will appreciate it. Thanks.
—David Chu, Syracuse, NY

I don't like monopolies.
—Ed zelonis, Minersville, PA

These are only small steps against the stranglehold the cable duopoly have on us. Please grow a backbone and do the right thing for the American people you serve.
—Barbara McDonald, Wyandotte, MI

You are our only shield against the massive power and push of the communication giants.
—Rob West, Los Angeles, CA

The FCC is supposed to protect people who use the cable not just the providers. The FCC is not doing its job. It is acting just like Congress. It's time to take a stand for the people who pay the bills.
—Shirley Powell, Johnson Creek, WI

It is very well laid out in the text above. nothing more to be added, than that private information is just that. Private. It is not to be sold, bartered, jumbled. queried.
—Per-Ola Selander, Kirkland, WA

I'm on a fixed income so every time my cable bill goes up I loose money. It seems to increase a few dollars each month and it is hard to keep up.
—Claudia Schumann, San Francisco, CA

We're seniors living on a fixed income, we can't afford to have giant monopolies picking our pockets and profiting off selling our information. Please protect us from the wolves.
—Deborah Moore, Somers, NY

Cable should be a utility with consumers having access to multiple detective providers over it.
—Pat Smear, San Francisco, CA

Here in the U.S., there is little or no competition; we have the worse customer service, the slowest speeds and the highest prices. I had faster speeds in Iraq. Our systems are abdominal. You allow businesses to screw over customers, why?
—Janice Barnes, Jacksonville, FL

To be a knowledgeable citizen in our current society requires access to public information and that can be best provided through connection to the internet. That has allowed major ISP companies, especially Comcast, coupled with their monopolistic powers to force consumers to pay very high prices and to surrender privacy information which would otherwise be withheld. I urge you to provide the balance that has been denied to consumers by denying these companies access to personal information which is then used for commercial purposes and to eliminate their strangle hold on the devices necessary to access the information stream.
—A L. Mullikin, Peachtree City, GA

Just say NO to Comcast!
—Anton Grambihler, Richland, WA

My privacy and a fair deal is important to me. Being sold and manipulated by big coroprate business is not good for me or you.
—Craig Love, ,

Time to regulate this monopoly!
—Michael Feinberg MD, PhD, Philadelphia, PA

Congress wisely rooted out monopolies decades ago. Is today's Congress AS wise? My cable bill is humongous!
—Craig T. Ponczak, Scottsdale, AZ

I live on a VERY fixed income and can just barely afford the internet I have and I have to have it for school. If you don't finish your job and reject Congress' political games, I won't be able to afford cable at all. I don't connect for TV purposes; I have to have TV in order to get internet.
—Pat Brunson, Las Vegas, NV

Seniors on fixed incomes need these services to be affordable.
—Karen Stephens-Cole, Chino, CA

MSKE IT EQUAL FOR THE MIDDLE CLASS AND POOR TO GET A CHANCE WITHOUT A MONOPOLY LIKE COMCAST !
—Constance M Rodman, Seattle, WA

FCC, please serve the public interest, not collapse under pressure from special interests.
—RJ Boyer, San Clemente, CA

Privacy and fair pricing are important to everyone.
—Kathryn Vinson, Seattle, WA

I'd like to know what the FCC really stands for and represents. Are you an Agency that has been infiltrated by corporate operatives, savages devoted to greed who have no loyalty to our Nation and the American People, or is the FCC still a genuine American Agency run by dedicated individuals who represent the interests of the American People. We shall see by your actions what you really are and stand for.
—Paul Judy, Van Nuys, CA

Stop comcast selling my private information to others. If I wanted my information sold I would sell it myself and not some greedy corporation that sets high prices on the American public. Stop corruption with the cable boxes also. This company is taking advantage of Americans and we are standing up against this.
—Mark LaCompte, timber lake, SD

Media consolidation is driving up all costs in our cable bill.
—Wm Schultz, whitefish, MT

When the FCC voted in favor of net neutrality, it voted in favor of the consumers. I hope it continues this path.
—James Bachman, Saint Charles, IL

As a teacher and mother (& now grand mother) I have fought for the common citizen to have more power and influence over the critical communication systems in place today...this is not just business..it is a responsibility of the businesses we allow to operate in our nation that they serve us well for the purposes we wish and not just charge us to shove down our throats messages products they and other overtly wealthy WANT TO BRAINWASH AND SHOVE TO THE CITIZENS / CONSUMERS. The FCC is there to look after the interest of all the citizens and not allow a few to bulldoze their way over the rest of us and into our pocket books as well as our minds. Our own money should not be allowed to be used to corrupt us with dictated messages by monopolies and gouge our funds with over priced products....My personal info should also be under my control not Comcast or corporate control without my consent. I want money diverted to buy policy and policy makers on our invoice and not collected pretending to be for services rendered for media or as a common carrier of communication delivery and I instead want these funds used to provide us better services we are paying for & not to buy policy that works against these companies own customer base.
—Monica Seymour Mcfeeters, baldwyn, MS

Cable bills are prohibitively expensive and keep rising every single year. We need relief and competition in set top boxes is a way we can get it!
—Karen Young - Writers Guild, Brooklyn, NY

Why isn't it against the law for a company tosell private information, and why aren't avoidable monopolies prohibited by FCC policy? Please honor your implied or explicit responsibility to act in the interest of the American Public.
—Sherman L. Guth, Bloomington, IN

We have the worst service for the highest prices in the world because once again there is no competition. Break up these monopolies and stop making them even more powerful. It’s not right, it’s not fair and it’s your responsibility to control these out of control behemoths.
—Lee Clingman, Portland, OR

you work for US, not the cable companies.
—Barbara Hosmer, Mission Viejo, CA

It took years of hard-fought effort for the FCC to pass even the basic, common-sense net-neutrality laws we have today, and rather than celebrate that their limited scope allows them to continue with much of their corrupt abuse of their customers, these services providers continue to try and circumvent these laws, as well as any others that might limit their profit-potential, regardless of how it affects the American people. For this sort of ludicrous situation to ever even arise, is solely possible due to their corrupt and undemocratic influence over this regulating body, and those in positions to affect its actions, in the form of money and threats. A democratic government, by definition, can only exist as long as every citizen has equal influence in its direction, no more, no less. In these dark times, when wealthy groups of citizens can go unpunished while using said wealth to directly influence our elected officials (and even who those officials are), and indirectly to manipulate the general public, using widespread propaganda to directly control the core knowledge they base their decisions on, our only hope is to acknowledge and fight against this perversion of our country's principle whenever and wherever possible. The most basic principle for any regulating body to be effective has to be that those whom they are set to regulate cannot influence it's direction in any way; as long as that is not the case, the regulating body is nothing but a figurehead to appease the public, while those meant to be regulated have actual control. That they are able to do so publicly to the extent we see today is proof of how far out system has fallen: Those that realize what is happening and are in positions to take real actions against it have a dirty to do so, both to the people they represent, and to themselves. When given a position of power, and the responsibly that comes with it, in the face of injustice, inaction is sin.
—Christopher Kloppinger-Todd, Montgomery Village, MD

We don't have cable and don't want it, partly for these reasons. But most of our friends, neighbors and relatives do have cable for lack of a better choice, and I'm joining them in their protest.
—Liz Gaspar, SHELTON, WA

My cable costs are ridiculously high!
—Bob Lorentzen, Fort Bragg, CA

Why do you hesitate and linger? Why are you not taking action! Are the cable companies paying you off???
—Susie Warner, Beverly Hills, FL

Most of public citizens are struggling to pay their bills. Privacy invasion can be a nightmare that we cannot afford, and cable bills do not need to be predatory. For ONCE, please consider that corporate profits are killing us.
—Faith Mishina, Hilo, HI

The Government is supposed to be governing in the best interest of the nation, DO IT !!
—Anthony G Franklin, Bedford, OH

Selling private information without knowledge or approval sounds like an illegal action, or it should be. Monthly charges are already in place with whatever services you subscribe to, so why the additional monthly charge for the box. Sounds like double billing, and at best it should be a one time charge, and at the very least there should be no monopolies..
—Jean Mobley, Albuquerque, NM

Privacy is important to me. I am a person with rights and duties, not a commodity.
—Deirdre Balaam, ,

It's not capitalism if it's run by monopolies. It's not capitalism if the rules are rigged against consumers.
—Don Bliss, city, CA

It's time to get these two measures passed. Privacy of my personal information is important to me and I expect to be asked to give up my right to it's privacy. I also believe consumers of a product should have as many choices a possible to maintain competition. End the monopoly on set-top boxes and give consumers a choice.
—Warren Hageman, Carmichael, CA

If we don't continue to fight against the Cable companies they will destroy the internet and along with it America. Out once great country is already heading down the tubes and it's due to large corporations being aloud to run wild, break the rules, and make up their own rules. What use to make America great was our ability to make advancements in technology be it digital or not but now we have these fat parasitic companies who are happy to keep things right where they are. Up grade the us digital infrastructure? Why would we need to do that when we can just charge people more for what to most countries is considered archaic? This needs to end or things will only get worse. Big business already has it greed controlling hands on the white house are you going to let them do that to you as well or can you lead by example?
—Brice Benton, Minneapolis, MN

Protect My Privacy The continued assault on our privacy by corporations who have OUR data is disgusting. They seek to monetize our life, by destroying our privacy. These soulless corporations are willing to do anything for monetary gain. Are you comfortable with corporations who have YOUR data selling it, destroying YOUR privacy? Will it take a public interest organization gathering and collating data about your life and publishing it on the internet for you to stop this absurd practice? Lower My Cable Bill Forty eight years ago the Federal Communications Commission's "...Carterfone decision enabled consumers to purchase modems from countless sources." "Without easy and inexpensive consumer access to modems, the Internet would not have become the global medium that it is today." The same applies to "the agency's 1998 decision to let consumers pick and choose their own cable set top boxes. "Subscribers have the right to attach any compatible navigation device to a multichannel video programming system," the Commission declared. "We conclude that the core requirement, to make possible the commercial availability of equipment to MVPD subscribers, is similar to the Carterfone principle adopted by the Commission in the telephone environment." We can expect enhanced features and function and probably services unthought of today by allowing competition for set top boxes. End the cable system monopoly and unchain innovation. By cable companies not allowing this, is this not a violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act?
—Jerry F Koniecki, Hyde Park, NY

With no COLAs for 2 years and being on a small fixed income, we need this protection from higher costs!
—Ms. Niara Isley, Durango, CO

Pro-consumer policies like this one is a step in the right direction that benefits everyone except a very small minority. Take action, America has been bogged down by an oligarchical system where only the powerful win. Where has this gotten America on a world scale? We need policies like these to help the middle class which in turn will help the country. Not only is it common sense, be the person that helps America get on the right track.
—Thomas, Philadelphia, PA

Because I'm a senior citizen and living on a fixed income. Cable bills have become outrageous.
—Sheila Leitner, No. Myrtle beach, SC

Fixed income; get awful channels for too much money and no choice. Unfair.
—Lee Stephanie Roscoe, Brewster, MA

No one should be able to sell your personal information with your explicit consent, & hiding it inside its cable service contracts should BE illegal! And making everyday life more affordable for everyday working folks should be a goal our government & its agencies should ALWAYS strive towards!
—Christina Fahey-Matias, Vancouver, WA

SENIOR'S NEED LOWER BILL'S AND WE NEED OUR PRIVACY PROTECTED
—Katie and Bill, Sheffield Lake, OH

My own set top box would save me money. Not having my info sold would save me time and trouble.
—Lance Vilter, Los Angeles, CA

As a retired teacher, my cable bill goes up year after year while my Soc. Sec. and pension remains the same. Your bill will help with that by lowering my cable bill. I also dislike all the e-mails I get because my information is sold and exchanged without my permission. Please put through your bills as soon as possible. Thank you,
—Ethel Dumas, Wesley Chapel, FL

Between the cable box and modem, I'm paying $15 per month, which comes out to $180 per year! I've been a Comcast customer since 2003, so I've probably spent at least $1500 on these ridiculous fees!
—Jaynie Beard, Harrisburg, PA

Because We are a Democracy. It's time Capitalism learn this and behaves accordingly!
—Kyle Kleckner, Berkley, MI

Privacy matters, and so does having world class, affordable, utility based, basic communications, free from private profiteers skimming so much. Public broadband should always be an option, to keep the private profiteers honest. Chattanooga showed we could get rates more in line with the many other developed countries that do this better than we have.
—Jim Young, Bloomington, CA

My information is mine, not yours or theirs.
—Kyle Kulseth, Sheridan, WY

Busting monopolies and regulating communications is your job for us, not kowtowing to thr corporations.
—Avi Okin, Kamuela, HI

There is absolutely no justification for further delay.
—David Tivol, Sunnyvale, CA

The cable industry has been given free reign to scam it's customers and the government in nearly every merger agreement they've entered. They need to be held accountable.
—Mr. Jason K Morris, West Brownsville, PA

Reject corporate supremacy now!
—Mike Caetano, Fresno, CA

Cable is my connection to the outside world as a formerly hard-working now disabled elder.
—Ria Tanz Kubota, El Sobrante, CA

We the unincorporated people need representation, and you are that representation. Please protect us from the powerful few who have found their legal ways of disempowering and cornering us as a populous dependent on their services. Please speak for our interests, rights, and well-being. Thank you for your courage!
—Eugene Cruz, center tuftonboro, NH

Protect our privacy!
—Joseph Volpe, ventura, CA

There is so little factual information available to Americans - diminishing each year - that access to the internet is imperative if America is to remain less than a police state resembling Russia, et al. Democracy depends on and cannot exist without an informed citizenry.
—Sharon Conn, sandy, OR

We the people look to the FCC, not Comcast, not Verizon, to protect the common good in our democracy. These monopolies must be reigned in; there must be a limit to their influence. And addressing these issues, related to the unfair practices of cable TV providers, is long overdue. Yhr time to act is now.....
—David P. Miller, Elkton, MD

My information is mine...not for sale...no matter how you cut it. When is someone going to face down Comcast and protect the public interest?
—Elaine Whooley, Nevada city, CA

Years ago, I opted out of Comcast's rent-your-cable modem at $8/month forever plan. I have saved $96 a year ever since year 2 when the capital expenditure of my cable modem had been paid off by absence of the cable modem rental fee. I don't understand what's so problematic about allowing consumers to purchase their own hardware for channel decryption. I feel like the Digital Cable Revolution has been another "carrot and stick" (mostly stick) ruse. Now that Digital Cable has arrived, I now have access to several different versions (standard definition, high definition, and other language versions) of each channel. I of course had no choice in the matter. It was happening regardless of my approval. I just want one channel -- the one that comes in High Definition. I think it is just common sense to allow consumers to buy and maintain their own hardware for connection of their television services. I mean, what's next? If they can tell us what decryption box is necessary in our homes, are they going to tell us what TVs we can buy to use their services. Presumably those will be on rental agreements, too. Consumers purchasing their own decryption hardware will certainly cheaper for the consumer. And near as I can tell, with consumer Cable rates going up every year (or at least every other) in marketplaces where the Cable industry has been authorized as a legal monopoly, that Comcast is not going to be hurt financially by allowing users to escape perpetual rental agreements for hardware.
—David Kenny, Rockford, IL

We need to get back to the Constitution.
—Ginger Mira, Los Angeles, CA

Protect the people, not the fat cats !
—Michael A. DiZio, Holbrook, MA

The FCC should enact the 2 strong proposals, to protect We-the-People. Thank you for listening to us.
—Chuck, Huron, CA

My Social Security COLA will be 0.02%...My cable bill just went up 25% for the same package!
—John Tilson, Bloomington, IN

Please stop Comcast from selling private information about its customers. We need you to do this. Thank you.
—Sarah Barrett, Downers Grove, IL

We love privacy and hate monopoly. We hope you do, too.
—Roger Overholt, Hemet, CA

Cable companies have no incentive to act in the customer's best interest and routinely seek out new ways to charge more for their poor service. Consumers need an advocate to protect them from the ever including cost of cable.
—Eric Hibbeler, Saint Charles, MO

It seems the only people who matter now a days are large corporations while we individuals keep digging deeper in our pockets. Please remedy at least a part of this.
—Linda Holloway, Jacksonville, FL

The cable television monopolies in this country are a serious and "un-American" problem. It is your job to fix it. Do your job.
—William Tracer, Cordova, TN

Why is everybody wanting to hurt people on fixed incomes. Maybe if you were in the same position, then you would take action. Please finish the job and pass these.
—Theodore Lance, Fremont, OH

We as Canadians are always gettng gouged for services. It is time to stop. It is time to protect Canadians from being exploited.
—Don J Cameron, Winnipeg,

Don't give in to the pressure of the cable companies. Do what are elected representatives won't, represent the will of the people.
—Jason Byrer, Lubbock, TX

Now is the time to do this.....
—Raymundo Martinez, los angeles, CA

It's important to all citizens that Federal Agencies look out for and act in their interests - by 'their' I mean the citizens, not the agency. When this system is betrayed, we've got ourselves an oligarchy
—Sharyn St Clair, Bridgeport, CT

The cable I have and can affordd allows me only local, one gov't, i local gov't and 2 commercial channels. And the high pice!!!!
—MaryJo Matheny, Indianapolis, IN

My bill is outrageous, my speed is pathetic, I am a captive of Comcast with no effective alternative. This is called MONOPOLY! I pay your salary. Please do your job.
—Philip Fregeau, Longmeadow, MA

Monopolistic Comcast needs no favors from government. Do NOT allow the cable industry to sell consumers private information for profit without expressed permission from subscribers and reduced subscription prices in exchange. And lower cable cost overall by ending Comcast's monopoly on set-top boxes.
—Calvin Johnson, Marion, IL

The FCC is for our protection, please do your job!
—Howard Miller, Lakeport, CA

If there is any group with a lower approval rating than Congress and less public trust, it's the cable industry and their "Cooperative Monopoly." The cable industry (and their money) take advantage of our representatives (who are almost always lawyers rather than tech-savvy types). The FCC has stood up for the common citizen with its Net Neutrality and Set top box rulings. It was expected that the unsavory lot that are the cable cabal and Congress would get together to do what's best for THEM, not the consumer. They will undoubtedly also mask their intent with a patriotic-sounding title and obfuscating blibber-blabber in the bill! DO NOT BE FOOLED!
—Stephen Wilson, Pensacola, FL

Please do your job! Protect my privacy and don't allow the cable companies continue to rape us with pricing increases and charging us for a set top box.
—Arthur W Green, N. Ft Myers, FL

I am just so tired of trying to fight against big corporations who have no interest in fairness. The FCC has been asked time and again to stand up to big corporations. I hope they can do so once again. They work for the public, not the cable companies!
—Ellen Zarter, Bellevue, WA

I am tired of paying high costs for lousy service.
—Susan C Wilkie, Lakewood, WA

Is it fair that I have to spend every month $80 dollars for just internet access from Time Warner? I don't think so.
—Maureen Kavanagh, Woodside, NY

The cable monopolies are irresponsible & unaccountable except to their shareholders & their own bottom line. They do not protect the consumers they are supposed to serve (for hefty fees) & they do not deliver the service they claim. We need the FCC to protect our privacy & open up the competition on set-top boxes so we are not forced to pay ridiculous monthly rents on equipment that we wind up paying for many times over if we keep the same service for several years. Thank you for your consideration.
—David J. Lafond, Holyoke, MA

Our privacy is very important as well as to reduce our high cable payment.
—Jose A. Hernandez, Chino Ca., CA

No monopolies. Keep the internet affordable for all. Protect our privacy.

—Rudy Perpich, Hopkins, MN

WHEN DO YOU WORK FOR THE PUBLIC??? AND STOP WORKING FOR BIG BUSINESS??? YOU ARE IN PLACE TO PROTECT THE PUBLIC---NOT MAKE SURE BIG BUSINESS GETS IT'S GREED FIX!!!
—Deborah Smith, OKLAHOMA CITY, OK

Please end the monopoly.
—Andrew Kliscz, Milwaukee, WI

What can I say that hasn't already been said. Russia and China already know most of us intimately, hell the own us. I suppose you all feel that allowing Comcast to open the floodgates by selling (do we get a commission?) our personal information is a good idea. We elected you all to protect us and so far our public officials batting average is not so good so I won't hold my breath in hopes of the obvious.
—Jim Sheldon, Royal Oak, MI

i object to having to rent a cable box for $10/month. if it were lease to own, i could understand...but it is not!
—Tim Brainerd, NATICK, MA

Comcast does not have my respect as a reputable business. They have kept my phone number hostage in that I wasn't allowed to use my landline for approximately 1 week, when switching from Comcast to Verizon, their installer had my son set up equipment for them, & clipped Verizon's cables outside my residence.
—Michele Shipp, Gaithersburg, MD

The prices are outrageous even with bundling.
—Jacqueline Carter, Carrollton, TX

Privacy is important
—Juke Larrico, Reno, NV

I am elderly, on a fixed income. My cable bill is already a burden. Furthermore I resent the cable industry's relentless pressure on the FCC and on my privacy rights.
—Pat Montee, Charlotte, NC

I haven't watched TV for 2 years because I can't afford cable bills and no one should ever have the right to sell or give information about a private citizen without their consent.
—Charlotte Sines, Yosemite National Park, CA

Every dollar is important to work8ng class families. Corporations do not feel the effects of lack of access to Internet and content. People do. Children do.
—Shawn Mitchell, Apex, NC

Please protect the consumer. We believe you will make the right decision! Thank you :)

N one should be selling information about me with out my consent. It is mine. Lower my cable bill will free up some money for health issues.
—Betty Gosselin, Gorham, NH

Privacy is very important to Americans. Please respect us and pass legislation that insures our privacy
—Beverly Ann Conroy, Oak Park, IL

Our cable bills keep rising with no increase in service, and cable companies have an unfair monopoly on the set-top boxes that are needed to conform with their systems. At the rate of $10 or $20 dollars per month, they make thousands of dollars from each cable subscriber over a period of years on an inexpensive piece of equipment that often doesn't even provide the latest features. Cable companies should be required to make their systems work with standard over-the-counter boxes that subscribers can buy instead of rent.
—Daniel Drucker, Southfield, MI

Privacy is a fundamental right and monopolies are anti democratic!

A free market, healthy competition, and thus, fair prices are only available in a situation that is not a monopoly.
—Phil Fontana, Atlanta, GA

PRIVACY IS AN AMERICAN RIGHT-WE'LL CHOOSE TO HAVE CABLE????
—Sharon Kansas, Garden City, KS

The only Americans that aren't getting a raw deal from the cable companies are the owners of the cable companies.
—Chad Sell, Barto, PA

Access to cable and the Internet is critical and essential in today's society. This has become a utility that should be accessible and affordable for all US citizens.
—Leslie Jenkins, West Orange, NJ

I'm tired of my cable provider's constant effort to find one more way to pad their bottom line. I'm particularly angered by their not allowing me to use the "cable ready" tuner in my television set, forcing me to "rent" a conversion box in order to receive all the channels to which I subscribe, so that I will be paying many times over the actual cost of the external tuner.
—Richard Luken, Cincinnati, OH

No one should be forced higher prices and to be forced to rent each month. FCC who's side are you on anyway?
—Renee Bourgea, Vancouver, WA

Corporate domination of the public's DARPA-created worldwide web must be reduced significantly. Our abiity to communicate, work and find work should not be at the whim of Wall Street.
—Woody Woodruff, Lanham, MD

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Barry De Jasu, Montague, MA

Privacy should be sacrosanct!
—Wolfgang A. Loera, Bellevue, WA

Monopolies are ethically dangerous. Only strong government regulation can prevent their use of private information and their unjust price gouging.
—Eugene Bales, Lindsborg, KS

Privacy should be of the utmost importance due to today's world full of scam artists ! Also, because of the very bad economy & huge cable bills, we are all trying to save as much money as possible ! Protect our privacy & lower our cable bills right now !!!!
—Mrs & Dennis Roderigues, Pinellas Park, FL

We need to have cable that is affordable and accessible to everyone. Also, Comcast which already has a monopoly in providing cable services should not be allowed to use it's consumer's private information to make more money. Let their customers decide whom they want to do business with.
—Angela Gardner, Hacienda heights, CA

Government should not continually take the side of big business to maximize their profits. Individual privacy and competitive pricing are paramount.

COMCAST is a money machine. They don't need any more, but I sure do. Please stand up to them and finish this project, NOW! Thank you.
—Paul Yasenchak, Huntsville, AL

My "special deal" was $99 for TV, internet, and phone. Now, "the best we can do" is $209+! And Comcast has a monopoly in my town. This is nuts.
—Pauline S Hunneman, Freeport, ME

Do what is right for the PEOPLE! please...
—Ellen Johnson, Springfield, MA

Selling my personal information or charging monthly rental fees on cable boxes is Wrong!
—Barry LeBeau, West Warwick, RI

The cable industry said deregulation would increase competition and lower prices. After they got their deregulation, they divided up their territory and formed monopolies. It is time to stop this nonsense. I also don't appreciate my information being for sale. If you are going to allow such stuff, you also need to establish ways to track down who gets that information and how it is used so if it is used to steal our identities we can sue the cable companies.
—Connie Schmidt, Manhattan, KS

Internet freedom and digital rights matter!

American cable and internet charges are the highest in the world, with the least services. Privacy rights speak for themselves.
—Charles R. Ross, Rio Nido, CA

I want my dependents to have better access and lower cost than I have endured; I am 86 and dying.
—Darwin L Hatheway, Hallowell, ME

With geographical monopolies by cable suppliers like Comcast, we're already paying way more than Europe, Asia, etc. But Internet access has become essential for school, work and personal transactions. It's more than enough to be forced to pay exorbitant prices in the absence of competition, but adding the ability to profit by selling my information, and nickel and dime customers with more and more little fees is just insult added to injury.
—Lisa P Vervena, Shoreview, MN

Thanks to Free Press, I can put pressure on my publicly-funded officials to to their job, as follows: FCC, do your job!
—Mimi Jennings, St. Paul, MN

I want you to do your job and stand up to the industry.
—Carolyn Semiglasow, austin, TX

I would like to know when I buy a service, that all I am buying. why can't I just buy a service and not worry about what someone is doing with my personal information? Thanks.

—Jeannine White, sausalito, CA

There is NEVER a surplus in dollars, when you are existing on Social Security benefits.
—Harold L. Wakefield, Woodland Hills, CA

We need the FCC to do its job and protect the public and public interests. There is no completion in this industry including all other forms of public communication, all are owned by to few and all have monopolistic ties to one another. I've spent the last 45 years working in the business and for the last twenty it has become increasingly hard to tell who or which company I was really working for. It's time to regulate and limit once again the allowed ownership of media in a particular market. One only has to look at one individual, Rupert Murdoch, to witness the offences a single individual can perpetrate when he owns to much in any one place or country..
—Jerry Uhlman, Carlisle, IA

The cost of renting cable equipment is out of control. Comcast charges so much I could buy this equipment for several month's payments. End their monopoly in this area. The FCC should be looking out for taxpayers not greedy corporation.
—Jeffrey Tieger, Fort Lauderdale, FL

Please stand up for regular people. We don't have the money or influence of the big corporations.
—Chris, Downers Grove, IL

It would be nice if the needs of the public came before the desires of a cable company.
—Spencer Hunter, Tucson, AZ

Please quit pandering to special interests and big money. Represent the people who have put their trust in you to do the right thing and not to bow to greed and lobbying.
—David Guzowsky, aurora, CO

Cable companies have monopoly's
—Ptolemy Adams, Grandville, MI

My privacy and my choice to provide my own cable box is important. Don't let those companies take away my choices. Please Protect us.
—Dennis Simpson, DALLAS, TX

We are counting on you to protect us citizens from the manipulations of Comcast
—Edward A White, Washington, DC

M onopolies are supposed to be illegal. Comcast is a monopoly. Anything that fdiminisihes their power is helpful tgo use regulat citizens.
—Robert Johnson, Shippensburg, PA

Cable costs presently price seniors out of the market. Too steep!
—LM Draege, Park Ridge, IL

If the FCC is not for the people, then it is for big money and big profit. Don't they have enough already? And, no, they're not people.
—Wendy Fast, Dansville, NY

My privacy and the ability for me to provide a set-top box are important to me,
—Richard Guernsey, So Wellfleet, MA

Someone has to speak for the consumer, lest we get steamrollered. Apparently, fear and cowardice are in the forefront for this issue. We taxpayers are held hostage as your and Congress salaries are paid by us. Neither the FCC or Congress are want to do nothing. With inaction like this, it is little wonder that right-wing wackos are having a field day.
—John Thurber, Tacoma, WA

Remember FCC, you work for US not the corporation. Do your job!
—P Cleland, Sebastopol, CA

My mother is on a fixed income and the rates just seem to go nowhere but up.
—Lawrence Green, BUFFALO, NY

We shouldn't have to rent a cable box , when our TV's are cable ready. Homeowners cable rates should be much lower , and advertisers rates increased.
—Charles Semler, Sharpsburg, MD

Privacy equals safety against government and corporate eavesdropping and stealing important family and personal information. What's next?
—Allen B Chazin, kew gardens hills, NY

They've reamed us.
—Kyle C Bracken, Los Angeles, CA

These monopolistic companies are stalling innovation, getting big fat paychecks for screwing over their customers and refuse to update their inferstructure unless forced to do it. The US is supposed to be a leader, and dominate force in information technology yet we let people with thinking from a bygone Era decided what is best for the people of this country
—noah krunglevich, San Ramon, CA

I pay my ISP to provide internet, not to sell what I do and were I go to a third party. I have a right browse the internet with out fear of my ISP betraying me with out my consent.
—Scott Stephens, Daly City, CA

I just moved into a new apartment and once again had the reminder as I signed up for one of the only broadband services that supplies my home, of the plethora of ways that i'm taken advantage of since they know I can't take my business elsewhere. Please do your part to support open business practices that actually help EVERYone, not just these big businesses. Thank you.
—Justin Long, Los Angeles, CA

I am really tired of all those ads!!!
—Rita Heinz, Talent, OR

Please act in the public interest!
—Chico Woodhill, San Francisco, CA

Living in a broadcast signal dark hole I'm forced to subscribe just to receive an offair signal. I only subscribe to basic cable as I have no need to pay for 200 other channels of nothing worth watching. I wouldn't event subscribe to cable if paying a monthly line charge for internet weren't more expensive than the basic cable charge. Not only do they charge me $5/month for a worthless broadband router they want to make my bandwidth available to other comcast internet subscribers when in my signal range. If Comcast can't respect my privacy rights, which apparently don't exist in their greedy minds then I may be forced into the tech-less caste.
—Rick Hendrickson, Edina, MN

The public airwaves are to be used for the benefit of the public.
—Margaret Goodman, Glen Mills, PA

Stop Stonewalling!
—Michael Robert Mead, Monroe, WA

THESE MONOPOLIES HAVE BEEN CONTESTED F O R D E C A D E S ESPECIALLY FOR LOCAL CABLE FRANCHISES. Rosenworcel: to move quickly on these crucial measures NOW!!.
—jl keith, Providence, RI

I have been ripped off by the cable company for years! Time for it to end!
—Carol Dodson, Elgin, SC

US cable costs are ridiculously expensive compared to the rest of the world. The US does not have free enterprise in this business.
—William Cline, Strongsville, OH

I'm retired and disabled and live on a fixed income and I can't afford these high payments from the internet and cable TV. Please keep this in mind.....
—James M Carson, Glennallen, AK

Be fair to us little people.
—, Madison, WI

I'm retired and on a fixed income, every way I can lower my monthly expenditure adds up and is worth while to me. I do not see why they should be able to profit from my private info. I want my privacy honored.
—Peter Brandt, New York, NY

I am a senior citizen with a very low income; I try to supplement that with online business, but the cost of my internet goes up EVERY year. I cannot afford for my expenses to go up after than my income (DUH!). I rely on the FCC to stand up for consumers like me and not let cable monopolies price gouge.
—Kae Bender, Lancaster, CA

I think the cable and Internet monopolies should be broken up. There is no justification for these evil entities to have so much control, except boundless greed.
—Brian Brian St. John, Spicewood, TX

What I and my neighbors want--what we have ALWAYS wanted--is an ala carte system in which we are presented with a list of channels; with prices for each channel. In this way; we could buy only what we want; and NOT be forced to pay premium prices for channels we never ever use.
—Valerie Shubert, Seattle, WA

So why is this so difficult for you? People over profits, that's what you are there for. Protect us from the corporate greed, and pass this bill now.
—Judy L., Carson City, NV

Privacy is a given in Europe, why not the US?
—Pat Ander, denver, CO

Cost for cable and internet goes up monthly. Service declines at the same rate in Louisville KY.
—W C., Louisville, KY

This is clearly a monopoly that need to be address in a consumer oriented manner.
—Chuck Hedrick, Escondido, CA

Lower bill from Comcast and more competition for cable companies.
—Tim McKeever, Yorkville, IL

The cable costs are getting higher while the quality and availability of channels is getting lower. It's hard enough being on a fixed income as it is without cable mergers (potential monopolies), higher prices for less programming, and someone in another place knowing every time you sneeze.
—Rose Marie Ash, Buffalo, NY

Private information should be just that private. Comcast is already receiving outrageous prices for cable. We have signed an agreement with them to provide this service. If they want to mine our private data they should request it and have us actively opt in. This is beyond the contract they have. Stop this illegitimate sale of our info to greedy corporations.
—Maria Dimond, Rollingbay, WA

Why in the world would I allow Comcast, let alone any OTHER cable company, to have the ability to SELL my personal information without MY CONSENT? After all the FCC is SUPPOSED to be working for ME not the cable companies nor their lobbyists!
—Lisbeth Caccese, Van Nuys, CA

cable companies have no more right to the data generated by my activity online than landline companies have rights to the content of my private conversations over their copper wires.
—Ronald H Skees, Jeffersonville, KY

My town has only one choice for getting cable for my computer. It is neither good nor inexpensive. Faurl to support consumer neutrality will only make matters worse.
—Bert ert Becker, Milford, NH

My cable bills seem to go up even though I haven't upgraded anything. It seems they raise the amount because they can. There is no regulation that prevents this. I wish there were such regulations.
—Helen Templeton, Evansville, IN

We don't need to allow any company to sell private information of their clients. The idea that they think they should be allowed to is surprising. Please act to protect the interests of the consumers/public. Thank you for your action on this matter.
—Christy Compton, Arlington, VA

My internet privacy is a Constitutional guarantee. The monopoly of cable companies on "the little black box" is also unconstitutional. Act now to protect my Constitutional rights. Thank you.
—Sharon Larson, South Beloit, IL

Consumers must always be protected, first and foremost. That is the purpose of government agencies.
—Phyllis Lau, Colonia, NJ

Stop pandering to special interest and protect the public .That is supposed to be the function of the commission isn't it?
—Kevin Teeple, manahawkin, NJ

The right to privacy and end price gouging of consumers.
—Joel Blumert, Salisbury, CT

There is no control over what Comcast does. Reining them in has to start.
—James Shuta, Dickson City, PA

They should not be selling our private information. Need to end the monopoly on those set-up boxes that we rent.
—Ronald Snow, Columbia Station, OH

Consumers need you to act on our behalf, please.
—Madelaine Fletcher, Catonsville, MD

Please help the citizens of our fine country to not be exploited by corporations that have no interest other than dollar signs.
—Travis Macpherson, Seattle, WA

WE MUST HAVE PRIVACY IN THIS COUNTRY.
—Mark Koppel, Greenacres, FL

I'm tired of Comcast using me and their other "customers" as an ATM. We pay exorbitant prices for products and services that continue to get worse and worse. For example, Comcast has put now put much of its programming behind a paywall that extracts fees over and above what we pay for cable service. And this programming can in no way be described as premium. Not only do we pay a fee for cable, but we also pay in the form being exposed to hours of advertising. How is this fair? It's time for the FCC to stick up for consumers!
—Jeanine Center, Ann Arbor, MI

It's important because we are headed for the time of big monopolies controlling everything! Didn't our government deal with this issue years ago? Here we go again. NO MORE MONOPOLIES !!!!
—Linda Schoppert, Napa, CA

When I started with Comcast a few years ago, my Basic TV pkg. was $15. This month, another increase. Now it is over $30. Everyone has a right to privacy & efficiency via the Internet. That is why I do not have Comcast for Internet / e-mail.
—Iris Moore, Yelm, WA

The cost of my internet has started to reach ridiculous prices. I handed Comcast $550 last month and somehow, a month later, my bill has risen by another $400. This is something that needs to happen. We need the internet for daily life now, whether it be fore school, social contact, or for running our businesses, and these cable companies should not be allowed to practically bankrupt their customers like this.
—Shaila Stewart, Memphis, TN

Stop corporate takeover!
—Juanita Hepler, Boise, ID

Time to move is now. You're the government, do your damn job, NOW.
—Michael J Holland, Naugatuck, CT

Don't be a dingo, bro!
—m c C kubiak, Bloomington, IL

Comcast has already made windfall profits off of me, alone. It is time that they give us a break. I would also like to see some deep discounts for senior citizens. We don't get out as much as we once did and watching tv is an important pastime.
—Leslie Beall, Aurora, IL

My privacy needs to be protected, and a lower cable bill is also welcome.
—Katherine Slawinski, New York, NY

I don't want my privacy invaded by Comcast and I DO want a lower cable bill. Do your job, please.
—Ann Wasgatt, Roseville, CA

When it is something we can have a choice about, we should have the option.
—John Back, Barryville, NY

I can barely afford my Time Warner bill with my small Social Security monthly income.
—Sissy Wallach, Palm Springs, CA

You should be working for the people, not the 1%.
—Hein Moritz, Maryville, TN

Why are you people so slow to protect the interests of the people you are in office to serve? People with civil rights make a strong country. A bunch of megacorporations who run roughshod over the citizenry do not. "Consumers" are not an interest group; they are the people who pay your salary.
—Michelle Gale, Coconut Creek, FL

Comcast has hijacked personal information and needs to be held accountable. If they want my information they should be required to get my approval. I am sick of Comcast padding its pockets and emptying mine.
—Susan Mcdonald, Nashville, TN

I am on a fixed income; retired, and have come to depend on my TV for most of my entertainment. My bill has risen to WELL OVER TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS PER MONTH. I ONLY WATCH A FEW CHANNELS AND, MOSTLY LISTEN TO CLASSICAL MUSIC ALL DAY. IT'S RIDICULOUS TO PAY THAT MUCH FOR STUFF I DON'T WANT. THERE HAS TO BE A BETTER WAY.
—Gloria J Howard, MARANA, AZ

The free flow of information is literally the most important tool for solving any other problem in the world.
—Brian Sands, Palm Bay, FL

Why should poor people pay more so rich people can have a great life? Not the way democracy works, though it seems to be the way our brand of capitalism works. Yuk. Not necessary or fair.
—Ms. Carol Pearl, Seattle, WA

I dropped my cable TV because I need to use Comcast's rental box. My son lives in North Carolina And Time Warner Cable has a $3.25 rental fee per box per month and you cannot buy your own box. This is absolutely Wrong. I also Do Not want Comcast selling my personal information. In Three Bridges, New Jersey, Comcast is the only cable and internet provider. I have no choice and it has been this way for more than a decade. Things have to change, the American Consumer is being ripped off by these Giant Corporations. Thank you for your help on this matter.
—Robert Meyer, Three Bridges, NJ

Privacy must be guarded to prevent abuse by online hucksters. And, monthly fees need to be reduced, especially by their trumped up cable box rental fees--per box! We pay an installation fee and return all equipment when service terminates. The box fee is like a death tax on a family with $20,000.
—Mrs. Barbara McGaffey, Alvin, TX

Enough with Comcast doing whatever they want
—Thomas Hasson, Mill Valley, CA

Monopolies of any kind are the poison that can kill our capitalistic economy. Freedom of choice is the engine to our economy. It is the very foundation of our society. Monopolies in the railroads were crippling the economy in the early 1900s until the Trusts were broken up. Media is the new highway of today and we must keep it competitive.
—William Kendrick, Kemah, TX

Cable companies already have no competition for any reasonable speed of internet access in any given area. If a company has the ability to restrict access to any of their customers they are acting as a de facto monopoly in order to force compliance with inflated prices. They would also be able to control the information that customers can see, which would be acting like any third-world dictatorship. Control the information is to control people's thoughts.
—Ken Puglisi, Cathedral City, CA

Cable companies already have an monopoly. My right to privacy is mine and mine alone. If these companies want to sell my info they should first give me the opportunity to sell my info to them. As far as renting set top boxes, I already own my own modem saving me $10.00 a month. Why should I not get a set top box to save another $10.00 or $20,00 a month. Do the right thing here as well as do it soon!!!!!!!
—John Blomeling, Wyoming, MI

We pay so much more for rather less, compared to other nations - not just cable television, but also, of course, internet service. Lets start here, and continue to lower rates charged by service providers - who are in the eyes of consumers laughing all the way to the bank.
—Robert Breeden, Philadelphia, PA

Please return the FCC to working for We The People, and again place the corrupting special interest lobbies back in second place.
—Philip J Dennany, Indianapolis, IN

My information is MINE. If Comcast profits from it, then they should be required to pay me for it.
—Bruce Hlodnicki, INDIANAPOLIS, IN

Private information is neversellable
—Peter Reum, Billings, MT

We definitely don't want our private info given away and need our cable bill lowered.
—Geraldine Thompson, SAN JOSE, CA

This is the stuff that makes Americans distrust government. We all know Comcast has a monopoly on cable in this country and price- gouges all of us, yet congress does nothing as usual.
—Jenna LaPlante, San Francisco, CA

A data and cable connection today is to consumers what phone number portability was to telecom customers in the late 1990-early 2000. We should not be subject to restrictive policies and captive device rental fees just because an already oligopolistic industry feels like it and can.
—Matthew Friedman, Lenexa, KS

If we CAN pay less for cable-TV, we should!
—Jason Schulman, New York, NY

Cable companies should not be allowed to have monopoly power over the type of set-top box consumers; they should also not be allowed to violate their customers' privacy. Please press forward with the two strong proposals on the table in spite of the howling lobby of the cable companies.
—Donald Chambless, Montgomery, AL

Big cable cannot be allowed to lord it over their customers.
—Gregory Robinson, Bicknell, IN

You should protect the people not large company profits
—Tim Parker, Puyallup, WA

Because I spend hundreds of dollars a month in cable tv. I could use a little savings.
—Yoav Getzler, Valley Village, CA

I'm tired of BIG business dictating what everyone should do. You work for the citizens & not just the companies.
—Robert Swab, Dayton, OH

Are you protecting the industry or the citizen/consumer?
—Joseph Ross, West Chicago, IL

It is due!
—Edward Haggard, Midlothian, IL

The Right to Privacy is a constitutional principle that is very important to me and to the freedoms we all cherish.
—Harry Squires, Redondo Beach, CA

Spam is becoming a serious obstacle to communication. Selling private information generates spam. Individuals need more control over their own information.
—Paul V Torek, Ann Arbor, MI

The costs does not justify the service cable and satellite companies provide us.
—Richard Eng, Hancock, NY

No business entity should have exclusive access to equipment nor should corporations be able to sell or share any personal information that is required to receive their products or services without their explicit customer "written" consent. That doesn't mean it is buried in some legalize agreement slanted to favor the company/corporation but a simple, clear, and concise authorization hand signed granting consent to use their information. Consumers should be able to purchase their own equipment as long as it meets industry standards for the service being purchased or paid for month to month. As a Comcast customer, I am appalled that Comcast or any other company can essentially lock customers into paying many times over for a device that could be bought and paid for in full and outright. As for privacy of information, comsumer privacy should trump or overrule any corporate gain especially in the digital age and the climate of hacking that has so permeated corporate and governmental America.
—Mr. William D Wilson Jr, Lawrenceville, GA

It's in the constitution
—Sheila Willens, los angeles, CA

We retired people are not getting any interest since the crash so our incomes are about half of what they were in 07. Cable prices are too high for us. Please lower them and regulate this industry.
—Alice Jacques, Phoenix, AZ

Please protect my privacy and give me the option to supply my own equipment.
—Alan Dieringer, Bethesda, MD

It is obvious that there have been too many mergers and policies that support the top of the economic ladder at the expense of the average person. It time to make Life in the U.S. fair to everyone.
—Fred T, Reno, NV

Because no one should have to pay for the company's expenses!
—Patricia Farrington, Syracuse, NY

I'd like to know my privacy is protected, and my checkbook would like to know my cable bill will go down!
—Stephanie D Jackel, Vista, CA

Please stop Comcast from selling the personal information of their subscribers, and ending the monopoly of the monthly fees. In my youth, the FCC was responsible for protecting the rights of our citizenry! And, you have the chance to protect these rights once again! Please act as the responsible advocate you are intended to be!!!!
—Susan Bernard, Los Angeles, CA

I pay $171.00 for cable, phone and internet. I will be cancelling this because I am now retired and this doesn't fit in my budget. It just keeps increasing all the time.
—Nancy R. Neilsen, Louisville, TN

This is so important to me because. I beseech you to do the right thing and vote in favor of helping the people before helping corporate America. Thank you
—Randall Hughes, Alameda, CA

Our modern democracy runs on free, equal access to the internet. We need privacy, low equal rates and open access to information to participate in the economy and the political process. Canle rates are too high to gurantee equal access, and our information is stolen and sold while we don't benefit from it. It seems the cable companies and internet advertisers want it both ways. That's not right. Please help us stop it.
—J Hester, Los Gatos, CA

I don't want internetbobo's decide what I am allowed to read
—Hans Potters, ,

It is time for the FCC to address and pass the rules to stop the Comcast merger and to end the settop cable box monopoly. DO YOUR JOB!
—Daniel E Freese, Plymouth, MN

It is time something must be done to reign in the ever increasing cost of our TV bill.
—Grace Neff, ALBANY, OR

I don't care one bit about the cost of a cable bill because I do not & will not ever get cable or satellite service. HOWEVER, I DO care about privacy & what the corporate entities are trying to slide through. I've said it before & I'll say it again - you are "poking the bear" if you really think that you can control the internet. Once you start flexing your supposed strength with the internet, the hackers & darknet WILL strike back hard. And considering how much the government, airlines, banks, etc. depend on computers, you will, by your actions, bring on the end of your empire. Just some advice.
—Michael Lauren DeSarbe, Keosauqua, IA

I never voted for corporate rule, but of course corporations don't lobby me and lavish gifts upon me. Put people at the heart of our democracy and begin making us a real democracy not an oligarchy.
—Mr. Michael Carnap, Tallmadge, OH

Few things are more precious than our privacy -- that special right that allows us to decide what we want to share and with whom. That right should never be for sale!
—Kent Graham, Moore, OK

I'm retired and on social security.
—William T. Hassig, Mount Prospect, IL

Help the public!!
—Karen Christian, Vail, AZ

I'm tired of being abused and ripped off by monopoly cable companies like Comcast (in my area).
—Duane Mantick, West Lafayette, IN

I do not support my private info being sold by Comcast and I am tired of paying an exhorbitant amount for the box on top of my TV.....Comcast needs to be stopped.
—Charlotte Bradley, Chicago, IL

you are making it unaffordable for the poor, seniors and families who can't afford cable. It is unfair think about YOUR families
—Deborah Bates Drake, Maspeth, NY

I recently switched cable companies for better internet access. The new company does not support cable cards. My computer and tuner card are useless. While I would rather have the improved internet access, I should have to choose between the two.
—R Dwayne Ramey, Nolensville, TN

Cable bills skyrocket while seniors and disabled, like myself, have little other entertainment and contact available to us. I believe that this is due largely to the apparently ungoverned, large monopolistic mergers which have become the rule, rather than the exception, in our society lately. We must end this practice of rubber stamping the mergers of large corporations, which then control such a large portion of product availability. In virtually every case, the consumer loses out.on privacy, on cost of product, and on service quality. Please get mergers and monopolistic practices out of our communications industries!
—Betty J. Van Wicklen, Watervliet, NY

Fairness, that is all any consumer would want from any company.
—Cuxan Valladares, Los Angeles, CA

It's my data, not Comcast's.
—Nina Wouk, 1259 El Camino Real #215 Menlo Park, CA

This is a test for all the great lovers of free trade. If they believe in free trade, then end the monopoly on set-top boxes. If they believe in monopoly for their influence-buying friends in the cable business, then they should have the integrity to own up.
—Mike Dorcey, Emporia, KS

Just do it already. Either you're all talk and no action, or you actually give one about the future of technology. Stop letting big cable tell you how to do things.
—William Randolph Pearce, Beaverdam, VA

Monopolies are not free enterprise. Period.
—Fran Grabenhofer, Addison, IL

Our privacy should not be for sale by our ISPs.
—Tim A, Arvada, CO

FCC supposed to represent the public's interest, not corporate lobbyists.
—Ms. Maureen A. Griswold, San Jose, CA

I am a long time customer who is on the verge of opting out of cable due to high prices. I just can't afford it. Help!
—Kathleen E. Dorce, Pasadena, CA

Keep public interests your priority!
—Althea Harris, Longmont, CO

Don't let corporations take over the internet. It belongs to the American people.
—Kim McDonald, Marysville, WA

Privacy should be written into all internet transactions. The monopolies given to cable companies have lead to constant price increases without the competition needed to keep prices competitive.
—Darrell Noel, New York, NY

Internet is a valuable public utility, it needs to be affordable.
—Ljubica Sefer-Stefancic, New York, NY

Fairness. Setting reasonable limits on what a large powerful company can do to the public it's supposed to be serving. Squeezing every single dollar it can from people it believes have no recourse. I want to believe that they can't get away with it.
—Patricia Gragg, Bellevue, WA

It's important because the information is mine and should be kept private.
—Jacqueline Olmeda, New York, NY

I want my privacy protected and a lower cable TV bill.
—Emily Willoughby, Tukwila, WA

I cannot think of a single good reason why you would allow a company to profit off selling their customers' private information. Honestly, what possible reason could you have? And as for cable bills, well, I'm sick of paying for hundreds of channels we don't watch, in order to be able to watch the half dozen channels we do. These companies are cramming their pockets with our money and giving us less and less of any value. Please do something.
—Marlena Machol, Glendale, AZ

telecoms want to control everything as a monopoly should. BREAK THEM UP!
—Michael Boshears, crestline, CA

stop the monopolies!
—Scott Erickson, Omaha, NE

Our cable bills are ridiculous. There are few alternatives. We have one cable provider and if we find their rates to expensive we have little or no alternatives.
—Mr. Dave Zachar, Queensbury, NY

Cable TV companies are taking advantage of the people. Help us. Thanks
—Rex W. Sanders, Phenix City, AL

I have "cut the cable". But at times (like the Olympics) it creates viewing limitations. This is one of the MOST important issues of our times. Protect citizens' right to privacy and eliminate the outrageous fees cable-TV companies charge! Please!
—Katherine Miller, San Diego, CA

This is very very simple,people can not afford the higher rates
—Shaukat M Basit, Brooklyn, NY

I don't know how it is that anyone in Washington D.C. hasn't yet gotten the message that Americans are sick and tired of the political games everyone there insists on playing rather than doing the work the American public pays you to do. Stop playing political games and stop stalling meaningful reform with unrelated topics. Really, please stop with the nonsense. I want the FCC to protect my privacy and they clearly can do that if they would get on with approving the proposed policy that does just that. And i want my cable bill to be as low as it reasonably can be and the proposal to end the monopoly on the set-top box that I'm forced to rent each moth would help a lot. Both these proposals are excellent and both are just sitting there waiting while political games are being played instead. It is time for the FCC to stand up to the lobbyists and pull the plug on the corrupt political games. Stick to the subject, do your job and move both these proposals forward today. i want the FCC to protect my privacy and to lower my cable bill TODAY.
—Chloe Fessler, Missoula, MT

I don't understand why the FCC is struggling to decide whether to protect consumers or given to the big telecom companies. Comcast should NOT be allowed to sell our private information.
—Lynna Dhanani, New Haven, CT

Regulatory agencies need to regulate for the public good. If they don't, then they have no place in a democracy.
—Eric West, Port Orange, FL

It's time to break-up the cable monopoly.
—Lana Harrison, Newark, DE

We need the "little guy" not just those larger guys.
—Margaret Osbakken, Belvidere, IL

this is important to everyone, to personal choice, and to privacy
—Gerson Debbie Lesser M.D., Bronx, NY

Do this now, you morons!
—Herman Stanford, Poplarville, MS

Are we human beings to the FCC and to Comcast, or animals for slaughter in a factory farm? Comcast will not treat anyone with the respect and dignity the Constitution promotes... You, the FCC must defend us.
—Dan Johnson, Lansing, MI

privacy is the foundation of democracy...one such example is in the voting booth
—Larry Steele, ,

Please protect my privacy. Comcast doesn't have the right to sell my info!
—Wendy Pfile, San Jose, CA

Privacy is paramount in this day and age. Cable companies holding it ransom is indefensible.
—Mr. Bill Merikallio, Aptos, CA

I would really like my privacy protected. There are enough ways to have it hacked, I don't want Comcast giving my information away. Please act and protect
—Marilynn Baldwin, Aberdeen, MD

No robber barons! In any part of the economy!!
—Kim Whitmyre, long beach, CA

You mission should be to support the citizens of this country not those that feed political campaigns with a small portion of there ill gotten gains
—Gary Bechthold, Roseville, CA

Cable has betrayed its mandate. A lower cost is the least you can do to start.
—Tim Harrington, Weston, FL

Once again, Americans need to see Federal regulators working on our behalf, and not looking to line their own pockets when they leave government service for a lucrative industry job.
—Peggy Kenny, Palo Alto, CA

I agree that is time to prptect consumer information and that set top equipment should be optional for consumers to use their own equipment. Part of the famous AT&T settlement in the 1980s allowed customers to buy their own telephones. Shouldn't we be given the same opportunity.
—Paul Lossau, Westchester, IL

I do not think that it is kosher for someone to sell my private information. Honestly, how low can you get! And the cables use this charge to make more money at our expense. This charge should be done away with.
—Wanda Daugherty, Mesquite, TX

To level the power between users and providers.
—Joseph Long, Madison, WI

I'm on a fixed income and need internet and phone service, as my cellphone doesn't properly work in my area.
—Scott Norman Rosenthal, Philadelphia, PA

they already charge for the service. The service requires equipment to operate, so should be included in the service price. tired of being ripped off.
—James Maszczak, Pomona, CA

American citizens are not just markets for giant corporations. We are people. We are voters.
—Dan Parillo, Clifton, NJ

Please follow thru to secure citizens privacy & help low income citizens to have internet/cable access. In many areas of our country, people have to make the choice of food or media. Thank you.
—Sondra Olson, Beaver Dam, WI

The idea that one needs to pester, incessantly poke and prod the regulatory entities that are supposed represent their interests to do just that is both frustrating and ridiculous to me. However since that is the case, I am choosing to taking part of what must be done by giving my support on this particular issue.
—Carlos Hudson-Bey, Cleveland, OH

We need our privacy. Everyone is worried about Government intrusion, I'm more worried about corporations and private entities selling our privat information. It's just not rite.
—Carol Woodruff, Boonton, NJ

I cannot get television without cable or satellite dish, but I am tired of paying for mostly advertisements. I do not think that $150 per month is reasonable for me to pay.
—Claudia Gaisford, Cambria, CA

Consumers like myself care very much about our privacy. You must follow through on standing with us and not mega corporations like Comcast. Lets work together on lowering cable-TV bills and end monthly set-top rental fees.
—Matthew Jerauld, Binghamton, NY

fixed income and disabled.....
—Joanne Earl, Mannsville, NY

Comcast just raised my rate $20 and there's nothing I can do about it!
—Joanne Hunter, Quincy, MA

I had to cut my cable because I couldn't afford it but there are no other options where I live. I rent and am low income. I can't get most channels over the air due to poor reception.
—Kathy Watkins, Cambridge, MA

This is just like the phone company when it USED to be the ONLY place to RENT a phone... No DIfference. Also, PRIVACY is important in the age of all this Identity Theft.
—Jay Silverman, Boca Raton, FL

do I really have to explain to the FCC why this is important. As it is we have no choices in our cable companies and we are all over charged!. At least give us the opportunity to save some money by not having to pay for a box for each TV! I got rid of cable in protest.
—Lisa Rufo, Sarasota, FL

We are forced to give our personal information, like our SSN, to Comcast. When we complain that it's extremely bad to add those to another company's database, and let so many employees potentially have access to them, we are told that the system is setup that way for good reasons and that they are very careful. We have to release other personal information to Comcast, the type that an identity thief wants. IF Comcast is careful and has zero dishonest people able to access the information, it's USELESS IF they are permitted to sell ANY of it.
—Deborah Cunningham, Baltimore, MD

Why should Comcast have a monopoly on the set-top boxes. I don't really trust Comcast to set reasonable prices on the boxes. Why can't this be competitive? Also, I do not want Comcast to sell my private information. Why should they be given that benefit at my expense. Please do not allow that.
—Bob Skinner, Novato, CA

Let freedom ring!
—Anne L Pierce, Haiku, HI

We need open markets.
—Jeff Stookey, Portland, OR

You are morally obligated to keep my information private. We are retirees who are not affluent. My husband retired from the US Navy. After that we both taught school. Anything that can lower our bills would be helpful.
—Priscilla Kinnick, Stillwater, OK

Beside the obvious reasons of lowered costs to consumers, stand up and prove you are not controlled by lobbyists!
—Carolyn C Martin, Litchfield, CT

Protecting my information is very important to me. I hate wasting my time deleting emails that have no relevance to me or my life.
—Erica Wendel-Oglesby, Placitas, NM

This is important to me as I am a single working person. I want my privacy protected; I want my cable bill lowered. I want the FCC to work for and protect the consumers rather than the big companies.
—Sharon J Smith, Evansville, IN

There is little or no competition in the cable industry and I strongly believe that it's about time we got it. The prices are so high I've had to scale back my service or not be able to pay for it at all. Please help.
—Richard Gentile, Massapequa Park, NY

EVERYTHING IS GOING UP ==PLEASE HELP ME AND PROTECT MY RELAXING MIND RELAXER !!
—Saundra Crowell, Smithtown, NY

no accountability, no credibility,I boycott the terrorists mouthpiece!!!
—Gene Webb, Bodfish, CA

This is important because we, as a capitalist society, should be striving for pro-consumer ideals. We should not allow corporate lobbyists to facilitate the monopolization of technologies.
—Spencer Spiegelman, ,

Because it's the right thing to do
—James Boissonnault, Alexandria, VA

I am sick and tired of our corporate controlled government.
—Nancy Woolley, Stoughton, MA

How do I hate Comcast? Oh, let me count the ways. America has become no more than a clearinghouse for greed. Seniors like me, who've worked their entire lifetimes in engaging, intelligent and worthwhile industries are very often not paid in a commensurate manner. I am forced to pay for Comcast, even though I don't want it or need it. I have been doing very well with a cell phone, thanks. I want access to the internet for the information that is offered, but little else. Movies? Pffftt. Game shows? Feh.
—Taylor Teegarden, Martinez, CA

It's important to have affordable and private access. We look to you as having the integrity to work on behalf of the people first... not the Corporations.
—Lee Sanford, Burnsville, MN

internet should be a utility and not a service, as everything is done virtually these days.
—Tom Mills, SALT LAKE CITY, UT

If you let cable companies push you around I'll cry :(
—Hagi Elghahuagi, Calgary,

I've been ripped off for years, when do I get a brake! Whom works for the public. My first complaint to my congressmen. I was paying $60 a month and now its $240. Thanks for nothing.
—John R. Storms, Auburn, MA

No mega mergers! Time Warner is already bad enough solo!
—Jim Corriere, Brawley, CA

First you seem to just LET the internet providers buy other internet providers and become a BIGGER and more powerful internet provider that can a LOT more to get more profits and a greater power to just do what they want even if it is NOT for the interests of their customers. Also YOU seem to want to just LET our LIAR-in-CHIEF get his GRUBBY HANDS on the security of the internet and then can SENSOR what people enter onto the internet that he does NOT LIKE.
—Donald Mccormick, Fairview, OR

I am concerned about privacy (No more Windows 10!) and it is pathetic that Comcast stoops so low to sell customers private information.Something needs done about it NOW!
—Keith Smith, Bulan, KY

My Comcast bill is over $100 a month and I have no alternatives. They also pester you about billing constantly.
—nora lapin, San Francisco, CA

The FCC needs to do the right thing and not sell informatuon. This is obviously a scam for cable companies to make more money, and at our expense.
—Tom Steinmetz, Brecksville, OH

For too many Americans cable is the only way they can access the internet which is no longer a luxury but necessity.
—Carole Plourde, Amesbury, MA

I'm stuck in a monopoly that leverages arbitrary data caps at unrealisticly low levels, hedging their customers who have no other option for broadband. The cost are outrageous just for the connection, let alone the additional cost resulting from the data caps. You need to step in and fix these issues.
—Joseph Testerman, Conowingo, MD

I hate Comcast!!!
—Billy Angus, Hamilton, MT

Cable companies are out of control. Worst customer service on the planet.
—Peggy Alt, Philmont, NY

Companies like Comcast will continue to suck all they can out of the public until someone with authority has the common sense and courage to say no to them. Please say no, now.
—John Gunn, Coronado, CA

PRIVACY
—MICHELE wn DA SANDERSON, Walnut Creek, CA

Dear Chairman Wheeler The FCC is an agency that supports the greater good not the interests of the few. PLEASE ACT ACCORDINGLY
—Ralph Dale Long, Eureka Springs, AR

I don't yet have cable because I CAN'T AFFORD IT.
—Sherrill Futrell, Davis, CA

Keep the Net Neutrality alive.
—Joshua Arnejo, ,

Pleases protect our privacy and lower our cable bill.
—Susan Selbin, Albuquerque, NM

I'm an 80 year old single man. I am struggling to survive on social security on a $ 914 per month benefit! Affording cable is becoming beyond my reach, and the bills continue to increase, as the service gets worse! Something needs to be done to rein in crooked business practices by corporations like Comcast!
—Joseph Spiezio, Clearlake, CA

Just like the phone companies, big cable needs to be restricted to providing service not hardware. This will allow end users more control over their costs and open the hardware to improved capability.
—Dave Newman, Brea, CA

Cable and Satellite providers keep gouging consumers by increasing rates while removing channels like C-Span3, Al Jazeera America, FreeSpeechTV and other channels serving the public interest substituting reality tv shows that only the lowest IQ individuals could ever want to watch.
—Robert Scott, Mesa, AZ

Protect all US Human Citizens from prices which have become way to high for far to many citizen's to afford.
—Caroline Miller, St Petersburg, FL

Personal privacy has never been so important as it is today and it seems every day a new way to invade it is invented. I feel no vendor should have the right to sell the personal information of its customers without their consent.
—Matthew W Gebarski, MADISON, WI

You are a government agency, and should be acting for the people.
—Richard Pasichnyk, Eugene, OR

It is important that my privacy is protected. Cable bills are too high for most people.
—Diana Brunswig-Bosso, Arnold, MO

Please continue to fight for us!
—Darren Curl, Castle Rock, CO

Because cable needs to be more competitive with other viewing options, not less competitive. Higher cable and satellite prices will drive consumers away from these viewing options. Lowering cable prices keeps screen viewing competitive. Competition is the key to the survival of the industry, regardless of political opinion or affiliations. It's about consumer interest and choice, which is the priority of this matter.
—Lorna Immel, Otley, IA

Extortion is illegal.
—Ken Box, Austin, TX

How about giving the little guy a break once in a while. Oh,that's not the way things are done on the elitist beltway.
—mike Streber, De Forest, WI

We already pay huge amounts and then they charge more for the boxes and that should be stopped
—Nancy Bates, Lakeland, FL

Please stop Comcast from selling my private information without my consent, and to lower my cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on the set-top boxes I am forced to rent each month. Thank you for your help in these matters.
—Patrick Fox, Lake Mary, FL

My cable television is my window to the information I need on a daily basis, while living on disability. Yet, even while the cable companies profit margins are extremely high, they continue to stick us with increases that help to boost the salaries of their CEOs and other high ranking employees' pockets.
—Deborah Gostin, San Diego, CA

So tired or Comcast squeezing us for more and more money because they can. I have no other option where I am. Broadband internet and cable should be treated as a utility.
—Anne Griffin-Lewin, Minneapolis, MN

You work for the people and I fail to see how delaying action on these measures benefits those people. Please do your job.
—Gary M. Gibson, Sackets Harbor, NY

Tom, if you're going out anyway, go out with a bang and fix things for the PEOPLE! FUCK THE CORPORATIONS!
—Mr. Chris Calvert, Philadelphia, PA

This is important because the promise of lower cable rates was a complete lie and the Cable companies are gouging consumers threatening to slow down our internet access in order to generate higher revenues and disrespecting the concept of privacy. Imagine a cable bill of more than $125 per month for television? It's crap plain and simple.
—Mike Andrewjeski, San Francisco, CA

We need to have some competition. This is undemocratic . We used to have laws against this. Laws against monopoly.
—Ann Stockdale, Gig Harbor, WA

Some people go around quacking away about "free market capitalism", then do everything they can to stifle it.
—Mike Larkin, Schnecksville, PA

Privacy is essential in a free nation. And monopolies of any kind are destructive to free enterprise.
—e Kadera Kadera, Warrenville, IL

I Resent the idea of Comcast selling my private information without my consent. The concept of them making more money on my account is morally wrong. I also want to purchase my set-top box! A one time fair market fee is appropriate. I'm disgusted with the company and cannot understand why the FCC, allows this to continue. By the way, who do they represent and who are they supposed to represent?
—Sherry Price, Los Angeles, CA

Privacy is supposed to be guaranteed under the US Constitution - that little clause about warrants required for searches of one's "papers". Electronic communications are "papers" in this sense.
—Ed Paski, Blaine, WA

Seniors on fixed incomes can't keep paying high costs like this.
—Mike Gaddis, Highlands Ranch, CO

I am poor.
—Henry M., Hamilton, NJ

My privacy is not negated by the fact that I have purchased a service. The idea is absurd. I am paying for a service, not granting information access or rights for others profit.
—Laura st.Clai, Kerrville, TX

Forget cable: I don't watch TV and my wife is on the bird. But it is outrageous that the anti-government party is trying to govern with an iron fist, socializing costs and misery and privatizing profit.
—Scott A. Weir, Durham, NC

Because our privacy should be first and foremost of your goals to preserve and protect.
—James Dawson, Davis, CA

Break the monopoly and open up our cable to other hardware providers. And yes, my privacy is of utmost importance to me.
—David Paul, turlock, CA

Please protect our private and make our cable bill lower, Now. Isn't that what you would want?
—Judith Arnold, Shelbyville, KY

Comcast has a profit incentive to make sure that we cannot install our own modems in lieu of renting theirs. This is a vertical monopoly and should be illegal.
—Robert James, Fern Park, FL

I want the FCC to work on these rules.
—Aimee Polekoff, Lansdale, PA

I see the same issue with my ISP and their rental only modem to access the internet (ATT uverse) we should have the option to purchase not rent
—Allan Carroll, Lake City, FL

Democracy is dependent on a well informed public. Monopolies, in particular of the telecommunication industry, threaten the publics ability to stay informed.
—Gary Pierson, auburn, WA

The public deserves some kind of control over their internet. And as a utility, corporate control over equipment is no longer an option. Please chose a legacy of progression and give consumers their independence. Thank you!
—Vicki Barnes, Saint Paul, MN

Please don't let them win ! You helped us before, please don't stop now... Thank you, Mr Wheeler
—Lee Stafford, Bellevue, WA

I am a retired person living on Social Security. Please help me by reducing TV costs (also millions of others). Thanks
—Larry G Law, Everett, WA

Big Cable's anti-consumer/pro-monopoly campaign has got to be stopped. Now.
—Thom Fistner, Fountain Hill, PA

I am on a fixed income and cable bills are getting too expensive
—James Beckerson, ,

My cable service is slow and spotty. Despite complaints, there is no improvement is service. Competition is best
—James Ridlon Jr, New Woodstock, NY

What I think of Comcast isn't printable. Wish I had another choice, but I don't.
—Judith Gordon, Evans, GA

Please stop giving in to the inscrutable tactics of Washington government paid by big business special interests. Protect the rights of consumers and general public. Do what's right!
—Thomas McLaren, Fairview, PA

Simply stated? By rejecting true net neutrality, we are moving one step closer to a stratified society that will make the British class system look like amateur hour. Do the right thing!
—John Harkins, Old Greenwich, CT

Private data is private, I shouldn't have to jump through hoops to keep it that way. Also I shouldn't be forced to rent anything if I have the funds to buy it out right.
—Sean Hankins, Mc Gregor, TX

Injustice saturates the soil of this nation for the racists and the ruling class have distorted the narrative and the public dialog. It is fundamental if there is to be a future that that end. Net neutrality is but one essential for the free flow of dialog. As it is the public's airwaves, which private corporations profit from at no charge, must be re-regulated with a Fairness Doctrine. The damage done since its removal to maximize profits for the media owners may be irreparable but it is still worth the try.
—Dale Lehman, Chicago, IL

Selling customer's private info w/o their consent and also artificially high monopolistic prices on set boxes is wrong and unfair to the consumer. Please take action now to change these practices! Thank you.
—Thomas Fura, Queen Creek, AZ

I am sick of corporate GREED determining everything in our society. The FCC should be protecting consumers.
—K Penn, Clinton, WA

Please stop this appearance of cash-n-carry government and work to limit the power of big corps like Comcast These mega-corporations are a threat to democracy!
—David Atkin, Willington, CT

It would be more shameful to delay action on the bill for the benefit of big industry, than to act now for the benefit of the people!!
—Thomas Wahl, Collegeville, MN

Because I have two of those set-top boxes, get rid of the clutter.
—Nigel Thornell, Roseburg, OR

Lowering cable bills would be nice for me in a few years when I can't be so physically active. Couldn't afford it now anyway and don't see that possibility in the future. As for privacy, selling personal information without consent is simply unacceptable.
—Carol Ashley, Park Rapids, MN

Everyone must have fair and equal access to the internet.
—Patricia Always, Sun City, AZ

I'm so sick of all the spam I get on my phones, cell and email.
—Mrs. Donnasue Jacobi, san andreas, CA

This is important because this is our future. This is the opportunity for my children and yours to have a choice about where they spend their team and where they get their information. If action isn't taken I fear we won't have State Sponsored media outlets, instead well have the State refusing to Sponsor freedom of press.
—Timothy Holley, Vancouver, WA

You need to act - end the monopoly
—Samuel Durkin, Fairfield, CA

Selling (and profiting from) consumers' private information is against the fact that the information is PRIVATE and consumers should have a say in how it is used. Monopolies are virtually ALWAYS bad. This one surely is costing consumers EVERY MONTH. Please ACT on moving these measures forward. Thank you, Tom Knight
—Thomas E Knight, Hopkinton, MA

Private information should remain private, not sold for profit. Obviously consumers need choices of program viewing. Currently the customer doesn't necessarily have access to their favorite programs without including unwanted listings. Prices should be varied according to personal choice. Fees sneak in rising rather quickly. Cable bills should be reduced. Keep information confidential and charges at a reasonable stage.
—Joanne La Barre, Norfolk, NY

I need the safety and integrity of my privacy.
—Ron Schmidt, San Francisco, CA

Mr Rosenworcel, Sir take a step Back. Recall who you are, what you wanted as a young boy. You are in the playground being bullied and FEAR is all you have to lose. Step into that Fear and be the man you dreamed of being. "The only thing we have to fera is fear itself" Let these wise worfs guife you now. Step into Fear,take the TRUE path and move goteeard. We ate counting on you. Sincerely NickiLee Greenwalt
—NickiLee Greenwalt, st paul, MN

It should not even be a question as to whether or not Comcast should be allowed to sell customer data without consent. Any sensible person already realizes this is illegal. Also, allowing actual competition in which set top box you use is an important step in having actual competition in the cable TV industry. One day, we could even possibly have competition in service providers instead of regional monopolies.
—Benjamin Burden, Leitchfield, KY

We pay well over $100 so the low end of cable, without any premium channels; that is exorbitant, especially when many channels are nothing but advertising. The same company can provide the same service to new subscribers for less than half of what we are paying. That is disgusting.
—Elizabeth and Terrence S. McCloskey, LaPorte, IN

The cable industry controls almost all the communication I do. We need protection from it.
—LM the internet open. This is not Holmes, Honolulu, HI

Support the American People over greedy corporations! Protect our information and eliminate monopolies.
—Kathy Reimer, Los Angeles, CA

I like my privacy, and I like to save money.
—David Klinke, Airmont, NY

I'm tired of paying more and more to get less and less. Comcast is a virtual monopoly in this area, so it makes perfect sense that they should be carefully regulated as one. Tampering with user information and charging outrageous rental costs for their equipment may help to further enlarge their CEO compensation packages, but it really hurts those of us who are on a fixed income.
—George G. Stradtman Jr., Elkins Park, PA

Do your job, don't buckle to industry pressure from Congress.
—Sandra Rasich, Santa Fe, NM

Set top boxes are just another form of bill padding for the cable companies. Congress has been doing almost anything they can to give the cable companies more control over individuals and other companies. Mostly by inaction but also by action. Lets open up the system and stop working toward a Ma Bell type of monopoly situation. Many of us in smaller communities have no viable options.
—Timothy K Boughner, Dodge City, KS

I feel that my privacy SHOULD NOT be "for sale to the highest bidder"!! I ALSO feel that consumers like ME should be able to decide WHICH Cable boxes & receivers I wish to use to access Cable!!!
—Dean Bodholdt, Storm Lake, IA

Monopolies stifle innovation. We the people shouldn’t have to worry that our private information will end up in the hands of bad actors in foreign nations and then we have to defend ourselves in front of bad actors in the US government.
—Joseph A. Mungai, Elgin, IL

Dear FCC: I am outrages about Comcast pressuring Wheeler to resign right after the election and stalling the renomination of Commissioner Jessica Rosenworcel. Please act protect my privacy & lower your cable bill TODAY.
—John P Mabey, Berkeley, CA

do it for the people. me, i don't have cable. i was once a comcast subscriber. my experience with comcast was so bad, i cancelled my cable, and vowed never to give them another penny. stand up to them.
—Mr. Dave McSPARRRAN, LOS ANGELES, CA

I hate the way Comcast forces me to pay exhorbitant amounts of money for television and Internet service. TV used to be free and no longer is--I cannot get a TV signal anymore without cable. And Internet is really more like a utility than a luxury. We need it to function in our society these days yet there is no competition where I live do we have no choice. Anything the Federal government can do do lessen the power of telecommunications giants like Comcast over consumers is a just use of government. Government should protect people rather than large corporations.
—Wendy Schon, Madison, CT

Because privacy is big, and neither the NSA (which of course you don't control) NOR private companies should have the rights to sell my information to the highest bidder. If I don't choose to seek them out and do business, then tough. They are welcome to advertise in traditional ways but my information is mine, I choose whether to give it.
—Chris Sims, Lenoir City, TN

I'm tired of renting something that I have already paid for many times over!
—Danny L. Ellsworth, San Diego, CA

Having access to Internet, cable, etc is mandatory now. Going back to a simple land line & broadcast tv is no longer an option.
—Elizabeth Roberts, Chicago, IL

I have a right to privacy.
—Joel V Fears Jr., Daytona Beach, FL

The privacy of law abiding citizens is a right, not a privilege.
—Adrian Rogers, Gawler South,

I think its pretty obvious.
—Todd Clay, York, PA

We are constantly reminding you of the need to not let the monopolies rule the roost. Unfortunately Congress doesn't listen to the people only to the monopoly. Please pass these policies before they stop you and thank you for watching out for us little guys.
—Jonathan Stone, Braintree, MA

Bust the monopolies!
—Nancy Norris, Bradenton, FL

Please, help consumers. Thank you.
—Carolyn Villanova, Pittsfield, MA

Our private information is the ultimate weapon for people with power and money to manipulate us. That is why it is important to protect our information. All of our private lives going into the wrong hands could hurt all of us and our social freedoms.
—Marissa Rivera, Bronx, NY

Comcast shouldn't be allowed to sell our private information to anyone ever. They are a big company that doesn't want to provide reasonable priced and fair services to customers. This monopoly must end and lower those cable-TV bills. Please act now, stop being indecisive and stand up to Comcast. Do your job and vote.
—April, Springfield, OR

PRIVACY IS A CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHT!!!
—Wallis Smith, ESPANOLA, NM

Please, protect us. Please. Thank you.
—Nancy Benua, Oakland, CA

No citizen who pays monthly for internet or cable service should have our private information given or sold to third party entities. Nor should any of us be paying these outrageous monthly fees; especially in 2016. The major cable and internet corporations make millions, as do their CEO's. Please help us put our Personal Information, viewing habits; aka privacy, And some money back in our own pockets. Thank you.
—Lisa York, Nashville, TN

Please help! Cable bill is too high.
—Allan Ashbeck, Marshfield, WI

The internet is part of the Commons and belongs to all of us. Let's manage it for future generations and curb the monopoly corporations that will continuously try to take it from us.
—dennis whitcomb, Blue Lake, CA

Do your damn job and get your tongue out of Comcast's ass.
—Mercedes R Lackey, CLAREMORE, OK

The best business investment should not be to buy elected and appointed government officials!
—Greg Koshak, Larsen, WI

Free markets and keep cost down for those of us on fixed incomes.
—Robert Cyrklis, Sandwich, MA

Out the blue my bill went from $112 to $176. Think what it does to the average American family, not senators, congress members or commissioners that make much more per month than the average American family $35.000/per year. Do something about it! Cable companies are stealing our monthly payment. Allow local governments to take charge of the Internet by making it a utility!
—Graciela Huth, Los Angeles, CA

Every month our Comcast cable/telephone bill goes up-- maybe just by pennies, but sometimes by a few dollars.
—Nancy Wagner, Bothell, WA

We do not have cable because of the outrageous prices, and all the hidden fees!!!!!!!!
—Tania J Malven, Tucson, AZ

Please don't allow Comcast or any of the other IP/cable company to sell our personal information to others without our consent. The only reason they have our personal information is because we were required to provide it in order to get cable, satellite or IP. That's what monopolies are allowed to do to us, because they own certain territories and no one else can offer the same services in their designated territory. In Europe and the UK there are no territories and customers have the ability to pick and choose the most cost effective and fastest service they want. Because of these monopolies, I can only get 450kb of service and have been told they will NEVER provide anything else for us. This is why competition and no monopolies are so important. Pricing and service would be much cheaper and better with competition. Set top boxes should not be monopolized our choices and the set top boxes we are forced to rent by the month, have not been changed since we were forced to give up our analog signals because digital was supposed to be so much better. Digital is not better and cannot go up and down and around like analog can. If we were going to be forced to accept digital, the law should have been written to make it mandatory that the signals went just as far as analog does so we could still have the choice of using our antennas to receive free TV. The set top boxes we rent are terrible, so don't continue to force them on us. Thank you for your kind consideration and please protect us.
—Joyce Hansen, Ferryville, WI

COMCAST IS TOO EXPENSIVE FOR THOSE OF US ON FIXED INCOMES BUT THERE IS NOT MUCH ELSE ON OFFER.
—S K Davis, Bristol, CT

The rights of millions of ordinary people to privacy for their personal information should take precedence over the desire of large corporations to make ever larger profits.

Cox is ripping me off!
—Laurie Tsitsivas, Dana Point, CA

The FCC has the power to stop the corporate abuse of consumers. Please use it...
—Rita Larkin, Allison, IL

If they won't pay me for my information, and their set top boxes are a ripoff, it's time to tell Comcast to quit abusing the public. We have a government to govern and prevent abuse by the powerful.
—J Mauldin, Decatur, GA

We are so sick of companies who want to run our life & our government! Our government is supported by the taxpayers not big business! It's time " we the people have their say"! These companies are making billions & putting people out to dry! Every year they put the boxes up ! These boxes have been paid off for years! Everything is going THUR the roof! It's time , we get the protection we paid our agenies for! Do UR job , for if you do not the younger generation will be left with nothing!
—Joan PJ Paul & sullivan, Ventura, CA

It costs too much!
—Steven Hibshman, Foster City, CA

Our private information is just that, private. Nothing should be sold without our consent. Monopolies need to be stopped, to bring down the cable bills. Stop the greed. Thank you.
—Camilla Bowman, Lebanon, IN

The cable+legacy telco duopoly has proven disastrous - it is time to give customers more choice and give them a bit of freedom. Many thanks!
—Mihai Maties, Durham, NC

Cutting costs sounds a lot better than the death of a thousand cuts. Stop the bleeding now.
—Jeffrey Cody, Chicago, IL

I want the internet to be regulated like a public utility and not have to tolerate manipulations via corporations that are endlessly greedy .
—Karen Lozow, Indianapolis, IN

Dear FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler and Commissioners: I urge you to stand up to the cable industry and protect the consumer. Stop Comcast from selling private information without my explicit permission, and stop allowing cable companies to have a monopoly on my set-top box, causing my bill to be higher than it needs to be. Thank you, Alicelia Warren 2122 Bridgeport Way W University Place WA 98466-4824
—Alicelia Warren, University Place, WA

PROTECTING OUR PRIVACY AND LOWERING OUR CABLE BILL TODAY IS THE RIGHT, FAIR, JUST, HUMANE AND HEALTHY ACTION TO TAKE, NOW.
—Mr. Mary Frank Ann and Graffagnino, TUCSON, AZ

1)I'm on a fixed income and Comcast keeps raising rates. Have reduced to most basic of service, but without competition Comcast prices will price me out of access to the internet or basic TV. 2) About a year ago my email was hacked. I am very cautious about personal information. When companies like Comcast sell personal information chances of identity theft grow expotentially. Please require Comcast to behave responsibly with customer personal information.
—KA Trinkle, Rockford, IL

What Comcast is doing is just wrong. Please do the right thing for consumers.
—Cara Chapman, MARIETTA, GA

Our constitution guarantees us the right not to be subjected to unreasonable search and seizure. The seizure of personal information by government or corporate organization should require a warrant issued for cause according to law.
—Paul Bakeman Jr., Shelburne, VT

Because I am an American citizen I have a right to privacy and to freedom from government sanctioned private monopolies. Read about the constitution and the American Revolution!
—Robert C Quick, Medford, NJ

Protect my privacy and lower my cable bill. Today!
—Barbara A Bondurant, La Verne, CA

Monopolies kill free enterprise. Please stand up for freedom of choice and a level playing field.
—Marie DesJardin, Westminster, CO

It's just ridiculous how they gouge more and more.
—DB Pope, Varnville, SC

I'm sick and tired of my government kissing corporate cable's combined butts. Stand up for the people not corporate greed.
—Roy B Tansill, Corpus Christi, TX

It is probably in the big ISPs' best interest that you help keep consumer costs down. Otherwise many more consumers will do what we (and others) have done: cancel cable TV service and use other devices to get most of what we want at a one-time cost.
—Stephen Vandivere, Centreville, VA

The cable companies are raking in money with both hands. They get our monthly fees, and then they get more revenue from the companies who run the commercials.
—Beth Jane Freeman, Wantagh, NY

Please try looking out for the 99% of us rather than the 1%. Thanks
—Maureen M. O'Connell, Danville, IL

I don't want someone to profit from my personal information, especially when they already have a monopoly on services.

The FCC is supposed to support and protect CONSUMERS, you know THE CITIZENS, from corporations! So your job!! I want to pay less for cable. More importantly, I want my information to remain private. No corporation, no business, no person should be allowed to share anything of mine without my WRITTEN consent!
—Patricia Araujo, Burlington, VT

Tired of a monopoly's over pricing and bad customer service.
—Robert Beggs, Akron, OH

Cable companies take advantage of their monopoly status to ignore customers needs and do whatever they want to. They know that their customers have now where else to go. Please protect cable customers rights.
—Theo B. Giesy, Norfolk, VA

I pay $73.98 for around a quarter of download speed promised & advertised. They informed me personally (as a matter of policy) the advertised speed was "simply was not available" to me but they refused to consider lowering our cost just because they don't have to. Tough luck. "Sue us." We pay the same cost others pay for full download speeds and get a quarter! This is in your face fraud and has got to change. They lied in advertising and lied about thier right to charge for services not rendered. We have no other competition..only game in town. Just exactly what is it that the FCC does? Is it not your job to ensure competition and lower costs? Apparently we pay the FCC to do exactly what our cable internet provider does...charging us for service we do not get. Is it just because you can?
—Nancy Currah, Casper, WY

Stop playing games and enforce the rules that protect us consumers who are paying ever-increasing prices for substandard services!
—Ms. Carol Ortiz, Montgomery, TX

Enforce the rules!!! And apply these rules to everybody, No one should be able to split hairs on the specifics. FCC rules have been in existence since 1934 and worked fine when enforced. So if a new rule is needed, then old rule will no longer apply and should be disposed of completely. If the FCC enforce thoses as well as you have in the past then I vote to leave them just as they are. Personally I believe they haven't enforced past rules efficiently enough to warrant any new variation of them. My take is we all wouldn't be where we are right now if those rules were stringently enforced when they should have been not after the fact like they have been. EAS has been abusing rules set forth for years and nothing has ever been done about them, NSA or no NSA! Rules are rules!!! I've been bombarded by at minimum 7 test broadcasts a month, the rules refer to a least 4 are permitted when no emergency exists. That's all I going to say on this.

Comcast should not sell peoples private information without their consent, and break up the monopoly they have on those who are forced to support them in order to have entertainment. I know how aggravating that is. I have been forced to use Verizon since I moved to Helendale, CA, for landline phone and DSL. The cost is outrageous compared to ATT prices in my last location 6 years ago.

It's outrageous that the Head of the FCC Can Not do Their Job. Kind of like the Republican'ts in Our Congress. Comcast has been Gouging their customers for Far to Long. Why hasn't this Corruption & Abuse been Investigated and Hold those Greedy CEO's Responsible. Why does Comcast , AT& T, Verizon get away with Not paying Their Taxes But are Allowed to Overcharge & Abuse Their Customers. Why are these Companies getting Special Favors. Cable companies have a virtual monopoly in the areas that they cover and the equipment needed to receive the signals. This creates autocratic "fiefdoms" that suck the money from the pockets of millions of Americans. AND Comcast uses your data to create a further revenue source for themselves WITHOUT asking or telling you about their schemes.
—Sarah Bellem, Felton, CA

Because the FCC should be about helping consumers, protecting our rights instead kowtowing to the Congressional whores for the cable industry who are not looking out for consumers & how Jessica Rosenworcel leaving instead of Tom Wheeler?
—L Parker, Everett, WA

1 - It's high time for regulating agencies, like the FCC, to step up and defend the consumer-public you are supposed to represent. Corporate trafficking of personal information is rampant. Only agencies like yours have the power to safeguard our privacy. 2 - The archaic equipment-monopoly wielded by cable providers is nothing more than a replay of the stranglehold once enjoyed by the phone cartels. Like "Ma Bell," it's time to bust up the Big Cable's cabal. It is YOUR DUTY (NOT your prerogative) to defend the interests of the public (NOT Big Cable) on both these issues. Only cowardice would motivate any attempt to "run out the clock" on the current administration, to avoid your duty. Only cowardice would explain inaction.

The internet is the greatest invention in human history, a fount of--and the very sum of all--knowledge. More than anything else, it has the power to promote compassion, end strife, and raise the standard of living for everyone. As such, restricting access through price gouging is at best extortion, and at worst outright class warfare against those most desperately in need of education and empowerment; preventing them from "pulling one up by their bootstraps", as the saying goes. Reselling private information the company itself has no right to should not even bear elucidation in its condemnation.

I can no longer afford cable. Eliminating the monthly charges for set-top boxes would lower my bill and perhaps allow me to reinstate my cable service. I would prefer to own my own cable box and not be charged additional monthly fees (these boxes were originally free, but Comcast later decided to charge for them). The cable companies are taking advantage of consumers and that should not be allowed.

Comcast is not worthy of the power it is attempting to consolidate - not by virtue of "service", or "value", or any other metric. It is effectively a monopoly, and a big, slow, maddeningly incompetent, high-handed and GREEDY one, at that. At every turn the company makes moves that are designed to disempower, frustrate and cheat its customers. (What is more, along with Time-Warner Cable, I see Comcast, through its own respective cable news organ, as largely responsible for having raised Donald Trump to invincibility in the Republican nomination contest, as well as deliberately having interfered in the counterpart process within the Democratic Party.) In short, the company is a monster, like a too-big-to-fail bank, and needs to be cut down to size. In the very near future, we as a nation will either, with the aid of powerfully liberating technological innovations, be embarking on a new phase of public discourse and participatory democracy that will spark desperately needed changes in our own country and the whole world, or, having been denied the liberty to act that is nearly in our grasp, we will find ourselves sinking into a dark night of Oligarchy that will stymie the people's noblest efforts to effect solutions to the massive economic, social and environmental problems now besetting us all. I fervently believe that your decision in the present matter could impinge mightily on the direction that we and the rest of the world will take. I do not believe at all that I am overstating the matter. Please: Rise to meet your destiny; make the mark on history that you'll be proud to have made.

—James K Hadcroft, N. Falmouth, MA

Because I believe that America, while it is doing an absolutely wretched job of it, truly was founded on the principles of equality, freedom, and justice. What Comcast and companies like it are doing spits on all three of those. Equality is thrown out the window by the disgusting, grosse overreach of a corporation, which shows quite clearly that those who are not inherently wealthy have no choice and no voice because Comcast and other corporations simply have more money and therefore more clout. Freedom is absolutely decimated when consumers have no say so in where their private information is going or in how badly they're being price gouged because in many areas, Comcast has monopolize the cable-TV market. And finally, the right to privacy is so inherent in our constitutional laws that even law enforcement agencies must have a warrant before searching your home. It is so inherent that psychologists are allowed to withhold information about patients, even ones who are budding sex offenders, rapists, and murderers, so long as that patient doesn't state or strongly imply they're going to commit a crime. Doctors do not even have to provide information to a SPOUSE, child, parent, or sibling if a patient has asked them not to or (in all cases but the spouse), has not consented to have them given information in the first place. So why is it acceptable for big corporations to pass around sensitive information about their clients, exchanging it as if it were THEIR currency for them to play and bargain with, with no repercussions? It is unacceptable and it needs to stop. I want a country where people matter more than money. It's thay simple.

I have a website offering private piano and voice lessons. That is the only way I earn my living. I am 68 years old. Please don't make it harder for me to earn my living.
—Carol Kuzdenyi, Pacific Grove, CA

you had allowed monopolies and we are the ones paying the prices. the companies have colluded on where there will be more than one company and where their won't. Get this crap under control. You work for us, not the corporations.
—Charles Grammer, Burlington, VT

I live in an area with only one cable option; Comcast.Their monopoly isn't fitting for the 21st Century.
—Valli Hamilton, Oak Bluffs, MA

Comcast is one of the worst companies I have ever dealt with in my life. Constantly raising prices, luring me to sign a contract with them and then they change what their offering in the contract and I have no say. We shouldn't have to sign contracts with them to get lower bills. And the bills are only lower temporarily. The price increases after a few months. Comcast is run by a bunch of con men.
—Kathy Magne, Saint Paul, MN

As a Comcast cable customer in Minneapolis I know how poor Comcast's service often is and on that basis alone I would NOT entrust Comcast with my personal data —Karl Meller, Minneapolis, MN

Privacy is important.
—Vanessa Gonzalez-Green, Towson, MD

The monopolies and lack of choice for consumers is limited to the options provided by cable companies. Now I n the days of Internet streaming, the improvement of access and choice without excessive rates and limitations to access by consumers is imperative.
—Scott Madsen, Los Angeles, CA

I have rights that determine what the Government is allowed to say about me; why do I not have those same rights wrt to Businessmen? Why do we, in a Capitalist country, tolerate these monopolists? These "spoilers" have lost every case so far, so why are they allowed to simply refile the same old arguments over and over again? ARE THEY PAYING YOU?
—Marcus White, Albuquerque, NM

With everything thing sky rocking in prices. We the people need to stand firm to hold on to our rights.
—Wendy Snyder, Taneytown, MD

Addressing the monopoly of cable companies and their sale of private information is a necessity.
—Elizabeth SP, Rochester, NY

Get off your rear and do the right thing. We're all tired of the abuse and corporate greed that continues to expand year after year. Who's side are you on?
—Mike B, Roswell, GA

A free society demands free and private communication!
—Fouad Hafiz, Burnaby, NJ

Why are they selling our information anyway? I fell that if they can sell off my information than I should be able to sell off the equipment I have paid for of theirs.
—Melvin taylor, Sacramento, CA

My information is mine alone, not a commodity to be sold to companies or scammers. If I want to share it I will at my discretion.
—Rodney Whisenhunt, ROSEBURG, OR

Simplicity of rules, no covered gathering and selling of personal information.
—Kestas, ,

Like most people these days, I am dependent on the internet for every sort of activity and interaction. Privacy is essential. And renting the cable box! Pure cyber-highway robbery!
—Ms. Maryam Lowen, New York, NY

Because our cable bundle bills are so high (over a hundred a month) we're constantly changing companies when our contract is up and someone else is offering a better price. Which doesn't last long. Please take action to lower those bills and keep our information private!
—Marsha McCroden, Fairview Park, OH

It is important to me as I am disabled, have very limited income and deserve to afford some entertainment without being nickel and dimed to death. When is enough?
—Debbie Hall, Baker City, OR

Every American deserves equal access. Let's catch up w the rest of the world
—Tanya Alsberg, Kennebunk, ME

I feel abused this company needs to stop holding us hostage.
—Michael Tomassetti Jr., Tooele, UT

I'm tired of being controlled by the mobilization of once again something that was once affordable, but now overly charged & forced upon us.
—Denyce, Arlington, SD

With health insurance costing us mmore than twice our house payment with 5 acres of land, it would be nice to save a couple dollars somewhere to help us afford insurance. Between me and my wife, our health insurance will be over $1,000 per month besides our out of pocket expense for co-pays and prescriptions. You guys are killing us by letting everyone overcharge us. It's just pure greed run amuck.
—Dale Wynn, Westmoreland, TN

My privacy is important to me and because I use Comcast for not only e-mail and cablevision but also as my internet service provider, the potential for Comcast to abuse my privacy is far too large. Please stand up to Comcast and protect American consumers' privacy!
—Mrs. Randy Russell, Fremont, CA

No cable company, and especially the unaccountable corporate giant Comcast, should be given the green light to sell subscribers' private information without their consent. I need you to protect me from this company's efforts to legally extort people's private information, and to stop their monopoly of the cable industry. Further delay is not acceptable -- pease get this done promptly.
—Sigrid Asmus, Seattle, WA

I want to be sure that FCC people are hired to work for us the public,not the people who own the businesses
—Elaine Leach, Nisswa, MN

Private information about Comcast's customers should not be transformed into public information without the consent of individual customers. The no-choice set-top box rental monopoly should end - customer choice should rule here.
—John Gittins, North Brookfield, MA

How is it even a question that Comcast should be able to sell my private information without my permission? Because I subscribe to their service am I to understand that they own my privacy? That is ridiculous! Only a corrupt system could even imagine thinking this is OK. I reject this premise. Comcast has NO RIGHT to sell my private information. And the FCC should make certain that they don't do it. The FCC should pass immediately Chairman Wheeler's proposal that stops Comcast and others from selling customers' private information without their consent. Stop stalling and stop playing games. Pass this resolution today! The FCC has already heard from tens of thousands of citizens that we want strong pro-consumer, common-sense policies. Citizens have made that abundantly clear over these past couple years. Yet Republicans in Congress keep trying to derail progress and protections and keep trying to make the FCC ineffective. The FCC must take a stand and not lose site of their purpose for existence and act only in the public's best interest. Surely protecting individual's privacy should be at the top of the list. I'd also like to urge the FCC to adopt the resolution to end the monopoly on set-top boxes. There are better models available than what the cable companies force us to rent from them and there is absolutely no justification for the monopoly and the price-fixing. End the monopoly and allow competition for consumer choices in set-top boxes. We will not only get better set-top boxes, but we will also see our cable bills get less expensive. Please end the unnecessary monopoly now.
—Becky Cox, Missoula, MT

Monopolies are bad for democracy.
—Heidi Ausbrooks, Las Cruces, NM

Public Interest must come first and both privacy and pricing are extremely important.
—Laura Miner, New York, NY

Comcast has been taking advantage of consumers for years. It sells services and then alters the value of such services while consistently increasing prices. To now allow them to sell our private information in pursuit of proftis is unacceptable.
—Darlene E Ruiz, Sacramento, CA

FCC - put people ahead of politics and profit!
—Sharon Levine, Simi Valley, CA

Cable rates are too high!
—David Ziegler, Chicago, IL

I am past sick and tired of being economically screwed over by both Comcast and AT&T.
—Drew Lindhoff, Lilburn, GA

I pay $57.00 for 15Mbps D/L And 2.00Mbps. That is too much $$ for too little.
—Sharon Meyerson, Scottsdale, AZ

Please keep my private information private. Cable bills are ridiculously high & every 6 months they go up. Please help lower my bill by eliminating my having to rent a set top box for each TV in my house from my cable company.
—Ken Stacey, Hudson, MA

I am retired on a fixed income. I have had no cola for two years now. Prices are going up on food, phone, utilities, home taxes, you name it. I am a disabled Vet so I don't have medical expense except for a few things but I am drowning with all the new expenses. I have to pay more for medicare (which I don't need). I have to pay 72.00 for cable which I am thinking of dropping this year. My phone bill is 62.00, utilities are going up. Gas is down but I don't drive much. It costs $100.00 every time a plumber comes to your house. They wanted 200.00 to mow my lawn the other day, so I refused. I am mowing it at 66yrs old. Everyone sends you e-mails so you can send them money (money to expand social security, money because the system is now money driven not vote driven). I am going to have to go back to work or not have any entertainment in the house. I like to stay informed about politics, but I guess I can use the internet as long as it stays free (Thank You Chairman Wheeler!!!) That is one thing I was glad to see passed! Please help the working and retired being squeezed by the neck by higher prices and stagnent wages. As a woman, I did not get a high a salary as a man, I have less social security. I am still paying my mtg and have bills. Credit cards can charge 24% interest (should be illegal as usury) and we will never get out of our student debt. Congress is not doing it's job, greed has taken over. Due to citizen's united and gerrymandering, they could care less about our vote, they are in safe districts. So screw us! Please help us, we shouldn't have to pay close to 100 a month for cable. Most of the channels they offer, I don't watch, we can't pick just he one's we want. Believe it or not, I am paying 72.00 for the starter plan. The cheapest plan they have. Television used to be free, it still should be free. They have hijacked the system. Thank you for considering my side, I hope you listen to your conscience as you did when you sided with us on the internet. Thank You!
—Marie Fuentes, Albuquerque, NM

Please stand up for and adopt Chairman Wheeler's proposals to (1) stop Comcast from selling users' private information and (2) Insist on ending Comcast's monopoly on set-top boxes for Cable-TV so that our cable bills will be reduced. It would be such a great day if you took action to support the public interest rather than big corporations. The quality of our democracy hangs in the balance when it comes to communication. Please move forward on Chairman Wheeler's proposals. Time is of the essence because the Obama administration ends in less than six months.
—Michael Michael Adler, Seattle, WA

Stop Comcast from sellling our private information, and enable competition. Comcast's internet service is now just terrible and at the same time very expensive! HELP
—Margaret Sweeny, San Ramon, CA

I don't subscribe to cable - and vile services like Comcast are exactly why. Plus everything on cable is a waste of time, imo.
—Judith Parker, Saint Paul, MN

A healthy democracy and strong privacy rights go hand in hand. Fear that privacy may be violated will limit people's ability to seek and exchange information.
—Nejib Belbahi, Miami, FL

I've been working in tech for nearly 30 years, and have been on the internet since the mid 80's. It is now part of the fabric of our modern lives - a delivery device for communications, entertainment, work, health, and safety. We need to assure it is not used against us, or held hostage for a price. It can make or break your ability to earn a living, save a life, keep communications available to everyone regardless of circumstance or ability to pay. Please keep the connections available to all. It's really that important.
—Susan Norton, Salem, OH

This is a time of unprecedented abuse of the system. Large and incumbent cable companies are not only not competing - but making record profits and allowing paid infrastructure to rot. In this "information era", to allow such crucial parts of the infrastructure of this country crumble is indicative of their motive. These companies are neither stewards of the people, nor of the nation as a whole - they need to be regulated.
—Travis Palmer, Hudsonville, MI

We are people, not commodities. We have a right to privacy, we are not hostages to fortune.
—Nanette Graboski, Seymour, CT

Equal access for all.
—Timothy I. Miller, Rock Island, IL

This will establish a precedent and move in direction that is good for consumers, for privacy and fairness, through the industry everywhere.
—Jacob Fehr, Fort St. John,

Shouldn't our representatives represent US? Is this still the Republic by the people, for the people? Or, is it by the highest bidder?
—Julie S Viergutz, Cleveland, OH

The cost of cable is outrageous. There should be competition for customers just like any other business. Monopolies are bad for the consumer.
—Carol Bontempo, Jefferson City, MO

F"C"C - If social "Communication" isn't 100% honest, it turns into social manipulation. Only attempting at 100% honesty can keep societies viable.
—Hal B. Anthony, Grants Pass, OR

I am a TV consumer; I value my privacy.
—Nick Burns, Park City, UT

Internet service providers would have mountains of revealing personal information if they're allowed to collect and sell all the web sites we visit, which could be sold or hacked to the detriment of subscribers.
—Jeremy Monat, Burke, VA

STOP LETTING THESE CORPORATE GIANTS RAPE AND PLUNDER OUR MONEY! CABLE AND INTERNET IS A TOTAL RIP OFF AND GETTING WORSE!
—Paul Shabazian, Granada Hills, CA

Is the market free or isn't it? If it is, then we should be able to purchase the set top box of our choice and use it with any cable provider.
—Reba B., GAINESVILLE, FL

Do what is right for human kind.
—Mr. Jeff Zimarik, Phelan, CA

Do your job; protect the consumer!
—William C. Webb, Buffalo, NY

It's the right thing to do. Please protect the privacy and rights of American people and stop the price-gouging. Thank you!
—Lillian Wilkinson, Porter Ranch, CA

The telephone monopoly was broken up, the people deserve no less for cable and satellite.
—Sherrylee Felger, Port Orford, OR

Lower prices are always a good thing, plus you need to stop Comcast at all costs.
—Jeneen Haines, Eustis, FL

Corporate monopolies are destroying America, the American dream and the Planet. We need to reverse the maleficent Plutocracy and save the human race. Communication and public benefit should be the primary goal of the Commons. Profit should be restricted and competition encouraged.
—Larry McLean, Mooresville, NC

My private information does not belong to the cable company to sell. I pay them to provide me a service. Selling me out is not part of the deal.
—Mark Reuter, Oxnard, CA

There is a monopoly on cable internet access in my community. Please help by doing whatever you can to regulate them so that everyone has equal, affordable access to the internet.
—Christie Childs, Eureka, CA

The FCC needs to stand for the public interest, end monopolies where it can, and be a clear stronghold against unfair practices that are a detriment to the people.
—Sunday D Leopard, Rosamond, CA

Time-Warner / Charter charges way too much for service that is marginal at best —gary Griffin, Elmira, NY

Cable prices keep rising and my fixed income is small —Judith Larson, Minneapolis, MN

I am retied and can no longer afford cable.
—Dale McCart, Irvine, CA

My information belongs to no one but Me And my cable bill is so High I am considering dropping it. Thanks for listening —Lee Becker, Lindsborg, KS

are you protecting the industry of the public that pays you?
—Kevin Moore, irondale, AL

Fewer options for consumers concerns me because they will have us over a barrel, and we will be hostages to paying whatever they bloody well decide to charge. We will have little to no choice! PLEASE DON'T ALLOW IT!
—T H. Fernandez, Burbank, CA

I think it is important to stop monopolies and encourage competition for the good of the consumer, and I think it is outrageous that an ISP would try to extort money in order to protect us from their abuse.
—Paul Klissner, Eugene, OR

I do not use cable TV but I am still in favor of these measures.
—Robn Diekow, Sequim, WA

Having had personal experience of just how greedy and unsupportive Comcast is with it's customers (victims?), I humbly ask that the FCC NOT BOW DOWN to bullying from sleezebags like this. This "great nation" needs to stop selling out it's citizen's basic needs to support exploitation for profit PERIOD. Didn't we have to learn to behave at some point in our lives, or did we just go on misbehaving till there was no one left that we had not screwed over? Hmmmmmm
—Gary Di Donato, Olympia, WA

while technology improved, set-top boxes have not. In that same vein, economies of scale for cable companies are not sufficiently passing the savings on down to to the consumer. In-fact, we are bumped into higher internet speeds and then charged for the 'privilege.'
—Matthew Aaron Foster, fpo, AZ

No company should be permitted to monopolize an industry. No utility company should PROFIT from offering up our PRIVATE information.
—Teresa Montilio, Jamaica Plain, MA

I am a Comcast subscriber, and my rates for below-basic economy cable just went up AGAIN. It's time to stop the monopoly!
—James Knoble, Bainbridge Island, WA

Comcast should have no right to artificially boost its revenue streams by exploiting its customers instead of long-term investment.
—Matthew Kuzava, Takoma Park, MD

Make this happen so that the consumer is protected against unfair corporate greed.
—Mark Buck, Lebanon, NH

I live in an area where digital over the air television (DTV) leaves me with only ONE channel and the station doesn't broadcast news, community or emergency information like weather. The price of cable is making it easy to go without and many of the elderly in my neighborhood will go without it due to the sheer economics. It's time to cut the monopoly nonsense and make these utilities affordable for more than the rich!
—Robert Martin, Seymour, CT

Are you going to let Comcast be a monopoly?? They are now poised to take over tim Warner cable my company now and my bill is already to high, WTF are you going to do?? Remember MA BELL???? You scumbags stopped that years ago but now you let these bastards do to the public anything they want and you allow it!!!!!! Stop the monopolies now!!! We will just not watch the flipping tv then not a problem!!! Then what will the scumbags do when no one wants their tv bullshit????
—Dee Noblett, Mechanicville, NY

Please support the individual citizen over the corporation and lobbyists.
—Marcia Kane, Hendersonvile, NC

So much for efficiency in government. I guess those who get donations from the cable industry consider the cable industry as more important than the average user. Already paying for the service but they still want to pimp out the personal information to increase their profits. I guess this version of corporate usery is to be defended against the rights of people who have already paid for the service.
—Sheila Newtown, DePeyster, NY

Comcast is a monopoly in most markets and is ripping off customers. If you're not going to nationalize what ought to be a public utility, then at least you should regulate it so that it actually serves the public interest, instead of being a parasite sucking money from citizens while corrupting our democracy.
—William R. Singer, Portland, OR

Privacy is a human right. And affordable access to communications--which today means the Internet--is crucial to the health of our democracy and economy.
—John Clay, Minneapolis, MN

For what I pay each month for the set top box, I could have bought one 50 times over. I also think it is horrible to sacrifice personal information just to get service. It feels like extortion since we all need an internet connection these days.
—Valerie Clark, Needham, MA

If I have to explain why monopolies are bad...
—Meghan Coffee, Vienna, VA

Access to information is crucial to all of us. Keeping it affordable is your job. Utilizing it is ours. Do your job and I'll do mine.
—Virginia Brown-Nolan, Silver Spring, MD

I am a retired 78 year old depending on Social Security which did not get an increase this year. I can not afford higher TV bills. I watch a lot of TV because I am on oxygen 24 hours a day with a lung problem called IPF. I never smoked and yet I got a lung problem that will kill me in a short time.
—Dennis Radcliff, Osceola, WI

Please protect the American public from unfair business practices. Protect my privacy (business should not be allowed to sell my personal data -- that's my right). Please help lower my cable bill which is very expensive; it costs over $1,200 per year.
—Christy Fusco, Richeyville, PA

Comcast keeps coming up with new charges to add to our bills, but there isn't another choice of provider in most areas. We are now charged for sports channel we never watch, have a broadcast channel fee, and various other fees. Their updated equipment can track us even more closely, which helps in selling our private information. Please put a stop to these infringements on our rights.
—Rita Horton, Lake Wales, FL

It is a really important issue that affects the whole country and its economy (not just the cable providers)
—Michel LEBAS, Seattle, WA

Big corporations should have less influence on our lives, and they must not be allowed to gouge us for what have become virtual necessities today.
—Archie Palmer, Caldwell, NJ

The public is counting on you. Please do the right thing - protect the public!
—Maria Gerber, Catskill, NY

How do you continue to allow a monopoly like this? The FCC is supposed to work for the good of the general public, not the good of corporations. They have zero incentive to make cable boxes that work, even in an age where the technology is possible. Why would they? You can't get something better. And they can charge whatever they want because there ia no competition. Do what's right for consumers and pass both bills today! Sean W. Michel
—Sean W Michel, Sunnyvale, CA

Your actions and inactions are being remembered, as well as being a matter of public record. We are all on it together.
—Sam Inabinet, Virginia Beach, VA

It's bad enough for our private info. to be rummaged through, but outrageous that such access is sold. Both must be stopped.
—Diane Steen-H., Mpls., MN

Tell the FCC to protect my privacy and lower my cable bill!
—R Terrell, Litchfield, IL

We need competition, innovation and openness for a fair, level market. Please finish what you started, and protect our rights and save us some money!
—Beefert Gore Jr, Newark, NY

I'm tired of supporting corporations that just want more of my money while restricting my freedoms. Our private information is not for sale, we are required to give it but that does not make it a commodity for the receiver.
—Allan Young, Novato, CA

Monopolies are bad! Free competition is good! Can't you just do your job without us people having to sign petitions, take out ads, send email, post on facebook? It's ridiculous....You embarrass America.
—Jeffrey Abshear, Fairhope, AL

I had two set-top boxes and recently returned one to lower the monthly bill...I'm on a fixed income.. The price of food and essentials continue to climb. We (I) need the FCC protect my privacy and lower the cable bill for all consumers.
—Timmie Reilly, New York, NY

I am a senior citizen on a fixed income and Comcast has an annual habit of increasing my bill and decreasing my service.
—Chris Croke, Baltimore, MD

My cable bill is the biggest bill I pay every month. Over $250/month. There is virtually no competition in our area, and every year or less there is a small increase in the cost of my cable service.
—, Tallahassee, FL

I'm tired of paying monthly for rental on a desktop box when I should be able to purchase one on my own. No doubt with the fees I've had to pay, I've paid for the box many times over. Also Comcast should not be able to sell your private information.
—Leslie Calambro, Henrico, VA

I'm the next one to cut the cord and find another way to get TV, Internet, renewable energy, and whatever else I need.
—Kent Mollohan, helena, MT

Privacy and budget rank highly in consumer priorities.
—Jill Johnston, Vader, WA

Do you duty. Protect our right to our public communication routes no matter what their form, Guy Liston
—Guy M. Liston, Anchorag5, AK

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Eric Greenius, Campbell River,

Consumers need protection from the big guys who want to sell us to the highest bidder and steal our privacy!
—Richard F. McGrain Jr., Charlottesville, VA

I am tired of being soaked by my cable company and of companies selling my private information without my consent. Stand up with FreePress for us on these matters.
—Dinah L. Bahlman, Phoenix, AZ

Please pass your two proposals that will protect my privacy and lower my obscenely high cable bill. Please don't let the threats from our Comcast owned congress stop you and your commissioners from fighting for these proposals. Stop Comcast from selling my personal information without my consent. My personal information is mine and shouldn't be for sale. Please end Comcast's monopoly on set-top boxes I am forced to pay for each month. I should be able to buy a set-box and not pay a monthly fee. The fees add up to thousands of dollars over time. I hate Comcast.
—, Elk Grove Village, IL

Our cable bill is almost as great as our food bill per month. We need more competition, not less!!!
—Susan Spengler, Palatine, IL

Our cable bill is almost as great as our food bill per month. We need more competition, not less!!!

—Randal James, Bloomingdale, OH

It just is.
—Steven Kostis, New York, NY

I pay $25 a month in my cable bill just to rent set top boxes. Please allow these devices to be purchased on the open electronics markets so we can lower our too high cable bills!
—Lucille Scotti, Marquette, MI

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Kent Bridges, Weston, WI

We have plenty of proof that monopoly tactics don't work for the rest of us and ComCast continues to prove this. You have the power to protect us--if you act now, as time is of the essence.. Please act to protect citizens' privacy and fair competition that should be ours by right.
—Marilyn Deraney, Norwalk, CT

Stop letting cable companies write the rules.
—Deborah Cate, Philadelphia, PA

protect your privacy and lower your cable bill TODAY

Cheaper prices and unrestricted Internet is absolutely and fundimentally a consumer right. Business should NOT control the Internet for their own profit!
—Bob Hudson, ,

If Comcast is allowed to sell our private information to increase their profits, what's to stop them from doing other, worse things? Our privacy is important to us, and we don't want to be at the mercy of a huge corporation who doesn't care about anyone but their own bottom line!
—Bonnie Jacobson, Reno, NV

I'm living on Social Security and broke all the time.
—Julia M. Faber, Denver, CO

Comcast already has WAY too much power and money as the YUGE monopoly it has become. It needs to be reined in! Don't wait! Do it NOW!

Privacy and anti-monopoly - both American values
—Peter F Brazitis, Hansville, WA

Please! We need the help more than the cable company wealth extraction.
—Chris Grimley, North Wales, PA

I've been forced to rent a set-top box that I never use. That sucks. Also, my information should be mine to control, not a cable company's to sell.
—Adrianne Middleton, Boulder, CO

People's privacy matters - and cable company's have a monopoly and we will live with that. Please protect our right to own our own privacy!
—Brenda Cross, Lake Oswego, OR

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent
—Joseph Clemonts Junior, Woodbury, GA

I don't even have Comcast, but the monopoly has to stop. No one's private information should ever be up for sale.
—Tracy W, Howell, MI

I want my privacy protected. I do not give permission to Comcast to sell information on me. Please uphold this most basic right.
—Gale Simplicio, Morgantown, WV

Please unlock the box. I would like to develop apps and install other video apps on it. It is so restrictive and clunky. It belongs in the 90s it should have never made it into 2016.
—Ryan Pinto, Winchester, MA

Please do not allow corruption to rule.
—Frank L. Hill, North Hollywood, CA

We pay much higher rates for cable than consumers in other countries. Several channels are often pixelated or unavailable. This is what monopolies bring. I absolutely oppose selling my private information under any circumstance. Big Brother Be Gone.
—Teresa Blakely, Columbus, OH

My cable bills are constantly growing, even after I have signed up, and for no apparent reason. You either pay what they ask, or stop service. If you stop service you get a huge bill for stopping prior to some date they do not even mention before you start service.
—Donald Albertson, Bothell, WA

It is enough! Lower our bills today!
—Mary Mobley, Live Oak, FL

The cost of cable usage is really becoming ridiculous
—Shadoe Drury, Connellsville, PA

We are tired of psychopaths and greedy elite in charge of a system that is set up to deprive people of freedom. We are tired of people in positions of power who got there because they will play along with a fascist agenda. We are tired of corporations usurping our rights. So, stop making rules that assume we do not know what you are doing. We do know what you are doing, what your agenda is, and we aren't playing along, and never will.
—Victoria Parks, Worthington, OH

I am tired of paying such high cable bills. If something doesn't happen to help us consumers I will cancel by service with comcast.
—Jan Suttkus, Atlanta, GA

I already cut my service with comcast because of the high bills. I will not sign up again unless something is done to protect us consumers.

—D G Mason Jr, Sarasota, FL

Protect the public, not the dishonest greedy cable companies!
—Robert Toxen, Duluth, GA

Cable companies have too tight a grip on internet service and overcharge their customers as a result. Please put an end to this situation and also act to ensure the privacy of American citizens by prohibiting the sale of our personal invormation.
—Joan Parrish, Santa Cruz, CA

No one should profit from my info without my release, and set top boxes should be available to purchase from anywhere.
—Robert Hord, Fort Lauderdale, FL

Please protect the consumers -- not the greedy cable companies trying to monetize us wherever possible.
—Gary Behrendt, Manhasset, NY

Comcast has enjoyed their lucrative monopoly for far too long. Put an end to the beurocratic bull
—Michael Lautner, Dewitt, MI

I do not want my private information shared to whomever. Monopolys abate competition. Without competition only the largest corporation succeeds forcing consumers to pay to high a price. There needs to be reasonable pricing for consumers. The only reason I have a "box" is that I'm forced to have it to supposedly lower my internet bill. Consumers need choices and should not be forced into throwing money away for services & or products they don't need.
—Elizabeth Crumm, Campell, CA

I disconnected because Comcast wanted too much for too little. Why pay for 100 channels i will never watch
—James McIntosh, Ann Arbor, MI

We are a nation of people, not corporations. Our government of, by, and FOR us, not them. Since Comcast and others like them have been allowed to become so large and monopolistic that they are immune to public pressure, it is up to you to act in our best interest.
—Richard Yarnell, Beavercreek, OR

As a Veteran married to a Disabled American Veteran and as a retirees, we don't need cable services to continue to increase.
—Michelle Roberson, Augusta, GA

Why are cable companies allowed to have monopolies? I thought that was against the rules. Are we not following the rules anymore? Where I live there is one cable company. You use them for your broadband Internet service or you go without. So they charge whatever they want. The industry needs to be taken down a peg.
—Geoffrey Horn, Ardmore, OK

Because both things are right and just. Remember we should make decisions base on what is moral and this represents exactly that. This decision is very simple for me to make and also should be for you.Please vote for the people not for Comcast.
—Victor Martinez, Springfield, VA

FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler Honorable , Gentleman Please , Protect my privacy and lower my cable bill today. Thank you for your attent and the consideration with the US , Internet users. Sincerely, Maria Celia Hernandez 8-15-2016
—Maria Celia, Boston, MA

Why do these companies insist on ripping off the public? Please level the playing field and put a stop to the extortion the public suffers from at the hands of Comcast and their ilk.
—Sonia Wilson, Sacramento, CA

My internet is already expensive and not very reliable so, it goes without saying less expensive would be a help. As for my privacy... Another no brainer. My information should NOT be for sale, especially without my written permission.
—Matthew Van Brocklin, Harrisville, NY

When I bought cable services I didn't agree to become a commodity for the cable company with my personal information.
—Rob Shively, Casper, WY

My right to privacy is constitutionally guaranteed and my right to avoid price-gouging is legally guaranteed. Do the right thing and make sure I get what I'm a US citizen to have.
—Kimi Wei, Fair Lawn, NJ

We used to have FREE TV! This is nonsense paying these huge amounts of money if we want cable. Actually you've forced us to NEED cable. Get with it!
—Lynn Morris, Chicago, IL

A very good idea!
—Catherine Corwin, Santa Monica, CA

—Carlos Oropeza, Somerdale, NJ

since the switch to digital, expensive TV is my only option as I live inn an apartment building which doesn't allow dish service
—Veronica Alleyne, Rochester, NY

This is just common sense. Please put a stop to this by just taking care of this!
—Brian Dilts, Ardmore, PA

I want privacy and lower bills.
—Sue Christiansen, IOWA CITY, IA

Stop Comcast from selling my private information without my consent. End the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Jim Boden, Hartsville, SC

We need true, real competition. Across the board. Now.
—Nathan Stehle, Madison, WI

Comcast has grown too large as it is. Now they want to increase revenue by sharing our data? Or even worse, charging us to keep our data private? NO! Please keep these huge ISPs under control.
—Scott Severn, Londonderry, NH

I don't like being held hostage by a corporation to receive basic internet or phone service.
—Duran N Burby, Haverhill, MA

Much like the old Ma Bell, cable companies have a monopoly. I should be able to buy my own cable box and plug it into a line that I want to subscribe to. Until then, prices will never be competitive.
—Randy White, Washington, DC

The internet is the digital divide, and should be accessible by all.
—Desdemona Bandini, Austin, TX

My privacy is very important to me. Also cable bills have been steadily rising. The internet is a utility!
—Jackson, Vancouver, WA

We have a right to privacy, and to protection from monopolies.
—Michele Reese, Reading, PA

Please, for once, let's consider consumers (voters!) ahead of corporate profit.
—M Strachan Pindar, Boone, NC

I'm having to rent from AT&T a cable box that I can find online for much cheaper. It would lower my bill to remove this unnecessary step and would encourage competition.
—Brandon Owens, Northport, AL

You should do this because it is in the best interests of the American people and that is whose best interests you are supposed to be taking care of..
—Ashley Yonker, Kalamazoo, MI

Inaction is just like saying yes. If you want to be voted out of office, keep doing what you're doing.
—Renee Musicus, Parkville, MD

Please protect our privacy and lower our cable bill.
—Ramesh S. Sant, Roselle Park, NJ

We need to stop monopolies so that there is real choice in selecting products and services.
—Audley McIntosh, Lithonia, GA

My cable bill increased nearly $10 per month recently. That might not be much to someone who has a lucrative job with the FCC, but it's a lot for most Americans who don't see their income increasing enough to keep up with the gouging. It's ridiculous.
—Benita J. Campbell, Burgettstown, PA

My privacy is even more important today when it seems that every day reveals new hacking of personal information that was supposedly protected from access. I do not want my private information to become available without my express consent.
—K Nilsen, Ben Lomond, CA

Lowering my cable bill bill will help me save money so I can have more food in the house.
—Alan D. Jack, Kingsport, TN

Customer privacy is important!
—Ken Sexton, Salem, OR

The unreasonably high cost of cable is a bar to experience most media, except what is on public programming.
—Jacob Victoria, Sacramento, CA

I am on a fixed income as many other Americans. Please help hold prices down for us.
—Debbie M. Piatt, WEST LIBERTY, OH

This country is fast becoming an oligarchy. Monopolies seeking to control our food supply, communications, health and most other critical services seem to have carte blanche to dictate our lifestyles -- at whatever cost they choose. This needs to stop. Now.
—Ms. Nancy Van Iderstine, Van Nuys, CA

Government agencies should be serving the interests of the people and the consumer, NOT the corporations and the wealthy who seek to control the people. Government is put in place by the people, and they are expected to serve the people, period. Get off your butts and do the right thing.
—Eric Patterson, Dayton, OH

Modern life requires inexpensive internet like all European countries have !!
—R Vosari, Darien, CT

I like to watch TV, but now with time warner cable switching my favorite channels from analog to digital, I'd rather not have to pay a nonsensical rental box fee.
—Johnny Kopsi, Menominee, MI

It's getting so expensive I can hardly afford to pay my Cable(Television) bill.
—stuart Getz, Ogdensburg, NJ

Because the run away behavior of corporations affect me.
—Barbara Harrison, Lisle, NY

Government is by the people, for the people, NOT for business by business! The people have spoken and they want their privacy protected as well as their pocketbooks!!

They get you in, then keep on raising it, knowing your limited of where you can go, and that apply for Satellite also, and it's the same old programming from the 70s.
—Tom Farekian, Valley Center, CA

My cable bill is getting out of hand and as a senior any measure that you can take to cut this cost would really help.
—John Reagan, Port Sanilac, MI

the FCC is our voice please listen!
—Mary F Lasley, Ashland, OR

I enjoy keeping up with what is happening but it is getting so expensive I may have to revert to rabbit ears.
—Rita Bauknight, Lincolnton, NC

It doesn't appear that Comcast is going broke...common sense proposals should be supported by the fcc.
—Mary Bennett, Seattle, WA

Times are hard and life is paycheck to paycheck.
—Michael Ashworth, Charleston, WV

Lower My Cable Bill NOW!!!!!! Wnough is Enough Too Damm Expensive!!!!! The cable Companies are making too Much off the montly balance already!!!!!!!!!! It will help other people to lower their bills.
—Joshua Heffron, New York, NY

I have Charter it is a monopoly for phone tv and internet zone it become june 17 my bill eill go ey upp 65 dollars or more.
—Amy Starobin, Madison, WI

Fixed income and exorbitant prices.
—Keith Sopp, Ontonagon, MI

I'm sick and tired of corporate interests harming the public interest! Also tired of Republicans in Congress holding up appointments until they get their way. This is called the tyrrany of a minority. Obama was elected with 53% of the vote in 2012, but has not been able to get his agenda passed due to Republican obstructionism. We must stop them from being successful! This measure is important to me! I want my personal information to be secure. This measure gives too much power to cable companies!
—Maria Schafer, Granite Springs, NY

Have already paid over $2000 for my cable box. We should not have to "rent" these boxes.....
—Michele Walters, Depoe Bay, OR

Monopolies throughout history have never been good for anyone except the corporation. 99.99% of us suffer so that the CEO can be obscenely wealthy. That's not Constitutional.
—Linda Lee Andersson, Medina, WA

End the greed and sordid actions now.
—Michael C, Kennebunk, ME

We need to protect the PEOPLE and stop passing laws that favor Corporations over PEOPLE. Government needs to notice that not all of us can afford the high cost of phone service, internet service, cable service on top of the high cost of housing, food, medicine, education, etc. Our right to privacy is being destroyed by the rapid advance of technology which the laws are not keeping on top of at the sacrifice of our privacy, our economic stability. STOP letting the industries write the laws and putting in loopholes that sacrifice the public's well being in favor of further concentrating wealth. Congress needs to stop working for industry and start working for the citizens.
—Christina Wilgren, Bedford, MA

Cable companies have near monopolies on broadband and because of that, I don't really have a choice but to purchase their services. Because of that, I'm forced to pay whatever they want, and they are free to sell my information. I could not attain their services, but then I'd be out quality internet services. Please protect consumers like me.
—Ryan Trondsen, El Segundo, CA

The protection of our privacy and our wallets is essential.
—Danilo Yanich, Newark, DE

Stand up for me and the rest of the middle class!
—Mike Testa, Raleigh, NC

We are on a fixed income and since we cannot use an antenna we have to use cable. They do not give a Senior Discount. Please help!
—Ojenia Kala, San Antonio, TX

Do your job already and protect consumers
—Lana walling, Los Angeles, CA

It is important for me to safeguard my privacy.
—Adnan Zia, ,

This country is turning into George Orwell's "1984" and needs to stop immediately. We also need to curb corporate rip-offs of their customers, as well as eliminating off-shore tax "get-aways."
—David Zaccagnino, Brea, CA

Please protect consumers' privacy as well as from market strangulation by taking action now.
—Lee Heller, Summerland, CA

We need to work together to implement positive changes in FCC that benefit the privacy and rights of consumers. Lowered cable costs will also make high speed internet access accessable to more households.
—Robert T. Hedden, Trenton, NJ

This is critical as Comcast Business Practices continue to be preditory
—Jeffrey Brooks, San Jose, CA

DO THE RIGHT THING, PASS THIS NOW!
—Lynn Schwab, Black Hawk, CO

We need to assure and protect what little privacy we have left.
—Rickey Black, Indianapolis, IN

It shouldn't matter who the president is for the rights of all americans to be protected (including their personal information). That's what the commission is for, to act on behalf of "the people".
—Maria Blake, San Jose, CA

I trust that the citizens lobby in support of this petition would more than offset corporate self-interest, especially in light of cable being akin to, if not really, a public utility.
—hendrika umbanhowar, Rochester, MN

I'm a 100% Disabled Veteran on a fixed income. Any increase in my cable bill will just diminish my standard of living.
—Paul Dubey, Athol, MA

Effective monopolies should be well regulated.
—Peter Friedman, South Pasadenaw, CA

The cable companies have NO right to sell my private information.
—Gay E Crusius, Santa Clarita, CA

THERE ARE PEOPLE OUT THERE THAT GET MOST OF THEIR INFORMATION VIA TELEVISION. MAKE IT POSSIBLE SO THAT EVERYONE CAN HAVE THE OPPERTUNITY OF THE WEALTHYER AND HAVE ACCESS TO LOWER CABLE PRICES.
—Cesilia Negrete, Las Vegas, NV

As a senior citizen in a southern state, cable bills are getting more expensive and to be truly informed, one needs to hear all sides of issues. I do not want my privacy invaded by selling my info w/o my consent. Cable bills need to be lower.
—Judith Goldsmith, Charleston, SC

Living on a fixed income.....cable has become unaffordable! Will you help change that?!
—Smallbear Rich, Haverhill, MA

Privacy is a civil right.
—Sheila Smith, SALINAS, CA

I can remember when the airwaves were protected for the people as part of the commons.
—Sherry Willoughby, Portland, OR

Protect my privacy and lower my cable bill!
—Lynn Ziegler, Punta Gorda, FL

The greatest country in the world has expensive, slow, low-quality home Internet access. This is unacceptable! Taxpayers have given billions to expand Internet capabilities, but telcos pretend they're losing money on our investment. This cannot be allowed to continue.
—Kirk Strauser, Alameda, CA

We are tired of being at the mercy of the cable companies. And...we are tired of having to pay for channels that are in languages we don't even speak. We need to be able to pick our channels!!!!!
—Rob Johnson, El Cajon, CA

I'm retired on a fixed income. I need the info I get from cable (via phone and tv). I do not need incessant sales calls on my phone or at my door, nor the tons of marketing mail that I have to walk a block to pick up from my mail box. PLEASE stop this leak of my personal information so that I can retire in peace and quiet without sales people hounding me all day, 7-days-a-week! I know what I need and can find it without their "help".
—Mary Edwards, Woodland, CA

Pass the bill today!
—Dorothy D. McTiernan, Homestead, FL

Isn't it time to do things that benefit the people instead of monopolies? Isn't it at least part of your job to protect us from them?
—Michael McLeod, FAIRMONT, WV

PRIVACY
—Gregory David, St Louis Park, MN

I need lower cable bills, so I can do better for the United States.
—Mark Epstein, Long Beach, NY

We r retired & live on a fixed income
—Bob wolff, Spirit Lake, IA

We also need this because our internet access is one of the slower ones among developed nations and every day we are falling behind because of the obstructionist practices of companies like Comcast and AT&T. It is stunning when you return from Europe to see how poor in comparison internet and cellphone service is in the US. We are being hamstrung in the name of corporate excess profits in a way no other developed country will allow.
—Kim McCartney, Cloverdale, CA

Anytime we have monopolies the consumer looses. The equipment we are made to pay for are old technology and does not help the economy. Allowing consumers to select and pay a one time fee will bolster competition and improve technology.
—Lynda Cook, Santa Clarita, CA

The expense of access is ridiculous.
—Susan Passino, Salt Lake City, UT

We are giving away power to mega monopolies who care about the bottom line as their #1 priority not the people nor the service they are offering.
—Bekki tippens, Colrain, MA

I do.not.like to.be harassed by sales companies with promotion that contains.my personal information.
—Jose Miori, Pembroke pines, FL

It is not only important for protecting people's privacy and to lower the exorbitant prices, but for maintaining net neutrality and for preventing any more media mergers which are always front and center in a media conglomerates wish list.
—Blake Gergen, Everett, WA

I don't want my information being used to increase cable bill profits.
—Gerald Lorenz, Salem, OR

Cable, and cell phone service, in this country is too damned expensive, poorly serviced and slow.
—J B, Oakland, CA

Can't afford to pay for cable TV. I'm a disabled senior and you can't watch t.v. without cable. Stop letting these companies take advantage of citizens lives, especially the disabled and seniors...
—Mr. Can I Yes U Can, Bronx, NY

Please take care of this issue!!
—Mary Driscoll, Denver, CO

The free market and competition have always been friends to the American People and our economy. To deny us access to options in the entertainment industry is nothing more than monopoly building. Let businesses compete in the market: take away their ability to end-run competition by buying your votes.
—Raymond Duval, Galena, OH

Please do something to help consumers not just companies. At least once.
—David Richmond, Portland, OR

I am low-income, on disability, and mentally ill, and I've seen my cable bill go up. It would be nice to see it go down.
—Jon Yoder, Washington, DC

The cable companies require the boxes for their service to work. They want us to get their service and should not force us to pay for a box that they built as the only way to use their service. I don't have to pay monthly for my security companies keypad, which is also a necessity for the service to work.
—Bahram Kaminss, Fresh Meadows, NY

You have two proposals on your "desk". One bears on my right to privacy (what little is left), the other on what amounts to free enterprise. It seems anything but unreasonable to me to require the cable industry to actually ask me before selling my personal information to the highest bidder. It seems entirely "American" to me to allow anyone who can to provide hardware capable of functioning with the cable systems. Who knows, somebody might actually come up with a better mousetrap! And it certainly isn't going he hurt the price if there's at least some form of competition in the cable industry - heaven knows they've done everything they can to eliminate as much of it as possible! Please have the courage to stand up and do what's right for people! You've done it before. You can do it again if you chose to.
—Bede Willenbring, New Hope, MN

The FCC has been operating as a captured agency and a national disgrace. Protect our privacy by prohibiting the profiteering from personal information. End monopoly practices now!
—David Beebe, Petersburg, AK

Free and open communication is the backbone of a free society.
—Peter Everts, Rochester Hills, MI

I don't even get any foreplay from Comcast, just a hard screwing every month. I want the FCC to do its job, and stop playing lap-dog to the cable companies.
—Robert Sievert, BENTON HARBOR, MI

Allowing a monopoly in a free market economy is un-American. Please move forward on this decision.
—Cherie Braun, Raleigh, NC

We have a 2 year contract package for cable internet and phone and they raised it just three months after signing and still keep raising it . Ask them to credit the overcharges and they do nothing . Pay on time and they charge a late fee everytime . This has been going on for almost 20 months now . They won't make their wrong right and we are fed up . This is centurylink Direct tv and they all do the same from what I've seen blogged on the net . Also friends here with the same experience . Please hold them accountable . Make them credit our bills for the scam charges .
—Karen Tweed, Galesburg, IL

Protect my privacy and lower my cable bill!
—Judith Salzman, Tucson, AZ

Don't let Comcast sell information about me without my consent. Let's have some competition in cable-TV boxes.
—John Schwartz, Richford, NY

Please stop the cable companies from gouging customers. We need a break!
—Donna Kittrell, Manassas, VA

The internet is a major part of our lives now. To have people just selling private information would be like being spied on 24/7. Normally this isn't something anyone would accept. Even worse for cable TV to be able to essentially hold a monopoly and offer sub par services for high prices is something that shouldn't even be legal. Competition is supposed to be part of Economic growth.
—Nathan Compher, North East, MD

Please protect my information like you would protect your family. Thank you, Mario
—Mario de'Medici, Portland, OR

Please act to protect consumers!
—Ann Rushton, Sherman Oaks, CA

Both these bills are commons sense laws that will protect the rights of consumers. They will also curtail abusive practices for the sake of excess profit by cable operators. Comcast makes huge profits, a little less will not hurt them or their shareholders.
—Tom Hopkins, Milwaukie, OR

Prices for cable keep going up due to lack of competition. I just had a mid year increase of $13 for the first time and in January it will go up at least another $10, as it does every year. Senior citizens are getting priced out of viewing. Plus our private information should stay private and not be marketed to other companies.
—Lee Winslow, Flagstaff, AZ

Innovation has been pushed to the back of the priority list at cable companies and customers pay for that decision with their wallets and our infrastructure. Please help the economy, infrastructure, and customers by not allowing cable companies to sell private information without consent and end the set-top box monopoly by allowing customers to purchase the set-top box they want to use.
—Gary Ploski, Yorktown Heights, NY

As a Senior Citizen, cable costs beyond what I should have to pay...
—Ralph Guay, Helena, MT

Privacy is more or less sacrosanct. Cable bills are ridiculolus.
—Richard Rice, Eugene, OR

The FCC need to act in unison to protect my personal information and to protect the consumer from monopolies and over zealous calitolism. Cable companies have too much control over the consumer. Choice and fair pricing need to be fostered. The cable companies and the like need to earn thier income not be given a free ride. They are not to profit from selling my information. Consumer information is not a product. Consumers never sold their personal information as would and OEM. Therefore, Comcast and others should not be allowed to profit from the sale of such information. I have never received a check. No amount has ever been settled by me with any organization. I have, however, paid monies for these companies services. So this makes no sense that theses companies can sell my information. There is no fairness here. Only greed, profiteering
—Eugene E. Thompson Jr, Culver City, CA

The United States needs modern Internet service -- Comcast and the rest of the ISP cartel have already stolen so much money from the American People that they must be dismantled entirely.
—Robert Chase, Denver, CO

Being besieged by unsolicited phone calls and emails because the proponents have gotten my private information (including zip code) has been somewhat a nightmare. Please protect our privacy!! And put citizens before large companies. Thank you,
—Margaret Lyons, Palos Verdes Peninsula, CA

Cable bills are outrageous and it makes it very difficult on low income workers and retirees.
—Richard/Karen Ertle, Brighton, CO

I am on a fixed income, but I need my cable to work and for entertainment. I am being priced out of the market by the constant changes being made. And there is no reason to give out my private info to anyone without my permission.
—Catherine Killgore, Norman, OK

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on TV and Internet services!
—Mike, Minneapolis, MN

We have very little choices, and they don't seem to improve the service, it's like they are relying on outdated equipment. It is costing more and the service from all the companies is worse, with no one to turn to for help! It's only going to get worse. Help!!!
—Denise Leonard, Ypsilanti, MI

Both of these measures are necessary to maintain at least a minimum of democracy.
—Hedi Saraf, San Francisco, CA

Cable and Internet should both be Public Utilties just the same as telephone and television were. And our right to privacy should be preserved. There are some things that should not be swept away in the name of "progress". Pay attention to the needs of the public you are supposed to be serving FCC. Don't give in to Globalist pressure on these issues.
—Aeyrie Silver Eagle, Yorba Linda, CA

US is 'supposed' to have free and open markets for ALL goods. No monopolies.
—Bob Lichtenfels, burlington, MA

Easy access to internet is crucial for future of mankind. Make it happen.
—Ozgur Zeren, Shallotte, NC

I pay nearly $100 for a required bundle of phone, internet, and cable (with no premium channels). If I drop phone and internet (which I want to) I'll save $3.15. If I could use a different nearby network, I'd be paying less than $20 for better internet coverage which is all I want. But local rules prohibit my doing business with them. This is so deeply wrong. The FCC is standing in the way of basic, reasonable, controls on cable companies. They respond to consumers as monopolies, which should be illegal. They insist in Congress that they are in competition with one another. They have all the high moral ground of snake oil salesmen and all the legal ground of Boss Tweed. How long do you plan to continue to let Tammany Hall remain in control of the major communication methods of our era? Stop it immediately.
—Catherine Albers, Germantown, TN

It is insane that when we try to pay for a simple service we are forced to pay extra for devices and services we don't want. And in any other industry selling of private info without consent could be considered a crime, but these monopolistic carriers get away with whatever they want because they know they are the only option and they have tremendous lobbying power in Washington. Disgusting.
—Peter LeBlanc, San Antonio, TX

Keep America competitive and lobbyists from corrupting the system and corporations from exploiting consumers without competition please
—Eric Dragoo, Nampa, ID

Cable bills getting too high. Service not improving.
—John Jovino, Sonoma, CA

If cable keep going up I will have to let cable go for some other form of entertainment. And just like you don't want your person information out to any and everyone, neither do I.
—Clarese Williams, Conyers, GA

It is bad enough that the impotent FCC allows "Fox News" to promote itself as a "news channel, "news network", "fair and balanced", and on, when it is seen by journalism schools (and comedians) as a propaganda arm of the Republican Party; but don't allow companies such as Comcast to sell our private information.
—Dr. Jim Hanson, Winter Park, FL

We pay significantly more than other countries for cable. The reason is simple...profits for multinational behemoths. In an age of incredible inequality, why would you allow this?
—Robert Pape, Park Ridge, IL

We pay over $240/month for cable TV and Internet. The cable box rental is part of this outrageous bill. ISPs are already ripping us off. Do not let them exploit us further by selling personal information.
—Kieren Ladner, Chicago, IL

Encourage competition in the marketplace to benefit the consumer balances shifted to far towards corporations
—Forest Burkhart, Parker, CO

It's only common sense to protect the American way of life.
—Jim Carmody, Daytona Beach, FL trying to keep broadband ,and living on my 9 thousand a yr. s.s. is close to impossible , let reason rule ,not the money mongols greed.

—Mary A. Smith, myrtle creek, OR

My personal information should have the same protections as any patent or copyright.
—David Kozlowski, Santa Fe, NM

Limited income on SSI and so few raises prevent me from being able to budget for a cable service. Please help out.
—Martha A Smith, Morro Bay, CA

Anything worth doing at the FCC is going to take at least a 3–2 vote. You have a chance to go down in history as leaders of the FCC that did more for the public interest than any other. Your decisions over the next few months could cement that legacy — but only if you hold strong. We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Dennis M King, Longmont, CO

This is supposed to be government by, for and of the people...not of the wealthiest and not of big business.
—Greg McNeal, Oakland, CA

Comcast is the quintessential rip-off company.
—Lew Douglas, Oakland, CA

Passage of these two no non-sense consumer bills is a must for the average Internet customer. Especially the senior citizens whgo live on limited income. Please pass therse bills. Ralph Andrews
—Ralph Andrews, Green Bay, WI

My information MINE. Nobody should have the ability to sell it on without my permission. I don't get a cut. Also, it is time to.squash the monopoly the few cable companies ha e on us. The ones that keep them in business.
—Anthony Epp, Kansas City, KS

It's information about me. I don't care if they gathered it while I was using their product, it is me. They want to sell me, my life choices, etc, without my permission and profit from it. Either I get a cut, or they ask my permission. Period. Do something about this. And if you have a chance to open up the incredibly unfairly monopolistic market here then it is your duty to do so.
—Adam Morgan, Orem, UT

We should be able to have more choices with our cable. Be able to buy our cable boxes and have other points of entry.
—Walden Mabry, Glenwood, IL

The internet is educational and a powerful tool to learn.
—Kendra Hunter, Haiku, HI

Please help American citizens protect our privacy. And my cable bill is out of control; their services do not justify their profit margins, or however they are absorbing our monthly payment. Thank you.
—Abigail Jaye, Valley Glen, CA

The cable monopoly is not working. It is hurtful to consumers. I do not want my private information or any information in the hands of the cable and telecom industry.
—G Parson, ENDICOTT, NY

We don't want Big Corps to sell our private information without our consent, and to end the practice of making us rent their set-top box every month each month. Ma Bell did something all too similar ages ago; Big Cable should do the same.
—Lorraine Lavoie, Waltham, MA

Give the business community a chance to continue robbing every one of their money, and they will.
—Fred Coplin, Saint Petersburg, FL

As a work from home self-employed business owner, high cable bills make up a large portion of my monthly income. Internet should be classified as a utility and managed the same as power or phone. It is essential to everyday life and business.
—Dom Price, Marietta, GA

I want to be able to pick what I pay For
—MIchael Thomas, South Bend, IN

I think our privacy is being lost and it is in The Bill of Rights. Here it is from a private company and the rates being charged keep rising. People now need the internet to take care of business I hate having to use the library to go on line.
—Mr. Scott Pierce, Portland, OR

WORK TO STAY WITH THESE COMMON SENSE, PRO- CONSUMER POLICIES ON SET-TOP BOXES
—Michael Gregory MD, Santa Fe, NM

Please note that DECADES ago, you liberated phone users from mandatory rental of equipment from the phone firms. This is precisely the same. Unhook the equipment profit motive from Comcast (or any cable provider) and let us use and purchase our own equipment.
—Constance Bevitt, Silver Spring, MD

I've been with Dishnetwork for 6 years and paying therm $14 a month for 2 set top boxes and have paid them over $1000 for boxes that aren't worth 1/3 of that. Even phone companies don't keep charging you payments on your phone when you've paid for it.
—Donna Crane, SanTan, AZ

In "socialist" Europe, one has more than a dozen choices to get phone, tv, and blazing internet for $40 a month. What do we have ? MAYBE 2 choices and around TRIPLE that rate. Free market?? More like quasi-monopoly. Why?? Because corporations are hurting?? They have created the biggest income gap EVER in this country!! It's time for them, the oligarchs, to sell a few homes and live like the rest of us.
—Matt Woolery, La Jolla, CA

Please stop the corruption in D.C. This would be a nice start by breaking up the cable monopolies.
—Jarod Johnson, Ypsilanti, MI

I don't want my personal information to be a commodity in yet another business.
—Tanya Lasuk, Kennewick, WA

A phone company, internet company or cable/fiber provider should not be able to capitalize on its monopoly on your ability to connect to everything else in the world - with your personal information. There should be regulation and restriction on gathering of any personal information. Selling any person's personal information without expressed written permission should be a crime. Neither should they be able to monopolize the type of receiver, modem, or decoder that you attach to your system. They are the provider of the means of communication and often the only provider and should not be allowed to farm their customer's information or interfere with their choice of technology.
—Timothy E Hof, CINCINNATI, OH

I am forced by owner of my office building into using specific cable operator. AND IT IS EXPENSIVE and SLOW - and I am in middle of San Francisco. Cable operator has freedom to sell my private information. I have uncontrolled spam phone calls coming in on all my phones - which are on DO NOT CALL registry. Cable TV box at HOME is also a monopoly. I know I am paying way to much to use the internet and local government channel. Please fight back - for me.
—sue Hestor, San Francisco, CA

Frankly, we hate Comcast: they are the only game in town. Their prices keep many people from having cable and Internet access. I don't want them selling my information for their benefit, while charging me an arm and a leg for their for their products. They are a greedy monopoly right now and need to give up selling our information. I no longer do any business with them for this reason.
—Paula Fougere, Seabrook, NH

KEEPING PRIVATE OUR INFORMATION IS VERY IMPORTANT AS WELL AS LOWERING CABLE BILLS. ACT ON IT TODAY!!!!!
—Connie Sitzman, Antioch, TN

Please... do SOMETHING to help
—Bernadette Zupan, Tamarac, FL

DirecTV, Comcast, and AT&T all compelled Citizens that NEEDED (I am an IT Professional, and before retiring did a good deal of "Defence Work" that REQUIRED a high-performance, encrypted, secure connection. I still do computer security work and some consulting with Defence Contractors - the equipment I require CANNOT have built in "back-doors" accessible to lord only knows who and my data MUST be secure - and this is MY responsibility. These multi-national corporations FORCED customers to PRE-FUND THEIR INFRASTRUCTURE COST. Now that they are in the clandestine personal information gathering and selling, to persons unknown, business - THEY WANT TO LEASE US INSECURE EQUIPMENT THAT WILL FACILITATE THEIR UN-CONSTITUTIONAL EAVESDROPPING AND THE SALE OF THE DATA TO PERSONS UNKNOWN. THIS IS A NATIONAL SECURITY THREAT OF THE HIGHEST ORDER!! As an American Citizen, I have the Constitutional right to equip my computer network, and the machines on that network, as required by my privacy needs, security oaths, and my RIGHT to operate MY computers on MY network on MY private property in the wat I see fit - not some commercial, sneak-thief, corporation bent on invading my personal AND PROFESSIONAL PRIVACY! Clients in the EU, the UK, Canada, and others NO LONGER TRUST THE INTEGRITY OF AMERICAN VENDORS, PROFESSIONALS, AND "CLOUD" RESOURCES - AND WITH GOOD REASON. I am having to route my communications through France, Germany, and other EU nations - to the extent possible - to avoid the disclosure of proprietary information regarding new inventions, discoveries, technical discoveries (some related to our National defence) as possible; but cannot do this lawfully in some situations. AT&T, that has maintained a TOTAL MONOPOLY over our communications services in now trying to FORCE customers into a new 2 year agreement to switch to "uVerse", pay $9 extra per month for a "wireless router" (totally insecure) that THEY CONTROL, UPDATE, AND SECRETLY GATHER WHATEVER INFORMATION THEY WANT, WHENEVER THEY WANT, WITHOUT MY CONSENT OR KNOWLEDGE AND SELL THAT DATA TO THE Communist Chinese, Russians, North Korea, anyone with a checkbook. Meanwhile, AT&T has reduced our "service set" of features by over ONE HALF, while almost doubling prices. The top speed I can get is 6.5Mbit, yet FOR THE EXACT SAME PRICE FOLKS SIX MILES UP THE ROAD ENJOY 20Mbit TO 40Mbit SERVICE FOR THE SAME PRICE - $59 per month. In Romania, and most other EU countries customers get 50-60Mbit service for $20 per month, with legally guaranteed privacy. In Japan, 100Mbit service costs $20 per month. WHY ARE WE BEING ROBBED? BECAUSE THE MONOPOLY WAS NEVER REALLY BROKEN UP, AND WE ARE BOUND IN SERVITUTE.
—William Wilkinson, Watkinsville, GA

Big cable companies seem to think they should be in control and that John Q Public exists for the soul purpose of lining the cable company pockets. Their reign needs to end! It's time for Congress to support the FCC for the good of the people, not the cable companies. Do you know who your Congressman supports? Tell them to support FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler in his work to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent and to end the monopoly of set-top boxes, which would, in turn, lower our cable-TV bills.
—CJ Houghtaling, Middlebury Center, PA

Please do this. Our Cable bills are way too high. The Cable company , in the future will also target us with Ads.
—Bakermanb@yahoocom Baker, milton, NY

I'm tired of being jerked around by what should be illegal, the closest thing to a monopoly that exists in the US! The price of internet is too high, and they have free reign to set the costs. FIGHT FOR US.
—Nicole Mikeals, New Castle, PA

sick and tired of companies running ours government
—Phil Copeland, Louisville, KY

Please vote the public interest.
—Arthur Keller, Palo Alto, CA

Monopolies are tolerated in a competition-driven free market because they provide necessary public functions. They do not exist to bilk the public or defraud the public.
—Dwain Wilder, Rochester, NY

If you can't lower my cable bill, then ALLOW FOR COMPETITORS!! There is no competition for Comcast!!!
—Angela Haynes, snellville, GA

My "high-speed" Internet service is only 3Mb, yet costs $50/month. The speed has actually gone down from 7Mb over the years, but the cost has gone UP.

Please! Be STRONG, Hold fast to Public Interest. Throw down HARD on Political GAMES. Help US/us.
—Donna Besser Stone, Boynton Beach, FL

The FCC's agency mission is to protect the nation's public airwaves and the public communications that travel through them. At the same time, its mission is to enhance development and quality of those communication pathways and transmission lines, by encouraging private-sector contributions and innovations, but not at the cost of protection of the public's interests and privacy and of their access to a truly competitive market. If carrying out this agency mission means immense pressure from the lobbyists for the giant telecom companies, so be it. The FCC's leaders must stand up to this sordid pressure and act and do what is right and what it is supposed to do: protect the nation's communication airwaves from private-sector dominating control and monopoly. Thank you. Rudolph Gartner
—Rudolph Gartner, Chicago, IL

Quit protecting the mega profits of monopolies .
—Michael Smith, Yakima, WA

The desire for privacy should be self evident. On the cable box issue, I see no reason why I should be forced to overpay to rent a set-top box from my cable provider when I could choose to buy one on the open market and save myself some money. Cable providers already over charge for service and force you to buy channels you do not choose to watch as part of a "package". Cable providers already over charge for service and force you to buy channels you do not choose to watch as part of a "package" The set-top box racket is just another way to make you pay more than you need to for service. Please do your job and and end these practices.
—Lloyd Adams, Houston, TX

It is not your information to sell, You allowed a merger to take place that should not have. We need small companies competing for business not no choice.
—Tim Zemba, Los Angeles, CA

Cable TV is a defacto monopoly in this country with Comcast especially in the eastern part of the country. Not only are there prices outrageously high but allowing them to sell my private information is adding insult to injury. I am a small business and allowing Comcast to act as a monopoly is a financial hardship. I do not operate a monopoly and I would never sell my customers private information. Please act to end their monopoly and selling of private information. Thank you.
—Robert Hennessey, FRANKLINVILLE, NJ

If network providers are monopolies, then they must be regulated. The FCC must force the industry to build multiple network options everywhere in order to foster competition and, thus, to avoid regulation as a utility. If in reality only a single company can deliver true broadband network services in a particular region, then it must be regulated as a utility.
—Payam N Minoofar, Ventura, CA

cable is much to high. with one company you get more then another at times and might even pay less with the other company for more channels and or faster net. I think it's rediculus
—Wayne Foster, South Paris, ME

My privacy is valuable to me. Additionally, cable companies have charged far too much for far too long.
—Sean Kennedy, Healdsburg, CA

I'd love to buy my disabled, house bound friend internet access which she cannot afford. Trouble is I can't afford it either! PRIVACY + ACCESS NOW PLEASE
—ML Fowler, South Colby, WA

I myself do not utilize Comcast. I refuse to pay to watch television. I can't afford it either. I do know many who use Comcast and would be beside themselves if unrelated topics are a part of getting what they do pay for.
—C Nichols, Chandler, AZ

I should not be reliant upon the cable companies for my DVR or to view on my tv. Open up competition and break their monopoly on these devices. As for my private information, I am always opting out of company's sharing of my information. I want my internet privacy as well.
—David Paul, Turlock, CA

Congress is suppose to work for the people.
—Daniel Boyd, DENVER, CO

They are not bargaining in good faith, making it difficult for competition to have a level playing field, when contracting with major networks.

—Judy Kinsman, Florence, OR

I am retired living on a fixed income. The internet is my only source of communication with my community. Please don't destroy my only source of information by making it unreasonable for me to afford.
—William A Lansville, Barstow, CA

We collectively have no power to change the way cable companies do business. I support this proposal.
—David Berten, Pittsburgh, PA

When PC makers were forced to provide alternatives to Microsoft Explorer as a browser, it was done to prevent a monopolistic practice - if you buy a piece of hardware that can run many different types of software, you shouldn't be forced to use just one. It should work the same the other way around - when you subscribe to a service such as cable TV, you shouldn't be forced to pay for just one hardware device (and a perpetual rental, at that!) when devices that are on the market are capable of doing the same job. It's the same logic. Please end the set-top box monopoly.
—Phillip Chonigman, Hartsdale, NY

As a retiree, I simply cannot afford the unnecessary charges that FCC is addressing.
—Samuel Pearson, Saint Louis, MO

It's the right thing to do!
—Ed Kirkpatrick, Rexburg, ID

because I am disabled and low income and dependent on internet for so many things including frequent communication with my doctors and hospitals.
—Beverly C. Davis, Long Beach, MS

Dear Mr. Wheeler, I do applaud your actions to protect the information of me and other fellow citizens. I also applaud your actions to open the market on set top boxes. I believe that the government and its agencies are there to protect and support all of us and not just the big business interests of the country.
—Thomas E. Wisniewski, Parkland, FL

Because you should listen to the people
—Jason Bartz, Lexington Park, MD

Take control of this monopoly!
—Shane Beers, Redondo Beach, CA

Yes, please lower our cable bills. But ONE MORE THING: Please require Comcast to also include C-SPAN-2 and C-SPAN-3 in my Basic Service!
—Timothea Papas, Evanston, IL

Cable bills for all services are outrageous. Time to end the greed merchants' protections by collusive government.
—Richard Morgan, BELLINGHAM, WA

The FCC needs to advocate for and protect the public interest, not grant power to companies whose main interest is their own bottom line.
—Robert Helmick, Rathdrum, ID

It is very important because this has been a long time game but republicans, who misleading our country just only to make sure their pockets are full of easy money, we cannot allow this type of game to continue, our privacy & lower cable bill are 'Priority'.
—Roddy Lopera, Rancho Cucamonga, CA

Doing something in Do-Nothing Washington will send a bright light and shock waves out in every direction. Doing something Right in a Washington where so many things that do get done block the right things from getting done -- THAT would be truly pyrotechnic and earth shaking. Forget Historic Legacy. What kind of a world do YOU want to live in? What kind of a world do you want for YOUR family and friends.

These cable bills are a act of criminality
—TC Chatman, Garland, TX

Your job is to protect everyone's privacy. Do your damn job. Comcast is evil.
—Lisa-Jo Warren, Gorham, ME

cable companies are quasi-monopolies! Don't let them take advantage of users that don't have an alternative!
—Ron King, Oklahoma City, OK

If you don't stop these immoral, unacceptable practices, Who Will?
—Elmer A. Anderson Jr., M.D., L.A., CA

Since the era of deregulation television and radio have become almost unwatchable...until the internet came around. Now, television has to compete with lots of other sources on many playforms and it's never been better. (Commercial radio is mired in the past, it may be a while before we hear much change). That said: comapnies like Comcast are squeezing the consumer by becoming bloated nigh monopolies. As such my bill (I save you the story but they basically harranged me into this service) is now 100/mo. And I only use the internet...at a pretty basic speed compared to the rest of the world. When it comes to cable, I have very few alternatives and given Comcast's record for customer service (or lackthereof) it's past time something be done. I inplore the FCC to consider action. Thank you, Nick Brunner
—Nick Brunner, Sacramento, CA

The pricing is outrageously high given the profits of the parent corporation. It should be a utility. Instead cable service is exploitation, legalized theft.
—Mr. William Ray, willits, CA

As a consumer, and a voter, I should have the right to expect my information is NOT given (sold) to other marketers without my consent (It shouldn't be an 'opt out'- it should be 'opt in'). Further, I shouldn't have to pay forever for a product that I can purchase at a given price (box). I am further disappointed with the level of consolidation in the telecommunications industry. It removes all competition and dis-incentivizes the companies from any improvements- it garners them guaranteed customers through monopolization. I am counting on the FCC to work harder for the consumer! Here in midtown Manhattan NYC, I have no choice who I want to give my business to. I am stuck with an expensive and lousy Time Warner (soon to be Charter, because yet another merger was permitted!). Innovation, as well as better pricing, comes from competition- NOT monopolization.
—Stacy Rauch, New York, NY

Finally something for the masses. Do it already!
—Brian Fullerton, Erie, PA

Do the unexpected. Watch the corporate interests panic. Watch the people dance in the streets.
—Barbara Hill, San Benito, TX

Consumers should be central in marketplace regulation - stop suppliers from trading our private information without the consumer's consent, and lower cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on the set-top boxes we're forced to rent.
—Rick C Dacosta, fonthill,

Comcast is expensive and should be broken up like MA Bell.
—Bob Hibbits, Gig Harbor, WA

We need to stop the dreadful trend of trying to run government at a profit. No, government does NOT need to be run 'like a business'....the two have fundamentally different purposes!
—Sadie SullivanGreiner, El Cajon, CA

Our cable bills are way too high, the companies have monopolies or in some areas duopolies. We shouldn't have to pay for these boxes, and they shouldn't be able to sell our private info. The latter is a violation of privacy and probably privacy laws.
—Dorothy Rocklin, Melrose, MA

Corporations rule this country. We are supposed to have a democracy, but companies don't vote except through their wallets, which are often immense.
—Janice Gintzler, Crestwood, IL

Our First Amendment is essential to a clear conduit for a informed democratic citizenry.
—James Par Zino, Holly Ridge, NC

We need competition in the cable industry. What we have is monopolies. Open up the field, let companies compete.
—Edward Vaughn, Everett, WA

Renting set top boxes for eternity is the same as renting phones until the 1980s, a practice designed to inflate fees for a monopoly.
—Ben Johnson, Smyrna, GA

Internet access is necessary for everyday functioning. We need it for earning income, education and personal enrichment. It should be safe for us to use, and that includes protecting private information that might make us vulnerable to predators. It should also be affordable for everyone. It is not a luxury.
—Tracey Polyflavour, ,

It's time to stop the corporate giants, such as the cable industry's practice of buying politicians to get their way to abuse their customers trust. Please protect my privacy; junk commication and identity theft is out of control.
—Gary Holm, tampa, FL

costs are off the charts
—Glenn Phillips, Seattle, WA

1. Keep private information private. 2. End the rental fee on cable boxes.
—Margery Armstrong, Great Neck, NY

Treat the cable companies like the public service business they are supposed to be, not the profit hogs they are.
—Ron Farnsworth, West Townsend, MA

I am appauled the cable company is receiving payments from US and then selling OUR personal information for profit! The phone companies are equally liable for this disgusting and illegal act. I'm so sick of ALL of it. You are responsble for the demise of our freedoms and our country.
—Dee Preston, lantana, FL

Personal information should not be able to be resold without permission. This is not only a privacy concern but also a security issue. On top of that this information could include medical searches and other informaton that should not be shared or sold.
—David Foor, Lombard, IL

Cable Companies have been Gouging their Customers for Years, The People Paid For Developing the Internet not Corporations!!!
—Richard F.Burger, cotati, CA

I'm nearly 76 years old with a limited income. I just learned that I will need a new prescription at $500/month. I can barely afford cable/internet now, don't know how I will do it in the future. Please do your part to protect consumers like me.
—Mary T Slayter, West Dennis, MA

I am retired a live on SS. I cannot afford cable anymore .
—Marilyn Livote, Buena Park, CA

Your responsibility is the the PEOPLE of the United States who pay your salary and the FCC expenses. NOT your friends in the cable industry who are trying to leverage additional profits by selling confidential information and by monopolistic practices - something that was supposed to have been outlawed 60 years ago
—Liz Amsden, Los Angeles, CA

Privacy and price are incredibly important in this changing world.
—William Sweeney, New York, NY

IN Alaska we have NO competition and GCI cable is a deceptive business model.FCC allowed them to own a local station in Anchorage which is conflict of interest.Also GCI will not LOWER cost of their service to low income and they are the only choice. Also in AK over the air is not made available in many areas leaving the only choice GCI-a bait and switch and capped internet company.Low income in AK means no services.
—Skylar Phoenix, Homer, AK

MY PRIVATE INFO IS NOT FOR SALE, AND WE ALREADY PAY EXCESSIVELY HIGH CABLE RATES!
—R Honeck, cincinnati, OH

Privacy is becoming a premium, if I acquire a service from company x thatd is all I'm intrestred in, it is not in my best untrest that they further profit from my information, services, inquiries, needs, to benefit, that is not what I'm payong for. Also other companies shouldnt profit of that knowledge without my consent. For example: just purchased a new notebook computer with windows 10, it brought already installed 120 companies that would track me from my usage on windows 10. How does that benefit me, it is a invasion of privacy. Don't let cable and internet companies also do this.
—Rafael E. Umana, mia, FL

I heartily appreciate the work you have done on the public's behalf, and wish voters had done a better job winnowing out Congressional puppets of big telecom, so that your job would be more straightforward.
—Frank Glass, Albany, OR

I do not like Comcast--they are already knocking on my front door and filling my mailbox with their crap.
—Doreen Stratton, Doylestown, PA

Comcast has been getting away with charging BS fees for years. Lets put some money back in my pocket.
—Joe Cates, Minneapolis, MN

It's time for the FCC to work for the people and not the corporations!
—J Solni, Akron, OH

It's important to protect private information no matter what, unless consent is given. This is especially important as we struggle to maintain the democratic nature of the Internet and keep it from becoming an avenue for profits. Please take action and do your job. Thank you.
—Patricia Sandoval Sralla, SAN ANTONIO, TX

My cable bill is currently twice my electric bill and I receive only the most basic and what is supposed to be the cheapest cable.
—Larry D. Rafey, Argyle, FL

My internet is no less important than my telephone or my post office box. No one should have the right to see--much less to sell--my communications data to anyone.
—Burley Herrin, Stewardson, IL

Prices go up as service and value received decline. My personal information becomes another commodity to sell. Shameful.
—Mike Berger, Imperial, MO

I am not getting the mbps that are in my contract. I have no other options for internet service in my area.
—Melissa Rosen, Los Angeles, CA

There is no good reason why Comcast should see anyone's private information. It's private for a reason! They, and all cable tv/internet providers already charge far too much for their services and do not need to make any more money off my back. LOWER OUR BILLS AND KEEP OUR PRIVATE INFORMATION PRIVATE!
—Sandy Sargeant, Rowlett, TX

My cable bills grow every year and my income does not.
—Judith Bergson, Somerville, MA

Let's not become China!
—Garrett Hayashida, San Francisco, CA

Cable is now necessary, so it needs to allow all to afford it. Take the action that helps people.
—Ken Walsh, Alameda, CA

We view monopolies as bad things in this country for a reason, please stop the abuse from cable companies, it makes no sense to rent a piece of equipment forever on those outrageous charges. And since these companies are monopolies by default their privacy policies should be scrutinized and regulated, they can't be allowed to sell your information without your consent, and it should opt-in not opt-out.
—Carlos Ravelo, Stamford, CT

The right to privacy is a fundamental concept of the Constitution. Without it we are no better than some of the communist countries. Internet providers should not be allowed to systematically collect any information, especially Sensitive Information from its subscribers. It was illegal for the phone company to eavesdrop on its customers, it should be illegal for the Internet providers to effectively eavesdrop on its customers. the setup boxes used by cable TV, as well as the modems used by certain IP providers should not be proprietary. It is too easy to identify each of these setup boxes/modems using Internet protocol. There is no reason other than financial gain of the companies to make these devices proprietary. They are ripping off the consumer. In some cases the consumer has no choice other than to use that company. I am requesting that you act now and approve both the FCC Privacy policy and cable set up box recommendations.
—Joe Allen, Memphis, TN

I want to be able to buy my own cable box, not pay rent. That's an important point for me.
—Jim Fenner, Troy, MI

I want my privacy protected and need you to stand firm on not having it shared with data seeking corporations that want to see something. Thank you,
—Eileen Mitro, Ukiah, CA

Monopolies must be regulated for the good of our populace.
—KGH Nicholes, Martinsdale, MT

You are here to protect us, the taxpayers who are often gouged by big monopolies. Please do your jobs and advocate for us. Stop being puppets of the industry, as that is often how it appears.
—Grace Wu, Sacramento, CA

Lower cable bills and privacy? You need to hear why this is important to me?

Corruption in USA government is hurting people like me with little to no money.
—Susan Boyce, Myrtle Creek, OR

The FCC has finally turned its focus from the monopolistic cable companies to the needs and rights of the American consumer. Please continue with this trajectory and you will be remembered as the FCC which championed consumer rights—the task to which you were appointed.
—Howard Bornstein, Lake Oswego, OR

I am sick of the cable industry ripping us off. Do what is right for us
—Carson J Heldmann Jr, Catonsville, MD

To much for to little
—Edward Bradly, Ridgewood, NJ

Last night, I was just thinking about how high my cable bills are. And, that I really need my telephone, TV and computer. And, that there are no options. Government 'of the people,, by the people, and for the people'. The FEC needs to stand up to both protect our privacy and lower our cable bills.
—Michele Sherriton, Hollywood, FL

Costs for consumers should be going down, not up. Privacy of all U.S. citizens and that of consumer data must be off the table for sale, consumption, or monetization in any other form without the express written consent and direct permission from each private citizen, on a per-case basis.
—Carl Gren, Chattanooga, TN

Government is supposed to protect the people, not huge corporation and multi billion dollar fat-cats. Regulatory agencies such as yours are supposed to protect me, so please do the right thing for the millions of Americans in this country that need your agency to fight for us. Please vote NOW to pass your privacy proposal and to end the monopoly on set-top boxes. You can be my hero, just by doing the right thing.
—Greta Buckman, Knoxville, TN

My bill is WAY to high!
—John Anderson, St. Louis Park, MN

The cable companies have too much unwarranted control over what we see, hear, and have access to over the internet and through television. They cannot be allowed to use this over-inflated privilege to control our personal information as well.
—Florindo Troncelliti, New York, NY

Simply to gain access to media (not just entertainment) the public is essentially blackmailed into renting equipment for service. In the USA, citizens pay more for less in internet and media availability than any other developed nation. The FCC has it within its power to turn this around.
—Tobie Helene Shapiro, Berkeley, CA

A free press is what has made We the People, work for all. Neither party, unfortunately ,tell the truth to the people. We have to rely on independent tv stations. Bill Moyers, Cenk Yuger of Sirius Xm radio. And shows like Redacted. We have To thank Ronald Regan for deregulating the airways.

—Dr Ian M Bird, Madison, WI

Every time I eliminate "packages" to get my cable bill below below $100/month, it manages to creep back up above that amount; but the service itself gets no better, with lots of reception errors and occasional outages.
—John Fowler, Santa Monica, CA

Living on a fixed income, I am particularly impacted by the lack of competition from telecommunications industry. In fact, I've been priced out of the cable industry's monopolistic pricing.
—Tom Poe, Eden Valley, MN

These proposals are clearly the right actions in defense of consumer interests, which I take to be the Commission's mandate. Please follow through while the opportunity is present.
—Gordon Lutz, Holden, ME

I'm tired of having my information and my privacy sold to the highest bidder every time I subscribe to a cable service, and what they are charging is outrageous. It is far past time to reign in this inexcusable behavior.

I am retired and am on a (low) fixed income.
—MARIANNE KRANZ, Lake Hiawatha, NJ

Stop Comcast selling our private information without our consent. Stop set-top box monopoly and milking us under your regulation.
—APeery, Gorinchem,

My privacy is important to me so I don't want any ISP that I use to sell ANY personal information without my consent. I would also like to lower my cable bill for TV and Internet. An unrestricted Internet would be ideal. Please don't let corporations "run" or pressure our rights as consumers by passing legislation that is one sided. Please take action to STOP Comcast and the monopoly they hold. Why can't we have a choice who provides our Internet and TV service? This would surely drive process down and the compitition would hopefully increase Internet speeds. Do you know where America ranks in Internet bandwidth? It should be an embarrassment to the FCC.
—Thomas Dee, Wheaton, IL

Stand up for the public rather than selling out to business, please. Their greed continues to diminish the quality of my life. I pay $120 per month for worse TV reception over cable that I had for free before unelected officials gave the analog spectrum to business, and I still have to watch the crap advertising. STOP the giveaway! Keep the net as neutral as you can. Please.
—Kurt Harper, Shepherdstown, WV

The Action Is Needed & The Time Is Now!
—Blue R. Brown Jr., Keene, NH

I am in a rural area and we have no choice but the big companies who take full advantage. For example they have an offering of 55Kb coverage , with 5KB between 6a-2a, 50 KB between 2a-6a. That is not fair business practices but out and out gouging. ENOUGH IS ENOUGH IS ENOUGH!!!!!!!

—Martin Webber, dallas, OR

I'm tired of cable being the only source and raising prices because they can. Help is much appreciated.
—Andrew Groh, Dallas, OR

Please do your job for the consumers. Common sense must prevail in denying Comcast the ability to sell my private information without my express consent. Common sense also dictates that consumers not be forced to rent set-top boxes from monopolistic cable companies. Please do the right thing and move these proposals forward.
—Jim Siderits, Rialto, CA

IT'S TIME TO HOLD FRAUDULENT MONOPOLIES ACCOUNTABLE FOR THEIR ACTIONS.
—Bill Lindner, Greenbrae, CA

this is common sense which of course means that it probably isn't good for the old profit line. Common sense is getting so rare that it might be headed to go the way of the Dodo bird. Let's get these measures passed!
—Dave Scanlon, Mpls., MN

FCC, YOU MUST to protect OUR privacy and lower OURcable bill TODAY.
—Elaine Balgemann, Mesa, AZ

I'd like to feel that none of my information is seized and disseminated until I hit the "Send" tag. I'm irritated that I'm being so closely tracked and monitored that the advertisers are calling me when I decide NOT to submit a partially completed form. Within minutes !.!.!.!
—Kirk Taylor, Yelm, WA

Let's just try doing the right thing for the people who actually pay your salary. I just got rid of cable because I refuse to pay twice for crap that I can watch for free. As far as privacy is concerned, I will also opt out of any agency that tries to use my information for any purpose other than what I explicitly authorize. Privacy must be the default right of every citizen!
—Stephen P. Karnisky, Rochester, NY

This important because Increasing TV Bills have begun to put a larger strain on my family's finances.
—Graham Braly, Rocklin, CA

Yes, get it done. The cable bill is outrageous.
—Renee Nichols, Pendleton, SC

Please put some controls in place. Things are getting out of hand in every direction. We need stronger consumer protection laws now.
—Mr. Dave Scassa, Cedar Park, TX

At some point the consumer needs to be getting the break not Big Business. Too much profit off of those forced to watch a plethora of commercials on regular TV or pay fees to big cable for all those channels one never watches!
—Michael Ernst, Highland Park, IL

The cable industry has a monopoly, which gives little to no choices. Our privacy is of no importance to these companies who stay awake nights trying to find more ways to increase costs to customers. Customers who are long term and loyal customers are charged more than new customers so the industry can bait them into contracts. With so few choices and so little regulation of these companies, we look to the FCC to protect us. They're robbing us blind, providing substandard service, and compromising our privacy. Is there anyone care about the consumer anymore? Do your job; protect the consumer.
—Maryann, Fort Lauderdale, FL

This spiral needs to end now! Average people need action fast!
—Mary Paolazzi, McMinnville, OR

The People need support, not the corporations.
—Mohan Attar, Berkeley Springs, WV

My cable company has overcharged its customets and refuses to return the money they stole from me. Why should they get any favours!
—Rob Sebastian, Akron, OH

I remember when TV was free! What happened?! Make decisions for citizens, not corporations...I thought that was your task.
—John D David, Houston, TX

Comcast charges egregious rates and is selling their customers on top of it? Most other internet businesses trade their customers' info for seemingly free services. At least customers can opt-out/not use that service if they are not interested. Comcast customers have no such option.
—Matthew Braun, Champaign, IL

My time and my money are valuable to me & my family.
—Thomas G. Dahl, New Port Richey, FL

About time for the FCC to work for citizens and not just corporate interests.
—Thomas Peterson, Windham, ME

I am so tired of the cable companies charging what they do because we do not have a real choice.
—Rudy Avizius, Cherry Hill, NJ

It is a privacy issue and Comcast makes enough money from all the charges they add to our bills.
—Mario Mere, Novato, CA

I believe that US Citizens deserve to be protected from Big Cable. You are the only organization that has that power. Use that power to help us!
—Ken Anderson, Boulder, CO

Being a college student having internet is a must but prices can be outrages. For the basic pack with very slow speed I'm having to pay $60 per month which is very high specially when can barely afford food.
—Marcelo Vidal, Milford, CT

the FCC should not be held hostage by a Congress that's itself unable to get anything accomplished. Please continue making progress on behalf of consumers to try to roll back some of the unwarranted and dramatic rate hikes from the cable industry over the past two decades.
—Scott Francis, Moorpark, CA

I do not believe Comcast should be able to sell or provide my private information without my direct consent. As well renting set top boxes should be an option, not a requirement. There needs to be choices in set top boxes, just like there is with any other consumer electronics except set top boxes.
—Joe S Samples, Austin, TX

We should all have a right to privacy. Please protect it.
—Susan Morgan, Austin, TX

The cabler industry is far too much in the control of a very few corporate giants. The FCC need to take steps to protect American citizens from their monopolistic practices
—William Gilbert, Cerrillos, NM

Because of requirements to bundle and no competition, phone service Internet and PBS and cable news are $200 a month for seniors on a fixed budget
—Laurent Hourcle, Saco, ME

I'm a consumer on a fixed income who can't afford to keep paying higher bills. And who wants their information to be sold without their consent? That's ridiculous!
—Robin Sinyard, Atlanta, GA

I can't afford these outrageous rates!
—William A. Dolly, Mc Alpin, FL

I pay Comcast every month for internet access. They shouldn't be allowed to charge me money and then turn around and sell my information. That's double dipping. And monopolies are only good for monopolists and corrupt politicians.
—, Round Rock, TX

Cause Cable Service is a monopoly they made Microsoft split up for just what companies like Comcast are becoming! Now they are trying to make even more money by selling information that we already are paying them to protect this is an outrage!
—Eric R Stemmerich, Ligonier, PA

My identity belongs to me, not my cable company. I'm on a fixed income so I can't afford extra fees.
—Sybil C Malinowski Melody, Jerome, AZ

How can a non-life form entity like a corporation be more important then People? Corporations come and go, People are forever.
—Mitchell Slatin, Lakewood, CO

please protect our privacy by not allowing Comcast to sell private information. Karen Bradford
—Karen Bradford, Greenwood, IN

C'mon, FCC, DO THE RIGHT THING. Help the PEOPLE, not GREEDY corporations!....
—Bill Hutchinson, Keene, NH

Dear FCC....Please HELP to STOP the proliferation and onslaught of junk phone calls! The phone calls persist and have become extremely abusive in content & nature! Please do all you can to eliminate and ban the "selling of our private and financial information"! I DO NOT NEED TO BE MARKETED TOO! Despite the "do not call" list our family is continually bombarded by unsolicited telemarketers! FCC Please do your job and go down in history as doing something for the common person! Corporatization (oligarchy) must NEVER come to pass in this country! Please save "us" from corporate greed! Thank you, James Paulson
—James Paulson, Camarillo, CA

Media corporations are trying to muscle subscribers into accepting severe and unnecessary disadvantages. Only government regulation can stop this racket and break up the oligopolies that deliberately DON'T compete, leaving customers with NO CHOICES. Is this capitalism? THIS IS FEUDALISM, with Comcast's crusty buttocks parked on the tattered old thrones corporate jokers were so careful to preserve from the first Medieval Age. Welcome to the "new" economy.
—Steve Ditore, Seattle, WA

The public must come first or there is little reason to have the FCC at all.
—Shelley Snow, Paso Robles, CA

stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Norma Nichols, honolulu, HI

Rampant industry-led monopolization and blatant disregard for the FCC's rulings is an insult to everything we as citizens choose to support you on. Take a stand against shady politics, anti-democracy lobbyists, and corporate power plays.
—Robert C. Jasper, Hesperia, CA

The US has the slowest Internet speeds and highest prices, please help change this.
—Will Schein, santa cruz, CA

It is your job to protect democracy not the rights of greedy wall street taliban thugs who are trying to destroy our country
—Gay Norris, st.louis, MO

The airwaves, the cyber space,belong to the people; not to greedy monopolistic businesses, like Comcast...
—Art Fogg, Hickory Hills, IL

Let the market decide. Not monopolies .
—Alan a Arnold, Hamilton, NJ

I want to be treated fairly and not have my private info sold by a large conglomerate.
—Chester Vidacovich, St. Bernard, LA

Cablecards are OK but consumers don't have exposure to the concept and it doesn't have the public exposure to succeed. The gatekeepers to access this technology - the cable companies themselves - have a vested interest in seeing it fail. "CableApp" as an upgrade is a good idea, but I would rather see price regulation and prevention of data cap/usage fees. Also, it's a given that people assume their data shouldn't be resold and aren't even aware of the extent of the exposure they suffer at the hands of their ISP.
—Casey Fipps, Chicago, IL

The American consumer is getting jacked on these cable bills, give us a break!
—Greg M. Schwartz, San Diego, CA

An open internet via net neutrality is a basic utility that everyone should babe access to. We are a third world country when it comes to fast, affordable internet services and that is largely due to these large cable companies with effective monopolies in their regions. They don't compete with each other and therefore each is able to reign supreme in their own area. It needs to stop.
—William Eldridge, Eugene, OR

Imagine having to "rent" a radio to listen to broadcasts!!!! And, please, let's keep our "stuff" private. Thank you for representing the PEOPLE of America, rather than catering to big business interests.
—Mike Jaureguy, South Chatham, MA

I feel VERY strongly about not letting any co. Use my private info except to provide the service and to deny any unnecessary controls over service or equipment. Look at the array of better, less expensive phones when we were allowed to buy our own phones apart from Tel co.
—David Kerrigan, Corona del Mar, CA

The United States was founded to ensure the well-being of everyone involved vs the long standing European style of the privileged few profiting in perpetuity at the expense of those "below". Help the US live up to these ideals. Help humanity keep making progress.
—G Scott Clemson, las vegas, NV

My private information is exactly that...private. Let's keep it that way. Also monopolies are illegal.
—Joan Stephenson, Windsor, CO

Protect our privacy!
—Luanne Anderson, Chinook, WA

The light is on. You guys are playing dirty cards and supporting corporate agenda's.
—Debra Thatcher, Idaho Springs, CO

Protect citizen's rights, not corporate profits.
—Mr. David White, Arlington, MA

like many older people, my only source of income is social security benefits. cable internet via time warner takes way to big a bite for anything decent as opposed to super slow.
—Jesus B Ochoa jr, El Paso, TX

I don't own a TV, but added a basic cable subscription to my internet subscription plan as part of a promotion to lower my cost. Comcast did not disclose in advance that there would be a charge for the set-top box which I could not refuse, even though I will not plug it in. This charge eats up half of the savings that were used to promote this bundle. There is no other industry where customers can be forced to take and pay for a device that is useless to them as a condition of providing an unrelated service! Comcast's functional monopoly on broadband internet in my neighborhood means I have no alternative; I can hold the set-top box and accept the charges including financial responsibility for any future failure to return the unit, or I can pay even more money for the exact same entry-level broadband internet service. Something has got to give.
—Ms. Denise Conner, Newark, DE

I do not want my information up for sale and we do not need Monopoly's!!
—Bruce Carlton, Mill Valley, CA

It's the right thing to do!
—David Favello, Walnut Creek, CA

I am tired of the monopoly my cable company has!
—Shannon Borthwick, Winthrop, MA

I need the FCC to work to stop Comcast from selling my private information without my consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those boxes i'm forced to rent each month. Thank You, Pamela de Maigret
—Pamela de Maigret, Los Angeles, CA

My cable bill is high enough and I see ads Time-Warner merged w/Charter. Whatever happened to the laws AGAINST monopolies?????!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
—Ann Burkes, Endicott, NY

Comcast and other large cable companies use their monopoly to price gouge. This is especially true in many areas, like where I live, where Comcast is virtually the only option.
—Robert Crozier, Mobile, AL

Selling private information for profit to other companies to spam you should be illegal for this reason: Common Sense. If you care about your constituents, you would take action to protect the powerless consumer against huge telecommunication companies looking to nickel and dime the consumer.
—Dan Vogt, Vista, CA

privacy.
—Tim van Amburg, Orangevale, CA

citizens with low incomes should have access to cable. after all, the basic principles by which the web runs was funded by citizen tax dollars. it's highway robbery to allow private corporations that benefited from citizen payments to now gouge their benefactors. thank you.
—Nona Glazer, Portland, OR

Dr. Richard Kuczkowski
—Dr. Richard Kuczkowski, Valley Cottage, NY

I want to end the invasion of our privacy. In addition, current pricing of cable services is outrageous and climbing every year. Thanks, in advance, for taking a stand for the consumer with protecting our privacy and lowering our cable bill. D. Roger Houston
—Roger Houston, Aptos, CA

It's hard as is paying bills. A few bucks saved could really help.
—James Janovsky, West Hills, CA

Of the 100+ channels bundled from my provider, I only use 20 or fewer. I should not be forced to pay for the others. And I should not be forced to pay for my personal information to be sold without my permission.
—Dinah Lea Jentgen, Las Cruces, NM

Rates are ridiculously high, keep rising, and in the US we pay more than other industrialized nations.
—Glynden Bode, Houston, TX

I'm pro-consumer, anti-monopoly.
—Brad Furst, West Lafayette, IN

Free net equals free Press.
—John h Loftus, New York, NY

The infrastructure of cable & fios have been paid for by the public. The telecommunications corporations should not be able to abridge the public's right to free speech in any way.
—Lauren Russell-Pank, Highland Park, NJ

Please protect the consumers, and support these common sense, fair policies that help American families.
—Carrie Hagan, Pittsburgh, PA

In addition to set-top cable boxes, please also include satellite receiver boxes for those fortunate enough not to subscribe to cable.
—F, Albuquerque, NM

People deserve privacy.
—Mark Harrison Jr., Bedford, IN

Stop the megacorps
—Kimbo Mundy, Albuquerque, NM

Every U.S. citizen’s information has never been less private than it is right now, at this very moment! Protect the people who elected you to represent them, not the lobbyists that pay you to be their puppet. Stand up for the right to privacy for the sake of the citizens of our country.
—Anthony M Rogers, College Park, MD

Citizens of the United States pay some of the highest rates if not the highest rates for communications. As a government agency I urge you to protect consumers.
—Donna Snyder, Hamburg, PA

I don't want cable companies selling my private information and I want to purchase and own a set top box of my choice from a competitive market.
—Thomas Smith, Clearwater, FL

This is important because where I live I cannot watch TV without a cable connection.
—Kathy Shimata, Honolulu, HI

The American consumer needs your protection. Work for the people not the big money corporations. If you don't protect us who will?
—Peter Michael Podesta, Fernandina Beach, FL

Since the dawn of the Internet age mega companies like Verizon Cox, ATT and Comcast have been providing inferior service and gouging consumers to provide over inflated salaries and benefits to their CEOs and their boards of directors. It's time that these companies with they're near monopoly power and who are above the law because of their lobbying power serve their customers and not Congress.
—Al Meda, Atlantic Beach, FL

I'm retired on a fixed income; ever rising costs make life more difficult all the time.
—Noel Eaves, Red Bluff, CA

The FCC's important actions should be pro-consumer, and not be beholden to special interests, either political or corporate. The FCC ought to defend the rights of individual citizens, and our public access to "the air waves" -- no matter what media they flow through. This is an extremely important mission, impacting elections, free press, free speech, freedom from monopolies, and access to information and news--the lifeblood of our society--regardless of income. Please help the FCC be all that it can be for all United States citizens, by quickly taking action to 1) prevent our personal information from being sold, and 2) fostering healthy competition by ending the monopoly (and forced perpetual rental) on DVRs and set-top boxes. Allow the market to--freely--decide. Heck, take all of 'em over and convert tv/radio/cable/internet & whatever's-next to a public utility! Just kidding, you probably can't do that. And wouldn't want the hassle anyway. But hopefully it made you smile. Even a wry grimace -- I'll take that. Have a great rest-of-your-day! Peace and love, Lori Kingery Urbana IL, USA!!
—lori Kingery, urbana, IL

Privacy is the key.
—Alan Steven Gonzalez, Minneapolis, MN

It is obvious this is beneficial for our people in all aspects and it would be nice if our government protected its people not the 1%.
—Barbara Selig, Roswell, GA

We need choices so we can have more control over what we pay and also need to protect our information.
—Maria Garcia, Miami, FL

I pay $168.75 a MONTH for expanded basic cable thanks to Comcast's monopoly and business practices. This is outrageous. Please act! Thank you.
—Jc, Alameda, CA

These two proposals present a golden opportunity for the FCC to move quickly and effectively in the public interest. Positive action will be a great credit in the public's perception of the Commission's legacy.
—Mr. Curt Dunnam, Trumansburg, NY

I STRONGLY object to having to pay $13.98 every single month, year after year, for two boxes that I could have owned outright years ago had I been allowed to purchase them. Please STOP the rip-off of the public NOW!
—Nancy Seats, Saint Louis, MO

Do your job!
—Karen Hennigan, West Grove, PA

This is very important for expanding consumer free trade, and also for individuals like myself that are underserved and overcharged routinely by cable giants (in my case AT&T Uverse).
—Jeff Dorman, Satellite Beach, FL

We need a free and open market for set top boxes like we had a few years ago, all of these companies are talking about letting them merge so things will be better. They want to have a monopoly so that we have to take their inferior equipment. They need competition so that the equipment gets better instead of worse. I do not want my private information being sold to anyone, unless I am the one selling it.
—Joe Martyniw, Saint Louis, MO

I am retried and need a lower bill
—Harold Phelps, Westland, MI

We already pay way too much for cable and then they expect us to pay monthly fees for those set-top boxes!
—Julian Yerena Jr, Parlier, CA

We already pay way too much for cable and then they expect us to pay monthly fees for those set-top boxes!
—Julian Yerena Jr, Parlier, CA

Please support the free market and stop protecting Comcast's monopoly. As more political communication (like presidential debates) moves to the cable networks, having cable is not just a luxury, but an essential part of being an informed citizen. Cable TV and broadband internet should be available to all at competitive prices.
—Bryan Wegman, San Jose, CA

It's time the Federal government started performing its Antitrust duties again. Broadband cable companies are among the worst anticompetitive actors in the U.S. today. They need to be reigned in. A large part of your job is to protect consumers against communications monopolists.
—Lonny Eachus, Spokane, WA

Just too many Americans are living paycheck to paycheck while slipping into greater debt; every reduction in our monthly debt payments would make our lives a lot more manageable.
—Douglass Turner, Alfred, NY

Dear Sirs, Access to the internet has become a necessity comparable to electricity and water. Please do your best at making this commodity affordable to every household in in the US. Thank you.
—Guido Laudisa, Beverly Hills, CA

My cable bill is ridiculous. I live in a rural area and there is only one provider. We do not have broadcast t.v. as our service area is too small and no one will install a translator to reach our area. I also strongly object to these companies selling their subscriber lists and other private information to third parties. Please take action now. J. G. McPhee
—Joe McPhee, Telluride, CO

monopolies must end]
—Peter S Mulshine, Phillipsburg, NJ

My cable and internet bill comes to over $212.00 a month, that is outrageous and does not include any movie channels.
—Barbara Kantola, Niles, MI

I'm a senior trying to keep my expenses as low as possible.
—Ms. Courtney Cazden, Lexington, MA

Privacy is important.
—Daniel Leventhal, ,

The privacy issue is obvious. Could not care less about cost but I know a few who do.
—Ralph M. Shannon, Hudson, FL

Comcast is not on our side. Do not give in to them!
—Arvin Blakeney, Centennial, CO

protect my privacy!
—Stephanie Schueler, Chesterton, IN

Please eliminate the cable industries monopoly on set top boxes. Allowing the cable companies to control these devices leads to few options available to consumers as well as less innovative solutions. Opening the market would drive competition amongst compainies, inspire new features and functionality, and empower consumers. The current closed ecosystems benefit the cable industry at the cost of consumer choice. Please end the free handout to the cable companies.
—Jonathan shkiele, Chicago, IL

I am planning to not use the internet for anything but video, basically fun, because my financial security is under assault at every level, not even the IRS or the DNC are safe. I have my cable company raising my bill every few months, and now they have told me I no longer qualify for any specials. So that means in a few months my bill will go up, and I have no recourse. Is that really Capitalism? Make the internet a utility, so it can be controlled by local commissions.
—Dawn Stanko, Dublin, OH

1984 is not my idea of way to live life
—Phillip Gordon, london, VA

Please lower cable bills to help the low income seniors living on low fixed incomes
—Paul Frizane, Mesa, AZ

Americans spend more on media than any other county and get less for our money. I expect the FCC to support customer fairness.
—Chris OMeara Dietrich, Campbell, CA

Please stop the corporate abuse! The middle class is suffering from corporate America!
—David Toledo, Hollywood, FL

We shouldn't have to pay monopoly bloated prices for cable service
—John Thomas, Hillsborough, NC

Please protect our privacy and lower our cable bills!
—Ethan Burnham-Fay, Hopkinton, MA

It is outrageous that COMCAST should be allowed to sell their customers' private information without the consent of those customers. It is a blatantly unfair practice that customers should be forced to rent set-top boxes when those items are available on the open market at a lower price than COMCAST's rental fees accumulated after a short period of time. Instead of protecting the monopolistic and high-profit practices of COMCAST the FCC should focus on insuring public access to reasonably priced cable services.
—Mark D. Normand, Hatfield, MA

Access to the internet is becoming unaffordable. We cannot afford to pay the prices asked for cable TV.
—Ed Werth, Dallas, TX

YOU Comcast are the only provider we have in our area. We pay $94 a month just to have some entertainment. We are in our late 70's and retired. it is not ethical for you to charge so much.
—Mr. Darlene Kirby, Magalia, CA

Mr. Wheeler. As citizens of US democracy we have right to our personal data privacy and free competition. Please act on both proposals positively. Thank you. Kirill Kravchenko
—Kirill Kravchenko, Silver Spring, MD

I don't watch TV, and only subscribe to cable service for internet access. Over the years I've seen my rates skyrocket--most months of the year my cable bill (for internet ONLY) is higher than my utility bill. This is outrageous price gouging, and it someone needs to take action to get it back under control.
—Lisa Talev, Austin, TX

I'm retired & on Social Security, These monopolies are gouging the public with high rates & poor service! We need lower prices! How about some regulation for crooks!
—Charlene Boydston, Pahrump, NV

Cable is too expensive up here.
—Wm Schultz, whitefish, MT

LOGIC. LOGIC. LOGIC. N-O-T GREED = DEMOCRACY DEMOCRACY NOT OLIGARCHY.
—Ms. Roslyn E. Walker, Marina del Rey, CA

I run a small internet business. The whole thing is based on the fact that I have the same access to potential custoners
—Ted Krever, New York, NY

I am on a fixed income so it is important that the FCC works to stop companies from selling our private information and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set top boxes we are forced to rent each month.
—Irlean Keyes, Mc Millan, MI

Looking out for the most is more important than helping the already huge.
—Linda Hamil, Marshall, MI

I don't want anyone to have access to my info!
—Francine Cohen, Havertown, PA

As a single, self supporting senior on a very limited income, I would like to look forward to being able to watch television and access the internet, but if the charges continue to escalate as they have, and in fact if they are not lowered, I can foresee a time when I will not. That time is not at all far in the future.
—Gail McMullen, Los Angeles, CA

Free and Open internet is the only net for America, leaders of the FREE WORLD.
—Haikeem-Olajuwon Stewart, Augusta, GA

I've been renting an old DVR from Verizon for about 6 years. The fee is about $15.00 a month. Therefore, I have paid over $1000 for an old piece of equipment that was ever worth more than a couple of hundred dollars. And I continue to pay! This is outrageous.
—Nicholas Nicolaides, Sterling, VA

This really needs an answer?! Obvious.
—Jeffrey Holzer, Randallstown, MD

I've got one choice for cable in my town. It's a monopoly. The only thing I've ever received from the various corporations that have bought and sold my cable account is - a higher monthly bill and "tiered pricing" for transmission speeds. It's ridiculous. Please do your job. Stand up for us consumers.
—Michael Moon, Costa Mesa, CA

Comcast has proven they do not care about corporate morality. We need to make sure that we let them know what is fair to everyone. Comcast is the biggest entertainment company in the US and they only care about their profits. The Olympic coverage is proof of their intent of a monopoly.
—Matthew, smyrna, TN

Survival, and combating monopoly
—Thomas Rippolon, putnam valley, NY

Fees for what comes through the atmosphere are obscene and obscenely high. I'm of an age when what came through the old Victrola my Grandmother had was free since it came through the "ether" as they called it then. Why are we paying these fees when they have so much funding from advertisers? The only ones benefitting from this kind of economic control are the advertisers and the cable/satellite/wi-fi owners. STOP IT NOW!!!!
—Cassinelli J. Robert, Sacramento, CA

I don't use a cable company supplied decoder, I use a TiVo. In spite of existing regulations, they haven't made that easy, or convenient. They regularly use their near monopoly position in this market (at least where I live) to harm customers.
—Gordon Williams, Fairbanks, AK

We have a right to privacy. Selling private information without my consent is completely unacceptable! We also need lower cable-TV bills. Ending monopolies would ensure that we have competitive pricing available to all.
—Gloria Flynn, Las Vegas, NV

Privacy for law abiding citizens is a natural born right.
—Marilyn Hackett, Franklin, VT

It is important for me to know that public servants work for the people.
—Maria D Fernandez, West Hollywood, CA

My cable bill keeps escalating, my choices are stagnant at best and filled with useless fluff. I am held hostage by a monopoly.
—Donlon Mcgovern, Portland, OR

Cable companies have too much power and I am paying ridiculous prices because of their monopoly.
—Todd Rogers, Akron, OH

Consumers are vulnerable to corporations squeezing the life out of our communication networks, devices, and peripherals. FCC, please do your best job to protect us and stop monopolistic, oligarchical corporate behaviors that hurt regular people. Expose their cozy corruptions of our political systems while you are at it. K? ThankU, All. Much respect for the good work you have managed to do so far...
—Charmaigne Scott, Salinas, CA

Let us protect the consumer and not the Cable Companies! It is long time to cut the LITTLE GUY a BREAK!!! MICHAEL P ABRAMS
—Michael Abrams, PARKESBURG, PA

DON'T LET REPUBLICANS STOP THIS!!! CABLE BILLS ARE BECOMING TOO HIGH FOR MANY OF THIS AND THAT IS WRONG! WE KNOW REPUBLICANS ARE RESPONSIBLE! DO YOUR JOB!
—Maggie Schafer, Boulder, CO

Monopolies kill competition so the only game in town is preset by the biggest corporation. Selling information that is not for sale i.e. private info sold without consent should be illegal. Isn't this covered by the Fourth Amendment? Do not submit to the political games of Congress - they have one agenda and it is not about representing the best interests of the people of this country.
—Julie Smith, Dexter, MI

Actually do what's best for the people who elected you for a change. Not a big corporation. It's my personal data and my money why should o have to use there cable box. This sort of thinking it's stagnating innovation To please a few lobbiests.
—Justin porter, east palestine, OH

Everyone is sick of big companies- and the power they always exert against the marginalized.
—Steve Vetter, Boise, ID

Because my data is my own property, and I need to know who gets access to it and to know as well why they are getting access and what is it going to be used for. There has to be transparency in all this process.
—Redona Kajmaku, ,

I'm already in a situation where Comcast has a monopoly on the Internet in my area. The costs are so much higher if I chose individual companies as my providers, so I am relegated to getting a Comcast "bundle" in order for my bill to be in the $200/month range instead of the $300/month.
—Cheri Gaspero, Monee, IL

I'm on a fixed income. Cable and internet bills are going through the roof. Us older people need a break
—Troy Tackett, Huntington, WV

Because it's the right thing to do!
—Robert Gaynor, Clear Lake, IA

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Alfred Denny, Oak Ridge, TN

I urge the members of the FCC to do everything in their power to protect consumers.
—Karola Spring, Lakewood, CO

We need open competition.
—Kirk Preston, Alden, NY

They are making plenty of money and still try to get more from us. I urge you to stop them. They should not be sharing our information without our permission either and this needs to be stopped as well. Stand with the people they are trying to prey on and stop them!
—Kimberly Aicone, Olympia, WA

You have to see the problems here. This is very clearly a monopoly. On top of that, how can you allow this company to sell our information - something we never agreed to. Please stop Comcast, a company that year after year scores poorly in customer service, but that many of us have no option to leave.
—Sara Crane, Seattle, WA

This is a no brainier, as to why it is important to the all people, who's privacy is in jeopardy, and who can afford higher cable bills?
—Jill gloger, Chicago, IL

I am concerned why the FCC is still waiting to address the privacy issue with cable companies. This privacy has to do with the inability to choose my own implement for viewing movies, TV, etc.. and the fact that my name and address are not considered private enough to keep them secure.
—Shirley Sharan, Fort Wayne, IN

Don't you think we are paying enough; most likely too much? Are your salaries contingent upon how much these companies are paid? Then reduce our costs as consumers now!
—Vincent Newman, Hollywood, FL

Do not give in to this kind of blatant power play that is inimical to the interests of the people you serve.
—Laura Horowitz, Pittsburgh, PA

Tired of not having competitive prices. I fully support the broadband privacy proposal and your efforts to end the monopoly on set-top boxes.
—Belinda Jones, Westbrook, CT

Fast reliable internet is now the backbone of our lives.
—Mark Arntson, Seattle, WA

I am so done with corporate america
—David Theen, Englewood, FL

This is important to me because it does seem to be a very real invasion of privacy issue. And lowering the cable is desirable.
—JoAnne Orr, Wooster, OH

Americans are being overcharged for everything and cable is one of the biggest offenders.
—Glen Conkling, Euclid, OH

I can barely afford the Internet as it is!
—linda hunt, Berkeley, CA

Comcast isn't the only TV service provider to gouge customers on control box fees.
—Michael L. McQuown, Philadelphia, PA

Keeping more money in the hands of the populace creates a better return.
—Susie Cassens, Fort Pierce, FL

This is critical. You need to protect my rights before those of giant corporations that consistently want to trample them for their own benefit. I have no other way to fight them and stop them.

We need competiton not corporate communism
—Arvind Rangan, Houston, TX

I am a disabled single parent, and both my daughter and I are in school so we can become employable. Our internet costs over $100 a month!!! I live on only a thousand and cannot afford the internet we need to build a future. This is unconscionable!
—Carissa Daniels PMB 134, Bremerton, WA

Please work for consumers and not Comcast!
—Cathy Bangerter, Bothell, WA

Cable companies are monopoly's and they should be very regulated for the public good over profit.
—Connie Godin, Barre, VT

Comcast is the most hated company in the United States and has committed fraud regarding a situation with me. I will never allow such a company to rise to monopoly status without my 2 cents (ie a company without competition, too big to fail and certainly too large to be held accountable)
—Mike Kress, Ypsilanti, MI

Protect the citizens of the US. Stop selling out to corporate.
—Tammy Causey, Jefferson, OR

I have just basic cable and pay well over $30 a month just for basic TV channels. Please consider lowering the cable bill for basic channels.
—Ms. Renee Klein, Marina del Rey, CA

It is the right thing for the consumers.
—Bee Johnson, Atlanta, GA

Privacy is important because of identity theft considerations.
—Thomas Brady, Spokane, WA

As a "senior"cable customer and one who is on a fixed income, I am dismayed at the abuse of consumer privacy by the cable industry and especially dismayed at our constantly rising cable rates. The proposed policies would help protect consumers in very important ways! Please stand up to Congressional and industry pressure and their political games during this important time. We need our privacy protected and our cable rates lowered!
—F R Neely, Huntsville, AL

We value our privacy and our cable bill is outrageous. Time Warner has doubled our cost over the last 3 years, including the rental of the set-top box.
—James Hart, South China, ME

I cancelled my cable 7 years ago because I couldn't afford it then, even the cheapest "basic" cable. I live in a HUD affordable housing for Seniors building where I paid a "one-time fee" of $65.00 for WiFi and it is my only for of news and entertainment.
—Amber Joy, Seattle, WA

It's time to protect the American people and do what's best for us.
—Manetric L. Douglas, Indianapolis, IN

Do what is best for consumers, not corporations. Yet another example of corrupting influence of money.
—Gordon Lange, Kihei, HI

One: I have a right to privacy. The FCC should be defending it. Two: my cable/ internet monthly bill is $160. My cell phone monthly bill us over $200 for a household of three. And we don't even have half the premium channels available on cable, and only one of us maximizes cell phone apps and usage. Ridiculous that our communication fees should be this high. FCC should be fighting for citizens like us.
—Nancy Murphy, Maryville, IL

My husband and I are seniors on fixed income 1/4 of what we made three years ago. We shouldn't have to be poor.
—Nancy Craft Lopez, Westville, NJ

We have a right to privacy [period]
—Theresa Lepine, Woodridge, IL

Comcast already ignored the regulations requiring them to create a decoder to replace set-top boxes. Seriously, if buying cable television and internet and telephone is a legitimate reason to allow a company to sell private billing information, then how is it that we can prosecute people who steal our mail to sell the same information to criminals? The FCC must protect the people, not the corporations who aren't HARMED by being required to treat people with respect. People ARE harmed when their private information is sold without their permission. Get your priorities right.
—Stephen Joseph Hutchison, Aloha, OR

This is important for the average American citizen where the cost of living is going up everyday yet salaries are at all time low. Cable is a basic entertainment many wish to have. Please help provide the Americans what they desire.
—Brenna Matejka, Katy, TX

Cable companies have a monopoly on and monitor our usage, that needs to be stopped, big business in the US have to much unquestioned power!
—Bill Polesnak, Troy, MI

I should not be forced to rent anything I do not request like the set-top box.
—Jeanene Bergeron, Half Moon Bay, CA

listening to the people is a win win for both parties.
—Doloris Mikkelsn, Sutherlin, OR

Tell companies also not to add copyright protection to their broadcasts so that I don't need proprietary software just to decode channels that I supposedly am paying for. I cannot distribute the signal within my own household without having a set top box at each TV. That isn't fair use, it is attempting to force me to buy additional services. That would be both useful and save me money. If you need an example, look at what Time Warner does when you attempt to purchase anything beyond the 'basic' package to all of the other channels that I pay for in the way of copyright protection. I paid the money to purchase a box that uses a cable card to distribute the channels within my home on my internal home network (Homerun Prime), then I find out that it can't automatically distribute those signals to all of my Smart TVs because the software to remove the copyright from the live channels doesn't exist. Instead of being able to watch TV from any TV in my house, I am restricted to a couple of TV manufacturers or my PC because Windows Media Center is one of the few pieces of generic software that can actually remove the copyright and display live channels on-the-fly. Why does Time Warner broadcast with copyright protection anyway? Didn't I pay for the service to watch those TV channels?
—Patrick Stroud, Kernersville, NC

It is not OK for Comcast to sell our private information without our consent. It is time for the monopoly on set-top boxes to end as well.
—Jennifer Waters, Tucson, AZ

Since the early 1970s, I have had cable TV installed in my apartments and now my home. My guess is that over the years I have paid cable companies 10s of thousands of dollars. And now they want to capitalize on my loyalty. NO WAY! The greed being exhibited by the cable companies regarding the sale of my private information and the continued monopoly on set-top boxes is appalling. Stand up to them - tell them ENOUGH! Protect my privacy and lower my cable bill.
—Mark Cronin Ritter, Utica, NY

Poor people need to have cable access at low costs and decent speeds for finding work, and for entertainment and communication purposes. The poor are people too, not animals!
—Leonard Greene, Bluefield, WV

We used to have to rent the telephone company's phone! That was outlawed a few decades ago. Talking landlines here, and Princess and other on-the-wall phones. Also, the phone company monopoly was broken up, and Big Bell was gone, and the Baby Bells were born. Monopoly is the problem with cable TV, and a cause underlying wretched service and blatant overcharging.
—Martha Knight, Port Allegany, PA

our rights are being step on and makeing us pay more then we should cable use.
—Carl Moore, santee, CA

It's time to stop preying on the poor by repealing policy that's greed driven.
—Liann, Pittsburg, CA

The internet is the great equalizer of our era. It has the potential to empower any individual motivated enough to seek out the knowledge and resources it provides. 21st century Americans need easier internet access to thrive and compete in a global digital marketplace. Please don't let monopolistic corporations limit and inhibit this essential utility.
—Matt Watrous, Lansing, MI

My privacy is important to me and my Direct TV cable bill has been going up at an alarming rate, this needs to stop.
—Mr Gary Dean Cox, North Richland Hills, TX

to much of our private is getting lost or so they say ie a security breach or the transfer got hijacked, as for set top boxes just another gimmick to pinch the consumer for more outrageous profit for a service that is lack luster slow and doesn't compete with other countries. stand for the consumer not the monopolies that are the cable industry
—Chancellor Ibberson, Rochester, NY

The cable industry needs to be controlled by the laws of free trade. Please recind the monopoly on set-top boxes, and stop the sale of my private information.
—Stan Zeichner, Columbus, NJ

Privacy is important to me and also my cable bills are highway robbery!
—Linda Graham, Redford, MI

Please act in the interest of the public!!
—Paul Harrison, Edna, TX

Because it's the right thing to do for the American people
—Pete, Yucca Valley, CA

I am on social security..cable bill just went up again. They have added a charge to bring sports to me. They told me it is what the channels charge them. REALLY ?All I get all day is calls from liars and thieves. I always report to the do not call list. I have had the same dig. box for 10 yrs ..still paying. Perhaps I will get a little raise in my ss in a couple years. I worked for Comcast and I know of some of their little tactics to get more money. pease help us FCC ..you are our only hope. protect my privacy and get the crooked politicians out of it.
—Sandra McDaniles, Bloomington, IN

Start working for the PEOPLE instead of the greedy corporate telecom companies.
—Jim Yeaman, Montgomery, AL

I am sick of the cable companies constantly raising rates, then offering me lower rates if I will give them my information. I want my privacy.
—Richard Monahan, San Jose, CA

Please do what is right for your consumers and citizens!
—J martin, Henderson, CO

I am a senior whose sole income is social security. I only watch about 10 - 15 channels a month but my cable bill is $228 a month. The is a chance that I could move in the next few months to get lower rent but I will be forced to either pay off the remaining balance on my outrageous Comcast bill or re-up for another 2 year contract. This is wrong. Consumers should be able to pay for just the channels they actually want. I am subsidizing hundreds of channels that don't interest me in the slightest. Please refuse all merger requests from cable and phone companies. What we need is far more competition, not less. Please protect our privacy. I don't want any ads from anyone.
—Gloria Valoris, Sacramento, CA

Because we all use cable and should not have to pay more than our fair share for it.
—Ms. Linda A. Heath, Grafton, OH

I am old and live alone. Electronic means are the only method I have for keeping in touch with the world and my grown children who live in other states. Comcast and ATT have me by the short hairs and they know it. I have to continue my subscription even though I cant afford it.
—Forrest Hopping, Fresno, CA

No cable monopoly, lower the bills and protect customers privacy.
—Rafael Ormino, Silver Spring, MD

I am a Senior Citizen and the cable bill keeps going up and I keep signing for less and less. When will it ever end? TV and my favorite shows are important to me but I can not afford it. Please help.
—Katherine E. Cunningham, Pittsburgh, PA

Businesses should not sell our private information unless we have consented individually. Cable and forced eternal rental of a TV box is ridiculous. We should be able to choose our cable company and or buy a box. Done
—Linda Jung, Harlem, GA

We have generally slower speeds and higher rates than many other countries. Yet that isn't enough for our current near monopolies. Please act on what you have started.
—Philip Kuhn, Raymond, MS

We need digital freedoms !
—Jordan Poole, Philadelphia, PA

Each and every citizen has a Right to Privacy and to not being price gouged by our current cable monopoly system.
—D Lancon, Tujunga, CA

I don't want to live in a plutocracy.
—Roberta Richardson, Golden, CO

If both these measures are not adopted, we isolated seniors will lose our cable service.
—Mabel and Don McElhaney, Hillsborough, NC

I do not want my private information sold by Comcast. I do not want to pay for a set-top box rental by my cable company.
—Sandra Fujita, Kaneohe, HI

The FCC has NO BUSINESS selling my private information to anyone, nor to take any action to further increase already outrageous cable bill costs! The outright thefts that the traitors who have engaged in such abominable, manipulative acts, attempting to force the FCC to do their bidding at any and all costs, should be fined and punished to the highest extent of the law! We the people of this nation do not need to be further mistreated by the greediest amongst us!
—Janiece D. Staton, Beaverton, OR

Please, I can't afford what the company's which are a monopoly are doing to my financial. No raises, bonuses for government employees who do poor or criminal activities. I'm going from upper middle class to being poor. No joke this true.
—John Shea, Glenshaw, PA

Selling my information without my consent should not be permitted by any group, corporation, or business. Paying 100+ a month for internet and corporate driven media is not democratic.
—Jonathan F Crissey, Leander, TX

I want my privacy protected! and I want a lower cable bill. These are not outrageous demands but common sense steps for consumers. Thank you.
—Ann Collins, Saint Louis, MO

Selling my private information without my consent is, on its face, bad policy. Don't allow it. Also, a monopoly on any electronic device surely tends to delay efficiency and innovation in this area of technology. Again, it's bad policy.
—Bob Filipovich, Helena, MT

A rip-off should never be legal.
—Rolf Radicke, Bristol, PA

I support lower cable bills & privacy. NOT monopolies and more junk mail for stuff I can't afford to buy!
—Connie Cavara, Pittsburgh, PA

Stop letting telcoms rip off consumers and violate our privacy. Thanks to endless mergers there is no competition so we cant vote with our dollars. We need tbr FCC to do its job.
—Jessica Janecki, Durham, NC

The United States Supreme Court has ruled that the right to privacy is implied by the constitutional right to be secure in one's person and possessions. My personal information is my possession. All government agencies, including the FCC, are established to protect the rights and privileges of the people. Please protect our right to privacy.
—Patrick Chapman, Cedar City, UT

We are retired and the cost of living isn't going down. The politicians that want to give everything to corporations also want to cut retirement t benefits. Enough is enough.
—Barry Landson, Bend, OR

Just because people are forced to pay a certain amount for something, doesn't mean that it is worth the price. I can walk away from an over priced garage sale but I can not walk away from a monopoly situation of big telecom gouging its customers and selling info. PRIVATE INFORMATION IS PRIVATE!!!!! In case you were confused.
—Chris Gibbon, ,

I would like to say there is at least ONE federal agency that is honest and has the public good at heart... as it should.
—Steven Yerow, Jersey City, NJ

I do not want anyone selling my private info without my consent.
—Duane Young, Stoneham, MA

I am not fine with the huge bills for my cable...I think we should have more choices....and local government supplying services...may be a good choice !
—Daryl Pullen, Boise, ID

The cable companies make huge profits on our ever increasing cable bills. They have no business selling our personal information to third parties. Ending the monopolies in cable boxes will introduce competition which has proven for years to reduce costs and improve service.
—Jeff Odell, Irvine, CA

I'm on a very limited budget as a retiree.
—Anna Ansari, New York, NY

I support the FCC's broadband privacy proposal and the agency's efforts to end the monopoly on set-top boxes. You should too.
—Jon Connell, Brooklyn, NY

These are common-sense measures that benefit consumers without overturning some basic business model. Our private info should not be a salable item for companies we patronize, nor should forced rental be an acceptable add-on to our cable service.
—Brian Bland, santa monica, CA

my cable bill just for internet connection is obscenely high. also would love to keep my private information PRIVATE.
—Roberta Schepps, guerneville, CA

Comcast is too powerful and ordinary consumers have no real power.
—Jessica Clem, Spring, TX

I applaud your attempts to protect my privacy and lower my cable bills. These are important issues to me because I worry more and more about identity theft and access to information as we have no access without cable here on our island. Please continue to use my name and that of others that support your efforts on our behalf. Thank you so much.
—Deana Shelby, Anahola, HI

You okay ed encryption for basic cable TV now OK options to buy cable TV equipment instead of leasing it. The pre Greene v att days are over, and not need to be rehashed.
—Will, San Antonio, TX

We happen to be a member of "We the People"!
—Bob and Inge Owens, STUART, FL

The monopoly on set top boxes must end
—Robert L Branham, House Springs, MO

Dear FCC THANK YOU for defending American citizens and consumers. Today internet and telecommunications are are essential public, common goods. I have just come from Europe and am shocked and frustrated by the cost, opacity and avarice of oligopolistic communication companies. Now, they are intruding into our private lives and undermining the FCC itself. Please do not let Comcast intrude and exploit its dominant position to the detriment of ordinary Americans. Please Commissioner Rosenwor el, hold fast to FCCs principles. Resist the cable lobbyists! You have our thanks. Sincerely Jessica Gress-Wright
—Jessica Gress-Wright, Orange, CA

The FCC is supposed to work for the public
—Andrea Cassidy, Berkeley, CA

Fixed income ,don't have the money that they would require
—Benjamin Chavez, Henderson, NV

Privacy is a fundamental right recognized by law!
—Dan Coplan, mdr, CA

Consumers do not need to have their privacy rights bought and sold to any bidder because multibillion-dollar corporations want to make even more money. Please protect consumers by taking action for their privacy and for their ability to reduce costs of communications.
—Veralene Campfield, Quincy, IL

Selling private information is the lowest ebb of profit pirates in the cable business, lower our cable bills and refrain from information sales.
—Pam Leighton-Burwell, Austin, TX

Cable is no longer a luxury but should be controlled like water,and electricity. The for profit big companies are squeezing us and limiting our free Choice and privacy.
—Duncan Jones, Lathrup Village, MI

Those who purport to believe in capitalism should champion competition in the set-top box market and should oppose monopoly control of cable service.
—Laurie "Ryan" Norton, Durango, CO

As a retired couple, it is important to us to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month also to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent.
—Kirk & Donna J P Mendenhall, Magna, UT

Because, even though I have kept the same service, my cable company wanted to raise my monthly rates by almost $50, until I called and threatened to cancel! That shouldn't be allowed!
—Donna Turiano, West Palm Beach, FL

These are common-sense, pro-consumer policies and that should be all the justification the FCC in its watchdog capacity should need to move forward QUICKLY on these proposals!
—Vern Maresh, Albuquerque, NM

Protect us from rate increases.
—William Jaskowiak, Eau Claire, WI

Catering to big corporate media conglomerates has got to stop! People deserve better. Please act in our interest instead of the interests of big money.
—Be Erickson, Westlake Village, CA

NO to selling our private information, sans our consent! Make it an illegal and punishable infraction!
—Polly Tarpley, Poulsbo, WA

Third world nations have better service at lower prices. Pretending these rates are warranted is laughable.
—Nan Ayers, Richmond, CA

There are not many options to get internet where I live, so I am forced to pay a high cost for a low bandwidth, which is absurd. Corporations just take our money, and they take advantage of us. We should be protected from this greed. The privacy issues comes when they sell our information with all the data mining they do, yet we still get charged a premium to use the internet. These type of practices need to stop.
—John Davalos, Bakersfield, CA

The Dmark should be the outside wall and carriers should have no say inside that nor should they have access to our usage patterns. This includes freedom to supply my own modem and to determine what information I am prepared to share with those to whom I connect . It's also time that companies like Comcast be required to supply itemized billing so we can see what each service is costing.
—Tom Leonard, Kailua Kona, HI

My cable bill is going through the ceiling. Why? I thought all this new technology was supposed to make things more efficient and cheaper? We have the worst service and the highest cost of the developed world. I was in Europe recently and they have much better services for much less money. I will have to cut the cord soon as it's costing too much!
—Robin Bergman, Arlington, MA

Cable companies are gouging consumers.
—Amber Cornett, Knoxville, TN

monopolies are bad and cable companies make enough as it is.
—Charles C Marye, germantown, MD

Companies should not be allowed to give/sell personal data to 3rd parties without permission. It is our information and we should control who gets iit and what they can do with it. SetTop boxes are a commodity just lite computers and cell phones. No company should have the right to requite that we rent the same box from them they we can buy on the open market. They are selling a service which should not be an open invitation to gauge the public for all they can get.
—Jim Kistler, Westminster, CA

Regulation is healthy for a fair and productive market. Please protect me, you are my voice in the world of mass communications.
—Jonathan Ohlen, Middletown, CA

If I ever can afford to subscribe to comcast again, I sure do not want them to sell my information to ANYONE!
—Dianne Bryant, Yuba City, CA

Do what is RIGHT & JUSTICE prevail for the consumer instead of us being roughshod over by Corporate America! They have ruined this Country enough that their greed and corruption may already be irreversible for a correction! Help the Consumer...will ya for goodness sake!
—Dianne Jacobs, Tucson, AZ

PLEASE !
—Rodd Ringquist, Forest Lake, MN

I do not want my privacy compromised in yet another way for the profits of big corporations. Do NOT use my confidential information in any way that compromises my privacy. And please lower my exhorbitantly expensive cable bill while you're at it, please!
—Edward R. Treuting, Emeryville, CA

consumer protections should outweigh corporate profits at ALL TIMES!
—Jeffrey Falkenstein, Cave Junction, OR

My privacy is of the utmost importance to me as living in a free democracy should entitle me! Cable companies should not hold a monopoly over us consumers.
—Patricia Page, Virginia Beach, VA

I need basic cable to get news and information. The cost to me for no-frills basic Comcast cable television is $38.09 per month. I live in an apartment where there is no other choice. Some of this amount is called "fees" of one kind or another. Billing is opaque and difficult to argue. Can you lower my monthly bill? At age 79, I live on a limited social security income. This Comcast bill is way higher than my electric bill.
—Elizabeth Walker, Santa Rosa, CA

It is important to me for those of you who have family know it is one of the things that keeps family's together. Entertainment!!!!
—Jennifer Alford- Alford-Eichelberger, MIDDLE RIVER, MD

Please protect the privacy of us consumers and stop the outrageous charges our cable companies are forcing on us just to access the Internet. Thank you.
—Ann T. Fathy, San Diego, CA

It is a civic duty to ensure that ALL citizens should be treated equally, including those who are unable to afford some of the means of communication that some of the "better" endowed citizenry" take for granted.
—Roger Hancock, Aurora, IL

These are policies that every cable consumer can support. Cable providers have certainly demonstrated that they will use every trick available to increase their charges while their customer service ratings are among the lowest of any industry.
—Jon Hannahs, Chicago, IL

Stop believing all the lies that big business leaders tell you they are going to do for the consumer. They're all lies. I want you all to stop being so gullible. You're public servants. Public...the little guy...remember? That's who you are working for, not some golfing buddy.
—Nancy Zaman, Los Angeles, CA

Cable and internet service providers were given carte blanche from their beginnings, and the FCC has the power to REASONABLY regulate their activities, in protection of consumers. Financial losses due to identity theft cost over $24 BILLION in 2012. Allowing cable providers and ISPs to sell consumer data will further erode the few protections consumers should be given. The FCC MUST stop the monopolies and their unethical business practices. Congress doesn't just fail to act, they interfere by arguing for their cable/ISP lobbyists, rather than their constituents. Please, please balance the power. Don't let cable companies or ISPs sell our data, and please, rid us of the monopolies. You're our only hope.
—Kimberly Black, Denver, CO

People cannot afford cable anymore & this is just one more example of corporate corrupting government agencies. Pleasw stand up for real live people, not wealthy businesses.
—Linda Ehrisman, Gasquet, CA

what gives them the right to sell my private information.
—Patrick Adams, shawnee, KS

Too many of these large corporate companies find too many ways of overpricing and overdoing unneeded or unwanted services. And to think privacy should be compromised or taken away, though customers have full legal right to privacy and not selling the customers out as 'public domain' is just deplorable and lousy business. You won't see me giving any business to Comcast, and it won't be Verizon either, as their situation is about lack of FiOs accessibility and Comcast's bullying monopolizing scheme. There's one cable company that is worth it, but Comcast has the monopoly in this area, with no competitive choices.
—Beth MacDonald, Greenfield, MA

I'm tired of being gouged, monthly, with extravagant fees for equipment and services. REIN THESE MONEY-MAD CREEPS IN!!!
—Dorothy G. Wilkinson, Hollywood, CA

You are betraying the people by leaving us open to hacking, etc. A lower bill is the right thing to do in this economic climate.
—Adele Galloway, Winfield, KS

I want to have the power over what personal information a company can and can't use. I want to have a say so don't give companies a free hand using my personal information. Please protect my privacy!
—Walter Thompson, Santa Rosa, CA

This would be great PR for you and greatly appreciated.
—Sherrie Rozniecki, Delaware, OH

Cable bills keep going higher & people like me get less for in spite of increases. Keep our cable affordable & do not give cable companies the right to sell my personal information.
—Evelyn Sepulveda, New York, NY

Why am I forced to pay for cable TV I dont even use, just for access to the internet? And I have to do business with this monopoly because nothing else is an option. Please stop the madness ;)
—Rob Goodenow, Topsham, ME

keep my living costs down, nothing but advertising on cable and too many channels I don;t watch and have to pay for. we should be able to choose what channels we want and pay a decent rate for them
—Calvin Varner Helen Zika Dan Wilson, Betty Wilson, Mansfield, OH

Privacy is a right, and we're losing it more each day. Stop the intrusion into citizens lives and help save Democracy in the process.
—Charlene Davies, Spokane, WA

Invasion of privacy is unconstitutional. Congress should not have a right to deny our rights.
—Jack Lloyd, Spokane, WA

Invasion of privacy is unconstitutional. Congress should not have a right to deny our rights.
—Sharon McHugh, San Ramon, CA

My cable television bills are way to high and my wife wants to drop Comcast and switch to an old fashioned antenna which will pay for itself in one month after we drop cable. We will be limited to local broadcast channels within 60 miles of our home but it will be worth it with all the fees and taxes. The FCC needs to protect consumers and not huge media conglomerates who have monopolies.
—Timothy Alstrum, East Hartford, CT

I'm a full-time wheelchair user. I do not drive a car. I live in a city that has bus transportation and very little snow so that I can get around at least a little. But it also rains nine months out of the year and has plenty of hills so along with the computer stuff I'm doing I watch TV because it keeps me company. It makes me feel less alone. But I'm on a fixed income and the cable companies have reduced the number of stations available on my tier twice so I'm down to about half of the number of channels I had when I signed up, with no reduction in price! I'm basically being charged more that I was when I signed up for half as many channels. Believe me when I tell you I am not inclined to go to iron tier, but I don't want to be without television access either. The world is changing to vast and they need a way to keep up with it in real time. I use the Internet a lot to as I help manage a lab for people with disabilities but I can only take care of part of the picture. People need to be in use TV without being scalped as far as prices. Thank you for listening.
—Tom Ross, Seattle, WA

Cable companies have pretty close to monopoly power. My apartment building owners do not like satellite connections (they think they do damage cable connections don't) and forbid me from having them-- so I have no choice but cable. Please do not enhance my cable company's monopoly power over me.
—Ken Perry, Oxford, OH

It is beyond outrageous that any company can sell my personal information, especially without my knowledge or consent. I strongly urge you to prohibit this practice and keep my private information private.
—Jeff S, Ogdensburg, NY

There is no real competition outhere where customers can choose between various companies for a better rate and service. Only the big companies seem to have their monopolies and sticking you with large bills and poor service. I remember when cable internet first took off. There were so many local comapnies who offered better service and price for customers to choose from. Just about all of them were bought and merged into this massive money hungry monster we see today. Finish what you have started and do it for the American people. Just about everyone is sucking the blood out of us. DO THE RIGHT THING!!!!
—Arafat Khaskheli, Spring, TX

Both of these issues are part of the very reason the FCC exists. Do the right thing: put us before the corporados' insatiable greed any prying.
—T Jeffries, ,

We deserve fair prices and a free and open internet. Make it so.
—Joseph Barlow, Indianapolis, IN

i am an older woman and can barely pay my cable bill for internet and phone - i gave up tv because i simply can't afford it. If the internet starts costing or costs keep going up, pretty soon i and many millions like me will be cut off, and that's only going to increase the need for expensive government resources. Please do you job
—Rev Louisa A. Dyer, Weaverville, NC

Say no to the cor
—Deborah Brody Chen, Cromwell, CT

We should have a right to privacy and not be subject to corporate monopolies and lack of competition
—Victoria Crampton, Bozeman, MT

This is common sense. Just do it already.
—Deborah Crohn, Portland, OR

I NEED TO SAVE MONEY
—Mr. William Ruch Jr., Cranbury NJ, NJ

Please, our privacy needs to be protected. Cable/TV is way too high. Ending the monopoly on the set top boxes we must rent would help lower our costs.
—Deborah Peterson, Indianapolis, IN

I have paid over $3,000 for my AT&T set-top boxes over the past four years, in addition to $9600 for content & Internet access. This is way too much for TV & internet. And the cost keeps increasing. Please help!
—Lee Lindsey, Cypress, TX

We need a free press that's accessible to all. That can't happen when corporations who have no interest in serving their stakeholders increase prices and decrease services in order to profit themselves and their shareholders.
—Cindee C McCallister, Costa Mesa, CA

I don't like getting unsolicited phone calls, mailings etc. And, as I am retired, welcome any reduction in bills.
—Ms. Catherine Loudis, San Anselmo, CA

I support the FCC broadband privacy proposal. It is crucial to sustain the integrity of the internet.
—Gloria E Donohue, San Francisco, CA

My personal information is private and should not even be collected, let alone shared. Forcing consumers to rent overpriced boxes is a prime example of crony capitalism. Free market be damned, as long as cable companies keep "contributions" flowing.
—John Persico, Buffalo, NY

I am already besieged with phone calls, mail, and email from parties that have no business contacting me. Privacy invasion and identity theft are growing in a scary fashion. The FCC has not been proactive enough in protecting consumers in this area. This needs to change immediately.
—Dr. K Stahl, Fort Lauderdale, FL

We need competition in cable not one company that can charge as much as they like to customers.
—Bernadette Belcastro, FLORAL PARK, NY

Cable rates are sky high!
—Dick Gatz, Lexington, KY

Getthisdone= tired of paying and getting little in return
—Nanette Wizov, Penns Grove, NJ

As a consumer, I know that prices keep escalating as we have fewer choices. Monopolistic mergers keep taking more money out of our pockets. As a citizen, I believe that I have a right to control my private information. If I am OK with letting it be sold, then the profits should belong to me.
—Sandra Stein, Ithaca, NY

Keep our private information private. Why should a private company be allowed to profit from our information?
—Batya van Messel, New York, NY

The FCC should be watching out for the interests of the consumers. It's time you do your job!
—Ginny Corwin, Middleton, WI

Monopolies are supposed to be illegal in this country and no one should have the right to sell your information without your consent.
—J Belcastro, Floral Park, NY

End the monopoly and leave my information private
—Cindy curran, bowdoinham, ME

This is important because the cable companies charge us way too much for tv. Ehst was once was free basic channels is no longer. And unless someonevsteps in its only going to get worse
—Kelly Bechtel, ,

Cable fees are killing us... I remember when the only tv was free over the air and we had to suffer through commercials. Now we still suffer through commercials but pay a premium for the privilege. Cable TV needs to be affordable for all because television provides the nation with important information often vital to us as a united nation of diverse people.
—Paul G Ecklund, Marietta, GA

MOST MEDIA COVERAGE IS TOO VIOLENT PLEASECREDUSE VIOLENCE IN THE MEDIA. THANK YOU
—MICHELE DAwn SANDERSON, Walnut Creek, CA

I spend more money on watching TV than I do on my car payment. This is wrong.
—Lynn Levine, Minneapolis, MN

My personal habits are mine, they shouldn't be up for sale.
—Michael Pennington, West Palm Beach, FL

End political games. Citizens vs corporat interests
—Linda Medeiros, Cloverdale, CA

I value my privacy, especially when I'm online.
—E Mothershead, Mesa, AZ

This is about the PEOPLE, not the corporations. Please represent us.
—Sandra V. Mueller, Livingston, MT

I have a limited income, and I need to save up for more important things like buying a car which I'm saving my hard earned money for. People like me depend on cable and broadband today as a way of life in today's America. People with limited incomes shouldn't have to bear the cost of more unnecessary higher cable bills.
—David Broden, Framingham, MA

These cable prices are out of control. Already I have turned off my TV. What is next? This isn't the America I grew up in where the rich become richer at the expense of the working class citizens. Prices must be lowered.
—Pamela Sheridan, Woodstown, NJ

Duh! Really? C'mon, personal liberties AND privacy are cornerstones of our freedom. Get with the 21st century, eh?
—Joe Cooper, Austin, TX

Costs are unreasonable.
—Linda Norton, College Station, TX

If prices don't come down, our family will have to cancel cable. Groceries and medicine come before cable.
—Mariko Yannacone, Palm Bay, FL

Privacy is important to me. If Comcast can sell my data, it puts me at greater risk of identity theft.
—J M, Columbia, MD

Help make this a government by the people, and for the people.
—Dwight Tuinstra, Potsdam, NY

I want freedom of choice regarding set-top boxes, which will lower my cable bill and allow me greater choice for viewing. Also, no providers should be able to sell private information about me without my consent. My right to privacy should not supersede a cable company's assumed right to profit off of information I did not agree to share.
—Anthony Glover, Bronx, NY

Please, monopolies are un-American!
—Maria Jacobson, New Ulm, MN

Because of cable's high prices, we did away with our cable. Comcast does not have the right to sell my private information.
—Michelle Lever, Kansas City, MO

A lot of us are housebound and depend on regular Television, which has been ruined by cable. So it is only right that we pay low premiums on our cable bills considering that we are having to pay for something that for many years we got free! I can barely afford my cable! But it is all I have!
—June Arnett, Dallas, TX

My cable bill is larger than my car payment. Something ain't right.
—Larry Sullivan, decatur, GA

We already have little real choice in tv and pay exorbitant rates. Are information should not be allowed to be sold and there must be competition in the set top box industry.
—Jeremy Sohn, Plainfield, IL

It makes dollars and "SENSE"!
—Robert Baxter Jr, Clarkston, MI

My family will be unable to afford the continued abnormal high cost of cable TV with internet and will be moving to an all mobile/cell phone plan.
—Julius Tasselmyer, Trucksville, PA

You drag you asses every time there is something to do for the working or middle class. Delay, compromise its getting old. Do you damn job for a change.
—James Norgrove, Winter Park, FL

I am tired of these internet and telephone companies running over the rights of the American people.
—Lj Lombardo, Beaumont, TX

I think it should be obvious to all of you why this is important to me.
—Dave Benson, Aurora, OH

We have been losing our privacy in our personal business and lives increasingly. Please pass the FCC's Broadband Privacy Proposal and stop the selling of our prrsonal information by Comcast and others. Also please stop the monopolies including of set-top boxes for cable service.
—Victoria Bower, Puyallup, WA

I am on SSI and I pay $56.00 a month for basic Internet as it goes up Every 6 months when they want you to take TV & phone service , You Decline and its goes up It is All I have , just a computer and I can't pay any more for so little.
—Alita DeMarco, Ypsilanti, MI

We rely on you to protect national interests over special interests. Please do your best!
—Deborah J. Miller, Austin, TX

It's REPUGNANT that you vote along Political Party lines instead of representing the best interests of your fellow citizens. How much money did you get when you sold your souls???
—Dr. Jeffrey Paul LaGasse M.D., Freeland, WA

Individuals have no bargaining power against giant enterprises. We rely on you to protect our interests.
—Alvin Goldman, Denver, CO

As a senior citizen, my income is limited, while cable tv is my main means of aquiring information and entertainment, it is becoming increasingly unaffordable.
—Sunny Payne, Philadelphia, PA

Please do the right thing about privacy and cable boxes.
—Onka Dekker, Washington, DC

We are all aware where this is going Internet providers won’t rest until the government’s net-neutrality rules are dead! Kindly do you job and stop the hypocrisy. thank you
—Sharon Scanlon, Cherry Hill, NJ

Already there's too much of OUR activities being logged, sold, 'dig-data processed' for further, future more effective suasions upon us against our wills. Please allow the American citizens to have access to, to consume some information & entertainment without having the details of our activities being 'big-data-ed' for some else's goals & bottom-line.
—Umar Bell, Whitefish, MT

Selling our information without option or consent is unethical and not in the public's best interest. Legislation to protect citizens from monopolies was enacted for very good reasons; serve citizens
—Jamie Myers, Fort Collins, CO

I believe in PUBLIC ownership of PUBLIC resources. If we can't have that, then we must not tolerate monopolies. Please protect access and privacy.
—Pamela Williams, Boise, ID

Please take action to end the monopolies that cable and satellite companies have in the United States. Consumers have no true choice. The cable and satellite companies seems to have complete control over certain areas which means they can charge anything they want. This situation is the opposite of a free market.
—Susan Burton, Columbus, IN

Lower cable bills mean I can help my family more financially. Please do your jobs and finish what you started!
—Christian Bryant, Detroit, MI

Stop huge mergers and big money interests from denying free and easy access! The internet is not for the Wild, Wild West!
—Eric John Fry, Dallas, TX

Don't force us to rent the boxes! It's highway robbery on a monthly basis!
—Karen Hewelt, New Baltimore, MI

I want my privacy protected.
—Virginia Jastromb, Northampton, MA

I am a disabled senior, and I can barely afford cable TV now, and it's all I have to keep me company during the day, and warn me of bad weather. Please help me so I won't have to give this up.
—Patrice Ann Shay, Byron Center, MI

FCC, please stand up to cable industry and their friends in Congress. Let us preserve democratic forms of communication.
—James Donaldson, Okanogan, WA

FCC, please stand up to cable industry and their friends in Congress. Let us preserve democratic forms of communication.
—James Donaldson, Okanogan, WA

This is a matter of common sense and fairness
—Sharon Crane, Cody, WY

I cut the cord years ago and use a ROKU with 700+ channels currently only paying for NETFLIX and HULU. High rates are why!
—David J Miller, Gilford, NH

I have cable to listen to the news (not Fox) and C-span but, they keep raising the cost and as a senior, I can't afford it. I'm not alone. We are being forced to subsidize non profitable channels and pay for the set-top boxes. You can end the monopolies and the selling of private information. Please do so before the end of the Obama Administration.
—Margaret Wilson, Green Bay, WI

Money is tight as is with a min wage full time job without renting something so superfluous.
—Jason D Carlisle, Indianapolis, IN

For many working people cable tv is a huge source of entertainment but the cost is becoming prohibitive! A few companies monopolize the industry and hold us hostage.
—Michele Moreno-Cheverez, Santa Barbara, CA

Too much profit.
—Marianne Amann, Ingleside, IL

Stop the Greed
—Rick Foster, Lynch Station, VA

Media companies keep merging and sucking up more power at the expense of consumer privacy and choice. Buck the trend. No one else has the power to fight back.
—Lawrence A. Swain, Temecula, CA

My privacy is not yours to take.
—Hanna Kutcher, Sylvania, OH

I need the cost of cable to be lower
—Maria Mota, ,

I'm sick of the lack of Anti-Trust enforcement. Your next move will be to Ireland? T.U.R.D.S.
—Yara Mello, Yelm, WA

My personal information is not for sale and I wont allow the likes of Comcast, Verizon or the like to arbitrarily steal my information and sell it to their "3rd party partners. That would be total BS if the FCC allows this kind of crap to happen.
—Donald L. Burg, Pomona, CA

During the last 4 years, my cable bill has doubled...without ANY adjustments on my part. As far as I'm concerned it's a monopoly. I have two choices in my area, and that is true all over the country,..some have only one choice. I am absolutely opposed to bundling manipulations.
—E Muriel Schlecht, Tewksbury, MA

My privacy should not be sold without my consent..
—Geri Nolan, Milwaukee, WI

I'm a retired school teacher and I live on a fixed income that does little or no adjustment for inflation. Therefore, it is getting harder and harder to make ends meet. It would help if Cable and dish bills could remain relatively small.
—Mr. Wayne Flick, Cimarron, CO

Right now my Comcast bill is between $155-169, mo. & that is way more than I can afford. When I moved into this senior housing unit, I was told that we HAD to use Comcast, as the company that owns these units, "Interstate Realty Mgmt., aka The Michaels Organization, I was told that they contracted with Comcast/Xfinity to provide our tv, telephone & internet providers. Being a senior citizen on a fixed income, & was quite ill when I moved in 2 yrs. ago, I did nothing about what I consider to be a monopoly that I was forced into. It began around $99/mo. & now it is so very much more. PLEASE help me & all others who have been forced into using Comcast or nothing. Protect us from this huge, heartless MONOPOLY. Thank you so very much!!!
—Elizabeth Juvet, Cloverdale, CA

My privacy is my business, not comcasts nor att's. And no monopoly is wanted or needed in a free and democratic society.
—Mark Bachelder, San Anselmo, CA

This monopoly is corrupt and takes advantage of the American people!
—Anita Vogel, Orange City, IA

In spite of what radical capitalists will insist on, every single thing should not be turned into a commodity. Our right to privacy is certainly one of those things.
—Gary Alderette, Santa Rosa, CA

1) No corporation should be allowed to sell anyone's private data without that individual's consent! Our privacy should be protected by Constitutional law, and if it isn't, we need an amendment to safeguard our personal data, just as much as our bodies! 2) Cable monopolies are bad for this country! Such monopolies keep the costs of service artificially inflated, halt technological progress, and corrupt the local governments that support these monopolies! Also, cable companies that have monopolies are notorious for terrible service!
—Linda Lee, Atlanta, GA

FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler has two strong proposals on the table: one would stop Comcast from selling your private information without your consent, and another would lower your cable-TV bill by ending the monopoly on that set-top box you're forced to rent each month. Please protect my privacy and lower my cable bill TODAY.
—Joe Ayers, Racine, WI

I have a right to free access without monopolies strangling the air ways.
—Michael House, Salt Lake City, UT

We can only get tv reception through cable tv and it is too expensive
—Carol Gordon, Los Angeles, CA

I'm retired and getting SQUEEZED.
—Mr. David Audette, Saint Helens, OR

Internet access is now so ubiquitous in our society that it is nearly a necessity. One cannot get a job, do research for school, or locate certain services without an internet connection. Do the right thing, protect the internet from companies like Comcast
—Brian Wagnon, Springfield, MO

I am very concerned about privacy. I think big companies like Comcast should need my permission to sell my private information. I'm a Comcast customer. They probably know all kinds of personal stuff about me. It's not good to think they can sell that information to someone else.
—Joshua Sperry, Oakland, CA

I am housebound so all my social interactions are through electronic media. Privacy and cost are very important to me.
—Katherine Lake, Marshalltown, IA

I am a senior citizen, of course, living on a fixed income. Comcast just raised my cable/phone/internet bill by $35/month. I can't afford that! I am currently trying to decide what I want to give up...cable/phone/internet? Food? Prescriptions? Giving birthday and Christmas gifts to my children and grandchildren? Please do whatever you can to keep cable bills down.
—Linda Ahart, West Roxbury, MA

This is important for every obvious reason. Not only is it ludicrous that we pay four times the rate of nearly any country in Europe for inferior service, it is just another greedy slap in the face from our corporate overlords.
—Denver Davis, Captain Cook, HI

I am paying 192.00 a month for basic cable service.
—Ed Gould, Chicago, IL

Cable costs are outrageous; further erosion of our privacy ifor someone's commercial gain is deeply depressing.
—Dr Nora J Klein M.D., houston, TX

The FCC doesn't seem to understand anymore who they work for, and what their responsibilities are. Please protect the people's right to privacy. Many thanks.
—Caroline Good, sherman Oaks, CA

First, selling private customer information is bad enough but doing so without a) notifying the customer & b) not having the customer's approval before hand is simply egregious. Its things like this that keep me from getting cable. Second, another reason I don't have cable is the "extras" they charge for that they know you'll to pay or no cable service for you. The FCC should remember they're supposed to protect the customer not the provider(s). Pretty Simple!
—Pat Palmer, Indianola, IA

from the start we were told that if we agreed to help pay to run the cable lines that we would have a voice in the process. We were told that we would be able to choose individual channels to control our bills. The cable companies have enough power, they should not be able to sell our personal information
—Joan Ludvik, Lumberton, TX

I'm tired of geting Concast ads in the mail and email. And you are tasked with helping us, the consumers: please lower our bills!
—Vic and Barby Ulmer, Saratoga, CA

For all of the above reasons. Kathleen
—Kathleen Nelson, Denver, CO

My personal information is not for sale by the non-competitive cable company that I am stuck with in my community… and I should be able to look to a competitive pay-TV set top box. Pass the new rules now.
—Bernard J. Couming, Stoughton,, MA

duh..?
—Frank Maiorano, Brooklyn, NY

Thee FCC job is to protect the public interest, not promote the private sector. The private sector is doing fine.
—Jeff Goodwin, Los Angeles, CA

It is extremely important that you stop Comcast from making more money by selling private informaton. You have also been ask time and again to force these companies to stop gouging people so that their CEo's can get even richer. I don't want my personal information to be sold for any reason, and it's way past time to make them lower their prices so that it is more affordable to low and fixed income Americans.
—Carol Quick, Bloomfield, NM

Cable costs are too high so we get our TV and radio over the air. Many people we know have also rejected cable due to exorbitant costs and limited choices. Our privacy is essential.
—Cheriel Jensen, Saratoga, CA

Because you must stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent. You can also lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Lila Berman, Tucson, AZ

I care about my privacy. It should not be legal to sell my private information without my consent. I thought it was the job of government to protect the people not corporations.
—Elizabeth A. Senhen, San Diego, CA

We need more oversight and control of our personal data that these companies collect. When it comes to personal data we should have an opt in system where you are assumed to opt out of data collection and selling of personal info. Instead you should have to opt in to programs to sell and share your data. This only makes sense in light of the constant hacking scandals, we the people cannot expect these unknown third parties to protect our valuable information.
—David Lira, Manvel, TX

Internet access has become an essential component for anyone living in the US. The internet was created to facilitate universally equal access. Unfortunately Service Providers are working to limit access to those who can pay the most. They would render the only level playing field in the world, into a sad pay per view tv channel. I urge you to protect consumers' privacy, regulate fair pricing and ensure quality service. Thank you Brent Supperstein
—Brent Supperstein, Colorado Springs, CO

Cable and ISP companies may be the future of commerce. They must be fair.
—Gregory A Nasif, Brookline, MA

Like the modem for high-speed internet cable (which we once had to rent forever), consumers should have the option of supplying their own set-top box.
—Morrow Frank, Bellingham, WA

I strongly believe that shopping Comcast strengthens innovation and supports start-ups and smaller companies. And as the US serves as a role model for most other democracies, your decision has a large impact on European countries!
—Dr. Matthias Doblies, Glienicke,

For too long the cable giants have monopolized the agenda. It's past time to reign them in!
—Herb Long, ASHLAND, OR

As a senior surviving on Social Security, the $11.75 per month I pay for the rental of the set top box is a major hit on my tiny amount of disposable income. No company should be allowed to sell any individual's private information with out consent. Your vote literally affects each day of my life. Please think about me and place your vote in the interest of the consumer over the corporation. Thank you.
—Michal Bouilly, Camarillo, CA

compared to the rest of the world, cable is too expensive already —william schaffer, Las Vegas, NV

Give us and our children privacy...
—Mr. Elbie Yates, Jacksonville, FL

We are open to fraud and unwanted solicitations...
—, Los Angeles, CA

Corporations exist to serve us citizens, not the other way around -- unless one is an acolyte of the sociopath and misanthrope Ayn Rand (as are Paul Ryan and so many of his fellow Republicans).
—AJ Averett, Potsdam, NY

Comcast having less cash and in so less political clout =win win
—stafford Carter, Bremerton, WA

80 yr old retiree-vet-fixed income-live below poverty lever, & there are a lot of us,,peace
—Frank G Sandoli, akron, OH

We have been over charged for years now is the time to end the unfair business practices!
—Lee Taylor, Port St Lucie, FL

Comcast is already a monopolistic menace. They never should have been allowed to merge with a TV network, and now they want to sell our information as well? They shouldn't be allowed to bully a government organization by making threats, either. We need you to stand up for what's right, if you don't, who will? We spend on you to exercise the power we do not have as individuals over ruthless, power-hungry companies like Comcast.
—Nancy Norbeck, Lawrenceville, NJ

So may of us are on fixed incomes that we need lower cable bills.
—James van Maanen, Boca Raton, FL

Opening the ubiquitous "cable box" to competition would increase competition, so we'd get a better product at better price. Recall how such moves improved the telephone industry- when we no longer had to purchase the phones from the phone companies, the phones immediately got better AND cheaper.
—John R. Vigna, New Kensington, PA

Cable bills are outrages! The cable co. make enormous amounts of money just on renting us the cable boxes alone. These companies are to large and should not be allowed to become any larger.
—Ann I. Aurelio, West Sayville, NY

Laws such as the bills presented before you are what was supposed to make this country great. It is a shame we have went so far the other way and we do not even realize it. Please do the right thing.
—Timothy Clark, Paducah, KY

WHY? would you allow Comcast to make a profit by selling our private information? WHY? It is just plain wrong and smacks of corruption at the highest level of government agencies
—Ron Kaminski, Patchogue, NY

Cable bills are entirely too high. We're tired of paying for things we don't need.
—Elizabeth McDonough, Alexandria, VA

The FCC's regulatory policy decisions also affect those of us in the electronic universe outside US physical borders. And while our methods may differ, we face the same issues that you are dealing with. Hopefully you will continue to serve reasoned public interests over those of Comcast (et al), and not let them control our shared "airwaves". Thank you for all you do.
—Alex Burton, ,

Chairman Wheeler, you can stand with the masses against the power and influence of the almighty dollar. Comcast and other Big Corporation's only concern is to control and maintain their own oligarchies, for their own greedy benefits. They are in zero way concerned about how they would negatively impact us. They already gouge us with these outrageously high rates, and poor service. Because they recognize that they are the only game in town, and they take advantage of us, accordingly. Stop their abuse of the masses. Do not give them anymore power and control over us, as we have no recourse against them.
—Arturo Blake Sr, Mount Prospect, IL

I'm tired of corporations taking precedent over citizens. America wasn't founded by Comcast.
—Michael Neeman, Dayton, OH

I don't have cable any more. Didn't want Comcast as my provider.
—Mike Kostich, Milwaukee, WI

Cable and Satellite companies are out of control.. Pricing is outrageous. You need to get a handle on this.
—Ivey, Clinton, ME

We need protection from big business greed and power
—Nancy Blastos, Redlands, CA

I AM DISABLED.GOING OUT IS A STRUGGLE OF PROPORTION .BY BUYING CABLE ITS ACTUALLY GIVES SOME ME HAPPINESS ! THE PRICE OF CABLE IS VERY EXPENSIVE AND TAKES AS LONG TO PAY AS WHEN WE ARE TURNED O FF AFTER A FEW MONTHS OF NON PAYMENTS
—Brian T Bayer, williston park, NY

It is the job of the FCC to protect the consumer from big cable companies, not to frustrate and block our protections. Remember, if the GOP gets its way your agency will be eliminated entirely as will your jobs. Get it done!
—Paul Apollonio, Garden Grove, CA

The cable companies & big telecom have monopolies in our cities. They have managed to pass local laws that prevent cities to provide high speed internet to their residents & businesses.
—Carl Hearne, North Canton, OH

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Mrs. Wilkie Little, WINSTON SALEM, NC

Soon to be on retirement income only;, will no longer be able to afford cable and there are no free over the air channels in my vicinity. We need to curb prices in every way to continue access to information and entertainment for seniors.
—Janet Smoker, Corvallis, OR

Cable rates are through the roof! Stop allowing super-monopoly cable conglomerates to rip off consumers!
—Janis Lentz, Ocala, FL

I can't even afford cable TV, we watch off of a digital antennae.
—Kelly Small, Schoolcraft, MI

Consumers should NOT be forced to pay the never ending rental fees for set-top boxes. After a few months rental fees, boxes are bought and paid for and the fee becomes gravy for telecommunication companies bottom line.
—Denise A Hickey, Orono, ME

We're moving from simple obstruction into Neo-Fascist obstruction, the kind that leads to all sorts of unpleasantness for those who are doing the obstructing. Please tell Republican Congressmen that many Americans feel that this year may be the final straw. Tell them to give up the corporate alignment before it is too late. Because once things start to go bad, you can't pull them back.
—Joseph O'Shaughnessy, Downers Grove, IL

Don't let them bully you into allowing them to invade our privacy and set their own rates. We are counting on you to protect the rights of the consumer and not allow the cable bill companies to increase their profits at the expense of our Constitutional, as well as other legal rights.
—Anita McInnis, Bellflower, CA

Help me! Government and corporations are targeting and taking away virtually everything I have. I am losing my freedoms, my cultural connections, my food, my healthcare, my privacy, and my sanity. Please do what you can to save me.
—William McDowell, Tomahawk, WI

cable bills are too high!!
—Richard Gardner Sr, Chicago, IL

Support democracy.
—Ms. Eleanor Arons, New York, NY

I don't want the cable company selling any of my information.
—Barry G. Davis, York, ME

No one is protecting the people from corporate abuse. This has to end.
—Thomas Moore, Philadelphia, PA

Because of monopolies there are only two internet providers to my home and both are expensive. I would love to have access at a reasonable price and to be able to use it for my grandchildren!
—Dr. Judy G. bramlett, Meadows of Dan, VA

I don't have cable because I can't afford it. If the bills were lower, maybe I'd change my mind.
—Cris D'Angelo, Tampa, FL

Good grief, people, do your job and protect our privacy . . . what's left of it . . . from further corporate marauding!
—Maura Stephens, Spencer, NY

OMG !
—Lynn Levin, Bayonne, NJ

Private information is by it's very nature private! Let's keep it that way.
—P S Wright, pottsboro, TX

There is a reason I ditched all cable/satellite providers, and this is it. The price is too high, and the providers hold all the cards. Ask anyone about how to run with Comcast and they'll say "after 12 months of the promotional price (what it really should be) just call them and threaten to quit, they'll lower the price a little". Just that should tell you a little about how they operate. Add in the Lobbying, and dirty pool they play on the public they really need to be brought back into line. I know they (mostly) operate by the letter of the law, but certainly not the spirit of the law. Lets adjust these laws and bring them back to where they should be. I think its time again for another round of what occurred when Bell was split up.
—Howard Robinson, Saratoga Springs, UT

End the cable monopoly!
—Shad N, Lansing, MI

As cable companies consolidate, they raise fees once or twice a year. People's income does increase at that rate.
—Edwina White, Sacramento, CA

You cannot have a true democracy and we have never had one, unless ALL citizens have the same opportunities to be part of deal. Enough with exceptionalism and private clubs for the wealthy. Cable companies are thieves. I have fired them.
—Rosemary Graham-Gardner, Manhattan Beach, CA

August 16, 2016 Chairman Wheeler / Commissioner Rosenworcel: Please pass these two measures. Both make sense for the American people. Privacy is at the very heart of our democracy. Yet each day it is eroded by corporate policies which hold privacy in very low regard and do little to protect U.S. consumers / citizens. The forced renting of the cable boxes is not only anachronistic, it's monopolistic. We no longer are required to rent phones from the phone company. Why should we be compelled to rent set-top boxes from cable and satellite TV companies? Greed is the simple answer. The boxes cost very little to produce. Yet, consumers are forced to pay $12 a month (on average) to rent one box. In a given year, the average U.S. consumer pays approximately $144 to rent a single box -- a single box which most likely costs no more than $100, possibly less, to purchase outright. Please pass these two common sense measures. Peter J. May
—Peter J. May, La Habra, CA

I have no viable internet choice in the area where I live; so am stuck with a monthly bill of $140. TV commercials are disgustingly voluminous! End the monopoly on end set top boxes and above all protect our private information
—Karen Doulin, Brooksville, FL

This government MUST become "for the People". You have a great opportunity. Act now against big business and act for the people. You CAN do it!!
—Daryl Peterson, Welch, MN

Privacy is of utmost importance and saving money is something we all want to do.
—Gary Hopkins, clinton, IA

It is the responsibility of the FCC to protect the rights and best interests of citizens. Despite efforts to the contrary, we all know that Comcast is not an individual but a corporation with interests that do not always include the best interest of the individual. Please prevent Comcast from invading our privacy and profiting from it.
—Mary Susan Martin, Haddonfield, NJ

It. Just. Is.
—S-3 Burton, Conway, SC

Living on a limited income means anything that lowers my bills is of the greatest importance. I don't need excessive charges on my computer or the spreading of my world to strangers.
—IHM Ann Sister Mary Ann Ford, Hamtramck, MI

US citizens have a right to their privacy, and we need to stop paying for what used to be free!!
—Laurie Mauro, Lakewood, NJ

Why is it that when your cable company is taken over by another one that your cable bill automatically goes up in price? Also, our private information should not be able to be boughy and sold with out our consent.
—Elizabeth Boynton, Temple Terrace, FL

Cable companies regularly engage in predatory practices on their customer base becaus they're protected by their natural monopolies in their various markets. It's time to introduce more competition so consumers have a chance to receive ethical service that's worth the money we pay.
—David Rigby, Oceanside, CA

Vote in favor of ordinary people, not companies!
—Johannah White, New Orleans, LA

THere's NO reason whatsoever for these companies to be allowed to have a monopoly on offering these services! And NO company with as much info as the cable companies gather-WITHOUT MY PERMISSION!!!!- should be allowed to sell,and even make a whopping profit from MY personal info, it to anyone, anywhere. THey really shouldn't be allowed to collect that kind of info, period! Why should they be allowed to charge extra for a box that means without it I can't get their services? I suspect it's an end-run around current fee regulations they have adeptly circumvented with these box rentals;the boxes should just be included as normal equipment. You represent THE PEOPLE, not the providers, and thank you for doing all you have done so far, it's been awesome to see and appreciate. We really DO have a right to privacy, though the actual laws are vague onthis issue- we can MAKE it a law by actively protecting our right to privacy. Thank you for assuring our privacy and reasonable charges and getting rid of a ridiculous monopoly-which is truly unconstitutional.
—Linda Decker, Pleasanton, CA

My private information is Mine! And cable/internet prices are out if control! I switched to basic canle and internet to save $25 a month, but the price creep has wiped out that savings. I haven't had that kind if increase in pay, come in niw!
—Lisa Canning, San Diego, CA

We already pay too much
—Brandon Landas, Leesburg, VA

I guard my privacy and so should comcast
—Celeste Lightheart, Scarborough, ME

With everything being so expensive we need a break.
—Julie orosco, San Antonio, TX

I have an expectation of privacy when purchasing goods and services. I am against having companies like Comcast holding a gun to my head forcing me to accept their "terms and conditions" which include selling of personally identification information and marketing information. Stop Comcast and any/all companies from using every scrap of data they acquire from sales and services being used against consumers in attempts to generate more sales.
—Glenn Hawkins, Poulsbo, WA

I want my privacy, why do I have to have it taken away from? If Comcast is going to sell my private information, do I get to profit too? What benefits are helping me and my family if I allow companies to have their way to make money off of my private information? It does not take one to have a Ivy league education to see that there is a monopoly going on with the set-top boxes and we are forced pay climbing fees every few months where it is ridiculous to put customers in a dictatorship environment. The government expects US citizens to be informed and educated citizens and consumers, yet we have to pay a high price to get news and educational information. Please help to protect unethical business practices and to lower cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly. Thank you for reading my plea. -Dawn Feintuch
—Dawn Feintuch, BRONX, NY

The power and abuse of consumers by cable companies has gone of for far too long.
—Yuana Blanke, Chicago, IL

i had Comcast but the bill got out of control now we get 5ch. & 3 of them are PBS. Please help the little guy,

My communications bill is extremely high and my privacy is important to me!
—Ann Kelly, Mount Laurel, NJ

Privacy and choice are important parts of freedom. Cable companies should not be able to sell or share my info without consent. Also the set-top box rental is an unfair practice that costs more than it should.
—Chris Fernando, San Jose, CA

Freedom of the press and related media is important to me.
—Joel S. Trupin PhD, Marshfield, VT

I'm tired of companies making money from my private information. I'm tired of rates going up when we don't have a decent interest rate to keep in step and I'm tired of monopolies! Please FCC, help we consumers out!

costs keep rising. cable companies acquire other cable companies and raise the rate.
—Leland Jay Baldwin, Norwalk, CA

My personal information is owned by me, not the cable industry. Any information I've given them was given in strict confidence in order to honor a contract. As a customer I have proprietary rights to my personal information about myself. i have a right to my self, the identity of myself, and all information pertaining thereof. A contract does not give the cable industry rights to my person nor should they have rights to my information. Monopolies have/are screwing up the normal flow of business competition which has ultimately made prices fixed and/or increased. This has nothing to do with business costs. Business is based on supply & demand by the consumer, not! by the business. When a business demands a consumer to not only pay exorbant prices, but gives the consumer no rights to choose... doesn't that reek of Stalinism?
—I J., North Adams, MA

Everythin should not be a available for sale such as life, dignity, privacy and harmony in society.
—Syed Fazlurrehman, Ontario, CA

If they sell my information, I would think that I would get the money. It seems crazy that a company can take my information sell it for money, and I don't get the money? WT- Under No circumstance do I want my personal information being sold - especially if I am not getting the money for the sale of my information.
—N Avery Litin, Minden, NV

The injustice of your agency not finishing what it started can't be underestimated, the protection of my privacy and the concurrent lowering of my cable bill would address it.
—Jamesm M Nordlund, Moorhead, MN

As a citizen I thought that I was entitled to privacy as spelled out in the privacy laws of this country and to a certain amount of anonymity. Please do not let them sell my information to anyone. The Set top boxes are a joke too. The set top boxes are monopolistic reduce or eliminate competition and limit my choices in the free market. When you ultimatly do return to private life don't you think that you your family and friends are going to be subject to these same policy decisions that you make now and when they ask you why you passed it what shall you say? Break up the comcast and verizon and other communications monopolies so we can have a competitive less expensive innovative america instead of "It's A wonderful Lifes" Potters ville with one bar and one bank and one agent to rent a house from I want to live in George Bailies Bedford Falls where there are a couple of each.

Customers are being gouged by cable companies, and manipulating the internet speeds to charge more for faster speed. Cable was supposed to be controlled to minimum pricing when it first was allowed on commercial airwaves. Now it's impossible for everyday folks to even subscribe. It should be a utility, and not a free market entity.
—Peggy O'Neil-Rosales, Long Beach, CA

My husband and I are on Social Security, We need lower cable bills. Our food and medicine is very expensive and more important than TV. We seldom go to movies in theaters. Cable television is our only "fun" activity. Please lower the cable bills. Please don't let Comcast sell MY private information without telling me. It is MY information, not theirs so they can make un Godly sums of money. It is MY information. MAKE COMCAST lower the obscene cost of cable.

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month. Verizon is just as guilty in rentals. In addition, the hard drive in DVRs run all the time even when the unit is powered off wasting large amounts of energy every day.
—John Bush, MALVERN, PA

Oh c'mon. Instead of wilting and slowing down, you should strengthen your stance for the public and speed up. What are you afraid of? Putting out your best effort to do the right thing for the public? That's a thing to be proud of.

Cable bills are absurdly high and no company should sell private information without consent
—Ralph Lee, Monroe, NC

Don't let industry hold consumers hostage. Please act now to protect our personal information from being used without our consent and also to stop cable TV's monopoly on equipment compatibility.
—Camille Hall, Corvallis, OR

Comcast is notorious for overcharging its customers. Please don't let Comcast make even more money from me by selling my private information. Thank you.
—Jeffrey Gross, Swarthmore, PA

Because the cable companies are the absolute worst capitalism has to offer. Their executives should be locked up and the key thrown away.
—Daryl Odefey, Denver, CO

The cable and direct broadcast companies help themselves to customers wallet much more than anything else they do... Regulation and municipal networks are the answer. Please, step up and regulate companies that put their profit above ALL things, for the citizens/customers that government is supposed to serve.
—Stephen Wyman, Georgetown, TX

I don't think that the cable companies should require me to rent expensive equipment and sell my personal information either.
—B wells, Independence, OH

Comcast overcharges us and then sells our private data. It's adding insult to injury.
—Vicki Cintron, newton, MA

Please pass your two proposals that will protect my privacy and lower my obscenely high cable bill. Please don't let the threats from our Comcast owned congress stop you and your commissioners from fighting for these proposals. Stop Comcast from selling my personal information without my consent. My personal information is mine and shouldn't be for sale. Please end Comcast's monopoly on set-top boxes I am forced to pay for each month. I should be able to buy a set-box and not pay a monthly fee. The fees add up to thousands of dollars over time.

Privacy IS important to EVERYBODY!!!! If you need to have it explained to you then you're obviously a moron & should NOT be in a position of overseeing the issue.l))
—Audrey Jordan, Arlington, TX

I understand that the FCC can prevent ISPs from selling one's private information without consent and open up a free market in cable boxes to help competition lower prices. I want to strongly support these proposals. I am especially disturbed by the way that my private information is misused. Every time I make a purchase or even contact customer service by Internet, it seems that I get a flood of spam e-mails on related topics and I get served advertisements for weeks afterward. It's not just disturbing, it is bad business, reducing my inclination to use the Internet. Unfortunately, the bad actors don't see this, and are rapidly ruining the Internet. I hope the FCC will take commonsense steps to stop this.
—Joel Swadesh, Albuquerque, NM

—a voter who votes Beverly Eckman-Onyskow, Cave Junction, OR

For far too many years, government agencies have supported corporations over citizens. Please break that trend and support main stream Americans instead of corporations. Especially stand firm in preventing companies that provide prison phone calls and internet services from paying commissions (kickbacks) to local and state facilities and governments.
—Linda Polk, Joelton, TN

Without cable or satellite dish, I cannot receive television signals in this part of Oregon. However, the charges for cable have gone up to more than double what I originally contracted. It is time for the FCC to rein in cable companies. Also, I would appreciate having the FCC protect my right to privacy and prevent communications companies from selling my information without my prior consent. Please institute pro-consumer policies as soon as possible. Thank you.
—Jane Cothron, South Beach, OR

This is very important because big cable companies always overcharge my family for the most absurd reasons and my equipment only works half of the time when I just want to watch something on demand. And when we would get our bills by them they would put more on our bill for some reason and my mom always has to call to complain about that but they just do it regardless. So please FCC lower our bills and stop having cable companies charging us for unjustified reasons because they want more money out of their customers.

—Micah Wilger, Galesburg, IL

Monopolies are harmful in many ways. FCC should protect consumers, not monopoly suppliers.
—Geoffrey Bruce, Arvada, CO

The cable companies are digging their own grave. Due to their effective monopoly and intransigence they are making more of us cut the cable and just stream and go back to broadcast TV. Privacy is dead, but at least I don't want to have my information be something a cable company gets money for and I don't.
—Steve Lewis, Reading, MA

im legally blind, why am i being forced to rent a device that i cant use fully? its used to change the channel, thats it. the CVAA has no "teeth" no enforcement, no penalty. so why am i penalized by being forced to rent a device in perpetuity that i cant use fully? mediacom even strips out descriptive audio from channels they carry on their system. i should be allowed to BUY a cheap "channel changer" or better yet, the FCC should reverse its decision to allow encryption of BASIC cable so i can go back to using the tuner built in to my tv.
—Paul Milton, albany, GA

Having to rent the cable box costs me $120/yr. After 3 years I have paid $360 for a box that cost more than my TV. I am also extremely annoyed that they "Sell" my information. At the very least if you won't stop them from giving out my information without my consent I should be compensated every time they do share it.
—Debbie Blair, Boca Raton, FL

cost of cable is to high and they select the channels that we have to watch or not, don't want 2/3 rds of there programing but have to pay for it anyway
—Jerry Burrier, blaine, MN

Since there is less and less competition in the cable and internet scene and since companies seem more than willing to abuse their customers, it is vital for every american citizen that you step in and put a stop to the abusive practices of these companies.
—Thomas Matthew Hibbard, South Lyon, MI

I'm trying to live on just my Social Security.
—Jackie Rader, Bullhead City, AZ

Consumers need choice! There is no technical reason why we should be required to rent our cable boxes from the carriers, and good reasons that we should not. As a blind consumer, for example, I would love the opportunity to buy an accessible (talking) cable box, instead of the fully graphical, inaccessible modelsI am required to have by Comcast/Verizon/etc.
—Luke Davis, Philadelphia, PA

Privacy should be the same inn the virtual world as it is in the physical one.
—Joshua Goracio, Payson, UT

My only choice for cable and internet is Comcast. Their prices are unreasonable and I'm forced to work with them until "cord cutting" becomes a more viable option. Please don't give them any more control.
—Mr. Robert Kelly, Tuckerton, NJ

Our cable & phone bills are OUTRAGEOUSLY high. They make hand over fist and do nothing to upgrade their systems.
—Dawn Rohner, Fort Lee, NJ

The monopolistic power of cable companies such as Comcast and Time-Warner has gotten totally out of hand. Your Commission is the only counterbalance to them. We hope you will start exercising your regulatory power to reign them in.
—James Damon, Chapel Hill, NC

Monopolies and price controls by mega corporations in the communications industry are the furthest thing from "consumer-based" as it gets. The cable providers are always looking for another way to collect and profit at the expense of the consumer. Please stop them from going down that road, thanks.
—Jean Goldsborough, Reading, VT

My 4 adult children cannot afford to subscribe to cable television. Ending the monopoly on set-top boxes will help a little in making television possible for them. Please help in any way you can to once again make television possible for everyone.
—Carol Miller, Ann Arbor, MI

Constitutional rights and fair and honest economy! We the people pay taxes that the corporations drain that leaves us deprived! It's time for an egalitarian economy that protects our democracy!
—Norma Pearson, Fairburn, GA

The free flow of information is crucial for democracy and economic justice. We should either have public infrastructure, or else private providers should be regulated as utilities.
—Donald Winslow, Shawnee, OK

I have been a cable subscriber since I became an adult, and I feel like I've been being scammed for years! The same was true back in the days when I spent a ridiculous amount for a modem because I had to rent my modem from the cable company providing my cable. That change alone has saved me hundreds of dollars, while improving the quality of my internet experience. The same will be true when I no longer have to rent a set-top box for cable TV!
—Mark Swiecki, Lincoln Park, MI

The cost of just BASIC cable runs $100/mo. This is highway robbery. The cost keeps going up while millions of people haven't been getting a cost of living raise in their income. STOP THIS MONOPOLIZING BEHAVIOR NOW!!
—Lisa Hansen, Phoenix, AZ

Stop Comcast from selling our private information w/o our consent. LOWER our cable -TV bills by ending the monopoly on set-top boxes we're forced to rent monthly. LOWER our cable TV bills because we are paying THROUGH THE NOSE FOR NO CONTENT.
—Joyce Loewy, Sunnyvale, CA

This company has almost no competition and should be bound by clear rules in the consumer's interest. It is especially important to set up clear and firm policies as technology encroaches on our privacy.
—Lisa Gualtieri, Encino, CA

In proclaiming that Americans have the right to ownership of their papers, the Founding Fathers intended to establish a right to privacy. However, at that time the closest word to "privacy" was privy, which meant going to the bathroom. Of course that made no sense at the time. Undoubtedly, they intended to establish that citizens have ownership of their personal information as well as to any writings not intended by the author for public consumption. Frankly, it is beyond "creepy" to shop on retail websites only to return to social media and find ads for the items you just looked at. Preserving Net Neutrality and curbing the outrageous profits the digital media monopolies makes by selling information that belongs to it's customers is the least the FCC can do for American citizens. You should also adopt regulations allowing any municipality to offer internet and cable services to keep the costs reasonable and competitive. Please consider taking these actions to protect this public utility from being used against us and without our permission.
—JM LaVassair, Ardmore, PA

Comcast/Xfinity cannot continue to charge us for a DVR box that is limited by what you tell us! We need much more options to choose from!
—Rusty Greer, Nashville, TN

I am an older woman on social security and television is my main entertainment. I can not afford my basic cable and internet connection. I know television is a luxury, not a need but I should be able to have it.

—Scott Clark, Greene, NY

I've been a Comcast user for a decade or more. This is an issue I feel strongly about.
—Don O. Noel Jr., Hartford, CT

The cable bill it not something I can afford already & that cable box costs extra.
—Gary Holcomb, Minneapolis, MN

Civil rights are important and defendable; reasonable billing rates are especially important, while monopolies tend to charge whatever they want in the absence of competition, which is of course, unacceptable.
—André Marier, Brossard,

The privacy rule in particular is critical!
—Michael Inners, Grand Isle, VT

I believe the internet should be a public utility, available to all at reasonable prices. Accepting the cable companies' arguments mean that we are instituting a regressive tax on the poor.
—Helen E Roland, Davis, CA

Be known as a true American hero protect the people and the internet. Comcast could not be any worse for service and product.Please don't sell us out like our politicians.
—Vic Oberle, Aurora, CO

This is really important because my cable bill keeps going up at least every six months. I'm really tired of paying $120 a month for cable bundle.
—Patricia Mihalic, North Olmsted, OH

I'm on a fixed income and my cable bill has increased over 25% in two years after I dropped some channels to lower the bill. I need help and you folks are in a position to do so! Please do your jobs.
—Ken Franklin, Panama City, FL

Internet needs to remain free as a way for people everywhere in the world to communicate and share culture, ideas and news to everyone, everywhere. The internet should not be chopped up and sold to the highest bidder to break apart into soulless bits of a bad product.
—Oscar Petersson, ,

When I first went online (dial-up), the big concern was protecting oneself from others with bad motives. Registration wasn't required on many sites, and when it was, there were no address checkers, etc., to verify the info one registered with. Now, registration is required almost everywhere. One's ISP exerts pressure to use their portals. Every bit of info about us is tracked and the big concern is how that tracking info about us is going to be used. Every one of us online is, in effect, a cash cow as info about our behavior online is collected and sold. To whom? For what purpose? We have no idea. Privacy policies are vague or even deceptive and full of loopholes. This pervasive selling of our information negatively affects the original promise of the Internet. As for set top boxes, we long ago stopped having to lease our phones from AT&T and other phone companies. Why are we being required to lease equipment for broadband and cable TV? It's another way to "milk" us, and it needs to stop. And so does the cynical game-playing designed to delay and ultimately defeat the current proposals to require our consent before our info can be sold and to end the set-top box monopoly.
—Linda Risinger, Covina, CA

Comcast should never be given the right to sell private information without informed consent, and we elect people to Congress for the purpose of representing our interests. If you have the power to lower our cable bills, it behooves you to do it. The cost of living is out of control, and many of us are suffering because of it,
—Suzanne Jarnagin, Jamaica Plain, MA

This action is in the best interests of all consumers. Don't let corporations hijack the democratic process.
—Ralph Bruechert, Grosse Pointe Park, MI

As an American citizen I expect to have my privacy protected.
—Gloria Wigert, ocean grove, NJ

Chairman Wheeler, you are taking steps in the right direction and I applaud your efforts to protect the privacy of individuals and breaking up monopolies. This is good for individual consumers who want their privacy protected and good for the economy as a whole as monopolies have devastating effects on economic efficiency.
—Tobias Conn, ASHLAND, MA

FCC Commissioners need to stop prioritizing their own personal gain over the will of the people.
—Matthew S Melin, San Diego, CA

Please get it done!
—Carolyn Pullman, Wharton, NJ

Not only is renting the box a scam but my cable bill has more than doubled over the past five years. For someone on a fixed income I will have to live without TV if the rates keep rising without explanation. Cable companies have taken the lead of government and if you are poor, well, tough shit.
—Kevin J. Gosztonyi, Bethlehem, PA

I'm a Disabled Senior on a fixed income paying for the same service on different devices I.e., Internet at home and on the phone, cable channels on the phone. One bill for home and cell charging for multiple phones lines and multiple cable boxes.
—Akilah Graham, Denver, CO

As a long time member of the American Civil Liberties Union privacy is of vital importance to me.
—Naomi Cohen, Gap Mills, WV

My cable internet bill runs over $65/mo. That's just for internet. Compare that to rates in Europe, where the service is much better. Cable is a de facto monopoly. I'm very tired of being shaken down by my cable company.
—Dean Poirier, DULUTH, GA

Prove that the government is of the people, not of the lobbyists!
—Ernest Renaud, Tonawanda, NY

When services vital to everyday life, employment, shopping, ordinary entertainments is offered with a proviso buried deep in a TOS/EULA, there really is no choice. Cable companies and ISPs have a near-monopoly on communications services we all rely on daily for tasks essential to modern life. I do NOT consent to having my personal information collected and sold, and I do NOT trust corporations to not "re-associate" purported anonymous data with my name, address, and who knows what else they "have on me." It feels like being a criminal, when more often, it is the data-collectors who are using my information to take away my choice, my privacy, and my peace of mind. So I urge the FCC to adopt binding restrictions on what, when, and how peronsal data may be sold. In addition, cable companies, and some ISPs, are reaping a windfall in the tens or hundreds of millions of dollars annually from saddling us with set-top boxes that do little for viewers, but which allow providers to control quality (down-converting HD video shot that way to SD, unless a fee is paid). I should be able to buy a compatible box from a third party and save the inflated rental fees Comcast charges me monthly (almost $12). Let us have real competition. Who knows, someone other than Comcast may have a better, cheaper way of doing the same things. Thank you.
—William C. White, Seattle, WA

Our personal information belongs to us, the consumer, and not the cable companies. Please stop Comcast from profiting on information that does not belong to them. This is outright theft, and invasion of privacy. Also, please stop Comcast from making consumers rent set-top boxes that are not necessary. That goes for VoiP modems that can only be rented and not purchased, as well. Comcast is already raping the American consumer with its monopoly. Enough is enough! Stop Comcast please!
—Douglas Tubach, Canton, CT

I just cancelled my Comcast account because they raised their rates. I stream video from my Roku & don't miss the garbage on TV at all.
—Deborah Suslovic, South San Francisco, CA

Corporations should serve the needs of the people and not the people serve the excessive desire for corporate profit.....
—Larry Bernard, Jemez Pueblo, NM

i feel i pay for commercials more than anything prices keep going up and up. nothing offered to loyal account holders. i do not wissh my private information to be out for everyone
—John Selvey, Winston Salem, NC

We may live in a very public world today, but selling private information without consent is an egregious wrong that needs to be righted, and forcing customers like me to pay for renting boxes needs to end. The cable companies have too much monopoly or near-monopoly power throughout our country.
—Alexander Clayton, Denver, CO

Do this for the people not the corporations.
—Jerry K F Chilson, Enumclaw, WA

because it's costing me too much money & it needs to be AFFORDABLE for the masses

Let me get my own box with the features I want instead of just what they want to give me.
—Mr. Jim Porter, Binghamton, NY

I depend on the internet to do business daily. It must be affordable.
—Leo Diener, McAllen, TX

The airwaves are SUPPOSED to belong to THE PEOPLE. Advertising on pay-TV should be enough. Programming should be FREE--but if that doesn't happen, at least make it harder for companies to monopolize the market.
—Allyson Drucker, North Haledon, NJ

Our economy is built upon free market competition, and, though there are circumstances which require some level of free market modification, it should be opened up whenever possible to maintain competitive pressures and positive outcomes for consumers.
—Ed Orme, Norristown, PA

My privacy needs to be protected. I am forced to use the monopoly, Comcast, if I want internet and TV. Don't let them sell my private information. I had no other safer choice! Dpon'tr let ANY company sell my private information. I have been a victom of identity theft. Don'r make things worse for me. Also, break up this monopoly!
—Margaret Wood, West Milford, NJ

I pay waaaaaay too much for cable and Internet from a company with the poorest quality customer service.
—Jeremy Ball, Acworth, GA

This is a basic right compliant with standard POTS Telco service granted over the years. Why should ISP's be treated any different? They shouldn't. Please vote to uphold mine and all Americans internet privacy and don't place a "For Sale" sign on internet traffic. Thank you FCC and Tom Wheeler!
—Greg W Cox, Pearland, TX

Big money controls politics. Please don't allow it to control cable communication. Please stop Comcast from selling private information without individual consent ad break up the cable TV monopoly. Keep completion in the market place to keep costs affordable to all.
—Sheila Trujillo, Denver, CO

Every day a bit more of our privacy is eaten away. Only through YOUR action can a portion be saved! As a 100% disabled veteran, what little income I have is most precious and the cost of my home entertainment and communication takes a huge part of it.
—Ronney West, Goldthwaite, TX

As, ought to be obvious to anyone, Cable is too expensive, and privacy is very precarious both to hackers, and the institutions of business and government!
—J Steven Livacich, Redlands, CA

Privacy is fast becoming an action of the past. Do not let that continue.
—Barbara Haines, Palm Bay, FL

Where is the competition for internet in my state. Two companies. The rates are way too high.
—Edward Imbier, Belmont, MA

It's the right thing to do!
—Samantha Heatherly, Long Beach, CA

I want what I do on the internet to be private. I want my cable bill to be lowered. I hate the extra charges.
—Alin Boughousi, Glendale, CA

As a senior citizen on a fixed income I am inundated daily with solicitation via computer, smartphone and regular mail with targeted advertisements that has been obtained by purchased data. The constant bombardment that is truly nonstop affects and invades my daily life. The FCC can save me money and also supports my privacy by passing Chairman Wheeler's proposal. Please take action now!
—Gloria Brand, Boca Raton, FL

please prevent big industries from using their customers information as a product to be sold.
—Chris Carrozza, Drexel Hill, PA

Our private information should be sold to no one!! Also, monopoly in the cable industry MUST BE STOPPED!!

—Deja Lizer, Asheville, NC

Allowing cable companies to continue their predatory mistreatment of their subscribers is about as anti-American as a government agency can get. Tighten up on Comcast and their corrupt partners ASAP.
—Andrew May, Emmitsburg, MD

Our cable bills are insanely high, the monthly fee for the boxes is theft, and so are all the extra charges they put on, PLUS we literally have NO CHOICES in the programming we want.
—Cheryl Liniman, Cleveland, OH

Our lives and work actives today relies on affordable and reliable computer access and TV - cable cost have reached uncomfortable levels with poor service to boot. Please address these issues and help consumers get fair treatment.....We are not cash cows.
—Gary Tomlin, Aledo, TX

Reform and choice are needed so we are not forced to pay hundreds of dollars just to watch a few favorite TV shows. We are forced to pay for packages of channels they select. We were forced to pay for cable years ago when we had to pay for cable or use a box to get basic channels. Some of us in home sub-divisions are forced to use the cable company selected by the builder. In my case, it is Charter which I dislike very much. My choice is AT&T U-Verse which is not available in my subdivision. Bring choice for provider and cheaper packages for channels.
—Betty Gilbert, Simpsonville, SC

Because I have a right to my private information, and Comcast is gauging us on the cost of a bunch of garbage on Television.
—Judith Kelly, Buzzards Bay, MA

Please think about the value of America. We need to build this country together to make better life not for the few rich person.
—Peter Kang, Mukilteo, WA

I'M SENIOR WITH LOW SS AND RETIREMENT INCOME! I'M PAYING FOR THINGS I DON'T EVEN USE!
—Ms. B Merritt, Flushing, NY

We all want our personal information to be private, and not disbursed to anyone without our knowledge. We expect the Fcc to stand up for these rights as well as other than exorbitant prices for Comcast sevice; so please do all you can to protect our rughts and costs from Comcast
—Marian Krewson, Bellevue, WA

Our family needs to count every dollar we spend. Don't make us waste more money on cable/internet than we already are.
—Mimi Foust, Cleveland, OH

Internet monopolies-NO. Release of our private information-NO. Lower Bills-YES. The consumer shouldn't be the one screwed, while mega-billion companies have huge profits.
—Jill Levin, Asheville, NC

WTF!
—Skip Vena, Woodland Park, CO

Comcast's treatment of its customer is simply outrageous. What they charge for cable and broadband verges on monopolistic practices.
—Tippy Young, Sacramento, CA

I am who decides what to share with the public not the companies and I am the one that also if I want to make a profit of my information at least is my information not anybody else life
—Marina Colombo, San Antonio, TX

I have had a small website that I would like to be effective in competition with the big websites.
—Bill Donohoe, Austin, TX

I'm in no need of hundreds of channels I have no interest in watching or paying for.
—Joe Russo, Rye, NY

My information belongs to me. It is not a give-away to a corporation, because they know they can get it for free, because they bought enough congressmen.
—David Whelan, Bondi Beach, None

the price of cable keeps going up endlessly my income does not. The programming is repeated endlessly with little new content so why the high pricing especially when you have to subsidize programming that few are interested in but are forced to pay for please do something about this.
—Scott Wilson, Cleveland, OH

cuz I'm, paying attention.
—Carter Andrew McLaughlin, los gatos, CA

The cable bill takes a huge portion of my paycheck every year and I do not like that! More so since I have things forced onto me like a set-top box. The cable bill and set top box make me feel like a prisoner of the cable industry which is truly uncomfortable and should not be the case in the first place. I am also very much against my personal information being sold by a huge corporation with no scruples!! I urge you to work in the favor of the public interest and vote to pass these two bills. Thank you very much!!!!
—Akschith Bhagavatula, Greenville, SC

Cable bills are out of control with no real competition. Consumer protection is needed.
—Debbie Chambers, Beverly Hills, FL

Because, while Congress won't give those of us on Social Security a substantial raise, they continue to allow these mega corporations to rake in billions of profit on the backs of those who can least afford it.
—Linda Ford, Puyallup, WA

I m using lost of internet so do some think about it
—Satyam verma, ,

Plz low the charges its too much
—Satysheel yadav, ,

Because my private and personal information has become a commodity, which I can't opt out of...I've tried, believe me. Nightmare. Privacy has vanished? Thanks for your time
—Christine M Peterson, HHI, SC

Please do what your jobs require: regulate near monopolies like Comcast to protect consumers' privacy and cable costs.
—Will Baldwin, New York, NY

Not only would it be unamerican if my private information is sold without my consent and my cable bill continues to be outrageously high due to the monopoly that only a handful of companies have onset-top boxes, it would ultimately limit my acess to important and lucrative business opportunities that these same companies enjoy only because they can afford to. The next step is charge us more for the service we already have, thus pushing more Americans out of the process of earning a decent living wage and providing the even the most basic of necessities for their loved ones. We must stay active and vigilant whenever the gap between the top 1/10 of 1% and the other 99% is constantly widening by leaps and bounds.
—Lukman Lateff Taylor, ,

Iit is important because I am tired of being gouged by these corporations
—Tom Stark, Colo. Spgs, CO

Please stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Diane Riffitts, Mullica Hill, NJ

Protect our privacy and stop the Comcast monopoly.
—Gregory Comerford, Gurnee, IL

Protect the consumer. It's in the benefit of us all.
—Daniel Canales, Humble, TX

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Johan van Kesteren, Ferndale, WA

Paying for a service means I should have a choice whether my information is sold. This is not the same as opting in to use a free service (which is also debatable).
—Sasha Neri, Chicago, IL

you just can't sell private information
—Timothy A Thomas, Spokane, WA

With privacy in America on the verge of extinction and the second largest protest in United States history (the largest one in over 50 years) taking place not long ago because of public knowledge of the governments alarmingly prolific unwarranted surveillance, if public approval is something you want to be part of your legacy as chairman of the FCC I think it would be in your best interest to stop Comcast from being the next big business to sell our private information. I think they have enough money don't you?
—Mark Arrington, Fredericktown, OH

monopoly allows this company to say anything and delivr nothing for an ever increasing price.
—Lorraine Alfini, denver, CO

The time is NOW1
—John D Smith, New York, NY

Privacy and respect of what our country needs, keep prices reasonable to retain customers. It seems power and control is the new government thing.
—Pamela Mckinney, Rapid City, SD

I am an Asian-American and always frustrated about the lack of narratives that speak to the lives ofpeople who are non-White and are indeed Americans. In 1942 if demographics are right America will begin having as many of us as there are White people. I fear that we are nowhere near ready to be multi-cultural. FCC needs to help America change.
—Anita Alcantara, Chicago, IL

Do what's right for a democratic nation and work to expand basic internet access to the millions who have NONE; to the same level of easy, affordable access as TV.
—Joel Goldfarb, Kihei, HI

This needs to move forward regardless of corporate based obstructionist politics that have plagued the last eight years of our Government.
—Robert M Profitt, Salem, OR

Privacy is a most important element in what make us free citizens.
—Edwin S. Hiley, Athens, PA

I love my privacy.
—John Green, Winter Springs, FL

Competition is always good and $100/mo for basic cable and internet is excessive.
—Lance J Konover, Chelsea, MA

privacy or communism
—Rose Divicino, Florence, SC

Tge FCC must continue to protect the public with strong pro-consumer policies
—David Frutkoff, Brooklyn, NY

Privacy protection is vital in a society where so much personal data is stored by government and industry.
—Patti Batchelder, Georgetown, MA

Please don't let your regulatory authority be thwarted. We need you to regulate these companies and protect consumers.
—Cindy optional Gomez-Schempp, Moorhead, MN

My cable bill is too high, and I don't want my information sold without my consent.
—, Bellerose, NY

The cost I pay for rentalis to high and they stop or lw down your streming and you are paying them.
—Brenda James, Maywood, IL

Miss Doris Thomas is a executive producer of the Divine Diva Talk Show in Philadelphia, Pa at the local Public Acccess Center, PhillyCAM. I am very interested in Comcast Corporation having a monopoly on the video programming and television and media creation for the Delaware Valley and national media arena. Miss Doris Thomas is a Black female and veteran who is seeking funding support , such as state of the technology and equipment for video production, film productions, and digital media creation. Furthermore, I am requesting the feasibility study for revenue sharing from Comcast Corporation for the arts, entertainment, spiritual, sports content in the Delaware valley and national revenues . These revenue sharing strategies will provide better video productions from us as digital media creators of diversity. I am requesting 50% of the 8 billion dollars that Comcast received from profits last year! Miss Doris Thomas will gladly set up an appointment to dicuss the revenue sharing strategies, Miss Doris Thomas will be sending the FCC and Comcast Corporation information and my diversity as a video and television programmer that we are demanding land, building, video technology, and media diversity. Miss Doris Thomas grew up in Philadelphia,Pa and I attended Villanova University and Cheyney University of Pennsylvania with a Master in Education Administration.since 2001. I will be sending you my transcripts and fact check my military service in the Pa Army National Guard from 1992 through 1998. I do not want my private information sold and I want my revenue sharing rights and content developer management rights.
—Doris Thomas, Philadelphia, PA

We should be able to buy and use our own routers and TV controllers.
—Zena Gurman, Eatontown, NJ higher diversity in our media

Re: MB Docket 16-42, Expanding Consumers' Video Navigation Choices

Dear Ms. Dortch,

Enclosed please find the signatures and comments of nearly 12,000 Free Press members urging the Federal Communications Commission to stop Comcast from selling private information without consent, and to lower cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on the set-top boxes consumers are forced to rent each month.

The petition reads:

> To FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler, Commissioner Mignon Clyburn and Commissioner Jessica Rosenworcel:
>
> Thousands of us have written in support of the FCC's broadband privacy proposal and the agency's efforts to end the monopoly on set-top boxes. These are common-sense, pro-consumer policies, but we're concerned they won't move forward if you don't act now.
>
> The cable industry's friends in Congress are threatening the survival of both of these measures, trying to force the agency's hand by holding up Commissioner Rosenworcel's renomination and pressuring the chairman to resign after the election. This is no way to govern, but we’re concerned their pressure may be working. Commissioner Rosenworcel is reportedly reluctant to move quickly on these crucial measures.
> Anything worth doing at the FCC is going to take at least a 3–2 vote. You have a chance to go down in history as leaders of the FCC that did more for the public interest than any other. Your decisions over the next few months could cement that legacy — but only if you hold strong.
>
> We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Best,

Candace Clement

Because cable and internet in the United States is incredibly overpriced. In Finland the cable and internet can cost only about €34,00 and that includes a land line phone, basic cable, and internet that is 100mbps and with no data cap. Comparatively in the U.S where you would pay maybe $50,00 and thats the 'low' price for JUST cable television and probably about $60-70 for internet that is MAYBE 60-70mbps with a datacap imposed? Its ridiculous.

—Ruth Berry, Lady Lake, FL

The city of Everett, Massachusetts has been locked into an exclusive cable agreement with Comcast for last decade (although I believe that agreement may have just ended or may be ending, details about this are hard to find). Instead of receiving competitive pricing, the result has been higher pricing, poor service and aging infrastructure. Surrounding cities like Malden and Chelsea have other options, like Verizon Fios available. In Everett, however, cable is monopolized by Comcast and we, the consumers, suffer. This industry needs oversight and needs a change from business as usual.

—Al Cohen, hummelstown, PA

Fair rates!
—Paul Safr, Janesville, WI

It's very simple; corporations don't want to compete, they want to control. You're job is to enable competition, not control. I don't mind fair costs for cable. I do mind inflated costs so that they can control. If Comcast had put as much monies into their service as they do their lobbying, there wouldn't be anywhere near the number of complaints.
—Ronald Drahos, Bloomington, IN

My information is for my service, not to sell to third parties. And if there's a monopoly causing my cable bill to be too high, then do something about it!
—Adam Bradley, Berkeley, CA

Our cable bills are too high. The bills should be reasonable like gas or electricity. Not out of control montrosity.
—Ms. Kim Kensler, Toledo, OH

This is just common sense stuff. We wonder why the public hates the government?
—Jeffery Hogan, Killeen, TX

Mr. Wheeler do not let Congress mislead you. They are working for the corporations involved, not for the People of the United States of America. Keeps us united by stopping this sham Congress is so constantly fighting for. They are suppose to represent US! You do, so please, we have your back.

I have an idea. If the FCC doesn't want to work for The People, maybe the FCC doesn't want to exist at all. After all, without paying to operate the FCC, industry can have everything they are asking the FCC to give them. So The People have to pay twice. For wishy washy FCC regulations, and then bad internet and bad privacy security. Without the FCC, we only have to get run over once, not twice. So how do the folks at the FCC feel about their jobs? I am so tired of consumer agencies working for big industry. They were created to make the working relationship between industry and The People more even. If the FCC doesn't perform that function then what do they exist for?
—Marguerite Val Tara King, Earlton,, NY

The FCC has recently done an unprecedented job of reforming a monopolistic and manipulative industry. Cementing those gains now will produce long-term benefits for consumers and the country as a whole.
—Douglas Samson, Ithaca, NY

Every time I get a cable bill there are new and different charges. It takes forever to reach a "person". I am paying almost paying $200.00 for phone service, internet, and cable. I do not have premium channels. I do have an additional latino package and almost every month they change channels that are added or deleted.
—Gloria Linda Maldonado, Redwood City, CA

I've got more fees on my cable bill than I do channels. It's ridiculous.
—Stephen Quarles, Atlanta, GA

Cable bills are too high. I remember when TV was free and had fewer ads as well.
—Walter Birdwell, Port Isabel, TX

The public need to be protected from the monopolistic cable companies.
—Jo Anne Fannin, Willoughby, OH

DO YOUR JOB! STOP THE STALLING! ARE YOU PART OF THE CORRUPTION??
—Karen Laakaniemi RN MSN, PENSACOLA, FL

The cable companies can continue to offer poor service because we have handed them a quasi monopoly. Privacy is eroded in the name of profits and control is cemented by insisting on the company's own set top boxes. We all complain, even the FCC, but only the FCC and our congress can change the system.

Comcast is making enough money, thanks.
—James Mahan, Los Angeles, CA

Do you want your private info sold as a commodity
—Regina Hamaker, Princeton, WI

Broadband internet is under siege from all sides. From monopolists abusing their power in multiple forms to spying technology that seeks to monetize our private lives. We need a new era of strong regulation and control to firmly and irrevocably establish individual rights versus corporate corruption.
—James Milnthorpe, Phoenix, AZ

I fear corporate take overs and rip offs
—Lorraine Please enter your last Kirk, Nederland, CO

(1) My personal information is owned by me ... not by anyone else. It is not for sale and is not to be shared without my consent. (2) My family and friends spent top dollar to purchase "cable ready" TV's several years back to get rid of the bogus cable charges for the boxes and remotes only for them to magically reappear. Get rid of them!
—Lisa Pereira, Stratford, CT

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Chris Curley, Richmond, VA

Cable bill is too high already!
—Glenn Wright, Oneonta, NY

By selling my private information and keeping the proceeds for themselves, corporations are robbing me. I should have the option of buying a set-top box, which over time would save me money instead of enriching cable companies.
—Jeanette West, Bradenton, FL

As U.S. citizens we're supposed to be free people, part of being free is having privacy. No one or company should be able to capitalize off of the citizens personal information except the citizen the information is for. And a person shouldn't be forced to either choose between letting a person or business do what they want with that persons personal information or not use the person or businesses service, website, etc. If an online company is a business they need to either charge a reasonable fee or give the user the ability to forfeit their personal info. If something isn't done about the cable companies, satellite TV, and telephone TV providers even lock on customers they're going to end up losing customers, so if you want to protect them anyway you can, talk some sense into their heads, although since they're traded companies their only concern is maximum profit and stock value so it'll probably be a waste of time. And the number one thing, REIGN IN THE ADVERTISING INDUSTRY! They're not even advertisers anymore they're personal info and data thief's, that do nothing but brainwash the public.
—Enrico Pelausa, Manassas Park, VA

Outside the US, other OECD countries give cable providers no favors: no monopoly, no contracts. A user can change companies from one day to the next, get better service, and pay about what 1/3 Americans pay. Why can't the FCC require competition in the US?
—Homer Ferguson, Nashville, TN

DO THE RIGHT THING FOR THE 98% AND PROTECT CONSUMERS !!!

Cable is going to price itself out of the market. I'm a retired widow with a passionate interest in staying current. I'm thinking of dropping my cable service and finding better ways--more cost efficient and more pertinent.
—Elaine Leggett, Austin, TX

We're already paying for cable networks we don't want. At least let us save some money.
—Mark Hillenbrand, Oak Lawn, IL

I canceled Direct TV, land phone, and internet (all bundled with CenturyLink) because of the high cost. Then I am bombarded with enticing lower cost packages from all (for a finite time). I need the FCC to help me.
—Butch Blawd, Minneapolis, MN

Invoke anti-trust laws and break up Comcast!
—Peter Veits, Burnsville, MN

I'll appreciate you taking a pro-consumer position on the broadband privacy policy and set-top box monopoly...and, say, didn't the US pass some very stringent rules about monopolies a couple of decades ago? Did they just disappear through attrition?
—Faith Freewoman, Rochester, NY

I dis bit an exception to the 3th amendment.emand that my electronic writing and messaging bee confidential, Commitment to electronic form
—Peter Butt, San Pedro, CA

I don't want an Internet provider, for example, Comcast, selling my personal information, and this should be against the law. I also hope the FCC would end the gouging of customers who are forced to pay a monthly fee on cable boxes, such as DVR devices. Customers should be able to purchase and own their own boxes. Right now customers are paying over $20 per box, per month--I spend more than $40 per month on just two DVR.
—Nancy Gutierrez, PALM DESERT, CA

I do NOT want my private info out there, and would love to pay less for cable.
—Rob B Campbell, New York, NY

Among the reasons why cable rates should be lower is so a larger portion of the US population is able to view vital programs that enhance their knowledge of voting and the issues facing the nation.
—Frank Chorba, Overland Park, KS

I count of the FCC to keep cable prices fair and to protect my privacy.
—Sarah G, Glendale, CA

PEOPLE over Profit, Please!
—Jim Lykins, Scappoose, OR

Our privacy is important to us. It is also important to Comcast to sell without our consent so it can make even more money off of us. We are held hostage to exhorbitant costs due to the monopoly it holds. Along with customer (non)service representatives that have outright lied to me personally more than once. If my husband wasn't such a baby, I would just have Netflix.
—Paula Cronin, Hooksett, NH

Please act in the interest of consumers and our freedom, rather than in the interests of business.
—Mary Tasillo, Philadelphia, PA

The FCC has no control over the cable industries becoming monopolies, but you. do have the power to ensure the public interest is served by voting for these commonsense measures.
—Harry Lewis Michaels Jr., Fort Collins, CO

The internet is the lifeblood of the economy--protect access for everyone
—Elizabeth Butler, Henderson, KY

Enough of the shenanigans! Please, Chairman Wheeler, keep up the fight to reign in the monstrous greed and reckless behavior of the cable giants. We have paid too much for too long, and it's time to break up the stranglehold. Thank you!
—Mary Hager, Leverett, MA

Cable cos. keep charging more and more and giving us worse service, making us pay extra for channels that were once included in a "standard" package. The switch to digital TV has made this much worse. In addition, we pay for numerous duplications of channels in the various add-on packages, and we now have to pay for digital adapters to get anything on an older TV. As for broadband, which also comes only from the CATV cos., the service is poor and over-priced. It is much better in numerous other countries (although it was invented here). I pay for "up to" 50 Mbs, which I get nowhere but on a test site. Sometimes I get as much as 7-8 Mbs. Unually, I get less than 1 Mbs. Is this false or deceptive? We need much more competition in the CATV and broadband industries.
—Jerald Vinikoff, Mechanicville, NY

big conglomerates & big money is killing America. Big government does nothing to protect US citizens against big corporate greed!
—Phyl Morello, White Pine, TN

Also ban cable cos from charging monthly fees for required equipment! SHAME ON YOU!
—Julie Adelson, Santa Monica, CA

COMCAST needs TO BE STOPPED!-and cable box rent is outrageous!-my 94 yr old mom has a cable box that is 9yrs old-out of date!-she has paid for the entire box many times! but Comcast still bleeds her money!
—Thomas A. Guaraldi, Houston, TX

The Internet and TV are foundational to our country's growth. Telecom monopolies have proliferated at the cost of consumer choice and technological progress. It's time for that to stop.
—Alan Harris, Houston, TX

I consider internet privacy of an extremely primary nature — a digital interpretation of several aspects of the Bill of Rights — and they must be protected at all cost.
—Kenneth Skillman, Lutz, FL

I'm a college student living off the dollars of my deceased father. Time and money are running out, I don't watch TV, I study and I look for work every day. I DON'T NEED TO PAY FOR CABLE WHEN I ALREADY PAY FOR SERVICE IN GENERAL

—Eleanor Kaye, Hallandale, FL

I hate getting ripped off by cable companies. Certain large cable companies rent/lease cable boxes at about $10 each month. These companies also charge for use of cable cards should one be lucky enough to find a device with this feature.
—Kenney Phillis jr, Denton, TX

Please don't let monopolies charge extra for service or sell our private information without our consent.
—Alice Trexler, arlington, MA

I'm tired of paying a monthly rental for my set-top box. Why should I have to when so many such devices are available on the open market for a one-time charge? We're not wealthy and that monthly charge for the STB is killing us. Please open up the purchase of third-party set-top boxes to the competition and end the cable companies' monopoly on these devices and forcing their customers to rent this readily available equipment from them. That just isn't right.
—Herb Schulsinger, Valinda, CA

My information is MINE. With the rising cost of connecting to the internet, I may, as far too many American's, no longer be able to afford it.
—Tamara Carpenter, Kalamazoo, MI

Comcast is a dragon.
—Carl Weiler, Ferndale, MI

As a senior on a limited budjet it is crucial that our rates are lowered to a level that is affordable without compromising our level of service.

We need to end monopolies...PERIOD!
—Paul Paul Neeley, Antioch, IL

I want my privacy guaranteed and I want an end to the monopolistic practices that Comcast employs.
—Jusef White, Fremont, CA

My personal information belongs to me solely, no matter what some greedy corp. insists otherwise. Any use of customer personal info. by comcast must be on an opt-in basis only, which would force that excrement to be transparent about their practices, at least in this respect.

—D T Ptak, Delevan, NY

Its time for consumer's rights to take priority over industries' interests. No, you can't let them sell my info. Why is this even a question? What happened to the anti-monopoly, anti-trust measures in this country?
—Jason McDonald, Oklahoma City, OK

Businesses which provide home/small business Internet service have captive customers, with few choices. They MUST be regulated Tightly as common-carrier monopolies working in the public interest, convenience, and necessity, unless/until real, vigorous competition for the physical layer of Internet service becomes a reality.
—Nick Kratz, Pasadena, CA

Freedom...
—Mr. Michael Krall, Lander, WY

These are times when a global market produces global sales harassment and expands the risk of fraud through identity theft. It becomes exceedingly difficult to properly manage one's digital foot print when vendors and corporations sell personal information. It is bad enough that they want this option at all, it is totally unacceptable that they should sell personal info without their customers'/clients' notification and consent.
—Noreen Winningham, Skokie, IL

Cable bills in the U.S. are ridiculous especially compared to other nations.

It's unamerican, free up the bonds of this monopoly
—Ben Kapek, Spokane, WA

Comcast has no right to sell my private info and cable-TV has forever cost too much!
—Larry S Powers, South Berwick, ME

I can't even afford cable. I can't even afford the taxes for cable. The fact that cable prices keep going up so fast and faster than the taxes is insane. I think the fact that cable is so expensive is why so many people download movies and shows illegally.
—Travis Sullivan, Grand Island, NE

We get poor reception, quality, options, and customer service. For all this we pay dearly compared to the rest of the world. What is wrong with this picture? Monopolies perhaps? Shameful.
—Lillian Feierabend, Cottonwood, CA

Privacy is of the utmost importance. As is opening up the STB business. Please move on this now
—George E Hitz Jr, Sudbury, MA

Paul Ryan and Marco Rubio decided, because of the price of gas, which I buy maybe once a month, that I didn't deserve a COLA this year. My cable bill went up anyway! Maybe none of this matters, as I will have to drop cable or my prescription medications soon!
—Lewis Litzinger, Tallahassee, FL

Please, be on the side of us consumers.
—Karl Heinz Kremer, Rochester, NY

I am writng to urge the FCC to vote on and pass rules that would 1) stop Comcast (or any cable/internet provider) from selling a consumer's private information without the express consent of the consumer, and 2) end the cable-TV provider monopoly on ownership of set-top boxes that force consumer to rent these devices on a monthly basis. There is no social benefit basis for either of these practices. They exist solely because of the market power held by the entities involved and are procticed to extract more revenue from consumers rather than somehow improve service. Bill Schramm schrammwe@gmail.com
—William Schramm, Oak Ridge, TN

Dear Jessica Rosenorcel, please take immediate action to pass the measure and prevent Comcast from selling our private information and also from becoming a monopoly. You are our only hope! Do what is the right thing.
—Gogian Yee, MONTEBELLO, CA

Please protect and help consumers.
—CL Doyle, Bronxville, NY

This sort of thing is supposed to be for the benefit of the American people, not commercial interests.
—Jeff Harrison, Worley, ID

Because WE PAY some company/corporation to PROVIDE A SERVICE OR PRODUCT to us, does not mean that that entity should assume it is automatically granted the right to take our private information -- which they have ONLY because it is needed to conduct activities directly related to the delivery and/or servicing of said paid-for product or service -- and give it away (i.e., favor trading) or sell it. They have NO built-in right to do such. Additionally, unless there is a valid patent reason to constrain a consumer to the use of a particular/specific amenity/tool that is required to receive and use a service or product, then said amenity/tool should be subject to competitive acquisition and pricing -- after all, these same companies that want the government to protect their interests are the same ones that scream about keeping government out of the "free market place". Seems that they should not be allowed to have things both ways. Competition is good for the country, and good for the consumer. I'm hoping you will support the FCC's broadband privacy proposal, and its efforts to end the monopoly on set-top boxes (FYI - my cable rates have skyrocketed in the last 3 years due to consolidation of the industry -- we need MORE competition, not less). Thank you for your consideration in these matters.
—R Shandor, San Diego, CA

I do not have the money and power, that the people that see you so often, have.
—Andy McGinnis, Milton, FL

Cable companies have an unfair monopoly that threatens our privacy and our wallets. Please stop them.
—Ms. Jan Kimbrough, Valley Village, CA

Your charter is to serve the public interest. It is NOT in the public interest to have personal information sold to corporations without the individual's consent. Please resist these attempts of congress persons who have sold out to corporate lobbyists to change your rulings. Corporatists pay lip service to the merits of competition, yet when it comes to pricing of set top boxes, they inconsistently favor monopolistic policies.
—WK Kent Wilson, Portland, OR

Do your job.
—Patricia M. M. Williams, Lewes, DE

Why would the government allow the selling private information without user consent? Why is that even an issue? What good are those annoying security questions, if Comcast can sell the answers?
—LL Price, Kearney, NE

The public's private information is not for sale, please finish protecting our privacy. The Monopoly's you are allowing are allowing the prices to sky rocket also. Please protect the public before helping Corporations. Thank you.
—L Yaco, San Francisco, CA

The FCC is chartered to act in the public interest, which occasions opposing powerhouse operators like Comcast. I am asking the FCC to do its job.
—Germain C Giner, Chicago, IL

The FCC and Congress need to stop kneeling before the telecommunication corporations and start listening to the American people.
—Terrance Kelly, King of Prussia, PA

Freedom of thought is dependent on a reasonable expectation of privacy. The minute everyone thinks someone is listening to everything they say or write, we lose creativity and we lose the constitution of the United States of America.
—Christian McCarty, Seattle, WA

Generally speaking privacy is very important to me. I try to avoid posting too much on the internet that could lead to people bothering me and don't really want companies that I pay for services to decide they want MORE money and sell my info.
—Ben Loukota, Newtown Square, PA

My cable bill is ridiculous! I thought it was common knowledge that monopolies are bad. Why is the Cable Industry allowed to keep one? Is it because of the campaign donations they give you?
—Alan Wojtalik, Baltimore, MD

It's like a lot of other issues, there's a lot of talk what can be done to make things better, but damn little in getting something done!
—Steven Oakland, Ames, IA

Monopolies lead to abuse of power - and the role of a federal agency in a democracy is to protect the people, not the powerful. Please stand up for us. This is about so much more than saving a few dollars on cable TV bills - it's about equal access to information, education, jobs, and opportunity.
—Ria Megnin, Dayton, OH

It's way past time to put American families first. Please do the right thing for all Americans instead of just corporations.
—Shari Wildschutte, Concord, CA

No more monopolies in the cable industry...you must stop Comcast from selling our private information and no more set-top boxes.
—Darrell Schmidt, Rose Hill, KS

Your supposed to be working for the american people, stop taking bribes and "Do Your Job"!!
—Stephen Mcquade, dudley, MA

Please protect my privacy. Also, if our justice department won't take action against the monopoly of Comcast, I hope the FCC can stop them from charging rent on cable boxes.
—Meredith West, Chicago, IL

Monopolies cost consumers. NO reason for one to exist except to unfairly benefit business.
—Elizabeth Molsen, Newtown, PA

We must find a way to end monopoly capitalism, worldwide, one way or the other.
—Warren Colison, Minneapolis, MN

We need more diversity of internet providers and other media.
—Melissa B Peters, Henrico, VA

Ending the monopoly would improve the entire nations economy by providing competition and innovation, etc. We as a nation need to improve our infrastructure, we are not even on par with other countries!! AND I want my information kept private, they do NOT have my permission to sell my information. And I would very much appreciate a much lower bill, or at least the option to use another companies more competitively priced service. Thank you!
—Kim Hensley, Sacramento, CA

Privacy is paramount in one's personal life. Consequestally, personal information should not be permitted to be sold or otherwise shared. In addition, competition in terms of hardware which will meet required performance standards should be encouraged, not restrained thought captive equipment rentals.
—R R Schneider Jr, Bethlehem, PA

Cable companies have no right to threaten our privacy for their own profits. Nor do they have the right to jack up cable prices like a monopoly.
—Anthony Straka, Wappingers Falls, NY

Because monopolies are illegal and you are the only entity that can enforce this! Free competition is better economics anyways!!
—Joanie Kenney, Fort Collins, CO

There is no decent reason to delay voting.
—Marvin Feil, Newton, NJ

Comcast has repeatedly abused its monopoly in my neighborhood by claiming to keep our rates the same, while adding bogus new fees and using its customer service department to bait and switch trapped consumers. Please step in.
—Judy Ford, San Anselmo, CA

supposed consumer protection; do your job or get out of our way
—R Kim, Prescott, AZ

It's tiresome the number of companies profiting from selling information about me that I have never and will never do business with.
—Eric Ashley, Fort Lauderdale, FL

I'm one of those folks who has "cut the cord" for financial reasons. I do sometimes miss cable, but as long as the providers can run roughshod over my privacy and my bank account, I'll be getting by without them.
—Kathryn A. Burns, Austin, TX

My privacy is of the utmost importance. At present the cost of cable service is outrageously expensive and something must be done to reduce the cost.
—Hon. JD Krutick Craig Hon. Joyce Krutick Craig L.L.M. (Ret.), Torrington, CT

Business should not have more power to commit fraud than government does to stop it.
—Alan Van Zuuk, Walterville, OR

Protect my privacy and lower my obscene cable TV bill.
—Ron Kennedy, ,

Forbid what is wrong and uphold what is right.
—LuQman AbdurRahman, Ann Arbor, MI

As the most modern of public utilities the web needs to be nurtured as a public trust, not skimmed as a Republican venture into mind and wallet control
—John Heigl, Lady Lake, FL

I was abused and cheated by Time Warner. I am now trying Direct TV. The only choices I have are Hargray(haven't heard anything good about them) and direct and dish. So deregulation has given us monopolies with their high prices and abuse. We are all very fed up with the high prices and abuse.
—Diana nadanyi, Bluffton, SC

I don't think it is fair to provide subpar service and expect people to pay more for what they should already get for the high prices they are already paying. You cannot doing anything in American society without having online access and it should be considered a public utility.
—Arica Dawson, Holly, MI

My personal info is not for sale
—John W Lawler, Magalia, CA

Monopolies are bad for the country.
—Matthew Dooley, Pittsburgh, PA

You know what to do Wheeler. Protect our internet freedoms and stop stalling renomination of Rosenworcel.
—Jeffery Young, Rochester, NY

We're consumers.
—Lester and Judy Hoyle, Cave Junction, OR

Privacy is part of our freedom to communicate that enables radical discussions regarding how people want society to change. This is fundamental to the kind of conversations that created the prosperous democratic civil society that many around the world envy, and no less vital to the kind of free thinking we need to adapt founding principles in the context of evolving technologies. The powerful should not have the power to know and track everything that the less powerful think. We all do better when common people feel safe to express themselves privately and find ways to address problems they might not want shared publicly.
—Brian Ashman, Saint Paul, MN

OF COURSE the privacy of people's internet usage should inviolable. That should not even be an issue, it should be taken for granted by all parties.
—Tom McNeely, Bellingham, WA

Privacy cost and competition
—Charles Woodward, Belleville, WI

My Cable Bill.....and my Privacy.....
—Fogerson Margot, Belleville, MI

The only thing worse than a bad government is bad business. I, as an American, have a right to my privacy and my property. These companies are threatening to take both away from me, and I won't have it. It is your job to listen to the people, and the people are saying hold strong, and don't let these big companies centralize not just your, not just mine, by the liberties of ALL Americans.
—Colum Cross, Albany, NY

Cable companies have been ripping off their customers for far too long and it needs to stop. There must be more competition, including freeing up the last mile, eliminating the set-top box monopoly, increasing broadband access to outlying areas, and forcing them to use the money we are forced to give them to provide low-priced access for schools and libraries.
—Richard R Gingras, Quinton, VA

The consumer is in danger of getting screwed even more than currently. The FCC should be defending the people, not enabling their being gouged. We already have slower and more expensive internet service than any other industrial power: a national disgrace.
—S Fleck, Chapel Hill, NC

My cable bill is expensive and i don't have premium channels. For what i pay i should be getting everything they have to offer. Selling my info? I don't think so. It's not enough to over charge but to take money for my info that you have no right to sell? Belly up boys. It's time to stop screwing the ones who put and keep you in business. It's called appreciation.
—Barbra Morman, Mount Pleasant, TX

I had to discontinue TV cable because it's become too expensive to maintain.
—Leon S. Miller, St. Petersburg, FL

This is all too obvious. What is Comcast the NSA now? And leave us a few dollars for other expenses. The cable industry has enough profits for a thousand years.
—Bruce Monnier, Durham, NC

From the advent of the telegraph onward, public communications and broadcast media have always been prey to the controlling influence of private interests to the detriment of the public at large. If we let this happen again with the Internet, given the demise of journalism, we can expect grave damage to our democracy itself.
—Sam DeLeo, Denver, CO

Freedom entails privacy.
—Kimberly Jecker, frisco, TX

The cable fat cats are an oligopoly bordering on a consortium-monopoly. Hence, they need to be rigorously regulated as either a public utility or a common carrier. P.S. to Ralph Nader: Sorry I ditched your campaign in '08, bro. I now know that you would never have sold out to Hillary like Bernie did. All my best to the PIRGs!
—Terry Gruzebeck, Minneapolis, MN

My freedom matters. If they can sell me, they can sell you and yours.
—Michele Brophy, King Ferry, NY

Limited income. Comcast should Not be able to sell our private information!
—Mary Snow, Columbia Station, OH

I take measures to keep my info private but cannot protect myself from internet service and other media providers without your help. My cable internet and TX service has increased 50% over the past 4 years, including rent on the cable box. I need your help to obtain fair pricing instead of the monopoly extortion to which I am subject in my rural town.
—Ms. Jo Ann Duman, Texarkana, TX

The internet is now utilized by almost everyone. Keep it open to all.
—Patricia Silver, Berkeley, CA

Replace the FCC with real Americans who actually protect the people instead of what we have now.
—Mr. Joseph Sandy, Clarksburg, WV

I am tired of being robbed by these corporations. You are there to regulate them and represent the people. It's time to do your job.
—Lester Sheran, Powder Springs, GA

Please support the action to prevent Comcast from increasing rates for poorer service and speed and prevent their selling of private information to make even more money. Comcast has to be restrained! I am a retired low income individual and I need the protection of this action .Please control Comcast's monopolistic actions now!
—James E Baker, St. Paul,, MN

I can't believe that you would let political pressure block you from moving forward with measures that are so clearly in the public’s interest. Please step up and protect the people.
—David W Etherington, Eugene, OR

Most Americans rely upon television and/or the internet not just for entertainment but more importantly for information, shopping, banking, and communication (like this message). Political power is shifting to the public interest over 'big telecom' corporate influence. Do the right thing. Thank you.
—B Suel, Neotsu, OR

The cable industry is acting much as the old Ma Bell did when she was in the catbird's seat. They provide a service and forbid the ownership of the means to access it. Only a monopoly can behave in this fashion. On the personal information front, I gave my information to Comcast for the purpose of hiring them to provide a service to me, not for them to sell me to the highest bidder. Please make them get my permission to sell my personal information. It's not too much to ask.
—Robert Post, Villas, NJ

These are basic measures that as a consumer we should have. Please follow through on these proposals.
—Michael Schmitt, Portland, OR

You're suppose to protect us from monopolies, not Comcast profits!!!
—Clifford Johnson, Minneapolis, MN

As a senior on a limited income, my 'supposedly' freedom's are being "Stripped' by 'the SUPER RICH' everyday. DO YOUR JOB, PLEASE!!! STOP THE 'Mining' of "the 99%" population's Money.... There is a VAST amount of people who are "FED-UP" with the BS congress "hides" and inserts into bills that are voted on. Please Take Action NOW.....
—, Fort Walton Beach, FL

No more rent seeking from legacy outfits unwilling to innovate. Free market means industry responds to market demand--not legislates monopolistic advantage.
—Brian Driggs, Glendale, AZ

Internet service is a utility, like the phone companies. My information is just that, MY information, not my ISP's.
—Mick Curth, Aurora, CO

Please work for the people on this.Every year or every other year,rates go up.No matter what cable company you have.Their profit margin exceeds from one year to the next while we pay more for their service.Enough greed has to stop for the sake of us little people.
—Stephen Smith, Bethlehem, PA

I am paying a ridiculous amount each month for very basic cable and internet service, with no chance of reducing the bill since the better rates are only given in bundles. Currently, I am forced to rent a) router, b) a modem, c) digital converter box, even though I have a HD, smart TV. Having only been able to find a part time job for the last two years, it is ridiculous that I should have to pay over $105 A MONTH. I need internet service to look for better jobs. I need basic cable so that I can at least watch the local news because without the stinking digital converter, I can't even get local TV stations on my TV. Do the right thing by THE PEOPLE, of whom I am a part, and end this monopoly and protect my/our privacy! Thank you.
—Ms. Holly McDuffie, Los Angeles, CA

I am disabled and on a fixed income.We do not receive cost of living increases yet my cable and internet bill continues to go up and my TV service is not very good.Please help me and others like me.
—Alan Minietta, Wheat Ridge, CO

I need affordable cable-internet access! Capitalism makes it too costly.
—John S. Sonin, Juneau, AK

I value my Privacy!
—Terry Dailey, Fargo, ND

I may have to give up cable and Internet all together if the prices don't stabilize, in the last 3 months my cable bill has increased 3 times currently it cost me overy $160.00 a month for cable and Internet services. I am on Disability, something needs to be done. I am paying for the same channels just to have access to discovery, history and create channels. This is outrageous. Do something for us, the consumer!
—Sandra James, Jasper, AL

Technology has given corporations the means to invade and abuse privacy in ways that have never existed before, and they show every sign of exploiting these powers, with no regard for the rest of us. Only government, in many cases the FCC can stop them. Please make sure you do. The issue of the cable box monopoly is less profound but still vital. Like any monopolists, cable companies will offer inferior products (that use more electricity than they need to just because the cable company doesn't have to pay its customers' electric bills) and gouge customers so long as they can get away with it. They mustn't be allowed to.
—Mark Lloyd Baker, Globe, AZ

This is important to me because Comcast has no right to sell my private information without my consent and I don't consent. My information is mine to sell and they should not be able to deny me any communication service if I refuse to let them sell my information and especially without compensationg me nor should any shoddy, arbitrary, or illegal contract methods allow them to engage in the sale of my private information. Comcast should not be able to sell my information, even if it relates to marketing. I also ask that the FCC does do something to reign in the profits of cable companies, it is my understanding they make money hand over fist, do seem to have a bit of a monopoly and are working to reduce competition and possibly are using this to charge more than they should as I believe my cable bill is too expensive and Comcast especially seems to be in the habit of offering less services such as NFL coverage, expensive pornography rentals, modern cable features, and restrict online television access a bit as well and charging more to get basic cable and cable services in general.Other cable providers have offered the NFL service free that I know of and cable packages cost less with other providers. I believe the renting of set top boxes is just a form of exacting funds from consumers because renters pay more than people who buy set top boxes and if it costs $200.00, although I dont know how much a set top costs as of 2016, renters could pay a $1,000.00 and still owe next months rent for the set top and have to return it when they are no longer customers. This seems like financial extortion to me and a burden for low income people. Plus my set tops have been burning out faster then when I was a child. Ive been through three Internet boxes which burned out and 2 set top boxes for cable as the last one was better than the one we replaced three years ago. So buying boxes isn't exactly good either but at least it costs the consumer that much less for cable. I believe any set top box I own should be good enough for any cable provider. Better compatibility between set tops and every cable provider in America would be a further improvement.
—Jeffrey M Rivard, Framingham, MA

Don't cave in to Big Telecom's obstruction and abuse of their power. Do the right thing for the American people whose interests the FCC ultimately serves.
—Mr Ulysses S Lateiner, Somerville, MA

I do not like the media, the police, large corporations and government breach my right to privacy and confidentiality. Their should be a public inquiry and financial compensation for me and those affect by the FCC and Congress. These people should be indicted and prosecuted to the full extent of law. I want justice for over 30 years of abuse of power.
—Christopher Huggins, niagara falls,

I'm a consumer, not a product. To sell my personal information, especially retroactively, is unethical. It's giving people no choice whether to disclose what they read, view, and how they think; this is especially unfair in communities where there is only one internet provider and where the poor cannot purchase a "luxury" service to protect this information. This is the most intrusive action I've ever seen short of a court order. If this passes, I'm sure lots of people will be looking forward to buying YOUR personal information. If this thought is unnerving, it should be. Being forced to rent a set-top box from the service provider is a stupid practice. However I think it's one that will be disrupted by the marketplace once video over IP cable providers can compete with cable operators...which will only happen if there is true net neutrality. If Comcast is allowed to impede data flow or extort money from these other providers before allowing them to flow effectively on their networks (should NOT be allowed), then forcing Comcast to open the set-top box to force more competition is a must. Again, cable providers are often the ONLY option in communities, so a monopoly or a duopoly exists and the government must regulate these industries to create competition since it fails to exist on its own.
—Kevin Berwald, Renton, WA

The cable companies are calling the shots, all to benefit them. Everything they do is to increase their profits to the detriment of the consumer. Needs to be turned around.
—Joyce Kidd, Beverly Hills, CA

Our cable bill has doubled in three years - service goes out every month or so, and we only view 20% of what's offered (it's not humanly possible to watch over 100 channels). Meanwhile, the cost of living rises and incomes stay the same or decrease. If we want high speed internet, we don't even have an alternative. Isn't it time this communications monopoly cut the public a break?
—Roberta Marley-Merchant, Lancaster, PA

This is important to me because monopolies of any sort are bad. They are anti-business, they are anti-consumer and they are anti-american.
—Joshua Dowdell, Lanham, MD

It's time to let the consumers choose what programming they want ala cart versus these expensive package deals that include many channels that no one wants or needs. High definition TV channels should be included with no extra cost. There should be no extra costs to stream or data caps. By now all of these companies should have the capability to stream as much data as necessary.
—John Horvatic, San Jose, CA

My bills for TV and online services are going through the roof. I urge you to break up the monopolies once and for all.
—Paul McDowell, Santa Barbara, CA

Please support the consumer in this matter. Thank you. It's unfortunate, but we cannot depend on Congress to support the American people given the undue influence of lobbyists.
—Walter S. Jakielski, Marseilles, IL

Broadband and net neutrality is the new platform for free speech in our democracy. It is critical that the FCC help protect the public's interest !
—Brad Buckner, Littleton, CO

The FCC does not work for the benefit of private capital, but to guarantee fair and beneficial use of the public resources owned by the nation as a whole. Please move forward immediately to protect privacy and end the monopoly on set-top boxes. Thank you
—Peter Fraterdeus, Galena, IL

I have always had a strong belief in one's right to privacy on the internet, in an age where privacy is steadily eroding in the physical world. Cable companies like Comcast would prefer no one have any privacy whatsoever, because it's in their financial interests as for-profit corporations to do whatever they can to earn money off you. This is the path that leads to increasingly dramatic abuse of one's customers, and the FCC desperately needs to limit their power. They should not be above the law.
—Andrew Fortune, East Bridgewater, MA

Please protect these common-sense, pro-consumer policies
—Jonas Hansson, Malmberget,

I'm tired of cable companies running rampant and uncontrolled. I'm tired of their monopolistic ways growing unchecked. This needs to end.
—Brent Metcalf, Urbana, IL

Consumers, ie ordinary citizens, need protection against mega corporations. If the government won't support our interests, then nobody will. Everyone needs phone service; almost everyone needs internet and TV service. We cannot protect ourselves individually. Huge monopolies must be closely regulated in the public interest.
—Colleen James Clark and Cox, Cambridge, MA

I am allowed to buy my own modem while my internet connection is from Comcast, so why should I not be allowed to buy my own cable TV box? My privacy is of paramount concerns, and I should be able to tell any company that it cannot provide my personal details to anyone else.
—Sterling Proffitt, Keswick, VA

It is bad enough that the federal government in general and the FCC in particular have allowed monopoly control by companies like Comcast, Time-Warner, AT&T, etcetera, to exist forcing most customers in having little choice as to TV and ISP services, at least stand up and take some of their control over captive markets away and support privacy of customers and competition and choice for customers as to the hardware they use. The increased competition in cable boxes will be very much like what happened when control of phones was wrested from Ma Bell (AT&T), opening up the market for competition and innovation.
—David Waratuke, Round Lake, IL

Should have been done years ago!
—Jim Bell, San Diego, CA

Companies cannot treat the American people like slaves, they don't own us and should not be able to sell our information for their profit.
—Robert Carroll, Austin, TX

This very Important for financial reasons.!!!!!
—Mary, M.I., NY

Privacy is important and monopolies need to be stopped.
—Lisa O'Donnell, Stillwater, OK

I spend $240 a year to rent a cable box that is worth $150. Consumers need FCC protection from predatory cable companies.
—John Carr, Centerport, NY

I absolutely hate having no choice. It is not a free market when a company holds monopoly power over people. It is not fair and it is not competitive. This is the problem with politics overshadowing market pressures.
—Michael H Forster, Portland, OR

Comcast and AT&T have put forth a horrible idea which deserves to be buried under a rock. It is nothing but a power play to take over our media and tell us what we should watch. Nobody will go for TV or digital media after this. I predict that file sharing will reach new heights and many will use proxy servers to hold onto whatever minimal privacy they already have. These options will cause Comcast and AT&T to scream bloody murder, but somehow I doubt that the American people will vote in favor of armed invasion of Tonga or some other tiny island country. We also have the question of the fact that this is the "World Wide" web and that social norms for the USA may be vastly different than those of Hong Cong, Paris or Kiev. Who gave Comcast/AT&T the right to block channels or otherwise interfere with content from those countries? Another thought: a study by Gwava showed that 205 Billion emails are created every day. If the average email is 1000 bytes, then you are looking at 205 Terabytes every day. In the end, people will find a way to get on the "fast" internet and circumvent the throttle on the slower streams. This will render any such laws/methods as academic and used only by people who are technologically illiterate. Programs like TOR will become mandatory, and this ham-handed approach to "ruling the internet" will end.
—Steven Robbins, Londonderry, NH

Protect people's privacy and lower our cable bills now. Empathy is needed for people not monopoly.
—Ross Lockridge III, Cerrillos, NM

Security of my private information is crucial to me. Please don't sell it.
—Chris Nazarro, Austin, TX

Television, radio, Internet, newspapers are the vehicles through which a population learn and keep informed about their democracy and the rest of the world we all live in. Cable rates are sky high and getting higher-unaffordable by millions-especially younger citizens. An informed public is an imperative for democracy. We need your help to put the safety and well bring of our country before the mega profits of the cable companies.
—Lynn Demitrieus, New York, NY

We nee our privacy and need more competition between cable companies to improve service and decrease costs.
—Patrick M. Malone, Findlay, OH

Your job is to stand up for and protect the consumer against unfair practices by mega corporations. If you give in to them, who is left in our corner? And who are you then working for?

It's time to end the set-top box Monopoly and lower my bill. These two proposals are in the best interest of all consumers in this country.
—F Lashmet, Kansas City, MO

My private information is mine. To sell what is mine without my consent or due process, is theft. It is the duty of government in general and the FCC, in particular, to protect the governed from unwarranted intrusion.
—Joel E Grace, Big Flats, NY

The public needs protection in area rightfully a consumer protection. The FCC is the agency responsible.
—LuMarion Conklin, ,

Please take positive action on the two measures before you. The measures benefit the public. It is time for courage and giving a voice and economic power back to the citizens of our great country.
—Janice Absher, Spokane Valley, WA

Keep our prices low and keep companies fair.
—Tonya Stoddard, Boise, ID

The industry's requirement that we RENT settop boxes is as regressive (and repressive of technological innovation) as Ma Bell's erstwhile rule that we lease phones. Look at how many careers and fortunes were made when ATT was forced to step into the '80's. We can have a compatable burst of innovation today. Cut our chains and watch us take off! (I have no ties to any entity that might profit from this rule...but I'd like have the opportinity to!)
—Elinor M. Walker, Rockville, MD

I am a 70 year old senior. The internet is crucial to me for addressing medical issues and other banking and financing controls. I leave on Social Security and a small pension. I already have to pay Comcast $100.00 a month for basic Internet only, and there is nothing they can do to lower it. My Wife uses it to work at home at night. I refuse to use it for Phone and cable service. when I had that with Comcast it was up to $278.00 a month and they would not lower it for me. So we dropped them except for the internet. Please stop this madness. Sincerely, Thank you.
—Joseph Fell, Naugatuck, CT

my info should not be for sale. Comcast is trying to become a monopoly and control not only cable but the internet for their profit.
—Frank A Warthan Jr, Kennesaw, GA

As a senior on a fixed income, I need you to stick up for Main Street. PLEASE!!!
—William Korbel, WATERLOO, NY

Fairness. Their exorbitant prices are price gauging. $99 to be able to watch TV for a month. I call that gauging.
—Donald L. Anderson, HARPSWELL, ME

I demand that my privacy is respected. Also, because I am on a fixed income a reduction in my cable bill would benefit me so I may use that money for medication or food.
—Howard Hayward, West Bridgewater, MA

I am 87 and sometime before I die I would like to pay cable bills based on competition not on monopoly. It's disgraceful that all my life I have had to put up with bad service and high prices. Those in charge like to bleat about capitalistic competition but it exists in very few places.
—Diane Olson, Santa Monica, CA

Because we the people think the FCC should do its job. You represent all Americans not the 1%. You all get paid good wages and benefits, so quit taking bribes from the 1%. Quit being greedy at expense of the 99%.
—Lynn M Ketchum, Madison, WI

Over the 5 years I've been a comcast customer, I've seen my rate rise without any appreciable improvement in service. This monopoly Comcast enjoys will soon prevent me from using their service anymore, once it becomes unaffordable. You must step in and curb their monopolistic ways. Please make competition and lower prices a reality.
—B Franz, East Orange, NJ

I am sick of the never ending monopoly and choke hold these companies have on us!
—Eric Grebs, Carlsbad, CA

it is outrages Comcast is selling our information they need to be reined in on all
—Betty Smisek, Saint Paul, MN

I deeply resent being held hostage by the cable industry monopoly. There is only one available service provider in my area, and I have NO CHOICE but to subscribe to them. The costs keep rising, and I am forced to pay up or do without. We need some relief from this greed by any means possible, and not having to rent their set-top boxes would be a start. Also, why are they allowed to sell our private information without prior consent??? We should have the option of OPTING IN instead of being required to opt out!!
—James Cavallo, Lambertville, NJ

Monopolies represent the ability to impose "private taxes." I've actually written about this in my book "The Covenant of Democracy: Should Gov't Be Run Like a Business?" Ch. 5. I have the support of an excellent economist who does both policy and crunches the numbers. He was initially skeptical but then he looked at the graphs, and the numbers. If this gets on mainstream TV, Drumpf will send the "second amendment people" after me. And since the handgun called the "5-7" can pierce a class three vest, I'll be doomed.
—James E. Roper, Holt, MI

Monopolies are never fair -- Capitalism is supposed to thrive on competition! Privacy is guaranteed in the Constitution!!
—Aaron St. John, San Diego, CA

I'm tired of deleting unwanted solicitations, and advertising slowing my computer, and unsubscribing from e-mails. It happens whenever I research anything slightly related to anything. I live in a HUD senior co-op. Cable TV is supplied as part of the monthly payment. I have to pay a separate bill each month to rent the box to feed the cable to my TV. I bought the TV and can access any online TV service except the one already paid for with a $45 adapter. The cost of a few month's rental for the box to get service from anyone else. Seems like renting the glass to get a drink of water I paid for.
—Tom Ozzello, Saint Paul, MN

Cable is too expensive. TV used to be free.
—Iliana Sonntag, San Diego, CA

Please stand up for us!
—Diane Kopan, chicago, IL

I don't want my private information sold to anyone. Comcast now charges in the hundreds for cable and t.v. We pay the highest for the slowest internet. Please stop them. We need to have options for the cable t.v. boxes, they are ripping us off badly.
—Jeanne Shaw, Denver, CO

I am a senior citizen and the rising costs of cable are getting difficult to manage. Please take action on this. Thank you!
—Pamala Thomas, Santa Monica, CA

Please rectify the failed promised of lower cable-TV bills immediately!
—Jeanne Klein, Lawrence, KS

Information is free. Don't let a megalithic company take that freedom from me.
—Tanner Fleming, Bellingham, WA

I don't want the cable monopoly to stop the FCC from doing the right thing for the consumer. We should be able to choose what set top box we use to watch tv, and who gives out our private information.
—Chris Rayback, San Diego, CA

I'm tired of my cable bill going up so regularly and much of it is the "rent" on the cable box and the DVD recorder I'm forced to use. Please finish what you have started!
—Deadra Wright, New Braunfels, TX

The FCC is there to make sure the public is protected from preditory corporate policies as well as making the business of "communication" a fair level playing field. It's time that we, as Americans actually enforce the regulations that are put into law. I'm tired of hearing about "over regulation" when the fact is, corporations like Comcast thumb their noses at the law every day.
—Daniel Breitbach, Napa, CA

THESE COMPANIES THINK THEY OWN AMERICA. OR AT THE LEAST YOUR SOUL. DO THEY?
—Paul Palla, Greencastle, PA

I've lived in Paris, where cable service is better--and cheaper. Why shouldn't ours be?
—David Ball, Northampton, MA

Cable's way too expensive! Allow "ala carte" ordering.
—Mr. Michael S. Callaway, Upland, CA

Who do you support? It isn't like the cable companies are going to go broke any time soon. So who does look out for the public? Comcast, and the others, can look out for themselves. Which is exactly what they are doing right now!
—Randy Juras, Homer Glen, IL

Please don't let thsee cable monopolies violate the privacy of our personal data or monopolize cable boxes.
—Richard Berman, Rockville, MD

The FCC is one of the only government bodies I trust to have my interests at heart.

Privacy matters
—Mara Obelcz, Hatfield, PA

Our ability to live peaceably and productively depends on the quality of the information we have regarding various threats to and the means by which we might—again peaceably—overcome them. This makes information, and the internet, as a means of informing ourselves, the very first line in providing for the common defense. Please act to defend a free and open internet—and access to it—as it is by means of such information that our chances for survival and ensuring our enduring progress as a people and a nation will be significantly improved.
—Matthew Herschler, Northampton, MA

I am suddenly getting ads for baby products because a neighbor who steals WiFi signal is pregnant. We are all being spied upon in our own homes, and government regulation is necessary to stop these abuses. The monopoly on set top boxes is anti competitive and stifles the free market.
—David Carter, redlands, CA

Cable bills are way too high. Customers should not have to pay extra for something that is necessary. Cable companies need to charge fair, not excessive, prices.
—Eleanor Earley, Covington, GA

This 2016 election has shed a bright light on the fragility of American democracy which is under attack from numerous quarters. One is the destruction of privacy; another is the consolidation of media and communication. It is not just about bills; it's about freedom.
—Vicky Peters, Lakewood, CO

End the corporate control of government policy that protects the public. Anything else is collaboration.
—Doug Green, ,

Time to step up and do the right thing!
—Ricardo Mendez, L. A., CA

My privacy is absolutely essential to my ability to pursue my interests freely, explore new or controversial ideas, and enjoy myself without the fear of exploitation. Please move forward on the proposals to keep Comcast from selling my private information without my consent and unlocking the cable box monopoly. This is a very important issue for me and my family, and I appreciate your courage in standing up for people like us.
—Joe Miranda, Garden Grove, CA

The internet belongs to the people and we should be charging the to use it, not giving it to them to screw us with.
—Lowell Young, Mariposa, CA

My private information is just that - PRIVATE. it is time our government starts protecting our privacy instead of giving large corporations rights to steal it and do with it what they will.
—Barbara Cohn, Carlsbad, CA

Because the cable companies have gone unchecked too long charging what they want forcing us to rent expensive equipment for years like set top boxes and modems.
—Duncan Uruchima, Jamaica, NY

Because some of us are on a limited income and they are pricing us out of the market and they do not care...plus they really have no right to sell the information they require to subscribe without our express permission. Thank you.
—Patrice Anita, Los Angeles, CA

As an active internet user with two teenage children (one of whom I am just delivering to his first year in college) we are appalled at the high cost of Internet service!
—Stephen Couche, Portland, OR

Holding and marketing my private information is an invasion of my privacy. There ought to be a law against it. Monopolies lead to unfair trade practices and obstruct democracy, and they should be illegal.
—Lucinda Hannon, Avon, CT

The future of competition is at stake, we need to strip the Cable incumbents of their ability to dominate the set-top box business. If this was standardized and open to competition this would lower costs for many consumers. In addition, the Cable incumbents must be restricted from selling my personal preference information. That is an invasion of my privacy at its core.
—Mr. Vincent M. Oddo, Atlanta, GA

Given the recent court cases and votes, it seems clear that many, many people are in favor of breaking the monopoly that large companies hold. I live in an area where I have NO choices about my cable provider (only Comcast), and even then, the service is spotty particularly with regard to internet. In addition, I would like to know about how cable companies and internet companies can and do use information about me in their sales. People should know how their information is used! I urge you to stand behind these proposals that will make the lives of consumers measurably better. Thank you.
—Alecia Magnifico, Dover, NH

Many low-income families are paying cable companies a significant amount of money for cable, a necessity for their school age children, college level youths and simply every day living....these dollars go to BIG MEDIA, instead of families and individual, who are often challenge to make ends meet. The options available from cable companies is extremely limited, no box, no cable... or choose to pay a price for "bundle" offers, channels and programming you do not need nor necessarily use. Take the top-box away! Help families save $ for important needs instead. Also, help us keep our privacy...it matters!
—Ms. Marta Garcia, Yonkers, NY

This holds back the advancement of our economy
—Don Posh, Spooner, WI

Monopolies stop so much economic expansion. Comcast shouldn't worry so much about getting permission because they will have plenty of people that won't care. Just let us who don't want our info sold have the choice to stop it.
—Gabrielle V Pla, Kapaa, HI

Monopolies are against the law. Enforce the law - break them up or put price caps on their rates!!
—Nick D., Westlake, OH

We live in a society where the FCC no longer protects the privacy rights of Americans. Our information is sold without our consent. I expect our government officials to do more than protect corporations and their monied influence on Washington. It is time you protect PEOPLE instead of CORPORATIONS. I thank you for your consideration of this matter. Lynn from Kansas
—Lynn Mittelstadt, Eskridge, KS

My personal information is not a commodity. Limit what can be shared with other companies. Put constraints in place today!
—Vic Cutler, Omak, WA

PLEASE STOP LETTING THE CABLE COMPANIES BLEED CONSUMERS TO DEATH! My husband and I are retired and we don't even have even have TV ---that is NO TV---- and our cable bill is still $65. per month! $20 for basic telephone service and $45. for the cheapest internet connection. Giving free rein to cable companies to monopolize services and charge what they want will simply further impoverish and disenfranchise more and more Americans until this country truly becomes unrecognizable as a decent place to live. Don't cave in to rampant corporate greed which is destroying this country and consigning children, the elderly and other vulnerable minorities to second class citizenship and being further exploited by the sale of our private information without our consent. Thank you
—Beth Davidson, Incline Village, NV

Stop Comcast

—, Omaha, NE

Please don't let companies like Comcast hold us hostage!! I speak not only for myself but for my entire family, including my 11 grandchildren who will be the ones to be hurt the most if Comcast manages to prevail. Please hold tight against their pressure tactics! Thank you.
—Elizabeth Cori-Jones, Gainesville, FL

If Congress was actually doing its job and fairly representing the people then it would not be necessary for the FCC to act, but because the Congress seems to only value what legislation means to corporate bottom lines and not the effect that these have on the people, that it is necessary for the FCC to act as a regulator for the public good as it was intended to. Our government should not be in the business of establishing and protecting monopolies. There is no need for the cable industry to be a monopoly. It has only gradually become that way through mergers which our government has allowed. This has only served to limit competition and innovation and has put the U.S. cable infrastructure behind most of the developed world, not to mention that much of what is there has already been heavily subsidized by the government already, so the people should get some say in what the government has invested in since it was supposedly don't in the interest of the public good. The public also needs some return on the government's investment other than being overcharged by greedy companies who are using the public good as a means of soaking the taxpayers in the form of tax breaks or subsidies for bigger corporate profits.

Tired of getting screwed by giant, no choice monopolies!
—Shane L. McCune, Manhattan, KS

My privacy is very important to me as is for all American's. The price for the average person to have internet service and tv is out of control. Where I live we don't have any option but cable, and Comcast takes advantage of that.
—Laura Scheffer, North Bend, WA

Our private information should not be for sale and our cable bills, already too high, keep increasing!

Thank you.
—Marya Roddis, Chama, NM

Americans pay more money and get lower quality sevice than any other country on earth from our cable providers who are monopolies which is against the law.
—Andrew W Lazin, Winter Springs, FL

Personal privacy is of the utmost importance to me. I don't want my info sold period.
—Tom Hagen, Tacoma, WA

I am a senior on a limited income. TV is still one of the less costly entertainments I have access to. But not if Comcast had its way. Cable bills will keep going up, up, up. They don't need my money as much as I do.
—Harriet Rzetelny, Dennis, MA

It's unbelievable what cable companies charge in the US compared to almost all other countries. And the speed at which we can access the internet is so slow compared to those same countries. And yet we pay an amazingly large sum for what we do receives and they are so greedy that they want to charge even more to increase the speed. Greed is destroying our nation and the world.

I feel the cable industry is one of the biggest consumer ripoff industries in this country. Time you did your job and watchdog what they have done to American consumers for all these years. It is after all supposed to be the peoples' airways. Why then are we being charged outrageous prices with so little choice for what we want to pay for watching? and then to have my private information which they require in order to get connected. All a huge con on all of us! STOP IT NOW AND JOB YOUR JOB!

Government agencies should work for the benefit of the country, not just its corporate interests. Comcast and others have no trouble making money and then spending it to lobby - the average Joe is at a truly staggering disadvantage. When I was in law school nerlry 40 years ago, I actually took a course on anti-trust law - it's not fashionable today. Please vote to enforce that concept.

We need our government, on every level, to start working for us. It's shocking that Americans have to pay the most for internet/cable and get by far the poorest service. You need to start changing this.
—Lyn Lowry, Longmont, CO

Cable is way too expensive
—Emily Van Alyne, West Richland, WA

this is important to me because I'm retired, living on small fixed income, and our cable/internet fees are way too high. Comcast is my ISP - the only broadband available where I live - and they charge way too much for way to little. Our top download speeds don't come close to what's available in other countries. Corporate control of government is ruining our country.
—Bennett Hoffman, Tallahassee, FL

Our Comcast bills are outrageous! Please do something! I demand that all companies that provide paid services to me honor my right to maintain my privacy and control my personal information. Comcast has no right to sell it to the highest bidder!
—Peggy Deras, South San Francisco, CA

FCC stand strong, for the people. It's so important.
—Anthony Brasunas, San Francisco, CA

We MUST have real competition in the cable industry. These cable companies do whatever the hell they want which means customer service is the WORST, and at price gouging prices. Competition will lower the price we pay and improve customer service. Right now, I despise my cable company, but there is no alternative.
—Paul Antico, Los Angeles, CA

I should have the option to purchase a cable box like I do a phone.

—Eduardo Ojeda Jr., Lakeland, FL

WE have a right to privacy. Enforce it.
—Lynn Price, Humble, TX

When I started with cable, no such box was needed. The wire from the cable connected to the TV. Rather than get a clumsy box that does not seem necessary, I dropped cable and switched to an indoor antenna that gives me digital signals without a box. The box is a rip off.
—Jose D. Alfaro, Maywood, NJ

Cable charges are outrageous. Security goes without saying!

Privacy of my personal information is paramount to keeping my records safe and my personal details secure.
—Richard Kunz, Methuen, MA

Monopolies raise one citizens rights in the market place above all others distorting the economic equilibrium of supply and demand, all to enrich one person or company. The common interests of so many, in protecting our private information and restoring a free market, must outweigh the special interests of a very wealthy few. The US claims to be a democracy, and the guardian of a level free market economic playfield. This is where we either live up to, or sell out, on that promise.

I am retired and on a fixed income. I cannot afford the huge cost Charter makes me pay every month! The other available alternatives are just as bad !! I need Internet access to do my volunteer work! Help consumers !
—Gray Zischke, Wausau, WI

Comcast wants $30/month in exchange for not being allowed to spy on us and sell our personal information. Only Comcast knows for certain, but do you think Comcast currently makes $30/month per customer selling our information? I don't, and I hope our information is not worth that much to marketers. If it is worth that much, that just makes the intrusion that much more offensive. $30 is what Comcast wants now to get their foot in the door for this charge. If they are successful in getting this approved, what will they want in a year, or two, or ten? Since they can spy on our internet activity, and we have no real alternatives, we are faced to pay protection. Instead of, "$100 per week and we won't burn down your store," its, "$30 per month and we won't spy on you and sell what we find to the highest bidder." Maybe in a couple of years it will be $100/week. Plus, we have no way of knowing if they are keeping their end of the bargain. At some level, no one will pay it, and they will be back to the current situation of their being free to do whatever they want. Broadband should be a regulated utility, just like phone service is--correction, like phone service used to be.
—David Fink, Los Angeles, CA

the amount for cable related services keeps going up bit our wages are on the decline.
—Steve Willard, Minonk, IL

Really.... this should be an easy choice. Comcast has been consistently the worst quality of customer care and you would let them sell my personal info....they can't run their own company....do I hear breach ??? Why support a monopoly unless their is good reason and the public is deriving benefits. With the clear need for better web access for all let's move the ball forward. Don't let politics be the deciding factor, please.
—Alan Kadish, Corvallis, OR

Lower my bill
—David Helinski, Broken Arrow, OK

As a person who is visuallyimpaired I face the prospect of having a set top box that I might find usable with one cable provider, but that of another much different. I believe they should be interchangableso that if I find equipment that works for me I can use it with other providers should I wish to change. I'd also appreciate greater enforcement of accessability rules on the internet. Terry Chaney
—Terry Chaney, Royal Oak, MI

My bill has just continually increased-if priced do not go down many people will continue to cancel and use streaming services!!!
—Heather Clark, Gaylord, MI

I use Time Warner Cable service, which Comcast tried to buy. The monthly bill is almost fifty dollars. For this I am supposed to be getting 15 gigabytes of data. This is routinely monitored and averages 13 gigabytes. Before the two year service contract was up I was paying $37.00-$39.00. At the end off the contract the price seems to jump all the way up to $49.99. Unfortunately most other cable services charge the same amount. If I didn't need this computer to look for a job. It would be disconnected. So I am against Comcast I only wish I could do more. Bernie Bukoskey 11 Highland Ave. Tonawanda, NY 14150-3901

JUST DO THE RIGHT FURSHLUGGINER THING ALREADY!
—Neal Umphred, Redmond, WA

I turn 65 this month but despite having made it to that 'landmark' age, I will not be able to enjoy the "golden years" - well, at least with cable tv, that is. The bankers, Wall Street and massive, FAR-too-powerful ove-sized corporations (just like Comcast) already destroyed our economy in a crash to rival the Great Depression - many of us lost anything remotely resembling retirement and are lucky if we didn't also lose our homes. I would like to be able to afford at least SOME form of decent entertainment since the giant corporations took over our world and became more important than people - AND, I would like to do so WITHOUT being spied upon while actually having to PAY for what once was, AND STILL IS, "the Commons." Unfamiliar term to you? I'm not surprised ... Cable services should be simple, straightforward, and AFFORDABLE WITHOUT INVADING OUR PRIVACY! Corporate takeover and corruption have forever changed life for the "baby boomer generation." I think you will see a massive number of households unplugging from ANY CABLE AT ALL if the costs go up any more (who in the hell can afford it?!) and, quite frankly, being complicit with corrupted government agencies, officials, and politicians in uber-spying on us all is equated to me as ILLEGAL!!! We can't afford it and won't stand for it - I am willing to bet thousands upon thousands of us will do exactly what I will do ... UNPLUG! I'll be DAMNED if I am going to pay someone money I DON'T have, to SELL me the COMMONS THAT I ALREADY OWN, to make it EASIER FOR GOVERNMENT TO TRACK ME AND SPY ON ME ILLEGALLY! Ain't happening at ANY price. For once since the millenial rolled around, can ANYONE ANYWHERE in government just DO THE RIGHT THING?!
—Pamela Overholtzer, Moscow, ID

Monopolies are always unfair to the consumer. We must break them up, or keep them from forming. Also as a disabled senior very reliant on cable/computer access, this bill is a severe hardship for me.
—Norma Marshall, greensboro, NC

Monopolies cannot exist in a truly democratic nation!
—Nicole Fountain, Oakland, CA

Your agency must work for us, America's telecommunications services consumers, not the providers of those services, whom you are supposed to regulate.
—William Swatos, Palm Desert, CA

No one should be allowed to use my private viewing of programs as marketing tools! There are surveys and companies like Nielson who gather this information VOLUNTARILY given by the consumer. And, this box rental situation is a lame ploy to suck even more money out of the public. Prices are ridiculous and not affordable; I myself have not had TV since mid 2008!
—Valerie Justus-Rusconi, Watsonville, CA

Our cable bill has risen to intolerable levels, while quality of service has declined. Europe has cheap & efficient cable/internet. We know it's possible. Let's follow its lead.
—Kenneth Nahigian, Sacramento, CA

Security and savings.
—Michael Kwitt, Warren, MI

My wife and I are retired, living on a small income, and every penny we do not have to spend, helps.
—Stuart Fishelman, Baltimore, MD

Breaking up the telecom monopoly and appropriately regulating the industry is critical to the future of digital technology. These are just tiny first steps.
—Alexander Subotich, ,

No company should be able to sell our information without our consent and I don't mean in any "I Agree" contract that has 200 pages to read.
—Frank Kiernan, Olivehurst, CA

We must not let unscrupulous corporate entities write the rules that govern their industries. The FCC must do the job for which it was appointed, work in the best interests of consumers of communications. This means unfettered and equitable access to the highest quality broadband and Internet services at a fair and competitive price.
—Philip Angus Nunes, Spokane, WA

It's an embarrassment that the US does not have one of the top if not the best internet options in the world! What happen to competition? Options? Service for the people? The Internet is not a privilege, it's a right!
—Ray Gonzalez, Canoga Park, CA

Protecting consumers and serving the public interest is the FCC's core mission. Please fulfill it.
—Craig Dunkerley, San Jose, CA

It's not the business of Comcast to sell my personal info, period!
—Robert Schwartz, Waukegan, IL

Companies using public resources should not be able to sell my private information without my consent, and we should not be forced to rent set-top boxes in order to use their service either. I hope the FCC will act quickly to protect consumers as they have done in the past.
—Kyle de Beausset, Grosse Ile, MI

I am sick of companies that use my information and money against me - and I'm sick o0f cable companies that over-charge and under-deliver! I pay the Universal Connectivity Fee every month and get ignored in return!
—John Blanchard3, Pittsburgh, PA

The internet should be available to all and not controlled by a monopoly and its privacy should be protected.
—Irene Leeg, Santa Monica, CA

For MANY people, cable television is their sole source of entertainment. It SHOULD NOT be so expensive! And our PRIVATE INFORMATION is not for sale by corporations to further enrich their bottom line. ENOUGH.
—Evan Jane Kriss, SAUSALITO, CA

You let Time Warner be bought. No fix that mistake and lower bills and let customers have a voice and a choice. Don't screw this up like everything else you people do!
—Jason Bogosian, Arcadia, CA

Protect my privacy!
—James-Henry Holland, Geneva, NY

We can't let corporative power to run our lives.
—Mary J. Wood, San Luis Obispo, CA

We can purchase separate internet equipment from retailers like Best Buy and Amazon that work with whatever service providers we have. The same should apply to cable boxes for tv. After paying months of rentals, we have probably exceeded their respective retail costs and are overpaying by a lot of money. Boxes should work with whatever company with whom we pay for services. And a day will come soon enough that plugging in or not from Internet to tv will be sufficient or even via wireless that boxes will be irrelevant very soon as companies like Apple make usb connection devices all we need.
—Sandra Myers, West Hartford, CT

Please set me free from 2 year contracts and private DVR boxes. Let my Apple TV go free.
—Elizabeth Shepard, Olympia, WA

If Cable Companies were smart, first, instead of being greedy, first, by lowering fees and ridiculous add-on charges, they might...no, would...find more subscribers. Also, by providing equitable internet service, and/or affordable tier levels for the poor, they would increase the opportunity for all Americans and help them ascribe to possibilities in education and commerce not currently available, making for a greater, stringer, more prosperous America.
—Mike Wann, Chattanooga, TN

This is important to me for two reasons. My privacy should not be in the hands if corporate America. No one has that ?.Secondly, why should Comcast charge us for the set-top boxes which we did not request, nor require
—Elizabeth Barrett, Pompton Plains, NJ

stop letting cable companies have a monopoly on the consumer
—Justin Herschel, West Hills, CA

It curbs -- somewhat -- the avarice of the oligopoly's farming of it's customers.
—David Zuckerman, Portland, OR

Reasons are simple fraud and identity theft. Lower the bills on those packages and also on those boxes and cable cards should be FREE. Shame on you!!!!
—Selma Gooding, Hamden, CT

Please vote yes on these proposals.
—Linda Kindoll, Kittanning, PA

Info access and freedom of info choice is paramount to informed population in a democracy.
—G Fries, Homer, AK

As someone who doesn't watch that much TV, I would like an a la carte payment system. And I would like some privacy as well.
—Edward Walworth MD, Lewiston, ME

I expect the illusion of privacy. I hate My cable bill.
—Noah Joel Rynearson, Anchorage, AK

I want to buy not rent cable boxes
—Clyde Martin, SILVER SPRING, MD

We should expect some sort of privacy from the company's, our bills are high any help would be appreciated.
—Frank Curley, Middletown, NY

No ISP has the right to sell my personal information. This is how my credit card information was stolen - twice! And no ISP should have the power to gouge their clients by overcharging them for services.
—Paul Cully, Dover, NH

Because the airwaves belong to us all, not at the expense of all for the few.
—John Horan, Washington, DC

I want my privacy to be protected, the Constitution gives me that right. Deregulation of the cable industry was supposed to lower my bill, it didn't happen. Now we have fewer cable choices which means less competition which leads to fewer choices, if there is a choice, AND higher bills.
—Diane Danby, Mead, CO

i live on $826 a month
—Michael Langlais, Providence, RI

Even the smallest fees are too often too much for seniors!
—LYNDA MEANS, Saint Louis, MO

Comcast is a money grubbing greedy company that also charges for services that aren't valid. They need to be stopped and YOU have to protect the consumer. You work for US, not the cable companies.
—Jim Zahakos, Raynham, MA

It is important because cable tv is a utility in all actuality and is needed in my little town for information. I'm sick of being advertised to death. I cannot even receive cable without the box/i shouldn't have to pay for it.
—Diana Murray, Phoenix, AZ

We work too hard to have to deal with criminal corporations.
—Lawrence O'Connor, St. Augustine, FL

Who will look out for the public if you allow corporate bullying to force decisions which are not in the public interests? Cable bills are already outrageous. And, why is my private information for sale without my approval? And compensation to me for use of my private information? I feel very vulnerable to corporate decisions& money making schemes without any representation to me & my interests & needs.
—Don Machrowicz, College Station, TX

It's the right thing to do, and you know it.
—Robert Granger, Eugene, OR

stop the monopoly on cable boxes
—Warren Steven Cushway, bay city, MI

Monopolies are bad for consumers and progress of democracy. Prices grow sky high and information becomes limited and bias. Competition is good for business and better for consumers. it's beneficial for spread of information, price control, consumers privacy protection and therefore better for democracy.
—Axel Meier, Oakland, CA

Do not allow privacy invasion on the internet. The internet is the one source of enlightenment and knowledge that is not restricted to the wealthy. I cannot afford to pay any more increases for cable service.
—Jane Wolfe, Mansfield, OH

My bill keeps getting higher and the rental on the cable boxes is outrageous.
—Janet Kennington, Los Angeles, CA

The protections that the FCC were supposed to provide have steadily eroded since the "air waves belong to the public" became law. Take this action and keep Comcast out of our personal business.
—Todd Darling, Venice, CA

Please continue to act in the PUBLIC INTEREST. Since when was monopoly the goal?
—Tim Isom, San Francisco, CA

Our country's history is founded on privacy and freedom of information. Please do everything you can to uphold these values!
—Cameron Parham, Havre, MT

I only have TWC local channels and 10 speed internet and I pay $89.00 a MONTH The cable companies are monopolies and should be broken up. Stop stalling. Don't let these big companies decide for you.
—Martha M. Miller, Appleton, WI

In these past few years our government agencies have been doing less and less to protect the people's interests. Please step up to the plate and help us with these pressing issues. Please do this ASAP!
—Amancia Hernandez, Houston, TX

I remember when TV was free! Now corporate behemoths have almost priced it out of our range.
—Michael R Marquardt, Whitewater, CO

I'm already paying a monthly bill, why the hell is my information being shared without my consent. This isnt a free service.
—Michael Caro, buffalo grove, IL

The U.S. economy is supposed to be free market capitalism, right? What happens when a particular industry has a monopoly? Aren't you supposed to regulate them so they don't screw over their customers? You work for the American people, not industry. Industry is who you're supposed to be regulating. Please make up your mind about the type of economy and regulatory system you support.
—Raunette Elkins, Lincoln Park, MI

The purpose of this agency's existence (like all other government agencies) is to protect citizens from businesess who engage in scummy behavior. Please protect us!
—Kathleen Haton, Wheeling, IL

The corporate being is being allowed to make a profit off the private information of all Americans who use the internet. The public has no privacy. It appears over and over and over again that the profits of the corporate being is our governments primary focus and the privacy or even our health and safety is non existent if these concerns interfere with corporate profits. I have no idea what information is being sold and to whom. Can my political information be sold to a group that has different ideas and what will they attempt to do to change my mind? How radical are they? I resent constant ads appearing for a product that I was curious about. I stopped watching T.V. decades ago as I was sick of ads. The corporate being had pushed too far and now the internet is becoming a mine field where one has to watch their step as any information on the internet is can be sold to anyone.
—Anne Wolf, Santa Rosa, CA

I DEPEND on the internet!
—Harley Armentrout, Chino Valley, AZ

IT'S TIME TO GET THE GOVERNMENT OUT OF EVERYONE'S PRIVATE AFFAIRS, UNLESS THERE IS EVIDENCE THAT A CRIME HAS OR WILL BE COMMITTED.
—Bill Lindner, Greenbrae, CA

We are tired of the big communications companies, with their virtual monopolies in some areas, continually taking financial advantage of us.
—Tom Matthews, Cleveland, TN

I am concerned that these measures pass, both as a longtime customer of Comcast and as a citizen who champions communication policy in the public interest. I urge your adoption of both measures.
—Carolyn M. Byerly Ph.D., Adelphi, MD

Keep it simple - proceed as catalyst doing right action.
—William Albin, Grass Valley, CA

Please move forward and end the monopoly on set-top-boxes. Please do not let these greedy corporations give themselves the right to control these consumer policies. The American people have spoken and we are mad as hell. These corporations do not have the right to just do as they please. Lets keep it that way and put a leash and their greed and criminal activity once and for all.
—Guillermina Aguirre, Westminster, CO

Enough of the invasion of our life by these large money-grubbing companies who have only two main objectives: money and power. Your responsibility is to prevent their take-over!
—Roger Walker, East Lansing, MI

Monopolies are UN-democratic. While, on the surface, they appear to be the "Free Market" in action; it is a select few, responsible to the their STAKEHOLDERS whom rake in massive profits. Definitely not the people they extort with outrageous cable charges. The metadata that the NSA have been 'capturing' has been ruled useless for security purposes but for marketing purposes it is a windfall. However, it is PRIVATE DATA!!!! To sum up - both actions are UN-AMERICAN!!!! Protect my data (do NOT sell it to anyone) and lower my cable bill!
—Jon Sheehan, Bell Gardens, CA

Private industry - including corporate media - already earn far too much money from American citizens and provide far too little in return. Stop allowing greed to trump what is best for Americans.
—Lewis Redding, Arcadia, CA

These mega corp's have never had their customers or employees interests at heart because a corp's has no heart please help out us all.
—robert czajkowski Jr., Philadelphia, PA

Hurry up you are moving like a turtle.
—Agostino Notarianni, Goodyear, AZ

Consumers count; companies don't
—Robert F Kingsley, Mount Laurel, NJ

Since information has become a commodity, many companies have found ways to get our information without paying us for it, now Comcast wants people to pay them to take our information, and at the same time also pay them for the cable box to access the product we want, and still get our information without our permission, or payment. You can stop this nonsensical situation, and protect the public.
—William Haley, Tye, TX

These proposals protect my privacy and save me money. Two things that the FCC are supposed to be doing for the citizens of this country.
—Gary McGivney, Norwalk, CT

I'm barley getting by on Social Security now. Listening to the rest of us and not the cable monopolies is your job. Please get this done now. Thanks
—Robert C Rand, Pepperell, MA

It is your job to protect ME. Not to protect Comcast. Please stand up and protect the American people (NOT corporations). Thank you.
—Victoria Neff, Ann Arbor, MI

It's only fair!
—Howard Pellett, Anacortes, WA

Privacy is one of the fundamental values of American society. No corporation or other private entity should be allowed to disseminate our private information without our consent. The cable TV companies keep raising the rental prices on the set-top boxes every year (the fee my wife and I pay for the privilege of watching TV on other than our living-room set has doubled since we switched to our current provider - and that was only 10 years ago). Thank you for doing the right thing.
—Nicholas DiMasi Jr., Glen Ellyn, IL

Individual rights to privacy, upon request, should be mandatory from businesses that collect any data on them whatsoever. Cable bills and the profits derived from them are entirely too large considering the lack of alternatives and the difficulty in changing over to them. Any possible reductions in these burdensome monthly charges should be aggressively pursued.
—Timothy Wallick, Huron, OH

I am tire of being gouged by Com-Cast.
—John Pedone, Novato, CA

It's the only moral thing to do
—Rev James Kinney, Solon Springs, WI

Please make watching our favorite channels more affordable and stop this monopoly from selling our private information. That just makes common sense.
—Kecia Coachman, East Orange, NJ

I am on a fixed income, and my cable bill keeps getting higher and higher. I have only basic service and it is still too high.
—Betty Anderson, Bowling Green, KY

Cable has placed its hands into too many of congress' pockets, If they redefine the Communications Act, they must protect the consumer, not the industry. It is not an industry too big to fail.
—Lyle A. Chandler, Lorain, OH

The Internet was founded on net neutrality not to pay for bandwidth Philosophy. Our voices are all important the corporations are trying to drown everyone else out and the greed is insane!
—Stefanie Sellars, Simi Valley, CA

Stop the Comcast monopoly. We are forced to pay such high monthly bills without any other less expensive alternative. Please FCC, prevent Comcast from selling my personal information
—Sandle Dahl, Seattle, WA

Time is of the utmost importance. We the little guy needs this done and right away.
—Bill Snearly, Camden, AR

please thing about the consecvense it actually will have for the world and fredom it will lose.
—Morten Stehr, ,

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—William Kalahar, Atlanta, GA

Monopolies mean ridiculously high prices, which are hard to afford.
—Nancy Dennett, Sonoma, CA

Corporations and other moneyed interests have usurped power from the people. It's time we took it back.
—Sharlene Beck, Salt Lake City, UT

Freedom of choice
—Joan Spratford, Fountain, CO

Please end the corrupt practices of internet service providers.
—Lester Earnest, Los Altos, CA

Every year, I receive multiple notices from organizations that offer me the opportunity to opt out of certain types of data collection and sharing. The cable industry should not be exempt from offering consumers the same choices. In an era when intrusiveness seems more and more taken for granted, it's vital to remind legislators that their constituents should not be considered commodities to be traded, against their best interests, in an unregulated market. It is unlikely that any member of Congress or the Commission believes that their personally identifiable information (PII) should be open to view by any business, and consumers should not be treated any differently. Personalization can be accomplished without the use of PII (that's the power of Big Data analytics and predictive analysis), so there's no excuse to require PII from consumers beyond the basic needs of subscription management. The collection, sale, and trading of PII is akin to burglary -- entering someone's home without their permission, taking their private possessions, and using them for personal advantage. It's vital that the FCC prevent that.
—Peter Altschuler, Santa Monica, CA

I'm a person.
—A Philips, Kalamazoo, MI

We need access and fairness, period.
—Robin Pappas, pocono manor, PA

The internet is a utility. Period. Don't fold to corporate greed! Stay strong, its the people's choice!
—Phillip Wagner, Eagleville, TN

The government has to protect our privacy from themselves, corporate America should not get a pass.
—Bridget Pikosz, Gilbert, AZ

I think that companies like Comcast will not stop in their efforts to extort consumers to the fullest extent and not taking action to stop it will result in a very slippery slope that will be detrimental to consumers
—Stewart Wilson, Fort Walton Beach, FL

Dear FCC Commissioners: The cable television and telecommunications industry have converged and are almost a total vertical monopoly. Consumers have little choice in choosing providers for cable, satellite, Internet, telephone and cell phone providers. These same corporations are also controlling content and delivery of entertainment, news, information, music, movies, and TV shows by buying or controlling the studios and production companies. Not being able to buy, instead of rent a cable box is one more step of total monopoly control by these giant corporations, who resist any regulation, tax or fee. Please provide a "check and balance to these cable communication giants. Thank you, Mr. Paul Roden, Yardley, PA
—Paul Roden, Yardley, PA

We need strong protection for consumer privacy and to have affordable cable -TV for people.
—Andrea Lee, Richmond,

We have Comcast for basic TV service & I DON'T want them helping identity thieves by disseminating personal information & without our permission on top of it all! The monopoly on the set-top box issue speaks for itself -- the operative word is "monopoly." _Regulated_ public services (like the electric companies) can have monopolies, but we have laws to prevent abuses of monopoly by corporations (they were created in response to the oil companies - remember?).
—Barbara Muehlhausen, Schaumburg, IL

I have been gouged for years by Cox Cable. Last week I paid $22 for 15 minutes of local calls as part of my cable bundle--and no one is protecting me or other consumers from this type of deceptive and predatory billing. Simply enforcing the anti-trust laws and not allowing more mega-mergers will help us rein in these abuses. Please protect us...thank you.
—Stacy Hall, San Diego, CA

We NEED more privacy rather than LESS of the kind our LIAR-in-CHIEF wants to subject the American public to, because he seems to WANT to KNOW everything about us he can find out, so he can do his best to get HIS agenda passed against a total public melt down because we do not like what he wants us to do with our lives. IF he gets his way then the people of America will become virtually SLAVES of HIS WILL and can then control everything we do.
—Donald Mccormick, Portland, OR

We as consumers have been gouged too long. Stand up to the special interests and do what's right!!!
—Warren Woodward, TALLAHASSEE, FL

More choices, less monopolies are what make us competitive.
—Robert Brake, Bronx, NY

If our personal information is valuable, why aren't we being paid for it? It is ours originally, hence the "personal" tag. So why should a company profit from taking what isn't theirs and selling it? And precedent with ending the telephone monopoly that Ma Bell had tells you which way to go on set-top boxes.
—Michael Piotrowski, Ramona, CA

Please serve the public interest. Cable should not be a luxury - but something affordable to all.
—Joanne Sultar, berkeley, CA

We have the worst cable network policies of any in the developed Western democracies. There is no excuse for allowing telecommunication monopolies any further benefit from an ever more corrupt political system. Perhaps if we used antitrust AND solid regulation by government we could stem abuses. Please go forward and establish policies which benefit consumers who are captive customers of companies which do not serve the public interest --- that is the job of the FCC. Chairman Wheeler has been effective so far, let his legacy, and the Commission's work, go forward!!!!!!!
—Joseph Myers, Riverside, CA

The cost of cable service in my area is excessive..
—Ann Brochhagen, Lindenhurst, NY

I am on a fixed income and my cable bill keeps going higher and higher and mergers make this worse! Rates are raised just because they can. So aggravated!
—Maggie A., Green Bay, WI

Broadband privacy proposal is a no-brainer. So your job and pass these common sense measures now.
—Lelia Bogard, coarsegold, CA

No one should have our private information if we don't chose them to have it. Cable companies are taking advantage of us by making us pay rent on the set top boxes. The TV would not work without these boxes so they should just be considered part of the installation.
—Carol Deyo, Bradenton, FL

For heavan's sake will someone stand up for the small guy for a change. Already the cable company's have carved up the USA in to areas where where a single company has a monopoly so that there is no need to compete for clients. Now they are trying to slow down internet transmission speed so that they can charge more for faster speeds. Once again the small man takes a hit. What happened to Governance "BY the PEOPLE - FOR the PEOPLE"? The government should not put CORPORATIONS before PEOPLE. CORPORATIONS are not PEOPLE. If you are alan of conscience please do the right thing for the citizens of the USA.
—Dr. Barry J Farbrother, Guilford, CT

Where is the democracy in having to beg the FCC to protect rights of citizens? Isn't that your job? These businesses are like locusts sucking the blood out of anything remotely like democracy.
—Sandra Holt, Casselberry, FL

Do something in the interest of the people, NOT POLITICIANS & LOBBYISTS!
—Charlie, Angleton, TX

Cable bills are too high, and we are given little choice as a consumer--due to the lack of competition in the marketplace.
—Dennis Behrens, Grand Rapids, MI

The cable companies are already milking us like we were dairy cows, milking us for every dime they can squeeze out of us.
—Marcus Mulkins, San Rafael, CA

This spring my cable bill literally grew each month. Sometimes by under a dollar, and sometimes by a dollar or two. And none of these upticks were explained, even though my services were the same. I am tired of it. I wish I had another choice but Comcast is the only high-speed internet available where I live.
—Sara "testing" Longsmith, Brattleboro, VT

I am old and seeking all the help financially I can get.
—diane lewis, Mandeville, LA

If cable wasn't a monopoly, I'd switch to a different provider that voluntarily followed these policies.
—Michelle Doty, Austin, TX

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Mr. Ronald Gelden, LONGMONT, CO

The industry is out of control! Too many mergers, too few providers, zero accountability or customer service... I live near Rutgers main campus in NJ. I'm forced to use Comcast for everything...and there is zero accountability on their part...ZERO. Stopping their merger was one thing, but turning around and allowing TWC to merge with Charter was just as bad. What are you people thinking? Do you have any accountability? It doesn't appear so. Bills continue to climb while choice goes into the toilet. Why does anyone have to pay for even 50 channels they don't want on the lowest package for cable? Why does the cable provider get to choose those channel bundles for service they "guarantee" but never really works. You can never reach them to complain about your service and turning it off is next to impossible. Have you ever tried to call Comcast and speak to a human being? Tried to cancel your service? Get a tech out to your home? Obviously not... Customers pay far and away too much money for the "service" they receive from these companies to begin with...add the set-top boxes...(hope they send only the # you require and ordered to begin with b/c if not, sending it back and getting that credit on your acct. will be a miracle!)...the dozen plus fees...it's ridiculous! Prices have got to drop if the service is going to survive, I'm seriously considering an alternative like a Fire stick through Amazon...this has gone on too long!
—Tam Black, Austin, TX

If you don't do this, then it makes the FCC appear to be in the grips of the mega corporations. So much for democracy.
—Michael James Lamperd, San Francisco, CA

It is important to protect my privacy and also lower my cable bill. Comcast has a monopoly and needs to be reigned in. My private information should not be for sale.
—Anne, Santa Cruz, CA

When you are on a fixed income every cent counts. Please make the public interest your priority. We're counting on you.
—Margaret Weeks, Sanford, ME

It is Un-American to sell private citizen data
—Rebecca Diaz, San Francisco, CA

I teach online as an adjunct professor, which means I get barely minimum wage and have to pay for my own internet connection. By not taking control of cable pricing, so that companies can continue to exploit its users without recourse, the FCC risks forcing the 80% of college faculty who teach as adjuncts, many of whom teach online, into dire poverty.
—Ruth Heflin, Leavenworth, KS

This represents the interests of the people of the US, not the corporations of the US. Your job is to represent the people with measures like this, so please do your job and pass this measure.
—Bill Piltdown, SF, CA

Comcast provides the worst service at the highest prices.
—Bruce Grobman, Santa Cruz, CA

Privacy is a very real concern. And monopolies, whether for cable services OR equipment work against fair pricing, creativity and consumer interests.
—M Burbank, New Haven, CT

why does everything take so long ?? oh forgot the corporate money pouring in from telecom mega giants
—Kenneth p. Rhines, dighton, MA

Why do I have to pay for a box when I do not need one? Am I not entitled to my privacy which can be violated by the cable company? Who do you work for? Americans or special corporate friends.?
—Patrick Harrington, Salina, KS

In addition to the arguments already presented in the Free Press documents, stalling the renomination of FCC Commissioner Rosenworcel is simply wrong-headed.
—Donald Browne, Golden Valley, MN

we can only protect the consumers by breaking up the big monopolies.
—Kathleen Bourassa, Kingston, WA

Comcast is a monopoly! Very simply it does not have the people's interest at heart.
—Jane Manley, Melrose, MA

I know this would diminish our representatives (sic) retirement contributions but do it for the PEOPLE.
—Harold Manning, Martinsburg, WV

We have a chance to help learning with access to the internet so make it affordable for all
—M, Washington, IL

Cable prices are continually rising for no apparent reason other than they can! I'm on fixed income and cannot afford the cost of being connected to the rest of the world. Please do what you can to lower cable rates. Sincerely Marvin Woods
—Marvin Woods, Cordova, TN

Anything you can do to keep the IP's from gouging John Q to death will be greatly appreciated. Thanks! :-)
—Michael Arentoft, Atlantic Highlands, NJ

Why are you allowing this monopoly
—Joyce Crowley, Morton, PA

My major concerns is that every American should have Privacy protected. No one wants to have governments, companies, or other private citizens selling or unauthorized access to private lives. The other concern is paying exorbitant fees and cable bills for basic cable service. There is too much monopolizing products and services to make even more money from the low / middle class. Chairman Wheeler take your stance and be counted for the majority of American people. It is reckoning day!! Don't delay over this all important issue facing the consumer. Isn't it TIME to make a FINAL STANCE?? Let us know!!! DRH
—David R R, Sevierville, TN

Despite mergers that promised lower cable bills my bill went up and people lost jobs. The cable company cheated everyone.
—Charlotte Pirch, Fountain Valley, CA

Why can't internet users get a fair shake?
—Frank Decola, CHESTERTON, IN

Democracy depends on an unfettered flow of information. In the electronic age it is no longer enough to protect against government intrusion into free speech; government must ensure a competitive environment in the communications industry and that the private sector respects our privacy. I strongly urge you to issue regulations to open cable box and prohibit selling private data on consumers. Thank you for your consideration.
—William D Henderson, Trenton, NJ

Please continue building on the strong record of consumer protection that the FCC has built recently. Thie current Presidential election has been about fighting the power of special interests more than anything else. The FCC should continue to show that citizens mean more than these selfish special interests.
—Jonathan Moretz, Norfolk, VA

The FCC was created to protect the American consumer, so why is it allowing more intrusions into Americans' privacy & more "scalping"??
—Virginia H. Bennett, Honolulu, HI

monopolization is bad enough but SELLING information when you're already strangling everyone for terrible internet speeds is some next level evil that needs to be dealt with. I understand your job isn't "easy" but you have to stand up to them. Take their money and lie to their face if you have to, they have been doing it to their customers for DECADES.
—Blake Goodwin, Memphis, TN

The regulatory structure set up means that cable companies have effective monopolies in their own little fiefdoms, and can set prices (and sell our data!) pretty much at their whim. Please act to help the American public.
—Mary Alice Wuerz, Mission Viejo, CA

Why can't you do something for the consumers. Comcast does not have the right to sell my private information! You must end the monopoly on set top boxes. Consumers demand to be protected now.
—Elmo Dunn, Longwood, FL

Why can't you do something for the consumers. Comcast does not have the right to sell my private information! You must end the monopoly on set top boxes. Consumers demand to be protected now.
—Elmo Dunn, Longwood, FL

I don't have the money since I retired to afford this bill. If it isn't reduced, I will cancel my subscription and go with the streaming networks that only charge $9-10/mo. which would lower my bill to $28 instead of the current $154.34.
—Kathleen S Eaton, Middletown, DE

Stand up for consumers
—Becky D Wharton, Campbell, TX

The growth in cable fees is simply obscene. Take action now to help those who elect(ed) you!
—Robert L. Wesly MD, PhD, Gainesville, FL

We have a right to privacy and allowing any firm to sell or buy our private information is unconstitutional. Also, the monopolistic media in this country has degraded the "third leg" of our country's metaphoric "stool" with its lack of oversight of and truth-telling about the government and free-markets. Your job is critical in ensuring a civil & free society by allowing and encouraging a media free from political or market influences. We are headed down a dangerous path and its your job to fix our stool! Please do so starting with these common sense measures.
—Mr. Don Lemek, Denver, CO

I am forced to use Comcast, and have created my own set top box using the "Cable Card" system they are also trying to do away with. Please protect the consumers!
—Nicholas Wagner, Aurora, IL

So, can we finish this and move on
—Randy G. Whitworth, San Antonio, TX

BECAUSE I WILL DITCH THE CABLE IF IT DOESN'T QUIT SCREWING ME EVERY MONTH...
—Brian Inzer, OXR, AL

My cable bill goes up every year at a greater rate than the inflation rate. It's a monopoly, there is no competition whatsoever and it needs greater controls. Now that Comcast has bought Time-Warner and has access to MY DATA, it appears they may use, abuse and sell it without my permission. Please don't allow this to happen, it is MY DATA not Comcast's data.
—Rae Cousins, Portland, ME

Because i don`t have enough money
—Efrain Sanchez, Hormigueros, PR

Stop the crooked politicians who are taking money from Comcast to further Comcast's agenda. The FCC need to protect us, the consumers from being ripped off.
—Debbie Balasko, Sparta, MI

It's not just the money, it's the control of information that is essential to democracy!
—Ann D Hungerman, Ann Arbor, MI

Other than knowing that cable television was originally conceived to be commercial-free (hence, by paid subscription), there are many of us who could use the monies saved by lower cable prices for other important expenses.
—John Alexander Vergos, Memphis, TN

I'm part of what's left of any middle class here in the USA. We need some relief. Please help us save money on our cable bills and please make the cable company keep my personal info private.
—Deborah S. Lamb, Miami, FL

I live on Social Security which will, in a month's time, no longer cover even my rent. I have a cell phone, which is free to seniors (an "Obamaphone, although the program was initiated during Bush's last term), but the number of minutes that are free are quite limited. I therefore need to use the Internet for casual communication, as well as to make doctor appointments, renew prescriptions and so on. However, my Internet provider (Comcast) does not offer anything affordable to low income seniors. In my area, Comcast has a monopoly on cable; while Century Link offers DSL at a low intro price, it is slower than cable, and the costs to switch are out of the reach of those of us living from day to day with no money to spare. Please follow through with the actions you have proposed.
—Colin M Mansfield, W St Paul, MN

Don't be a typical government agency and kick the can down the road. Cable bills are through the roof. Do something beneficial to us customers.
—Frank Portillo, Walnut Creek, CA

My information does not belong to Comcast to sell.
—Kathryn Mosher, Eagan, MN

Both the proposal to keep Comcast from selling private information without consent and ending a monopoly on set-top boxes should be common sense. No one but Comcast could benefit from the alternatives, at the expense of millions of Americans.
—Mr. Caleb Niederer, Seattle, WA

These unnecessary fees have driven up my bills over $100 each month. I'm getting ready to stop cable altogether because I have no other choice but my one provider. The additional fees for these boxes that I could have purchased 20 times over by now are ridiculous.
—Kipp Hollingsworth, Winston-Salem, NC

INFLATION GALLOPS, YET THOSE OF US ON FIXED INCOMES CANNOT AFFORD IT!
—R Palm, DRIPSPGS, TX

Support our consumer financial rights in the face of oppressive cable co. Goliaths!
—Louis Sebesta, Binghamton, NY

The internet is essential for daily living in the US.
—Ms. Susan Lehrer, Seattle, WA

I'm retired and on a fixed income. However, prices for services continue to rise while SS hasn't given a COLA and does not appear to do so in the near future. So will someone forgo the under the table pay and actually give a care about those who trusted and elected you to office! Please! Just recently Comcast passed on a hike to us(customer) b/c they were alledgedly received an increase /hike from the companies they do business with. Seriously!
—Rosemary Smith-Campbell, Memphis, TN

Cease shilly-shallying about!
—John McPeek, Fairfax, VA

Comcast keeps charging more and more. Why aren't you enforcing anti-trst laws?
—Robert Juelich, Tacoma, WA

My cable bill keeps going up and up. These companies are greedy.
—Lois Garrett, roanoke, VA

This is important to me as i am a consumer living on a budget. i need to have more affordable connectivity options to communkcation other than the cable companies and their unnecessarily high prices. this would allow me to purchase one device at a more afvordable price tbat connects to everything video and Internet-related
—James Marin, Okaton, VA

I value my privacy and would not like to have Comcast to sell private information. And a lower cable bill will be appreciated.
—Heidi Gulatee, ,

Short of mandating and financing local publicly owned fiber optic systems, cable internet has become the minimum needed utility for information services. It is not a frill and should be regarded as a necessity of modern life. As such, the price paid should be capped and tied to actual cost of service and severed from profits above 5%.
—Dave Hart, Davis, CA

No competition for cable services breeds higher costs and no interests in providing better service. We also don't need more "junk" mail after they sell lists to whomever.
—Larry R. Antila, San Francisco, CA

ENOUGH.
—Barbara Sharma, los angels, CA

The original premise for allowing cable was its affordability. The very least the FCC could do is to stop the increases that deter those unable to keep up with this escalation is to stop it where it is.
—Ken Ring, Minneapolis, MN

Protecting the Public's Privacy--the right top be left alone--has always been a American Civil Right honored by all Courts!
—S Spacek, Germantown, MD

I support the FCC's privacy proposal and the end of the monopoly on set-top boxes. These are public interest proposals. There are millions and millions who will be served by this, even if you hear from only a small fraction of those.
—Guthrie Miller, Santa Fe, NM

Please work for we, the people, and reject the financial and political games being played in our Congress. I thought we broke-up monopolies over a century ago.
—Ed Parks, Lawton, OK

It should be self-evident why this is important to me: stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Yvonne White, Kinmundy, IL

This is why I do not have cable TV!
—Carol Mone, Trinidad, CA

Comcast is the worse of the worse. They continually have the worse service and increase charges. It is way past time to reign them in!
—Patricia Daniels, Manassas, VA

Consumers are fed up with the service they're getting and the paucity of choices, not to mention the high cable bills.
—Nita Sembrowich, Cambridge, MA

Make corporations decide whether they are going to be in the common carriage data transit market (including voice and video data) or the content publishing market. They can't be both in any valid definition of an open market.
—Jared Hardy, Los Angeles, CA

The Right to Privacy is in The Constitution...the right for corporations to profit at the expense of OUR Constitutional Rights is NOT enshrined in The Constitution! Not to mention the fact that MONOPOLIES are illegal in the US, so why do Cable companies get fuedal fiefdoms assigned to them where they don't have to compete with each other? Every other business has to compete for customers in the country...what makes Cable companies the exception to that rule???!!!
—Walker Hibben, newport beach, CA

I am a senior citizen on limited income, the internet is important to mel
—Rosemarie Werner, Standish, MI

The constant erosion of the citizens rights must be stopped now!
—Mr John K Harrison, Clifton, NJ

Privacy is important.
—Chris Damon, East Brunswick, NJ

The internet was developed by the Federal government. It belongs to the public. Companies don't deserve the right to regulate the internet for their own profit.
—Jeffrey Rovner, Chicago, IL

It is burdensome, to always have to worry, that, our individual rights to privacy, are always being jeopardized by the private sector, or even by our own government, whose duty is to uphold and protect our rights! Stand up for our rights and quit allowing corporations to monopolize everything at our expense!
—L Bagley, Albuquerque, NM

You are appointed to work for and answer to us - not to the cable companies. Stand your ground and do the right thing; protect our privacy and provide more equitable access to information.
—Sondra Loucks Wilson, Grand Rapids, MI

It's clear from the Presidential primary elections that consumers are becoming more and more vocal in their opposition to the corporate hijacking of federal agencies that should be working for the citizens of this country. The FCC has a mandate to regulate, rather than take orders from the cable industry.
—Mark Schwartz, Northbrook, IL

You give these companies an inch, they'll take a mile. Please, stand up for the little guy.
—Mr. Brock Janson, Colorado Springs, CO

My privacy is important to me.
—Lila Cornell, Cranberry Twp, PA

For those of us who do not go to the movies anymore, cable television is our source of entertainment. Continuing to gouge customers with increased prices can be problematic for many on fixed incomes.
—Joanne Snyder, San Diego, CA

We are SO tired of fighting for what is right vs BIG CORPORATIONS!!! DO THE RIGHT THING! STOP THE BRIBES.
—jana Shiloh, s, AZ

I'm tired of paying inflated prices for substandard "high speed" cable internet service. Where is FTTH, 1Gbs internet service? The U.S. is the laughing stock of the developed world when it comes to high speed internet.
—William B. Hess, Edwardsville, IL

I find Comcast's and other similar corporate behavior to outrageous. This should be a no-brainer. Thank you!
—David Rogg, Oakton, VA

You should be making the rules for Comcast; they should not be making the rules for you - stand up to them!
—Chari Rosales, Naperville, IL

If I didn't have to pay so much for cable i could buy other goods and/or services.
—Dubby Wm J. Hill, Ocoee, FL

Cox Communications makes us rent a set top box, even though a few months ago we were able to receive the channels on our TV without a set top box. Now I have to rent a box for each TV and my TiVos will no longer work.
—Lyle Sanders, Virginia Beach, VA

My private info should not be risked by being sold without my consent just because I watch TV, and my Comcast bill should not be so expensive and always climbing higher whether I change anything or not. End the monopoly on set-top boxes that we are forced to rent each month.
—Shellee Davis, Cotati, CA

I tire of my Bill so high. It not like you do is watch it all Day. You can't watch all the different channel at one time. Cable is a big Joke to the American People. I like different channel but the one I watch and not all the other channel I don't watch why pay for them.
—Jeff Waters, Ocala, FL

Protect my privacy and lower my cable bill.
—Brenda Peppers, Goldsboro, NC

I would like MORE option when it comes to broadband choices in my area. Comcast is the only provider available and I'm NOT HAPPY!
—Susan Detato, Orleans, VT

The United States cannot keep its technological leadership with an internet that looks like it is run by Soviet bureaucrats. We must have effective administration of our internet assets or we will sink to the level of a developing nation, but this time by choice.
—Peter Rogan, Royal Oak, MI

This is omportant because I would like ti live in the United States of America-and Comcast et al makes us all inti United Serfs of Americas, and as sergs we expect you TOM, to keep is safe from corpocracy!
—Gloriana Casey, altadena, CA

Big Cable goes out of its way to make it all but impossible to use any device they don't rent us on our own television sets - this must end now !
—Timothy Liebe, Syracuse, NY

Seniors living on a limited and fixed income should get a break on the extreme cost of Cable. For many of us, this is our main connection to the rest of the world.
—Christopher Lawrence, Spokane, WA

I didn't give my comcast my consent to Dell my private information. Comcast is a monopoly, and needs to be put in its place.
—Arlene Satz, Boynton Beach, FL

I agree with these proposals. Cable bills increase every year and it is getting out of hand. Protect the public interest.
—Mr. R. Michael Ehr, Milwaukee, WI

I don't want my information broadcast, especially not when others get cash for it.
—James T Elder Jr, Olympia, WA

Proprietory set-top boxes are a clearly anti-consumer issue, which we similarly swept away with AT&T rented phones 35 years ago. Set-top boxes are just cash cows for the cable industry that bilk consumers in rentals far more than the boxes cost. Time to eliminate this egregious monopolistic activity and let consumers decide whether to continue rental or buy their own.
—Alex Tolley, Los Gatos, CA

All our privacy is at risk. Help protect it.
—Patricia Jones, Mountain Home, AR

To FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler, Commissioner Mignon Clyburn and Commissioner Jessica Rosenworcel: Thousands of us have written in support of the FCC's broadband privacy proposal and the agency's efforts to end the monopoly on set-top boxes. These are common-sense, pro-consumer policies, but we're concerned they won't move forward if you don't act now. The cable industry's friends in Congress are threatening the survival of both of these measures, trying to force the agency's hand by holding up Commissioner Rosenworcel's renomination and pressuring the chairman to resign after the election. This is no way to govern, but we're concerned their pressure may be working. Commissioner Rosenworcel is reportedly reluctant to move quickly on these crucial measures. Anything worth doing at the FCC is going to take at least a 3–2 vote. You have a chance to go down in history as leaders of the FCC that did more for the public interest than any other. Your decisions over the next few months could cement that legacy — but only if you hold strong. We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Margot Rochon, Austin, TX

Please care about customers, not just industry people who are lobbying you. We will appreciate it. Thanks.
—David Chu, Syracuse, NY

I don't like monopolies.
—Ed zelonis, Minersville, PA

These are only small steps against the stranglehold the cable duopoly have on us. Please grow a backbone and do the right thing for the American people you serve.
—Barbara McDonald, Wyandotte, MI

You are our only shield against the massive power and push of the communication giants.
—Rob West, Los Angeles, CA

The FCC is supposed to protect people who use the cable not just the providers. The FCC is not doing its job. It is acting just like Congress. It's time to take a stand for the people who pay the bills.
—Shirley Powell, Johnson Creek, WI

It is very well laid out in the text above. nothing more to be added, than that private information is just that. Private. It is not to be sold, bartered, jumbled. queried.
—Per-Ola Selander, Kirkland, WA

I'm on a fixed income so every time my cable bill goes up I loose money. It seems to increase a few dollars each month and it is hard to keep up.
—Claudia Schumann, San Francisco, CA

We're seniors living on a fixed income, we can't afford to have giant monopolies picking our pockets and profiting off selling our information. Please protect us from the wolves.
—Deborah Moore, Somers, NY

Cable should be a utility with consumers having access to multiple detective providers over it.
—Pat Smear, San Francisco, CA

Here in the U.S., there is little or no competition; we have the worse customer service, the slowest speeds and the highest prices. I had faster speeds in Iraq. Our systems are abdominal. You allow businesses to screw over customers, why?
—Janice Barnes, Jacksonville, FL

To be a knowledgeable citizen in our current society requires access to public information and that can be best provided through connection to the internet. That has allowed major ISP companies, especially Comcast, coupled with their monopolistic powers to force consumers to pay very high prices and to surrender privacy information which would otherwise be withheld. I urge you to provide the balance that has been denied to consumers by denying these companies access to personal information which is then used for commercial purposes and to eliminate their strangle hold on the devices necessary to access the information stream.
—A L. Mullikin, Peachtree City, GA

Just say NO to Comcast!
—Anton Grambihler, Richland, WA

My privacy and a fair deal is important to me. Being sold and manipulated by big coroprate business is not good for me or you.
—Craig Love, ,

Time to regulate this monopoly!
—Michael Feinberg MD, PhD, Philadelphia, PA

Congress wisely rooted out monopolies decades ago. Is today's Congress AS wise? My cable bill is humongous!
—Craig T. Ponczak, Scottsdale, AZ

I live on a VERY fixed income and can just barely afford the internet I have and I have to have it for school. If you don't finish your job and reject Congress' political games, I won't be able to afford cable at all. I don't connect for TV purposes; I have to have TV in order to get internet.
—Pat Brunson, Las Vegas, NV

Seniors on fixed incomes need these services to be affordable.
—Karen Stephens-Cole, Chino, CA

MSKE IT EQUAL FOR THE MIDDLE CLASS AND POOR TO GET A CHANCE WITHOUT A MONOPOLY LIKE COMCAST !
—Constance M Rodman, Seattle, WA

FCC, please serve the public interest, not collapse under pressure from special interests.
—RJ Boyer, San Clemente, CA

Privacy and fair pricing are important to everyone.
—Kathryn Vinson, Seattle, WA

I'd like to know what the FCC really stands for and represents. Are you an Agency that has been infiltrated by corporate operatives, savages devoted to greed who have no loyalty to our Nation and the American People, or is the FCC still a genuine American Agency run by dedicated individuals who represent the interests of the American People. We shall see by your actions what you really are and stand for.
—Paul Judy, Van Nuys, CA

Stop comcast selling my private information to others. If I wanted my information sold I would sell it myself and not some greedy corporation that sets high prices on the American public. Stop corruption with the cable boxes also. This company is taking advantage of Americans and we are standing up against this.
—Mark LaCompte, timber lake, SD

Media consolidation is driving up all costs in our cable bill.
—Wm Schultz, whitefish, MT

When the FCC voted in favor of net neutrality, it voted in favor of the consumers. I hope it continues this path.
—James Bachman, Saint Charles, IL

As a teacher and mother (& now grand mother) I have fought for the common citizen to have more power and influence over the critical communication systems in place today...this is not just business..it is a responsibility of the businesses we allow to operate in our nation that they serve us well for the purposes we wish and not just charge us to shove down our throats messages products they and other overtly wealthy WANT TO BRAINWASH AND SHOVE TO THE CITIZENS / CONSUMERS. The FCC is there to look after the interest of all the citizens and not allow a few to bulldoze their way over the rest of us and into our pocket books as well as our minds. Our own money should not be allowed to be used to corrupt us with dictated messages by monopolies and gouge our funds with over priced products....My personal info should also be under my control not Comcast or corporate control without my consent. I want money diverted to buy policy and policy makers on our invoice and not collected pretending to be for services rendered for media or as a common carrier of communication delivery and I instead want these funds used to provide us better services we are paying for & not to buy policy that works against these companies own customer base.
—Monica Seymour Mcfeeters, baldwyn, MS

Cable bills are prohibitively expensive and keep rising every single year. We need relief and competition in set top boxes is a way we can get it!
—Karen Young - Writers Guild, Brooklyn, NY

Why isn't it against the law for a company tosell private information, and why aren't avoidable monopolies prohibited by FCC policy? Please honor your implied or explicit responsibility to act in the interest of the American Public.
—Sherman L. Guth, Bloomington, IN

We have the worst service for the highest prices in the world because once again there is no competition. Break up these monopolies and stop making them even more powerful. It’s not right, it’s not fair and it’s your responsibility to control these out of control behemoths.
—Lee Clingman, Portland, OR

you work for US, not the cable companies.
—Barbara Hosmer, Mission Viejo, CA

It took years of hard-fought effort for the FCC to pass even the basic, common-sense net-neutrality laws we have today, and rather than celebrate that their limited scope allows them to continue with much of their corrupt abuse of their customers, these services providers continue to try and circumvent these laws, as well as any others that might limit their profit-potential, regardless of how it affects the American people. For this sort of ludicrous situation to ever even arise, is solely possible due to their corrupt and undemocratic influence over this regulating body, and those in positions to affect its actions, in the form of money and threats. A democratic government, by definition, can only exist as long as every citizen has equal influence in its direction, no more, no less. In these dark times, when wealthy groups of citizens can go unpunished while using said wealth to directly influence our elected officials (and even who those officials are), and indirectly to manipulate the general public, using widespread propaganda to directly control the core knowledge they base their decisions on, our only hope is to acknowledge and fight against this perversion of our country's principle whenever and wherever possible. The most basic principle for any regulating body to be effective has to be that those whom they are set to regulate cannot influence it's direction in any way; as long as that is not the case, the regulating body is nothing but a figurehead to appease the public, while those meant to be regulated have actual control. That they are able to do so publicly to the extent we see today is proof of how far out system has fallen: Those that realize what is happening and are in positions to take real actions against it have a dirty to do so, both to the people they represent, and to themselves. When given a position of power, and the responsibly that comes with it, in the face of injustice, inaction is sin.
—Christopher Kloppinger-Todd, Montgomery Village, MD

We don't have cable and don't want it, partly for these reasons. But most of our friends, neighbors and relatives do have cable for lack of a better choice, and I'm joining them in their protest.
—Liz Gaspar, SHELTON, WA

My cable costs are ridiculously high!
—Bob Lorentzen, Fort Bragg, CA

Why do you hesitate and linger? Why are you not taking action! Are the cable companies paying you off???
—Susie Warner, Beverly Hills, FL

Most of public citizens are struggling to pay their bills. Privacy invasion can be a nightmare that we cannot afford, and cable bills do not need to be predatory. For ONCE, please consider that corporate profits are killing us.
—Faith Mishina, Hilo, HI

The Government is supposed to be governing in the best interest of the nation, DO IT !!
—Anthony G Franklin, Bedford, OH

Selling private information without knowledge or approval sounds like an illegal action, or it should be. Monthly charges are already in place with whatever services you subscribe to, so why the additional monthly charge for the box. Sounds like double billing, and at best it should be a one time charge, and at the very least there should be no monopolies..
—Jean Mobley, Albuquerque, NM

Privacy is important to me. I am a person with rights and duties, not a commodity.
—Deirdre Balaam, ,

It's not capitalism if it's run by monopolies. It's not capitalism if the rules are rigged against consumers.
—Don Bliss, city, CA

It's time to get these two measures passed. Privacy of my personal information is important to me and I expect to be asked to give up my right to it's privacy. I also believe consumers of a product should have as many choices a possible to maintain competition. End the monopoly on set-top boxes and give consumers a choice.
—Warren Hageman, Carmichael, CA

If we don't continue to fight against the Cable companies they will destroy the internet and along with it America. Out once great country is already heading down the tubes and it's due to large corporations being aloud to run wild, break the rules, and make up their own rules. What use to make America great was our ability to make advancements in technology be it digital or not but now we have these fat parasitic companies who are happy to keep things right where they are. Up grade the us digital infrastructure? Why would we need to do that when we can just charge people more for what to most countries is considered archaic? This needs to end or things will only get worse. Big business already has it greed controlling hands on the white house are you going to let them do that to you as well or can you lead by example?
—Brice Benton, Minneapolis, MN

Protect My Privacy The continued assault on our privacy by corporations who have OUR data is disgusting. They seek to monetize our life, by destroying our privacy. These soulless corporations are willing to do anything for monetary gain. Are you comfortable with corporations who have YOUR data selling it, destroying YOUR privacy? Will it take a public interest organization gathering and collating data about your life and publishing it on the internet for you to stop this absurd practice? Lower My Cable Bill Forty eight years ago the Federal Communications Commission's "...Carterfone decision enabled consumers to purchase modems from countless sources." "Without easy and inexpensive consumer access to modems, the Internet would not have become the global medium that it is today." The same applies to "the agency's 1998 decision to let consumers pick and choose their own cable set top boxes. "Subscribers have the right to attach any compatible navigation device to a multichannel video programming system," the Commission declared. "We conclude that the core requirement, to make possible the commercial availability of equipment to MVPD subscribers, is similar to the Carterfone principle adopted by the Commission in the telephone environment." We can expect enhanced features and function and probably services unthought of today by allowing competition for set top boxes. End the cable system monopoly and unchain innovation. By cable companies not allowing this, is this not a violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act?
—Jerry F Koniecki, Hyde Park, NY

With no COLAs for 2 years and being on a small fixed income, we need this protection from higher costs!
—Ms. Niara Isley, Durango, CO

Pro-consumer policies like this one is a step in the right direction that benefits everyone except a very small minority. Take action, America has been bogged down by an oligarchical system where only the powerful win. Where has this gotten America on a world scale? We need policies like these to help the middle class which in turn will help the country. Not only is it common sense, be the person that helps America get on the right track.
—Thomas, Philadelphia, PA

Because I'm a senior citizen and living on a fixed income. Cable bills have become outrageous.
—Sheila Leitner, No. Myrtle beach, SC

Fixed income; get awful channels for too much money and no choice. Unfair.
—Lee Stephanie Roscoe, Brewster, MA

No one should be able to sell your personal information with your explicit consent, & hiding it inside its cable service contracts should BE illegal! And making everyday life more affordable for everyday working folks should be a goal our government & its agencies should ALWAYS strive towards!
—Christina Fahey-Matias, Vancouver, WA

SENIOR'S NEED LOWER BILL'S AND WE NEED OUR PRIVACY PROTECTED
—Katie and Bill, Sheffield Lake, OH

My own set top box would save me money. Not having my info sold would save me time and trouble.
—Lance Vilter, Los Angeles, CA

As a retired teacher, my cable bill goes up year after year while my Soc. Sec. and pension remains the same. Your bill will help with that by lowering my cable bill. I also dislike all the e-mails I get because my information is sold and exchanged without my permission. Please put through your bills as soon as possible. Thank you,
—Ethel Dumas, Wesley Chapel, FL

Between the cable box and modem, I'm paying $15 per month, which comes out to $180 per year! I've been a Comcast customer since 2003, so I've probably spent at least $1500 on these ridiculous fees!
—Jaynie Beard, Harrisburg, PA

Because We are a Democracy. It's time Capitalism learn this and behaves accordingly!
—Kyle Kleckner, Berkley, MI

Privacy matters, and so does having world class, affordable, utility based, basic communications, free from private profiteers skimming so much. Public broadband should always be an option, to keep the private profiteers honest. Chattanooga showed we could get rates more in line with the many other developed countries that do this better than we have.
—Jim Young, Bloomington, CA

My information is mine, not yours or theirs.
—Kyle Kulseth, Sheridan, WY

Busting monopolies and regulating communications is your job for us, not kowtowing to thr corporations.
—Avi Okin, Kamuela, HI

There is absolutely no justification for further delay.
—David Tivol, Sunnyvale, CA

The cable industry has been given free reign to scam it's customers and the government in nearly every merger agreement they've entered. They need to be held accountable.
—Mr. Jason K Morris, West Brownsville, PA

Reject corporate supremacy now!
—Mike Caetano, Fresno, CA

Cable is my connection to the outside world as a formerly hard-working now disabled elder.
—Ria Tanz Kubota, El Sobrante, CA

We the unincorporated people need representation, and you are that representation. Please protect us from the powerful few who have found their legal ways of disempowering and cornering us as a populous dependent on their services. Please speak for our interests, rights, and well-being. Thank you for your courage!
—Eugene Cruz, center tuftonboro, NH

Protect our privacy!
—Joseph Volpe, ventura, CA

There is so little factual information available to Americans - diminishing each year - that access to the internet is imperative if America is to remain less than a police state resembling Russia, et al. Democracy depends on and cannot exist without an informed citizenry.
—Sharon Conn, sandy, OR

We the people look to the FCC, not Comcast, not Verizon, to protect the common good in our democracy. These monopolies must be reigned in; there must be a limit to their influence. And addressing these issues, related to the unfair practices of cable TV providers, is long overdue. Yhr time to act is now.....
—David P. Miller, Elkton, MD

My information is mine...not for sale...no matter how you cut it. When is someone going to face down Comcast and protect the public interest?
—Elaine Whooley, Nevada city, CA

Years ago, I opted out of Comcast's rent-your-cable modem at $8/month forever plan. I have saved $96 a year ever since year 2 when the capital expenditure of my cable modem had been paid off by absence of the cable modem rental fee. I don't understand what's so problematic about allowing consumers to purchase their own hardware for channel decryption. I feel like the Digital Cable Revolution has been another "carrot and stick" (mostly stick) ruse. Now that Digital Cable has arrived, I now have access to several different versions (standard definition, high definition, and other language versions) of each channel. I of course had no choice in the matter. It was happening regardless of my approval. I just want one channel -- the one that comes in High Definition. I think it is just common sense to allow consumers to buy and maintain their own hardware for connection of their television services. I mean, what's next? If they can tell us what decryption box is necessary in our homes, are they going to tell us what TVs we can buy to use their services. Presumably those will be on rental agreements, too. Consumers purchasing their own decryption hardware will certainly cheaper for the consumer. And near as I can tell, with consumer Cable rates going up every year (or at least every other) in marketplaces where the Cable industry has been authorized as a legal monopoly, that Comcast is not going to be hurt financially by allowing users to escape perpetual rental agreements for hardware.

My Social Security COLA will be 0.02%...My cable bill just went up 25% for the same package!
—John Tilson, Bloomington, IN

Please stop Comcast from selling private information about its customers. We need you to do this. Thank you.
—Sarah Barrett, Downers Grove, IL

We love privacy and hate monopoly. We hope you do, too.
—Roger Overholt, Hemet, CA

Cable companies have no incentive to act in the customer's best interest and routinely seek out new ways to charge more for their poor service. Consumers need an advocate to protect them from the ever including cost of cable.
—Eric Hibbeler, Saint Charles, MO

It seems the only people who matter now a days are large corporations while we individuals keep digging deeper in our pockets. Please remedy at least a part of this.
—Linda Holloway, Jacksonville, FL

The cable television monopolies in this country are a serious and "un-American" problem. It is your job to fix it. Do your job.
—William Tracer, Cordova, TN

Why is everybody wanting to hurt people on fixed incomes. Maybe if you were in the same position, then you would take action. Please finish the job and pass these.

It's important to all citizens that Federal Agencies look out for and act in their interests - by 'their' I mean the citizens, not the agency. When this system is betrayed, we've got ourselves an oligarchy
—Sharyn St Clair, Bridgeport, CT

The cable I have and can affordd allows me only local, one gov't, i local gov't and 2 commercial channels. And the high pice!!!!
—MaryJo Matheny, Indianapolis, IN

My bill is outrageous, my speed is pathetic, I am a captive of Comcast with no effective alternative. This is called MONOPOLY! I pay your salary. Please do your job.
—Philip Fregeau, Longmeadow, MA

Monopolistic Comcast needs no favors from government. Do NOT allow the cable industry to sell consumers private information for profit without expressed permission from subscribers and reduced subscription prices in exchange. And lower cable cost overall by ending Comcast's monopoly on set-top boxes.
—Calvin Johnson, Marion, IL

The FCC is for our protection, please do your job!
—Howard Miller, Lakeport, CA

If there is any group with a lower approval rating than Congress and less public trust, it's the cable industry and their "Cooperative Monopoly." The cable industry (and their money) take advantage of our representatives (who are almost always lawyers rather than tech-savvy types). The FCC has stood up for the common citizen with its Net Neutrality and Set top box rulings. It was expected that the unsavory lot that are the cable cabal and Congress would get together to do what's best for THEM, not the consumer. They will undoubtedly also mask their intent with a patriotic-sounding title and obfuscating blibber-blabber in the bill! DO NOT BE FOOLED!
—Stephen Wilson, Pensacola, FL

Please do your job! Protect my privacy and don't allow the cable companies continue to rape us with pricing increases and charging us for a set top box.
—Arthur W Green, N. Ft Myers, FL

I am just so tired of trying to fight against big corporations who have no interest in fairness. The FCC has been asked time and again to stand up to big corporations. I hope they can do so once again. They work for the public, not the cable companies!
—Ellen Zarter, Bellevue, WA

I am tired of paying high costs for lousy service.
—Susan C Wilkie, Lakewood, WA

Is it fair that I have to spend every month $80 dollars for just internet access from Time Warner? I don't think so.
—Maureen Kavanagh, Woodside, NY

The cable monopolies are irresponsible & unaccountable except to their shareholders & their own bottom line. They do not protect the consumers they are supposed to serve (for hefty fees) & they do not deliver the service they claim. We need the FCC to protect our privacy & open up the competition on set-top boxes so we are not forced to pay ridiculous monthly rents on equipment that we wind up paying for many times over if we keep the same service for several years. Thank you for your consideration.
—David J. Lafond, Holyoke, MA

What can I say that hasn't already been said. Russia and China already know most of us intimately, hell the own us. I suppose you all feel that allowing Comcast to open the floodgates by selling (do we get a commission?) our personal information is a good idea. We elected you all to protect us and so far our public officials batting average is not so good so I won't hold my breath in hopes of the obvious.
—Jim Sheldon, Royal Oak, MI

i object to having to rent a cable box for $10/month. if it were lease to own, i could understand...but it is not!
—Tim Brainerd, NATICK, MA

Comcast does not have my respect as a reputable business. They have kept my phone number hostage in that I wasn't allowed to use my landline for approximately 1 week, when switching from Comcast to Verizon, their installer had my son set up equipment for them, & clipped Verizon's cables outside my residence.

Privacy is very important to Americans. Please respect us and pass legislation that insures our privacy
—Beverly Ann Conroy, Oak Park, IL

Our cable bills keep rising with no increase in service, and cable companies have an unfair monopoly on the set-top boxes that are needed to conform with their systems. At the rate of $10 or $20 dollars per month, they make thousands of dollars from each cable subscriber over a period of years on an inexpensive piece of equipment that often doesn't even provide the latest features. Cable companies should be required to make their systems work with standard over-the-counter boxes that subscribers can buy instead of rent.
—Daniel Drucker, Southfield, MI

Access to cable and the Internet is critical and essential in today's society. This has become a utility that should be accessible and affordable for all US citizens.
—Leslie Jenkins, West Orange, NJ

I'm tired of my cable provider's constant effort to find one more way to pad their bottom line. I'm particularly angered by their not allowing me to use the "cable ready" tuner in my television set, forcing me to "rent" a conversion box in order to receive all the channels to which I subscribe, so that I will be paying many times over the actual cost of the external tuner.
—Richard Luken, Cincinnati, OH

No one should be forced higher prices and to be forced to rent each month. FCC who's side are you on anyway?
—Renee Bourgea, Vancouver, WA

Corporate domination of the public's DARPA-created worldwide web must be reduced significantly. Our abiity to communicate, work and find work should not be at the whim of Wall Street.
—Woody Woodruff, Lanham, MD

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Barry De Jasu, Montague, MA

Privacy should be sacrosanct!
—Wolfgang A. Loera, Bellevue, WA

Monopolies are ethically dangerous. Only strong government regulation can prevent their use of private information and their unjust price gouging.
—Eugene Bales, Lindsborg, KS

Privacy should be of the utmost importance due to today's world full of scam artists ! Also, because of the very bad economy & huge cable bills, we are all trying to save as much money as possible ! Protect our privacy & lower our cable bills right now !!!!
—Mrs & Dennis Roderigues, Pinellas Park, FL

We need to have cable that is affordable and accessible to everyone. Also, Comcast which already has a monopoly in providing cable services should not be allowed to use it's consumer's private information to make more money. Let their customers decide whom they want to do business with.

Do what is right for the PEOPLE! please...
—Ellen Johnson, Springfield, MA

Selling my personal information or charging monthly rental fees on cable boxes is Wrong!
—Barry LeBeau, West Warwick, RI

The cable industry said deregulation would increase competition and lower prices. After they got their deregulation, they divided up their territory and formed monopolies. It is time to stop this nonsense. I also don't appreciate my information being for sale. If you are going to allow such stuff, you also need to establish ways to track down who gets that information and how it is used so if it is used to steal our identities we can sue the cable companies.

—Darwin L Hatheway, Hallowell, ME

With geographical monopolies by cable suppliers like Comcast, we're already paying way more than Europe, Asia, etc. But Internet access has become essential for school, work and personal transactions. It's more than enough to be forced to pay exorbitant prices in the absence of competition, but adding the ability to profit by selling my information, and nickel and dime customers with more and more little fees is just insult added to injury.
—Lisa P Vervena, Shoreview, MN

Thanks to Free Press, I can put pressure on my publicly-funded officials to to their job, as follows: FCC, do your job!

There is NEVER a surplus in dollars, when you are existing on Social Security benefits.
—Harold L. Wakefield, Woodland Hills, CA

We need the FCC to do its job and protect the public and public interests. There is no completion in this industry including all other forms of public communication, all are owned by to few and all have monopolistic ties to one another. I've spent the last 45 years working in the business and for the last twenty it has become increasingly hard to tell who or which company I was really working for. It's time to regulate and limit once again the allowed ownership of media in a particular market. One only has to look at one individual, Rupert Murdoch, to witness the offences a single individual can perpetrate when he owns to much in any one place or country..
—Jerry Uhlman, Carlisle, IA

The cost of renting cable equipment is out of control. Comcast charges so much I could buy this equipment for several month's payments. End their monopoly in this area. The FCC should be looking out for taxpayers not greedy corporation.
—Jeffrey Tieger, Fort Lauderdale, FL

Please stand up for regular people. We don't have the money or influence of the big corporations.

Someone has to speak for the consumer, lest we get steamrollered. Apparently, fear and cowardice are in the forefront for this issue. We taxpayers are held hostage as your and Congress salaries are paid by us. Neither the FCC or Congress are want to do nothing. With inaction like this, it is little wonder that right-wing wackos are having a field day.
—John Thurber, Tacoma, WA

Remember FCC, you work for US not the corporation. Do your job!
—P Cleland, Sebastopol, CA

My mother is on a fixed income and the rates just seem to go nowhere but up.
—Lawrence Green, BUFFALO, NY

We shouldn't have to rent a cable box , when our TV's are cable ready. Homeowners cable rates should be much lower , and advertisers rates increased.

—Rita Heinz, Talent, OR

Please act in the public interest!
—Chico Woodhill, San Francisco, CA

Living in a broadcast signal dark hole I'm forced to subscribe just to receive an offair signal. I only subscribe to basic cable as I have no need to pay for 200 other channels of nothing worth watching. I wouldn't event subscribe to cable if paying a monthly line charge for internet weren't more expensive than the basic cable charge. Not only do they charge me $5/month for a worthless broadband router they want to make my bandwidth available to other comcast internet subscribers when in my signal range. If Comcast can't respect my privacy rights, which apparently don't exist in their greedy minds then I may be forced into the tech-less caste.

US cable costs are ridiculously expensive compared to the rest of the world. The US does not have free enterprise in this business.
—William Cline, Strongsville, OH

I'm retired and disabled and live on a fixed income and I can't afford these high payments from the internet and cable TV. Please keep this in mind.....
—James M Carson, Glennallen, AK

Be fair to us little people.
—, Madison, WI

I'm retired and on a fixed income, every way I can lower my monthly expenditure adds up and is worth while to me. I do not see why they should be able to profit from my private info. I want my privacy honored.
—Peter Brandt, New York, NY

I am a senior citizen with a very low income; I try to supplement that with online business, but the cost of my internet goes up EVERY year. I cannot afford for my expenses to go up after than my income (DUH!). I rely on the FCC to stand up for consumers like me and not let cable monopolies price gouge.
—Kae Bender, Lancaster, CA

I think the cable and Internet monopolies should be broken up. There is no justification for these evil entities to have so much control, except boundless greed.
—Brian Brian St. John, Spicewood, TX

What I and my neighbors want--what we have ALWAYS wanted--is an ala carte system in which we are presented with a list of channels; with prices for each channel. In this way; we could buy only what we want; and NOT be forced to pay premium prices for channels we never ever use.
—Valerie Shubert, Seattle, WA

So why is this so difficult for you? People over profits, that's what you are there for. Protect us from the corporate greed, and pass this bill now.
—Judy L., Carson City, NV

Privacy is a given in Europe, why not the US?
—Pat Ander, denver, CO

Cost for cable and internet goes up monthly. Service declines at the same rate in Louisville KY.
—W C., Louisville, KY

This is clearly a monopoly that need to be address in a consumer oriented manner.
—Chuck Hedrick, Escondido, CA

Lower bill from Comcast and more competition for cable companies.
—Tim McKeever, Yorkville, IL

The cable costs are getting higher while the quality and availability of channels is getting lower. It's hard enough being on a fixed income as it is without cable mergers (potential monopolies), higher prices for less programming, and someone in another place knowing every time you sneeze.
—Rose Marie Ash, Buffalo, NY

Private information should be just that private. Comcast is already receiving outrageous prices for cable. We have signed an agreement with them to provide this service. If they want to mine our private data they should request it and have us actively opt in. This is beyond the contract they have. Stop this illegitimate sale of our info to greedy corporations.
—Maria Dimond, Rollingbay, WA

Why in the world would I allow Comcast, let alone any OTHER cable company, to have the ability to SELL my personal information without MY CONSENT? After all the FCC is SUPPOSED to be working for ME not the cable companies nor their lobbyists!
—Lisbeth Caccese, Van Nuys, CA

cable companies have no more right to the data generated by my activity online than landline companies have rights to the content of my private conversations over their copper wires.
—Ronald H Skees, Jeffersonville, KY

My town has only one choice for getting cable for my computer. It is neither good nor inexpensive. Faurl to support consumer neutrality will only make matters worse.
—Bert ert Becker, Milford, NH

My cable bills seem to go up even though I haven't upgraded anything. It seems they raise the amount because they can. There is no regulation that prevents this. I wish there were such regulations.
—Helen Templeton, Evansville, IN

We don't need to allow any company to sell private information of their clients. The idea that they think they should be allowed to is surprising. Please act to protect the interests of the consumers/public. Thank you for your action on this matter.
—Christy Compton, Arlington, VA

My internet privacy is a Constitutional guarantee. The monopoly of cable companies on "the little black box" is also unconstitutional. Act now to protect my Constitutional rights. Thank you.

There is no control over what Comcast does. Reining them in has to start.
—James Shuta, Dickson City, PA

They should not be selling our private information. Need to end the monopoly on those set-up boxes that we rent.
—Ronald Snow, Columbia Station, OH

Consumers need you to act on our behalf, please.
—Madelaine Fletcher, Catonsville, MD

Please help the citizens of our fine country to not be exploited by corporations that have no interest other than dollar signs.
—Travis Macpherson, Seattle, WA

WE MUST HAVE PRIVACY IN THIS COUNTRY.
—Mark Koppel, Greenacres, FL

I'm tired of Comcast using me and their other "customers" as an ATM. We pay exorbitant prices for products and services that continue to get worse and worse. For example, Comcast has put now put much of its programming behind a paywall that extracts fees over and above what we pay for cable service. And this programming can in no way be described as premium. Not only do we pay a fee for cable, but we also pay in the form being exposed to hours of advertising. How is this fair? It's time for the FCC to stick up for consumers!
—Jeanine Center, Ann Arbor, MI

It's important because we are headed for the time of big monopolies controlling everything! Didn't our government deal with this issue years ago? Here we go again. NO MORE MONOPOLIES !!!!
—Linda Schoppert, Napa, CA

When I started with Comcast a few years ago, my Basic TV pkg. was $15. This month, another increase. Now it is over $30. Everyone has a right to privacy & efficiency via the Internet. That is why I do not have Comcast for Internet / e-mail.
—Iris Moore, Yelm, WA

The cost of my internet has started to reach ridiculous prices. I handed Comcast $550 last month and somehow, a month later, my bill has risen by another $400. This is something that needs to happen. We need the internet for daily life now, whether it be fore school, social contact, or for running our businesses, and these cable companies should not be allowed to practically bankrupt their customers like this.
—Shaila Stewart, Memphis, TN

Comcast has already made windfall profits off of me, alone. It is time that they give us a break. I would also like to see some deep discounts for senior citizens. We don't get out as much as we once did and watching tv is an important pastime.
—Leslie Beall, Aurora, IL

My privacy needs to be protected, and a lower cable bill is also welcome.
—Katherine Slawinski, New York, NY

I don't want my privacy invaded by Comcast and I DO want a lower cable bill. Do your job, please.
—Ann Wasgatt, Roseville, CA

When it is something we can have a choice about, we should have the option.
—John Back, Barryville, NY

I can barely afford my Time Warner bill with my small Social Security monthly income.
—Sissy Wallach, Palm Springs, CA

You should be working for the people, not the 1%.
—Hein Moritz, Maryville, TN

Why are you people so slow to protect the interests of the people you are in office to serve? People with civil rights make a strong country. A bunch of megacorporations who run roughshod over the citizenry do not. "Consumers" are not an interest group; they are the people who pay your salary.
—Michelle Gale, Coconut Creek, FL

Comcast has hijacked personal information and needs to be held accountable. If they want my information they should be required to get my approval. I am sick of Comcast padding its pockets and emptying mine.
—Susan Mcdonald, Nashville, TN

I am on a fixed income; retired, and have come to depend on my TV for most of my entertainment. My bill has risen to WELL OVER TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS PER MONTH. I ONLY WATCH A FEW CHANNELS AND, MOSTLY LISTEN TO CLASSICAL MUSIC ALL DAY. IT'S RIDICULOUS TO PAY THAT MUCH FOR STUFF I DON'T WANT. THERE HAS TO BE A BETTER WAY.
—Gloria J Howard, MARANA, AZ

The free flow of information is literally the most important tool for solving any other problem in the world.
—Brian Sands, Palm Bay, FL

Why should poor people pay more so rich people can have a great life? Not the way democracy works, though it seems to be the way our brand of capitalism works. Yuk. Not necessary or fair.
—Ms. Carol Pearl, Seattle, WA

I dropped my cable TV because I need to use Comcast's rental box. My son lives in North Carolina And Time Warner Cable has a $3.25 rental fee per box per month and you cannot buy your own box. This is absolutely Wrong. I also Do Not want Comcast selling my personal information. In Three Bridges, New Jersey, Comcast is the only cable and internet provider. I have no choice and it has been this way for more than a decade. Things have to change, the American Consumer is being ripped off by these Giant Corporations. Thank you for your help on this matter.
—Robert Meyer, Three Bridges, NJ

Privacy must be guarded to prevent abuse by online hucksters. And, monthly fees need to be reduced, especially by their trumped up cable box rental fees--per box! We pay an installation fee and return all equipment when service terminates. The box fee is like a death tax on a family with $20,000.
—Mrs. Barbara McGaffey, Alvin, TX

Enough with Comcast doing whatever they want
—Thomas Hasson, Mill Valley, CA

Monopolies of any kind are the poison that can kill our capitalistic economy. Freedom of choice is the engine to our economy. It is the very foundation of our society. Monopolies in the railroads were crippling the economy in the early 1900s until the Trusts were broken up. Media is the new highway of today and we must keep it competitive.
—William Kendrick, Kemah, TX

Cable companies already have no competition for any reasonable speed of internet access in any given area. If a company has the ability to restrict access to any of their customers they are acting as a de facto monopoly in order to force compliance with inflated prices. They would also be able to control the information that customers can see, which would be acting like any third-world dictatorship. Control the information is to control people's thoughts.
—Ken Puglisi, Cathedral City, CA

Cable companies already have an monopoly. My right to privacy is mine and mine alone. If these companies want to sell my info they should first give me the opportunity to sell my info to them. As far as renting set top boxes, I already own my own modem saving me $10.00 a month. Why should I not get a set top box to save another $10.00 or $20,00 a month. Do the right thing here as well as do it soon!!!!!!!
—John Blomeling, Wyoming, MI

We pay so much more for rather less, compared to other nations - not just cable television, but also, of course, internet service. Lets start here, and continue to lower rates charged by service providers - who are in the eyes of consumers laughing all the way to the bank.
—Robert Breeden, Philadelphia, PA

Please return the FCC to working for We The People, and again place the corrupting special interest lobbies back in second place.
—Philip J Dennany, Indianapolis, IN

My information is MINE. If Comcast profits from it, then they should be required to pay me for it.
—Bruce Hlodnicki, INDIANAPOLIS, IN

Private information is neversellable
—Peter Reum, Billings, MT

We definitely don't want our private info given away and need our cable bill lowered.
—Geraldine Thompson, SAN JOSE, CA

This is the stuff that makes Americans distrust government. We all know Comcast has a monopoly on cable in this country and price- gouges all of us, yet congress does nothing as usual.
—Jenna LaPlante, San Francisco, CA

A data and cable connection today is to consumers what phone number portability was to telecom customers in the late 1990-early 2000. We should not be subject to restrictive policies and captive device rental fees just because an already oligopolistic industry feels like it and can.
—Matthew Friedman, Lenexa, KS

If we CAN pay less for cable-TV, we should!
—Jason Schulman, New York, NY

Cable companies should not be allowed to have monopoly power over the type of set-top box consumers; they should also not be allowed to violate their customers' privacy. Please press forward with the two strong proposals on the table in spite of the howling lobby of the cable companies.
—Donald Chambless, Montgomery, AL

Big cable cannot be allowed to lord it over their customers.
—Gregory Robinson, Bicknell, IN

You should protect the people not large company profits
—Tim Parker, Puyallup, WA

Because I spend hundreds of dollars a month in cable tv. I could use a little savings.
—Yoav Getzler, Valley Village, CA

I'm tired of BIG business dictating what everyone should do. You work for the citizens & not just the companies.
—Robert Swab, Dayton, OH

Are you protecting the industry or the citizen/consumer?
—Joseph Ross, West Chicago, IL

It is due!
—Edward Haggard, Midlothian, IL

The Right to Privacy is a constitutional principle that is very important to me and to the freedoms we all cherish.
—Harry Squires, Redondo Beach, CA

Spam is becoming a serious obstacle to communication. Selling private information generates spam. Individuals need more control over their own information.
—Paul V Torek, Ann Arbor, MI

The costs does not justify the service cable and satellite companies provide us.
—Richard Eng, Hancock, NY

No business entity should have exclusive access to equipment nor should corporations be able to sell or share any personal information that is required to receive their products or services without their explicit customer "written" consent. That doesn't mean it is buried in some legalize agreement slanted to favor the company/corporation but a simple, clear, and concise authorization hand signed granting consent to use their information. Consumers should be able to purchase their own equipment as long as it meets industry standards for the service being purchased or paid for month to month. As a Comcast customer, I am appalled that Comcast or any other company can essentially lock customers into paying many times over for a device that could be bought and paid for in full and outright. As for privacy of information, comsumer privacy should trump or overrule any corporate gain especially in the digital age and the climate of hacking that has so permeated corporate and governmental America.
—Mr. William D Wilson Jr, Lawrenceville, GA

It's in the constitution
—Sheila Willens, los angeles, CA

We retired people are not getting any interest since the crash so our incomes are about half of what they were in 07. Cable prices are too high for us. Please lower them and regulate this industry.
—Alice Jacques, Phoenix, AZ

Please protect my privacy and give me the option to supply my own equipment.
—Alan Dieringer, Bethesda, MD

It is obvious that there have been too many mergers and policies that support the top of the economic ladder at the expense of the average person. It time to make Life in the U.S. fair to everyone.
—Fred T, Reno, NV

Because no one should have to pay for the company's expenses!
—Patricia Farrington, Syracuse, NY

I'd like to know my privacy is protected, and my checkbook would like to know my cable bill will go down!
—Stephanie D Jackel, Vista, CA

Please stop Comcast from selling the personal information of their subscribers, and ending the monopoly of the monthly fees. In my youth, the FCC was responsible for protecting the rights of our citizenry! And, you have the chance to protect these rights once again! Please act as the responsible advocate you are intended to be!!!!
—Susan Bernard, Los Angeles, CA

I pay $171.00 for cable, phone and internet. I will be cancelling this because I am now retired and this doesn't fit in my budget. It just keeps increasing all the time.
—Nancy R. Neilsen, Louisville, TN

This is so important to me because. I beseech you to do the right thing and vote in favor of helping the people before helping corporate America. Thank you
—Randall Hughes, Alameda, CA

Our modern democracy runs on free, equal access to the internet. We need privacy, low equal rates and open access to information to participate in the economy and the political process. Canle rates are too high to gurantee equal access, and our information is stolen and sold while we don't benefit from it. It seems the cable companies and internet advertisers want it both ways. That's not right. Please help us stop it.
—J Hester, Los Gatos, CA

I don't want internetbobo's decide what I am allowed to read
—Hans Potters, ,

It is time for the FCC to address and pass the rules to stop the Comcast merger and to end the settop cable box monopoly. DO YOUR JOB!
—Daniel E Freese, Plymouth, MN

It is time something must be done to reign in the ever increasing cost of our TV bill.
—Grace Neff, ALBANY, OR

I don't care one bit about the cost of a cable bill because I do not & will not ever get cable or satellite service. HOWEVER, I DO care about privacy & what the corporate entities are trying to slide through. I've said it before & I'll say it again - you are "poking the bear" if you really think that you can control the internet. Once you start flexing your supposed strength with the internet, the hackers & darknet WILL strike back hard. And considering how much the government, airlines, banks, etc. depend on computers, you will, by your actions, bring on the end of your empire. Just some advice.
—Michael Lauren DeSarbe, Keosauqua, IA

I never voted for corporate rule, but of course corporations don't lobby me and lavish gifts upon me. Put people at the heart of our democracy and begin making us a real democracy not an oligarchy.
—Mr. Michael Carnap, Tallmadge, OH

Few things are more precious than our privacy -- that special right that allows us to decide what we want to share and with whom. That right should never be for sale!
—Kent Graham, Moore, OK

I'm retired and on social security.
—William T. Hassig, Mount Prospect, IL

Help the public!!
—Karen Christian, Vail, AZ

I'm tired of being abused and ripped off by monopoly cable companies like Comcast (in my area).
—Duane Mantick, West Lafayette, IN

I do not support my private info being sold by Comcast and I am tired of paying an exhorbitant amount for the box on top of my TV.....Comcast needs to be stopped.
—Charlotte Bradley, Chicago, IL

you are making it unaffordable for the poor, seniors and families who can't afford cable. It is unfair think about YOUR families
—Deborah Bates Drake, Maspeth, NY

I recently switched cable companies for better internet access. The new company does not support cable cards. My computer and tuner card are useless. While I would rather have the improved internet access, I should have to choose between the two.
—R Dwayne Ramey, Nolensville, TN

Cable bills skyrocket while seniors and disabled, like myself, have little other entertainment and contact available to us. I believe that this is due largely to the apparently ungoverned, large monopolistic mergers which have become the rule, rather than the exception, in our society lately. We must end this practice of rubber stamping the mergers of large corporations, which then control such a large portion of product availability. In virtually every case, the consumer loses out.on privacy, on cost of product, and on service quality. Please get mergers and monopolistic practices out of our communications industries!
—Betty J. Van Wicklen, Watervliet, NY

Fairness, that is all any consumer would want from any company.
—Cuxan Valladares, Los Angeles, CA

It's my data, not Comcast's.
—Nina Wouk, 1259 El Camino Real #215 Menlo Park, CA

This is a test for all the great lovers of free trade. If they believe in free trade, then end the monopoly on set-top boxes. If they believe in monopoly for their influence-buying friends in the cable business, then they should have the integrity to own up.
—Mike Dorcey, Emporia, KS

Just do it already. Either you're all talk and no action, or you actually give one about the future of technology. Stop letting big cable tell you how to do things.
—William Randolph Pearce, Beaverdam, VA

Monopolies are not free enterprise. Period.
—Fran Grabenhofer, Addison, IL

Our privacy should not be for sale by our ISPs.
—Tim A, Arvada, CO

FCC supposed to represent the public's interest, not corporate lobbyists.
—Ms. Maureen A. Griswold, San Jose, CA

I am a long time customer who is on the verge of opting out of cable due to high prices. I just can't afford it. Help!
—Kathleen E. Dorce, Pasadena, CA

Keep public interests your priority!
—Althea Harris, Longmont, CO

Don't let corporations take over the internet. It belongs to the American people.
—Kim McDonald, Marysville, WA

Privacy should be written into all internet transactions. The monopolies given to cable companies have lead to constant price increases without the competition needed to keep prices competitive.
—Darrell Noel, New York, NY

Internet is a valuable public utility, it needs to be affordable.
—Ljubica Sefer-Stefancic, New York, NY

Fairness. Setting reasonable limits on what a large powerful company can do to the public it's supposed to be serving. Squeezing every single dollar it can from people it believes have no recourse. I want to believe that they can't get away with it.
—Patricia Gragg, Bellevue, WA

It's important because the information is mine and should be kept private.
—Jacqueline Olmeda, New York, NY

I want my privacy protected and a lower cable TV bill.
—Emily Willoughby, Tukwila, WA

I cannot think of a single good reason why you would allow a company to profit off selling their customers' private information. Honestly, what possible reason could you have? And as for cable bills, well, I'm sick of paying for hundreds of channels we don't watch, in order to be able to watch the half dozen channels we do. These companies are cramming their pockets with our money and giving us less and less of any value. Please do something.
—Marlena Machol, Glendale, AZ

telecoms want to control everything as a monopoly should. BREAK THEM UP!
—Michael Boshears, crestline, CA

stop the monopolies!
—Scott Erickson, Omaha, NE

Our cable bills are ridiculous. There are few alternatives. We have one cable provider and if we find their rates to expensive we have little or no alternatives.
—Mr. Dave Zachar, Queensbury, NY

Cable TV companies are taking advantage of the people. Help us. Thanks
—Rex W. Sanders, Phenix City, AL

I have "cut the cable". But at times (like the Olympics) it creates viewing limitations. This is one of the MOST important issues of our times. Protect citizens' right to privacy and eliminate the outrageous fees cable-TV companies charge! Please!
—Katherine Miller, San Diego, CA

This is very very simple,people can not afford the higher rates
—Shaukat M Basit, Brooklyn, NY

I don't know how it is that anyone in Washington D.C. hasn't yet gotten the message that Americans are sick and tired of the political games everyone there insists on playing rather than doing the work the American public pays you to do. Stop playing political games and stop stalling meaningful reform with unrelated topics. Really, please stop with the nonsense. I want the FCC to protect my privacy and they clearly can do that if they would get on with approving the proposed policy that does just that. And i want my cable bill to be as low as it reasonably can be and the proposal to end the monopoly on the set-top box that I'm forced to rent each moth would help a lot. Both these proposals are excellent and both are just sitting there waiting while political games are being played instead. It is time for the FCC to stand up to the lobbyists and pull the plug on the corrupt political games. Stick to the subject, do your job and move both these proposals forward today. i want the FCC to protect my privacy and to lower my cable bill TODAY.
—Chloe Fessler, Missoula, MT

I don't understand why the FCC is struggling to decide whether to protect consumers or given to the big telecom companies. Comcast should NOT be allowed to sell our private information.
—Lynna Dhanani, New Haven, CT

Regulatory agencies need to regulate for the public good. If they don't, then they have no place in a democracy.
—Eric West, Port Orange, FL

It's time to break-up the cable monopoly.
—Lana Harrison, Newark, DE

We need the "little guy" not just those larger guys.
—Margaret Osbakken, Belvidere, IL

this is important to everyone, to personal choice, and to privacy
—Gerson Debbie Lesser M.D., Bronx, NY

Do this now, you morons!
—Herman Stanford, Poplarville, MS

Are we human beings to the FCC and to Comcast, or animals for slaughter in a factory farm? Comcast will not treat anyone with the respect and dignity the Constitution promotes... You, the FCC must defend us.
—Dan Johnson, Lansing, MI

privacy is the foundation of democracy...one such example is in the voting booth
—Larry Steele, ,

Please protect my privacy. Comcast doesn't have the right to sell my info!
—Wendy Pfile, San Jose, CA

Privacy is paramount in this day and age. Cable companies holding it ransom is indefensible.
—Mr. Bill Merikallio, Aptos, CA

I would really like my privacy protected. There are enough ways to have it hacked, I don't want Comcast giving my information away. Please act and protect
—Marilynn Baldwin, Aberdeen, MD

No robber barons! In any part of the economy!!
—Kim Whitmyre, long beach, CA

You mission should be to support the citizens of this country not those that feed political campaigns with a small portion of there ill gotten gains
—Gary Bechthold, Roseville, CA

Cable has betrayed its mandate. A lower cost is the least you can do to start.
—Tim Harrington, Weston, FL

Once again, Americans need to see Federal regulators working on our behalf, and not looking to line their own pockets when they leave government service for a lucrative industry job.
—Peggy Kenny, Palo Alto, CA

I agree that is time to prptect consumer information and that set top equipment should be optional for consumers to use their own equipment. Part of the famous AT&T settlement in the 1980s allowed customers to buy their own telephones. Shouldn't we be given the same opportunity.
—Paul Lossau, Westchester, IL

I do not think that it is kosher for someone to sell my private information. Honestly, how low can you get! And the cables use this charge to make more money at our expense. This charge should be done away with.
—Wanda Daugherty, Mesquite, TX

To level the power between users and providers.
—Joseph Long, Madison, WI

I'm on a fixed income and need internet and phone service, as my cellphone doesn't properly work in my area.
—Scott Norman Rosenthal, Philadelphia, PA

they already charge for the service. The service requires equipment to operate, so should be included in the service price. tired of being ripped off.
—James Maszczak, Pomona, CA

American citizens are not just markets for giant corporations. We are people. We are voters.
—Dan Parillo, Clifton, NJ

Please follow thru to secure citizens privacy & help low income citizens to have internet/cable access. In many areas of our country, people have to make the choice of food or media. Thank you.
—Sondra Olson, Beaver Dam, WI

The idea that one needs to pester, incessantly poke and prod the regulatory entities that are supposed represent their interests to do just that is both frustrating and ridiculous to me. However since that is the case, I am choosing to taking part of what must be done by giving my support on this particular issue.
—Carlos Hudson-Bey, Cleveland, OH

We need our privacy. Everyone is worried about Government intrusion, I'm more worried about corporations and private entities selling our privat information. It's just not rite.
—Carol Woodruff, Boonton, NJ

I cannot get television without cable or satellite dish, but I am tired of paying for mostly advertisements. I do not think that $150 per month is reasonable for me to pay.
—Claudia Gaisford, Cambria, CA

Consumers like myself care very much about our privacy. You must follow through on standing with us and not mega corporations like Comcast. Lets work together on lowering cable-TV bills and end monthly set-top rental fees.
—Matthew Jerauld, Binghamton, NY

fixed income and disabled.....
—Joanne Earl, Mannsville, NY

Comcast just raised my rate $20 and there's nothing I can do about it!
—Joanne Hunter, Quincy, MA

I had to cut my cable because I couldn't afford it but there are no other options where I live. I rent and am low income. I can't get most channels over the air due to poor reception.
—Kathy Watkins, Cambridge, MA

This is just like the phone company when it USED to be the ONLY place to RENT a phone... No DIfference. Also, PRIVACY is important in the age of all this Identity Theft.
—Jay Silverman, Boca Raton, FL

do I really have to explain to the FCC why this is important. As it is we have no choices in our cable companies and we are all over charged!. At least give us the opportunity to save some money by not having to pay for a box for each TV! I got rid of cable in protest.
—Lisa Rufo, Sarasota, FL

We are forced to give our personal information, like our SSN, to Comcast. When we complain that it's extremely bad to add those to another company's database, and let so many employees potentially have access to them, we are told that the system is setup that way for good reasons and that they are very careful. We have to release other personal information to Comcast, the type that an identity thief wants. IF Comcast is careful and has zero dishonest people able to access the information, it's USELESS IF they are permitted to sell ANY of it.
—Deborah Cunningham, Baltimore, MD

Why should Comcast have a monopoly on the set-top boxes. I don't really trust Comcast to set reasonable prices on the boxes. Why can't this be competitive? Also, I do not want Comcast to sell my private information. Why should they be given that benefit at my expense. Please do not allow that.
—Bob Skinner, Novato, CA

Let freedom ring!
—Anne L Pierce, Haiku, HI

We need open markets.
—Jeff Stookey, Portland, OR

You are morally obligated to keep my information private. We are retirees who are not affluent. My husband retired from the US Navy. After that we both taught school. Anything that can lower our bills would be helpful.
—Priscilla Kinnick, Stillwater, OK

Beside the obvious reasons of lowered costs to consumers, stand up and prove you are not controlled by lobbyists!
—Carolyn C Martin, Litchfield, CT

Protecting my information is very important to me. I hate wasting my time deleting emails that have no relevance to me or my life.
—Erica Wendel-Oglesby, Placitas, NM

This is important to me as I am a single working person. I want my privacy protected; I want my cable bill lowered. I want the FCC to work for and protect the consumers rather than the big companies.
—Sharon J Smith, Evansville, IN

There is little or no competition in the cable industry and I strongly believe that it's about time we got it. The prices are so high I've had to scale back my service or not be able to pay for it at all. Please help.
—Richard Gentile, Massapequa Park, NY

EVERYTHING IS GOING UP ==PLEASE HELP ME AND PROTECT MY RELAXING MIND RELAXER !!
—Saundra Crowell, Smithtown, NY

no accountability, no credibility,I boycott the terrorists mouthpiece!!!
—Gene Webb, Bodfish, CA

This is important because we, as a capitalist society, should be striving for pro-consumer ideals. We should not allow corporate lobbyists to facilitate the monopolization of technologies.
—Spencer Spiegelman, ,

Because it's the right thing to do
—James Boissonnault, Alexandria, VA

I am sick and tired of our corporate controlled government.
—Nancy Woolley, Stoughton, MA

How do I hate Comcast? Oh, let me count the ways. America has become no more than a clearinghouse for greed. Seniors like me, who've worked their entire lifetimes in engaging, intelligent and worthwhile industries are very often not paid in a commensurate manner. I am forced to pay for Comcast, even though I don't want it or need it. I have been doing very well with a cell phone, thanks. I want access to the internet for the information that is offered, but little else. Movies? Pffftt. Game shows? Feh.
—Taylor Teegarden, Martinez, CA

It's important to have affordable and private access. We look to you as having the integrity to work on behalf of the people first... not the Corporations.
—Lee Sanford, Burnsville, MN

internet should be a utility and not a service, as everything is done virtually these days.
—Tom Mills, SALT LAKE CITY, UT

If you let cable companies push you around I'll cry :(
—Hagi Elghahuagi, Calgary,

I've been ripped off for years, when do I get a brake! Whom works for the public. My first complaint to my congressmen. I was paying $60 a month and now its $240. Thanks for nothing.
—John R. Storms, Auburn, MA

No mega mergers! Time Warner is already bad enough solo!
—Jim Corriere, Brawley, CA

First you seem to just LET the internet providers buy other internet providers and become a BIGGER and more powerful internet provider that can a LOT more to get more profits and a greater power to just do what they want even if it is NOT for the interests of their customers. Also YOU seem to want to just LET our LIAR-in-CHIEF get his GRUBBY HANDS on the security of the internet and then can SENSOR what people enter onto the internet that he does NOT LIKE.
—Donald Mccormick, Fairview, OR

I am concerned about privacy (No more Windows 10!) and it is pathetic that Comcast stoops so low to sell customers private information.Something needs done about it NOW!
—Keith Smith, Bulan, KY

My Comcast bill is over $100 a month and I have no alternatives. They also pester you about billing constantly.
—nora lapin, San Francisco, CA

The FCC needs to do the right thing and not sell informatuon. This is obviously a scam for cable companies to make more money, and at our expense.
—Tom Steinmetz, Brecksville, OH

For too many Americans cable is the only way they can access the internet which is no longer a luxury but necessity.
—Carole Plourde, Amesbury, MA

I'm stuck in a monopoly that leverages arbitrary data caps at unrealisticly low levels, hedging their customers who have no other option for broadband. The cost are outrageous just for the connection, let alone the additional cost resulting from the data caps. You need to step in and fix these issues.
—Joseph Testerman, Conowingo, MD

I hate Comcast!!!
—Billy Angus, Hamilton, MT

Cable companies are out of control. Worst customer service on the planet.
—Peggy Alt, Philmont, NY

Companies like Comcast will continue to suck all they can out of the public until someone with authority has the common sense and courage to say no to them. Please say no, now.
—John Gunn, Coronado, CA

PRIVACY
—MICHELE wn DA SANDERSON, Walnut Creek, CA

Dear Chairman Wheeler The FCC is an agency that supports the greater good not the interests of the few. PLEASE ACT ACCORDINGLY
—Ralph Dale Long, Eureka Springs, AR

I don't yet have cable because I CAN'T AFFORD IT.
—Sherrill Futrell, Davis, CA

Keep the Net Neutrality alive.
—Joshua Arnejo, ,

Pleases protect our privacy and lower our cable bill.
—Susan Selbin, Albuquerque, NM

I'm an 80 year old single man. I am struggling to survive on social security on a $ 914 per month benefit! Affording cable is becoming beyond my reach, and the bills continue to increase, as the service gets worse! Something needs to be done to rein in crooked business practices by corporations like Comcast!
—Joseph Spiezio, Clearlake, CA

Just like the phone companies, big cable needs to be restricted to providing service not hardware. This will allow end users more control over their costs and open the hardware to improved capability.
—Dave Newman, Brea, CA

Cable and Satellite providers keep gouging consumers by increasing rates while removing channels like C-Span3, Al Jazeera America, FreeSpeechTV and other channels serving the public interest substituting reality tv shows that only the lowest IQ individuals could ever want to watch.
—Robert Scott, Mesa, AZ

Protect all US Human Citizens from prices which have become way to high for far to many citizen's to afford.
—Caroline Miller, St Petersburg, FL

Personal privacy has never been so important as it is today and it seems every day a new way to invade it is invented. I feel no vendor should have the right to sell the personal information of its customers without their consent.
—Matthew W Gebarski, MADISON, WI

You are a government agency, and should be acting for the people.
—Richard Pasichnyk, Eugene, OR

It is important that my privacy is protected. Cable bills are too high for most people.
—Diana Brunswig-Bosso, Arnold, MO

Please continue to fight for us!
—Darren Curl, Castle Rock, CO

Because cable needs to be more competitive with other viewing options, not less competitive. Higher cable and satellite prices will drive consumers away from these viewing options. Lowering cable prices keeps screen viewing competitive. Competition is the key to the survival of the industry, regardless of political opinion or affiliations. It's about consumer interest and choice, which is the priority of this matter.
—Lorna Immel, Otley, IA

Extortion is illegal.
—Ken Box, Austin, TX

How about giving the little guy a break once in a while. Oh,that's not the way things are done on the elitist beltway.
—mike Streber, De Forest, WI

We already pay huge amounts and then they charge more for the boxes and that should be stopped
—Nancy Bates, Lakeland, FL

Please stop Comcast from selling my private information without my consent, and to lower my cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on the set-top boxes I am forced to rent each month. Thank you for your help in these matters.
—Patrick Fox, Lake Mary, FL

My cable television is my window to the information I need on a daily basis, while living on disability. Yet, even while the cable companies profit margins are extremely high, they continue to stick us with increases that help to boost the salaries of their CEOs and other high ranking employees' pockets.
—Deborah Gostin, San Diego, CA

So tired or Comcast squeezing us for more and more money because they can. I have no other option where I am. Broadband internet and cable should be treated as a utility.
—Anne Griffin-Lewin, Minneapolis, MN

You work for the people and I fail to see how delaying action on these measures benefits those people. Please do your job.
—Gary M. Gibson, Sackets Harbor, NY

Tom, if you're going out anyway, go out with a bang and fix things for the PEOPLE! FUCK THE CORPORATIONS!
—Mr. Chris Calvert, Philadelphia, PA

This is important because the promise of lower cable rates was a complete lie and the Cable companies are gouging consumers threatening to slow down our internet access in order to generate higher revenues and disrespecting the concept of privacy. Imagine a cable bill of more than $125 per month for television? It's crap plain and simple.
—Mike Andrewjeski, San Francisco, CA

We need to have some competition. This is undemocratic . We used to have laws against this. Laws against monopoly.
—Ann Stockdale, Gig Harbor, WA

Some people go around quacking away about "free market capitalism", then do everything they can to stifle it.
—Mike Larkin, Schnecksville, PA

Privacy is essential in a free nation. And monopolies of any kind are destructive to free enterprise.
—e Kadera Kadera, Warrenville, IL

I Resent the idea of Comcast selling my private information without my consent. The concept of them making more money on my account is morally wrong. I also want to purchase my set-top box! A one time fair market fee is appropriate. I'm disgusted with the company and cannot understand why the FCC, allows this to continue. By the way, who do they represent and who are they supposed to represent?
—Sherry Price, Los Angeles, CA

Privacy is supposed to be guaranteed under the US Constitution - that little clause about warrants required for searches of one's "papers". Electronic communications are "papers" in this sense.
—Ed Paski, Blaine, WA

Seniors on fixed incomes can't keep paying high costs like this.
—Mike Gaddis, Highlands Ranch, CO

I am poor.
—Henry M., Hamilton, NJ

My privacy is not negated by the fact that I have purchased a service. The idea is absurd. I am paying for a service, not granting information access or rights for others profit.
—Laura st.Clai, Kerrville, TX

Forget cable: I don't watch TV and my wife is on the bird. But it is outrageous that the anti-government party is trying to govern with an iron fist, socializing costs and misery and privatizing profit.
—Scott A. Weir, Durham, NC

Because our privacy should be first and foremost of your goals to preserve and protect.
—James Dawson, Davis, CA

Break the monopoly and open up our cable to other hardware providers. And yes, my privacy is of utmost importance to me.
—David Paul, turlock, CA

Please protect our private and make our cable bill lower, Now. Isn't that what you would want?
—Judith Arnold, Shelbyville, KY

Comcast has a profit incentive to make sure that we cannot install our own modems in lieu of renting theirs. This is a vertical monopoly and should be illegal.
—Robert James, Fern Park, FL

I want the FCC to work on these rules.
—Aimee Polekoff, Lansdale, PA

I see the same issue with my ISP and their rental only modem to access the internet (ATT uverse) we should have the option to purchase not rent
—Allan Carroll, Lake City, FL

Democracy is dependent on a well informed public. Monopolies, in particular of the telecommunication industry, threaten the publics ability to stay informed.
—Gary Pierson, auburn, WA

The public deserves some kind of control over their internet. And as a utility, corporate control over equipment is no longer an option. Please chose a legacy of progression and give consumers their independence. Thank you!
—Vicki Barnes, Saint Paul, MN

Please don't let them win ! You helped us before, please don't stop now... Thank you, Mr Wheeler
—Lee Stafford, Bellevue, WA

I am a retired person living on Social Security. Please help me by reducing TV costs (also millions of others). Thanks
—Larry G Law, Everett, WA

Big Cable's anti-consumer/pro-monopoly campaign has got to be stopped. Now.
—Thom Fistner, Fountain Hill, PA

I am on a fixed income and cable bills are getting too expensive
—James Beckerson, ,

My cable service is slow and spotty. Despite complaints, there is no improvement is service. Competition is best
—James Ridlon Jr, New Woodstock, NY

What I think of Comcast isn't printable. Wish I had another choice, but I don't.
—Judith Gordon, Evans, GA

Please stop giving in to the inscrutable tactics of Washington government paid by big business special interests. Protect the rights of consumers and general public. Do what's right!
—Thomas McLaren, Fairview, PA

Simply stated? By rejecting true net neutrality, we are moving one step closer to a stratified society that will make the British class system look like amateur hour. Do the right thing!
—John Harkins, Old Greenwich, CT

Private data is private, I shouldn't have to jump through hoops to keep it that way. Also I shouldn't be forced to rent anything if I have the funds to buy it out right.
—Sean Hankins, Mc Gregor, TX

Injustice saturates the soil of this nation for the racists and the ruling class have distorted the narrative and the public dialog. It is fundamental if there is to be a future that that end. Net neutrality is but one essential for the free flow of dialog. As it is the public's airwaves, which private corporations profit from at no charge, must be re-regulated with a Fairness Doctrine. The damage done since its removal to maximize profits for the media owners may be irreparable but it is still worth the try.
—Dale Lehman, Chicago, IL

Selling customer's private info w/o their consent and also artificially high monopolistic prices on set boxes is wrong and unfair to the consumer. Please take action now to change these practices! Thank you.
—Thomas Fura, Queen Creek, AZ

I am sick of corporate GREED determining everything in our society. The FCC should be protecting consumers.
—K Penn, Clinton, WA

Please stop this appearance of cash-n-carry government and work to limit the power of big corps like Comcast These mega-corporations are a threat to democracy!
—David Atkin, Willington, CT

It would be more shameful to delay action on the bill for the benefit of big industry, than to act now for the benefit of the people!!
—Thomas Wahl, Collegeville, MN

Because I have two of those set-top boxes, get rid of the clutter.
—Nigel Thornell, Roseburg, OR

Lowering cable bills would be nice for me in a few years when I can't be so physically active. Couldn't afford it now anyway and don't see that possibility in the future. As for privacy, selling personal information without consent is simply unacceptable.
—Carol Ashley, Park Rapids, MN

You need to act - end the monopoly
—Samuel Durkin, Fairfield, CA

Selling (and profiting from) consumers' private information is against the fact that the information is PRIVATE and consumers should have a say in how it is used. Monopolies are virtually ALWAYS bad. This one surely is costing consumers EVERY MONTH. Please ACT on moving these measures forward. Thank you, Tom Knight
—Thomas E Knight, Hopkinton, MA

Private information should remain private, not sold for profit. Obviously consumers need choices of program viewing. Currently the customer doesn't necessarily have access to their favorite programs without including unwanted listings. Prices should be varied according to personal choice. Fees sneak in rising rather quickly. Cable bills should be reduced. Keep information confidential and charges at a reasonable stage.
—Joanne La Barre, Norfolk, NY

I need the safety and integrity of my privacy.

Mr Rosenworcel, Sir take a step Back. Recall who you are, what you wanted as a young boy. You are in the playground being bullied and FEAR is all you have to lose. Step into that Fear and be the man you dreamed of being. "The only thing we have to fera is fear itself" Let these wise worfs guife you now. Step into Fear,take the TRUE path and move goteeard. We ate counting on you. Sincerely NickiLee Greenwalt
—NickiLee Greenwalt, st paul, MN

It should not even be a question as to whether or not Comcast should be allowed to sell customer data without consent. Any sensible person already realizes this is illegal. Also, allowing actual competition in which set top box you use is an important step in having actual competition in the cable TV industry. One day, we could even possibly have competition in service providers instead of regional monopolies.
—Benjamin Burden, Leitchfield, KY

We pay well over $100 so the low end of cable, without any premium channels; that is exorbitant, especially when many channels are nothing but advertising. The same company can provide the same service to new subscribers for less than half of what we are paying. That is disgusting.
—Elizabeth and Terrence S. McCloskey, LaPorte, IN

The cable industry controls almost all the communication I do. We need protection from it.

—David Klinke, Airmont, NY

I'm tired of paying more and more to get less and less. Comcast is a virtual monopoly in this area, so it makes perfect sense that they should be carefully regulated as one. Tampering with user information and charging outrageous rental costs for their equipment may help to further enlarge their CEO compensation packages, but it really hurts those of us who are on a fixed income.
—George G. Stradtman Jr., Elkins Park, PA

Do your job, don't buckle to industry pressure from Congress.
—Sandra Rasich, Santa Fe, NM

Set top boxes are just another form of bill padding for the cable companies. Congress has been doing almost anything they can to give the cable companies more control over individuals and other companies. Mostly by inaction but also by action. Lets open up the system and stop working toward a Ma Bell type of monopoly situation. Many of us in smaller communities have no viable options.
—Timothy K Boughner, Dodge City, KS

I feel that my privacy SHOULD NOT be "for sale to the highest bidder"!! I ALSO feel that consumers like ME should be able to decide WHICH Cable boxes & receivers I wish to use to access Cable!!!

Dear FCC: I am outrages about Comcast pressuring Wheeler to resign right after the election and stalling the renomination of Commissioner Jessica Rosenworcel. Please act protect my privacy & lower your cable bill TODAY.
—John P Mabey, Berkeley, CA

do it for the people. me, i don't have cable. i was once a comcast subscriber. my experience with comcast was so bad, i cancelled my cable, and vowed never to give them another penny. stand up to them.
—Mr. Dave McSPARRRAN, LOS ANGELES, CA

I hate the way Comcast forces me to pay exhorbitant amounts of money for television and Internet service. TV used to be free and no longer is--I cannot get a TV signal anymore without cable. And Internet is really more like a utility than a luxury. We need it to function in our society these days yet there is no competition where I live do we have no choice. Anything the Federal government can do do lessen the power of telecommunications giants like Comcast over consumers is a just use of government. Government should protect people rather than large corporations.
—Wendy Schon, Madison, CT

Because privacy is big, and neither the NSA (which of course you don't control) NOR private companies should have the rights to sell my information to the highest bidder. Out the blue my bill went from $112 to $176. Think what it does to the average American family, not senators, congress members or commissioners that make much more per month than the average American family $35.000/per year. Do something about it! Cable companies are stealing our monthly payment. Allow local governments to take charge of the Internet by making it a utility!
—Graciela Huth, Los Angeles, CA

Every month our Comcast cable/telephone bill goes up-- maybe just by pennies, but sometimes by a few dollars.

Please don't allow Comcast or any of the other IP/cable company to sell our personal information to others without our consent. The only reason they have our personal information is because we were required to provide it in order to get cable, satellite or IP. That's what monopolies are allowed to do to us, because they own certain territories and no one else can offer the same services in their designated territory. In Europe and the UK there are no territories and customers have the ability to pick and choose the most cost effective and fastest service they want. Because of these monopolies, I can only get 450kb of service and have been told they will NEVER provide anything else for us. This is why competition and no monopolies are so important. Pricing and service would be much cheaper and better with competition. Set top boxes should not be monopolized our choices and the set top boxes we are forced to rent by the month, have not been changed since we were forced to give up our analog signals because digital was supposed to be so much better. Digital is not better and cannot go up and down and around like analog can. If we were going to be forced to accept digital, the law should have been written to make it mandatory that the signals went just as far as analog does so we could still have the choice of using our antennas to receive free TV. The set top boxes we rent are terrible, so don't continue to force them on us. Thank you for your kind consideration and please protect us.
—Joyce Hansen, Ferryville, WI

PROTECTING OUR PRIVACY AND LOWERING OUR CABLE BILL TODAY IS THE RIGHT, FAIR, JUST, HUMANE AND HEALTHY ACTION TO TAKE, NOW.
—Mr. Mary Frank Ann and Graffagnino, TUCSON, AZ

1)I'm on a fixed income and Comcast keeps raising rates. Have reduced to most basic of service, but without competition Comcast prices will price me out of access to the internet or basic TV. 2) About a year ago my email was hacked. I am very cautious about personal information. When companies like Comcast sell personal information chances of identity theft grow expotentially. Please require Comcast to behave responsibly with customer personal information.

—Roy B Tansill, Corpus Christi, TX

It is probably in the big ISPs' best interest that you help keep consumer costs down. Otherwise many more consumers will do what we (and others) have done: cancel cable TV service and use other devices to get most of what we want at a one-time cost.
—Stephen Vandivere, Centreville, VA

The cable companies are raking in money with both hands. They get our monthly fees, and then they get more revenue from the companies who run the commercials.

The FCC is supposed to support and protect CONSUMERS, you know THE CITIZENS, from corporations! So your job!! I want to pay less for cable. More importantly, I want my information to remain private. No corporation, no business, no person should be allowed to share anything of mine without my WRITTEN consent!
—Patricia Araujo, Burlington, VT

Tired of a monopoly's over pricing and bad customer service.
—Robert Beggs, Akron, OH

Cable companies take advantage of their monopoly status to ignore customers needs and do whatever they want to. They know that their customers have now where else to go. Please protect cable customers rights.
—Theo B. Giesy, Norfolk, VA

I pay $73.98 for around a quarter of download speed promised & advertised. They informed me personally (as a matter of policy) the advertised speed was "simply was not available" to me but they refused to consider lowering our cost just because they don't have to. Tough luck. "Sue us." We pay the same cost others pay for full download speeds and get a quarter! This is in your face fraud and has got to change. They lied in advertising and lied about thier right to charge for services not rendered. We have no other competition..only game in town. Just exactly what is it that the FCC does? Is it not your job to ensure competition and lower costs? Apparently we pay the FCC to do exactly what our cable internet provider does...charging us for service we do not get. Is it just because you can?
—Nancy Currah, Casper, WY

This is for ALL the people!
—Paul Saint, Apopka, FL

Stop playing games and enforce the rules that protect us consumers who are paying ever-increasing prices for substandard services!
—Ms. Carol Ortiz, Montgomery, TX

Enforce the rules!!! And apply these rules to everybody, No one should be able to split hairs on the specifics. FCC rules have been in existence since 1934 and worked fine when enforced. So if a new rule is needed, then old rule will no longer apply and should be disposed of completely. If the FCC enforce thoses as well as you have in the past then I vote to leave them just as they are. Personally I believe they haven't enforced past rules efficiently enough to warrant any new variation of them. My take is we all wouldn't be where we are right now if those rules were stringently enforced when they should have been not after the fact like they have been. EAS has been abusing rules set forth for years and nothing has ever been done about them, NSA or no NSA! Rules are rules!!! I've been bombarded by at minimum 7 test broadcasts a month, the rules refer to a least 4 are permitted when no emergency exists. That's all I going to say on this.

Cable companies have a virtual monopoly in the areas that they cover and the equipment needed to receive the signals. This creates autocratic "fiefdoms" that suck the money from the pockets of millions of Americans. AND Comcast uses your data to create a further revenue source for themselves WITHOUT asking or telling you about their schemes.
—Sarah Bellem, Felton, CA

Because the FCC should be about helping consumers, protecting our rights instead kowtowing to the Congressional whores for the cable industry who are not looking out for consumers & how Jessica Rosenworcel leaving instead of Tom Wheeler?
—L Parker, Everett, WA

1 - It's high time for regulating agencies, like the FCC, to step up and defend the consumer-public you are supposed to represent. Corporate trafficking of personal information is rampant. Only agencies like yours have the power to safeguard our privacy. 2 - The archaic equipment-monopoly wielded by cable providers is nothing more than a replay of the stranglehold once enjoyed by the phone cartels. Like "Ma Bell," it's time to bust up the Big Cable's cabal. It is YOUR DUTY (NOT your prerogative) to defend the interests of the public (NOT Big Cable) on both these issues. Only cowardice would motivate any attempt to "run out the clock" on the current administration, to avoid your duty. Only cowardice would explain inaction.

We should have access to cable boxes on the free market. There's no reason for proprietary hardware that we have to rent on top of an already high cable bill that comes with very limited choices of channel packages.
—Joseph J. Pollock, Buffalo, NY

I am a long-time Comcast subscriber and Comcast stockholder. The company should be a good corporate citizen: They should not sell customer information without permission. The internet is the greatest invention in human history, a fount of--and the very sum of all--knowledge. More than anything else, it has the power to promote compassion, end strife, and raise the standard of living for everyone. As such, restricting access through price gouging is at best extortion, and at worst outright class warfare against those most desperately in need of education and empowerment; preventing them from "pulling one up by their bootstraps", as the saying goes. Reselling private information the company itself has no right to should not even bear elucidation in its condemnation.

I can no longer afford cable. Eliminating the monthly charges for set-top boxes would lower my bill and perhaps allow me to reinstate my cable service. The cable companies are taking advantage of consumers and that should not be allowed.

Comcast is not worthy of the power it is attempting to consolidate - not by virtue of "service", or "value", or any other metric. It is effectively a monopoly, and a big, slow, maddeningly incompetent, high-handed and GREEDY one, at that. At every turn the company makes moves that are designed to disempower, frustrate and cheat its customers. (What is more, along with Time-Warner Cable, I see Comcast, through its own respective cable news organ, as largely responsible for having raised Donald Trump to invincibility in the Republican nomination contest, as well as deliberately having interfered in the counterpart process within the Democratic Party.) In short, the company is a monster, like a too-big-to-fail bank, and needs to be cut down to size. In the very near future, we as a nation will either, with the aid of powerfully liberating technological innovations, be embarking on a new phase of public discourse and participatory democracy that will spark desperately needed changes in our own country and the whole world, or, having been denied the liberty to act that is nearly in our grasp, we will find ourselves sinking into a dark night of Oligarchy that will stymie the people's noblest efforts to effect solutions to the massive economic, social and environmental problems now besetting us all. I fervently believe that your decision in the present matter could impinge mightily on the direction that we and the rest of the world will take. I do not believe at all that I am overstating the matter. Please: Rise to meet your destiny; make the mark on history that you'll be proud to have made.

—Ellen B Wilhite, BETHESDA, MD

My privacy is being eroded more every day, and since my largest bill next to my rent is to Comcast, I expect them not to share my information with anyone. And it's long past time our bills are lowered! Our power and gas are just as important as our keeping abreast of what's happening in the world, but they aren't half as much as what Comcast is. Please help us and get this changed. Thank you!

Information Age means that anyone can SELL your information, WITHOUT YOUR CONSENT? That sounds like a violation of the Fourth Admendment. A well-regulated monopoly has proven useful, eg: USPS, telephone (although AT-T break-up), and some utilities - water, sewer. Lowering MY cable bill would be 'nice', but having the 'option' to disconnect would lower it dramatically. Thanks for the FCC!

James K Hadcroft here.
—James K Hadcroft, N. Falmouth, MA

Because I believe that America, while it is doing an absolutely wretched job of it, truly was founded on the principles of equality, freedom, and justice. What Comcast and companies like it are doing spits on all three of those. Equality is thrown out the window by the disgusting, grosse overreach of a corporation, which shows quite clearly that those who are not inherently wealthy have no choice and no voice because Comcast and other corporations simply have more money and therefore more clout. Freedom is absolutely decimated when consumers have no say so in where their private information is going or in how badly they're being price gouged because in many areas, Comcast has monopolize the cable-TV market. And finally, the right to privacy is so inherent in our constitutional laws that even law enforcement agencies must have a warrant before searching your home. It is so inherent that psychologists are allowed to withhold information about patients, even ones who are budding sex offenders, rapists, and murderers, so long as that patient doesn't state or strongly imply they're going to commit a crime. Doctors do not even have to provide information to a SPOUSE, child, parent, or sibling if a patient has asked them not to or (in all cases but the spouse), has not consented to have them given information in the first place. So why is it acceptable for big corporations to pass around sensitive information about their clients, exchanging it as if it were THEIR currency for them to play and bargain with, with no repercussions? It is unacceptable and it needs to stop. I want a country where people matter more than money. It's thay simple.

Comcast is one of the worst companies I have ever dealt with in my life. Constantly raising prices, luring me to sign a contract with them and then they change what their offering in the contract and I have no say. We shouldn't have to sign contracts with them to get lower bills. And the bills are only lower temporarily. The price increases after a few months. Comcast is run by a bunch of con men.

With health insurance costing us mmore than twice our house payment with 5 acres of land, it would be nice to save a couple dollars somewhere to help us afford insurance. Between me and my wife, our health insurance will be over $1,000 per month besides our out of pocket expense for co-pays and prescriptions. You guys are killing us by letting everyone overcharge us. It's just pure greed run amuck.
—Dale Wynn, Westmoreland, TN

My privacy is important to me and because I use Comcast for not only e-mail and cablevision but also as my internet service provider, the potential for Comcast to abuse my privacy is far too large. Please stand up to Comcast and protect American consumers' privacy!
—Mrs. Randy Russell, Fremont, CA

No cable company, and especially the unaccountable corporate giant Comcast, should be given the green light to sell subscribers' private information without their consent. I need you to protect me from this company's efforts to legally extort people's private information, and to stop their monopoly of the cable industry. Further delay is not acceptable -- pease get this done promptly.
—Sigrid Asmus, Seattle, WA

I want to be sure that FCC people are hired to work for us the public,not the people who own the businesses
—Elaine Leach, Nisswa, MN

Private information about Comcast's customers should not be transformed into public information without the consent of individual customers. The no-choice set-top box rental monopoly should end - customer choice should rule here.
—John Gittins, North Brookfield, MA

How is it even a question that Comcast should be able to sell my private information without my permission? Because I subscribe to their service am I to understand that they own my privacy? That is ridiculous! Only a corrupt system could even imagine thinking this is OK. I reject this premise. Comcast has NO RIGHT to sell my private information. And the FCC should make certain that they don't do it. The FCC should pass immediately Chairman Wheeler's proposal that stops Comcast and others from selling customers' private information without their consent. Stop stalling and stop playing games. Pass this resolution today! The FCC has already heard from tens of thousands of citizens that we want strong pro-consumer, common-sense policies. Citizens have made that abundantly clear over these past couple years. Yet Republicans in Congress keep trying to derail progress and protections and keep trying to make the FCC ineffective. The FCC must take a stand and not lose site of their purpose for existence and act only in the public's best interest. Surely protecting individual's privacy should be at the top of the list. I'd also like to urge the FCC to adopt the resolution to end the monopoly on set-top boxes. There are better models available than what the cable companies force us to rent from them and there is absolutely no justification for the monopoly and the price-fixing. End the monopoly and allow competition for consumer choices in set-top boxes. We will not only get better set-top boxes, but we will also see our cable bills get less expensive. Please end the unnecessary monopoly now.

Please keep my private information private. Cable bills are ridiculously high & every 6 months they go up. Please help lower my bill by eliminating my having to rent a set top box for each TV in my house from my cable company.
—Ken Stacey, Hudson, MA

I am retired on a fixed income. I have had no cola for two years now. Prices are going up on food, phone, utilities, home taxes, you name it. I am a disabled Vet so I don't have medical expense except for a few things but I am drowning with all the new expenses. I have to pay more for medicare (which I don't need). I have to pay 72.00 for cable which I am thinking of dropping this year. My phone bill is 62.00, utilities are going up. Gas is down but I don't drive much. It costs $100.00 every time a plumber comes to your house. They wanted 200.00 to mow my lawn the other day, so I refused. I am mowing it at 66yrs old. Everyone sends you e-mails so you can send them money (money to expand social security, money because the system is now money driven not vote driven). I am going to have to go back to work or not have any entertainment in the house. I like to stay informed about politics, but I guess I can use the internet as long as it stays free (Thank You Chairman Wheeler!!!) That is one thing I was glad to see passed! Please help the working and retired being squeezed by the neck by higher prices and stagnent wages. As a woman, I did not get a high a salary as a man, I have less social security. I am still paying my mtg and have bills. Credit cards can charge 24% interest (should be illegal as usury) and we will never get out of our student debt. Congress is not doing it's job, greed has taken over. Due to citizen's united and gerrymandering, they could care less about our vote, they are in safe districts. So screw us! Please help us, we shouldn't have to pay close to 100 a month for cable. Most of the channels they offer, I don't watch, we can't pick just he one's we want. Believe it or not, I am paying 72.00 for the starter plan. The cheapest plan they have. Television used to be free, it still should be free. They have hijacked the system. Thank you for considering my side, I hope you listen to your conscience as you did when you sided with us on the internet. Thank You!
—Marie Fuentes, Albuquerque, NM

Please stand up for and adopt Chairman Wheeler's proposals to (1) stop Comcast from selling users' private information and (2) Insist on ending Comcast's monopoly on set-top boxes for Cable-TV so that our cable bills will be reduced. It would be such a great day if you took action to support the public interest rather than big corporations. The quality of our democracy hangs in the balance when it comes to communication. Please move forward on Chairman Wheeler's proposals. Time is of the essence because the Obama administration ends in less than six months.

I've been working in tech for nearly 30 years, and have been on the internet since the mid 80's. It is now part of the fabric of our modern lives - a delivery device for communications, entertainment, work, health, and safety. We need to assure it is not used against us, or held hostage for a price. It can make or break your ability to earn a living, save a life, keep communications available to everyone regardless of circumstance or ability to pay. Please keep the connections available to all. It's really that important.
—Susan Norton, Salem, OH

This is a time of unprecedented abuse of the system. Large and incumbent cable companies are not only not competing - but making record profits and allowing paid infrastructure to rot. In this "information era", to allow such crucial parts of the infrastructure of this country crumble is indicative of their motive. These companies are neither stewards of the people, nor of the nation as a whole - they need to be regulated.

—Robn Diekow, Sequim, WA

Having had personal experience of just how greedy and unsupportive Comcast is with it's customers (victims?), I humbly ask that the FCC NOT BOW DOWN to bullying from sleezebags like this. This "great nation" needs to stop selling out it's citizen's basic needs to support exploitation for profit PERIOD. Didn't we have to learn to behave at some point in our lives, or did we just go on misbehaving till there was no one left that we had not screwed over? Hmmmmmm
—Gary Di Donato, Olympia, WA

while technology improved, set-top boxes have not. In that same vein, economies of scale for cable companies are not sufficiently passing the savings on down to to the consumer. In-fact, we are bumped into higher internet speeds and then charged for the 'privilege.'
—Matthew Aaron Foster, fpo, AZ

No company should be permitted to monopolize an industry. No utility company should PROFIT from offering up our PRIVATE information.
—Teresa Montilio, Jamaica Plain, MA

I am a Comcast subscriber, and my rates for below-basic economy cable just went up AGAIN. It's time to stop the monopoly!
—James Knoble, Bainbridge Island, WA

Comcast should have no right to artificially boost its revenue streams by exploiting its customers instead of long-term investment.
—Matthew Kuzava, Takoma Park, MD

Make this happen so that the consumer is protected against unfair corporate greed.
—Mark Buck, Lebanon, NH

I live in an area where digital over the air television (DTV) leaves me with only ONE channel and the station doesn't broadcast news, community or emergency information like weather. The price of cable is making it easy to go without and many of the elderly in my neighborhood will go without it due to the sheer economics. It's time to cut the monopoly nonsense and make these utilities affordable for more than the rich!
—Robert Martin, Seymour, CT

Are you going to let Comcast be a monopoly?? They are now poised to take over tim Warner cable my company now and my bill is already to high, WTF are you going to do?? Remember MA BELL???? You scumbags stopped that years ago but now you let these bastards do to the public anything they want and you allow it!!!!!! Stop the monopolies now!!! We will just not watch the flipping tv then not a problem!!! Then what will the scumbags do when no one wants their tv bullshit????
—Dee Noblett, Mechanicville, NY

Please support the individual citizen over the corporation and lobbyists.
—Marcia Kane, Hendersonvile, NC

So much for efficiency in government. I guess those who get donations from the cable industry consider the cable industry as more important than the average user. Already paying for the service but they still want to pimp out the personal information to increase their profits. I guess this version of corporate usery is to be defended against the rights of people who have already paid for the service.
—Sheila Newtown, DePeyster, NY

Comcast is a monopoly in most markets and is ripping off customers. If you're not going to nationalize what ought to be a public utility, then at least you should regulate it so that it actually serves the public interest, instead of being a parasite sucking money from citizens while corrupting our democracy.
—William R. Singer, Portland, OR

Privacy is a human right. And affordable access to communications--which today means the Internet--is crucial to the health of our democracy and economy.
—John Clay, Minneapolis, MN

For what I pay each month for the set top box, I could have bought one 50 times over. I also think it is horrible to sacrifice personal information just to get service. It feels like extortion since we all need an internet connection these days.
—Valerie Clark, Needham, MA

If I have to explain why monopolies are bad...
—Meghan Coffee, Vienna, VA

Access to information is crucial to all of us. Keeping it affordable is your job. Utilizing it is ours. Do your job and I'll do mine.
—Virginia Brown-Nolan, Silver Spring, MD

I am a retired 78 year old depending on Social Security which did not get an increase this year. I can not afford higher TV bills. I watch a lot of TV because I am on oxygen 24 hours a day with a lung problem called IPF. I never smoked and yet I got a lung problem that will kill me in a short time.
—Dennis Radcliff, Osceola, WI

Please protect the American public from unfair business practices. Protect my privacy (business should not be allowed to sell my personal data -- that's my right). Please help lower my cable bill which is very expensive; it costs over $1,200 per year.
—Christy Fusco, Richeyville, PA

Comcast keeps coming up with new charges to add to our bills, but there isn't another choice of provider in most areas. We are now charged for sports channel we never watch, have a broadcast channel fee, and various other fees. Their updated equipment can track us even more closely, which helps in selling our private information. Please put a stop to these infringements on our rights.
—Rita Horton, Lake Wales, FL

It is a really important issue that affects the whole country and its economy (not just the cable providers)
—Michel LEBAS, Seattle, WA

Big corporations should have less influence on our lives, and they must not be allowed to gouge us for what have become virtual necessities today.
—Archie Palmer, Caldwell, NJ

The public is counting on you. Please do the right thing - protect the public!
—Maria Gerber, Catskill, NY

How do you continue to allow a monopoly like this? The FCC is supposed to work for the good of the general public, not the good of corporations. They have zero incentive to make cable boxes that work, even in an age where the technology is possible. Why would they? You can't get something better. And they can charge whatever they want because there ia no competition. Do what's right for consumers and pass both bills today! Sean W. Michel
—Sean W Michel, Sunnyvale, CA

Your actions and inactions are being remembered, as well as being a matter of public record. We are all on it together.
—Sam Inabinet, Virginia Beach, VA

It's bad enough for our private info. to be rummaged through, but outrageous that such access is sold. Both must be stopped.
—Diane Steen-H., Mpls., MN

Tell the FCC to protect my privacy and lower my cable bill!
—R Terrell, Litchfield, IL

We need competition, innovation and openness for a fair, level market. Please finish what you started, and protect our rights and save us some money!
—Beefert Gore Jr, Newark, NY

I'm tired of supporting corporations that just want more of my money while restricting my freedoms. Our private information is not for sale, we are required to give it but that does not make it a commodity for the receiver.
—Allan Young, Novato, CA

Monopolies are bad! Free competition is good! Can't you just do your job without us people having to sign petitions, take out ads, send email, post on facebook? It's ridiculous....You embarrass America.
—Jeffrey Abshear, Fairhope, AL

I had two set-top boxes and recently returned one to lower the monthly bill...I'm on a fixed income.. The price of food and essentials continue to climb. We (I) need the FCC protect my privacy and lower the cable bill for all consumers.
—Timmie Reilly, New York, NY

I am a senior citizen on a fixed income and Comcast has an annual habit of increasing my bill and decreasing my service.
—Chris Croke, Baltimore, MD

My cable bill is the biggest bill I pay every month. Over $250/month. There is virtually no competition in our area, and every year or less there is a small increase in the cost of my cable service.
—, Tallahassee, FL

I'm tired of paying monthly for rental on a desktop box when I should be able to purchase one on my own. No doubt with the fees I've had to pay, I've paid for the box many times over. Also Comcast should not be able to sell your private information.
—Leslie Calambro, Henrico, VA

I'm the next one to cut the cord and find another way to get TV, Internet, renewable energy, and whatever else I need.
—Kent Mollohan, helena, MT

Privacy and budget rank highly in consumer priorities.
—Jill Johnston, Vader, WA

Do you duty. Protect our right to our public communication routes no matter what their form, Guy Liston
—Guy M. Liston, Anchorag5, AK

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Eric Greenius, Campbell River,

Consumers need protection from the big guys who want to sell us to the highest bidder and steal our privacy!
—Richard F. McGrain Jr., Charlottesville, VA

I am tired of being soaked by my cable company and of companies selling my private information without my consent. Stand up with FreePress for us on these matters.
—Dinah L. Bahlman, Phoenix, AZ

Please pass your two proposals that will protect my privacy and lower my obscenely high cable bill. Please don't let the threats from our Comcast owned congress stop you and your commissioners from fighting for these proposals. Stop Comcast from selling my personal information without my consent. My personal information is mine and shouldn't be for sale. Please end Comcast's monopoly on set-top boxes I am forced to pay for each month. I should be able to buy a set-box and not pay a monthly fee. The fees add up to thousands of dollars over time. I hate Comcast.
—, Elk Grove Village, IL

Our cable bill is almost as great as our food bill per month. We need more competition, not less!!!
—Susan Spengler, Palatine, IL

Our cable bill is almost as great as our food bill per month. We need more competition, not less!!!
—Susan Spengler, Palatine, IL

It is time to protect consumers. Enough is enough.
—Sandra Youngs, Okemos, MI

Stop the empire intimidation.....get a conscience and stand up for ethics....PLEASE
—Nancy A Rose, Ashland, OR

Stop playing monopoly WITH MY MEAGER DISABILITY BENEFITS!
—HD Dr. D Chadwell, Delta Junction, AK

Protect OUR RIGHTS!
—Randal James, Bloomingdale, OH

It just is.
—Steven Kostis, New York, NY

I pay $25 a month in my cable bill just to rent set top boxes. Please allow these devices to be purchased on the open electronics markets so we can lower our too high cable bills!
—Lucille Scotti, Marquette, MI

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Kent Bridges, Weston, WI

We have plenty of proof that monopoly tactics don't work for the rest of us and ComCast continues to prove this. You have the power to protect us--if you act now, as time is of the essence.. Please act to protect citizens' privacy and fair competition that should be ours by right.
—Marilyn Deraney, Norwalk, CT

Stop letting cable companies write the rules.
—Deborah Cate, Philadelphia, PA

protect your privacy and lower your cable bill TODAY
—Shirley Hipps, West Salem, OH

I count on you to represent my interests. I need to know that my trust is well placed and not undermined by corporate power.
—Richard J Rinck, Selinsgrove, PA

The excess money charged is used to influence my government to act against my interest!
—Richard Creswell, Lakewood, CO

The internet is the best way for me to get information and I am retired on a fixed income, please help me!
—Mijo John E, Portland, OR

Cheaper prices and unrestricted Internet is absolutely and fundimentally a consumer right. Business should NOT control the Internet for their own profit!
—Bob Hudson, ,

If Comcast is allowed to sell our private information to increase their profits, what's to stop them from doing other, worse things? Our privacy is important to us, and we don't want to be at the mercy of a huge corporation who doesn't care about anyone but their own bottom line!
—Bonnie Jacobson, Reno, NV

I'm living on Social Security and broke all the time.
—Julia M. Faber, Denver, CO

Comcast already has WAY too much power and money as the YUGE monopoly it has become. It needs to be reined in! Don't wait! Do it NOW!
—Martin Wolf, Colorado Spgs, CO

Privacy and anti-monopoly - both American values
—Peter F Brazitis, Hansville, WA

Please! We need the help more than the cable company wealth extraction.
—Chris Grimley, North Wales, PA

I've been forced to rent a set-top box that I never use. That sucks. Also, my information should be mine to control, not a cable company's to sell.
—Adrianne Middleton, Boulder, CO

People's privacy matters - and cable company's have a monopoly and we will live with that. Please protect our right to own our own privacy!
—Brenda Cross, Lake Oswego, OR

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent
—Joseph Clemonts Junior, Woodbury, GA

I don't even have Comcast, but the monopoly has to stop. No one's private information should ever be up for sale.
—Tracy W, Howell, MI

I want my privacy protected. I do not give permission to Comcast to sell information on me. Please uphold this most basic right.
—Gale Simplicio, Morgantown, WV

Please unlock the box. I would like to develop apps and install other video apps on it. It is so restrictive and clunky. It belongs in the 90s it should have never made it into 2016.
—Ryan Pinto, Winchester, MA

Please do not allow corruption to rule.
—Frank L. Hill, North Hollywood, CA

We pay much higher rates for cable than consumers in other countries. Several channels are often pixelated or unavailable. This is what monopolies bring. I absolutely oppose selling my private information under any circumstance. Big Brother Be Gone.
—Teresa Blakely, Columbus, OH

My cable bills are constantly growing, even after I have signed up, and for no apparent reason. You either pay what they ask, or stop service. If you stop service you get a huge bill for stopping prior to some date they do not even mention before you start service.
—Donald Albertson, Bothell, WA

It is enough! Lower our bills today!
—Mary Mobley, Live Oak, FL

The cost of cable usage is really becoming ridiculous
—Shadoe Drury, Connellsville, PA

We are tired of psychopaths and greedy elite in charge of a system that is set up to deprive people of freedom. We are tired of people in positions of power who got there because they will play along with a fascist agenda. We are tired of corporations usurping our rights. So, stop making rules that assume we do not know what you are doing. We do know what you are doing, what your agenda is, and we aren't playing along, and never will.
—Victoria Parks, Worthington, OH

I am tired of paying such high cable bills. If something doesn't happen to help us consumers I will cancel by service with comcast.
—Jan Suttkus, Atlanta, GA

I already cut my service with comcast because of the high bills. I will not sign up again unless something is done to protect us consumers.
—Don Ruiz, Decatur, GA

Our right to privacy is crucial!
—William Robins, Yorktown, VA

... Because GREED is sending me to the poor house!
—D G Mason Jr, Sarasota, FL

Protect the public, not the dishonest greedy cable companies!
—Robert Toxen, Duluth, GA

Cable companies have too tight a grip on internet service and overcharge their customers as a result. Please put an end to this situation and also act to ensure the privacy of American citizens by prohibiting the sale of our personal invormation.
—Joan Parrish, Santa Cruz, CA

No one should profit from my info without my release, and set top boxes should be available to purchase from anywhere.
—Robert Hord, Fort Lauderdale, FL

Please protect the consumers -- not the greedy cable companies trying to monetize us wherever possible.
—Gary Behrendt, Manhasset, NY

Comcast has enjoyed their lucrative monopoly for far too long. Put an end to the beurocratic bull
—Michael Lautner, Dewitt, MI

I do not want my private information shared to whomever. Monopolys abate competition. Without competition only the largest corporation succeeds forcing consumers to pay to high a price. There needs to be reasonable pricing for consumers. The only reason I have a "box" is that I'm forced to have it to supposedly lower my internet bill. Consumers need choices and should not be forced into throwing money away for services & or products they don't need.
—Elizabeth Crumm, Campell, CA

I disconnected because Comcast wanted too much for too little. Why pay for 100 channels i will never watch
—James McIntosh, Ann Arbor, MI

We are a nation of people, not corporations. Our government of, by, and FOR us, not them. Since Comcast and others like them have been allowed to become so large and monopolistic that they are immune to public pressure, it is up to you to act in our best interest.
—Richard Yarnell, Beavercreek, OR

As a Veteran married to a Disabled American Veteran and as a retirees, we don't need cable services to continue to increase.
—Michelle Roberson, Augusta, GA

Why are cable companies allowed to have monopolies? I thought that was against the rules. Are we not following the rules anymore? Where I live there is one cable company. You use them for your broadband Internet service or you go without. So they charge whatever they want. The industry needs to be taken down a peg.
—Geoffrey Horn, Ardmore, OK

Because both things are right and just. Remember we should make decisions base on what is moral and this represents exactly that. This decision is very simple for me to make and also should be for you.Please vote for the people not for Comcast.
—Victor Martinez, Springfield, VA

FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler Honorable , Gentleman Please , Protect my privacy and lower my cable bill today. Thank you for your attent and the consideration with the US , Internet users. Sincerely, Maria Celia Hernandez 8-15-2016
—Maria Celia, Boston, MA

Why do these companies insist on ripping off the public? Please level the playing field and put a stop to the extortion the public suffers from at the hands of Comcast and their ilk.
—Sonia Wilson, Sacramento, CA

My internet is already expensive and not very reliable so, it goes without saying less expensive would be a help. As for my privacy... Another no brainer. My information should NOT be for sale, especially without my written permission.
—Matthew Van Brocklin, Harrisville, NY

When I bought cable services I didn't agree to become a commodity for the cable company with my personal information.
—Rob Shively, Casper, WY

My right to privacy is constitutionally guaranteed and my right to avoid price-gouging is legally guaranteed. Do the right thing and make sure I get what I'm a US citizen to have.
—Kimi Wei, Fair Lawn, NJ

We used to have FREE TV! This is nonsense paying these huge amounts of money if we want cable. Actually you've forced us to NEED cable. Get with it!
—Lynn Morris, Chicago, IL

A very good idea!

—Carlos Oropeza, Somerdale, NJ

since the switch to digital, expensive TV is my only option as I live inn an apartment building which doesn't allow dish service
—Veronica Alleyne, Rochester, NY

This is just common sense. Please put a stop to this by just taking care of this!
—Brian Dilts, Ardmore, PA

I want privacy and lower bills.
—Sue Christiansen, IOWA CITY, IA

Stop Comcast from selling my private information without my consent. End the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Jim Boden, Hartsville, SC

We need true, real competition. Across the board. Now.
—Nathan Stehle, Madison, WI

Comcast has grown too large as it is. Now they want to increase revenue by sharing our data? Or even worse, charging us to keep our data private? NO! Please keep these huge ISPs under control.
—Scott Severn, Londonderry, NH

I don't like being held hostage by a corporation to receive basic internet or phone service.
—Duran N Burby, Haverhill, MA

Much like the old Ma Bell, cable companies have a monopoly. I should be able to buy my own cable box and plug it into a line that I want to subscribe to. Until then, prices will never be competitive.
—Randy White, Washington, DC

The internet is the digital divide, and should be accessible by all.
—Desdemona Bandini, Austin, TX

My privacy is very important to me. Also cable bills have been steadily rising. The internet is a utility!
—Jackson, Vancouver, WA

We have a right to privacy, and to protection from monopolies.
—Michele Reese, Reading, PA

Please, for once, let's consider consumers (voters!) ahead of corporate profit.
—M Strachan Pindar, Boone, NC

I'm having to rent from AT&T a cable box that I can find online for much cheaper. It would lower my bill to remove this unnecessary step and would encourage competition.
—Brandon Owens, Northport, AL

You should do this because it is in the best interests of the American people and that is whose best interests you are supposed to be taking care of..
—Ashley Yonker, Kalamazoo, MI

Inaction is just like saying yes. If you want to be voted out of office, keep doing what you're doing.
—Renee Musicus, Parkville, MD

Please protect our privacy and lower our cable bill.
—Ramesh S. Sant, Roselle Park, NJ

We need to stop monopolies so that there is real choice in selecting products and services.
—Audley McIntosh, Lithonia, GA

My cable bill increased nearly $10 per month recently. That might not be much to someone who has a lucrative job with the FCC, but it's a lot for most Americans who don't see their income increasing enough to keep up with the gouging. It's ridiculous.
—Benita J. Campbell, Burgettstown, PA

My privacy is even more important today when it seems that every day reveals new hacking of personal information that was supposedly protected from access. I do not want my private information to become available without my express consent.
—K Nilsen, Ben Lomond, CA

Lowering my cable bill bill will help me save money so I can have more food in the house.
—Alan D. Jack, Kingsport, TN

Customer privacy is important!
—Ken Sexton, Salem, OR

The unreasonably high cost of cable is a bar to experience most media, except what is on public programming.
—Jacob Victoria, Sacramento, CA

I am on a fixed income as many other Americans. Please help hold prices down for us.
—Debbie M. Piatt, WEST LIBERTY, OH

This country is fast becoming an oligarchy. Monopolies seeking to control our food supply, communications, health and most other critical services seem to have carte blanche to dictate our lifestyles -- at whatever cost they choose. This needs to stop. Now.
—Ms. Nancy Van Iderstine, Van Nuys, CA

Government agencies should be serving the interests of the people and the consumer, NOT the corporations and the wealthy who seek to control the people. Government is put in place by the people, and they are expected to serve the people, period. Get off your butts and do the right thing.
—Eric Patterson, Dayton, OH

Modern life requires inexpensive internet like all European countries have !!
—R Vosari, Darien, CT

I like to watch TV, but now with time warner cable switching my favorite channels from analog to digital, I'd rather not have to pay a nonsensical rental box fee.
—Johnny Kopsi, Menominee, MI

It's getting so expensive I can hardly afford to pay my Cable(Television) bill.
—stuart Getz, Ogdensburg, NJ

Because the run away behavior of corporations affect me.

My cable bill is getting out of hand and as a senior any measure that you can take to cut this cost would really help.
—John Reagan, Port Sanilac, MI

the FCC is our voice please listen!
—Mary F Lasley, Ashland, OR

I enjoy keeping up with what is happening but it is getting so expensive I may have to revert to rabbit ears.
—Rita Bauknight, Lincolnton, NC

It doesn't appear that Comcast is going broke...common sense proposals should be supported by the fcc.
—Mary Bennett, Seattle, WA

Times are hard and life is paycheck to paycheck.
—Michael Ashworth, Charleston, WV

Lower My Cable Bill NOW!!!!!! Wnough is Enough Too Damm Expensive!!!!! The cable Companies are making too Much off the montly balance already!!!!!!!!!! It will help other people to lower their bills.
—Joshua Heffron, New York, NY

I have Charter it is a monopoly for phone tv and internet zone it become june 17 my bill eill go ey upp 65 dollars or more.
—Amy Starobin, Madison, WI

Fixed income and exorbitant prices.
—Keith Sopp, Ontonagon, MI

I'm sick and tired of corporate interests harming the public interest! Also tired of Republicans in Congress holding up appointments until they get their way. This is called the tyrrany of a minority. Obama was elected with 53% of the vote in 2012, but has not been able to get his agenda passed due to Republican obstructionism. We must stop them from being successful! This measure is important to me! I want my personal information to be secure. This measure gives too much power to cable companies!
—Maria Schafer, Granite Springs, NY

Have already paid over $2000 for my cable box. We should not have to "rent" these boxes.....
—Michele Walters, Depoe Bay, OR

Monopolies throughout history have never been good for anyone except the corporation. 99.99% of us suffer so that the CEO can be obscenely wealthy. That's not Constitutional.
—Linda Lee Andersson, Medina, WA

End the greed and sordid actions now.
—Michael C, Kennebunk, ME

We need to protect the PEOPLE and stop passing laws that favor Corporations over PEOPLE. Government needs to notice that not all of us can afford the high cost of phone service, internet service, cable service on top of the high cost of housing, food, medicine, education, etc. Our right to privacy is being destroyed by the rapid advance of technology which the laws are not keeping on top of at the sacrifice of our privacy, our economic stability. STOP letting the industries write the laws and putting in loopholes that sacrifice the public's well being in favor of further concentrating wealth. Congress needs to stop working for industry and start working for the citizens.
—Christina Wilgren, Bedford, MA

Cable companies have near monopolies on broadband and because of that, I don't really have a choice but to purchase their services. Because of that, I'm forced to pay whatever they want, and they are free to sell my information. I could not attain their services, but then I'd be out quality internet services. Please protect consumers like me.
—Ryan Trondsen, El Segundo, CA

The protection of our privacy and our wallets is essential.
—Danilo Yanich, Newark, DE

Please protect consumers' privacy as well as from market strangulation by taking action now.
—Lee Heller, Summerland, CA

We need to work together to implement positive changes in FCC that benefit the privacy and rights of consumers. Lowered cable costs will also make high speed internet access accessable to more households.
—Robert T. Hedden, Trenton, NJ

This is critical as Comcast Business Practices continue to be preditory
—Jeffrey Brooks, San Jose, CA

DO THE RIGHT THING, PASS THIS NOW!
—Lynn Schwab, Black Hawk, CO

We need to assure and protect what little privacy we have left.
—Rickey Black, Indianapolis, IN

It shouldn't matter who the president is for the rights of all americans to be protected (including their personal information). That's what the commission is for, to act on behalf of "the people".
—Maria Blake, San Jose, CA

I trust that the citizens lobby in support of this petition would more than offset corporate self-interest, especially in light of cable being akin to, if not really, a public utility.
—hendrika umbanhowar, Rochester, MN

I'm a 100% Disabled Veteran on a fixed income. Any increase in my cable bill will just diminish my standard of living.

—Sherry Willoughby, Portland, OR

Protect my privacy and lower my cable bill!
—Lynn Ziegler, Punta Gorda, FL

The greatest country in the world has expensive, slow, low-quality home Internet access. This is unacceptable! Taxpayers have given billions to expand Internet capabilities, but telcos pretend they're losing money on our investment. This cannot be allowed to continue.
—Kirk Strauser, Alameda, CA

We are tired of being at the mercy of the cable companies. And...we are tired of having to pay for channels that are in languages we don't even speak. We need to be able to pick our channels!!!!!
—Rob Johnson, El Cajon, CA

I'm retired on a fixed income. I need the info I get from cable (via phone and tv). I do not need incessant sales calls on my phone or at my door, nor the tons of marketing mail that I have to walk a block to pick up from my mail box. PLEASE stop this leak of my personal information so that I can retire in peace and quiet without sales people hounding me all day, 7-days-a-week! I know what I need and can find it without their "help".
—Mary Edwards, Woodland, CA

Pass the bill today!
—Dorothy D. McTiernan, Homestead, FL

Isn't it time to do things that benefit the people instead of monopolies? Isn't it at least part of your job to protect us from them?
—Michael McLeod, FAIRMONT, WV

—Gregory David, St Louis Park, MN

I need lower cable bills, so I can do better for the United States.
—Mark Epstein, Long Beach, NY

We r retired & live on a fixed income
—Bob wolff, Spirit Lake, IA

We also need this because our internet access is one of the slower ones among developed nations and every day we are falling behind because of the obstructionist practices of companies like Comcast and AT&T. It is stunning when you return from Europe to see how poor in comparison internet and cellphone service is in the US. We are being hamstrung in the name of corporate excess profits in a way no other developed country will allow.
—Kim McCartney, Cloverdale, CA

Anytime we have monopolies the consumer looses. The equipment we are made to pay for are old technology and does not help the economy. Allowing consumers to select and pay a one time fee will bolster competition and improve technology.
—Lynda Cook, Santa Clarita, CA

The expense of access is ridiculous.
—Susan Passino, Salt Lake City, UT

We are giving away power to mega monopolies who care about the bottom line as their #1 priority not the people nor the service they are offering.
—Bekki tippens, Colrain, MA

I do.not.like to.be harassed by sales companies with promotion that contains.my personal information.
—Jose Miori, Pembroke pines, FL

It is not only important for protecting people's privacy and to lower the exorbitant prices, but for maintaining net neutrality and for preventing any more media mergers which are always front and center in a media conglomerates wish list.
—Blake Gergen, Everett, WA

I don't want my information being used to increase cable bill profits.
—Gerald Lorenz, Salem, OR

Cable, and cell phone service, in this country is too damned expensive, poorly serviced and slow.
—J B, Oakland, CA

Can't afford to pay for cable TV. I'm a disabled senior and you can't watch t.v. without cable. Stop letting these companies take advantage of citizens lives, especially the disabled and seniors...
—Mr. Can I Yes U Can, Bronx, NY

Please take care of this issue!!
—Mary Driscoll, Denver, CO

The free market and competition have always been friends to the American People and our economy. To deny us access to options in the entertainment industry is nothing more than monopoly building. Let businesses compete in the market: take away their ability to end-run competition by buying your votes.
—Raymond Duval, Galena, OH

Please do something to help consumers not just companies. At least once.
—David Richmond, Portland, OR

I am low-income, on disability, and mentally ill, and I've seen my cable bill go up. It would be nice to see it go down.
—Jon Yoder, Washington, DC

The cable companies require the boxes for their service to work. They want us to get their service and should not force us to pay for a box that they built as the only way to use their service. I don't have to pay monthly for my security companies keypad, which is also a necessity for the service to work.
—Bahram Kaminss, Fresh Meadows, NY

You have two proposals on your "desk". One bears on my right to privacy (what little is left), the other on what amounts to free enterprise. It seems anything but unreasonable to me to require the cable industry to actually ask me before selling my personal information to the highest bidder. It seems entirely "American" to me to allow anyone who can to provide hardware capable of functioning with the cable systems. Who knows, somebody might actually come up with a better mousetrap! And it certainly isn't going he hurt the price if there's at least some form of competition in the cable industry - heaven knows they've done everything they can to eliminate as much of it as possible! Please have the courage to stand up and do what's right for people! You've done it before. You can do it again if you chose to.
—Bede Willenbring, New Hope, MN

The FCC has been operating as a captured agency and a national disgrace. Protect our privacy by prohibiting the profiteering from personal information. End monopoly practices now!
—David Beebe, Petersburg, AK

Free and open communication is the backbone of a free society.
—Peter Everts, Rochester Hills, MI

I don't even get any foreplay from Comcast, just a hard screwing every month. I want the FCC to do its job, and stop playing lap-dog to the cable companies.
—Robert Sievert, BENTON HARBOR, MI

Allowing a monopoly in a free market economy is un-American. Please move forward on this decision.
—Cherie Braun, Raleigh, NC

We have a 2 year contract package for cable internet and phone and they raised it just three months after signing and still keep raising it . Ask them to credit the overcharges and they do nothing . Pay on time and they charge a late fee everytime . This has been going on for almost 20 months now . They won't make their wrong right and we are fed up . This is centurylink Direct tv and they all do the same from what I've seen blogged on the net . Also friends here with the same experience . Please hold them accountable . Make them credit our bills for the scam charges .
—Karen Tweed, Galesburg, IL

Protect my privacy and lower my cable bill!
—Judith Salzman, Tucson, AZ

Don't let Comcast sell information about me without my consent. Let's have some competition in cable-TV boxes.
—John Schwartz, Richford, NY

Please stop the cable companies from gouging customers. We need a break!
—Donna Kittrell, Manassas, VA

The internet is a major part of our lives now. To have people just selling private information would be like being spied on 24/7. Normally this isn't something anyone would accept. Even worse for cable TV to be able to essentially hold a monopoly and offer sub par services for high prices is something that shouldn't even be legal. Competition is supposed to be part of Economic growth.
—Nathan Compher, North East, MD

Please protect my information like you would protect your family. Thank you, Mario
—Mario de'Medici, Portland, OR

Please act to protect consumers!
—Ann Rushton, Sherman Oaks, CA

Both these bills are commons sense laws that will protect the rights of consumers. They will also curtail abusive practices for the sake of excess profit by cable operators. Comcast makes huge profits, a little less will not hurt them or their shareholders.
—Tom Hopkins, Milwaukie, OR

Prices for cable keep going up due to lack of competition. I just had a mid year increase of $13 for the first time and in January it will go up at least another $10, as it does every year. Senior citizens are getting priced out of viewing. Plus our private information should stay private and not be marketed to other companies.
—Lee Winslow, Flagstaff, AZ

Innovation has been pushed to the back of the priority list at cable companies and customers pay for that decision with their wallets and our infrastructure. Please help the economy, infrastructure, and customers by not allowing cable companies to sell private information without consent and end the set-top box monopoly by allowing customers to purchase the set-top box they want to use.
—Gary Ploski, Yorktown Heights, NY

As a Senior Citizen, cable costs beyond what I should have to pay...
—Ralph Guay, Helena, MT

Privacy is more or less sacrosanct. Cable bills are ridiculolus.
—Richard Rice, Eugene, OR

The FCC need to act in unison to protect my personal information and to protect the consumer from monopolies and over zealous calitolism. Cable companies have too much control over the consumer. Choice and fair pricing need to be fostered. The cable companies and the like need to earn thier income not be given a free ride. They are not to profit from selling my information. Consumer information is not a product. Consumers never sold their personal information as would and OEM. Therefore, Comcast and others should not be allowed to profit from the sale of such information. I have never received a check. No amount has ever been settled by me with any organization. I have, however, paid monies for these companies services. So this makes no sense that theses companies can sell my information. There is no fairness here. Only greed, profiteering
—Eugene E. Thompson Jr, Culver City, CA

The United States needs modern Internet service -- Comcast and the rest of the ISP cartel have already stolen so much money from the American People that they must be dismantled entirely.
—Robert Chase, Denver, CO

Being besieged by unsolicited phone calls and emails because the proponents have gotten my private information (including zip code) has been somewhat a nightmare. Please protect our privacy!! And put citizens before large companies. Thank you,
—Margaret Lyons, Palos Verdes Peninsula, CA

Cable bills are outrageous and it makes it very difficult on low income workers and retirees.
—Richard/Karen Ertle, Brighton, CO

I am on a fixed income, but I need my cable to work and for entertainment. I am being priced out of the market by the constant changes being made. And there is no reason to give out my private info to anyone without my permission.
—Catherine Killgore, Norman, OK

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on TV and Internet services!
—Mike, Minneapolis, MN

We have very little choices, and they don't seem to improve the service, it's like they are relying on outdated equipment. It is costing more and the service from all the companies is worse, with no one to turn to for help! It's only going to get worse. Help!!!
—Denise Leonard, Ypsilanti, MI

Both of these measures are necessary to maintain at least a minimum of democracy.
—Hedi Saraf, San Francisco, CA

Cable and Internet should both be Public Utilties just the same as telephone and television were. And our right to privacy should be preserved. There are some things that should not be swept away in the name of "progress". Pay attention to the needs of the public you are supposed to be serving FCC. Don't give in to Globalist pressure on these issues.
—Aeyrie Silver Eagle, Yorba Linda, CA

US is 'supposed' to have free and open markets for ALL goods. No monopolies.
—Bob Lichtenfels, burlington, MA

Easy access to internet is crucial for future of mankind. Make it happen.
—Ozgur Zeren, Shallotte, NC

I pay nearly $100 for a required bundle of phone, internet, and cable (with no premium channels). If I drop phone and internet (which I want to) I'll save $3.15. If I could use a different nearby network, I'd be paying less than $20 for better internet coverage which is all I want. But local rules prohibit my doing business with them. This is so deeply wrong. The FCC is standing in the way of basic, reasonable, controls on cable companies. They respond to consumers as monopolies, which should be illegal. They insist in Congress that they are in competition with one another. They have all the high moral ground of snake oil salesmen and all the legal ground of Boss Tweed. How long do you plan to continue to let Tammany Hall remain in control of the major communication methods of our era? Stop it immediately.
—Catherine Albers, Germantown, TN

It is insane that when we try to pay for a simple service we are forced to pay extra for devices and services we don't want. And in any other industry selling of private info without consent could be considered a crime, but these monopolistic carriers get away with whatever they want because they know they are the only option and they have tremendous lobbying power in Washington. Disgusting.
—Peter LeBlanc, San Antonio, TX

Keep America competitive and lobbyists from corrupting the system and corporations from exploiting consumers without competition please
—Eric Dragoo, Nampa, ID

Cable bills getting too high. Service not improving.
—John Jovino, Sonoma, CA

If cable keep going up I will have to let cable go for some other form of entertainment. And just like you don't want your person information out to any and everyone, neither do I.
—Clarese Williams, Conyers, GA

It is bad enough that the impotent FCC allows "Fox News" to promote itself as a "news channel, "news network", "fair and balanced", and on, when it is seen by journalism schools (and comedians) as a propaganda arm of the Republican Party; but don't allow companies such as Comcast to sell our private information.
—Dr. Jim Hanson, Winter Park, FL

We pay significantly more than other countries for cable. The reason is simple...profits for multinational behemoths. In an age of incredible inequality, why would you allow this?
—Robert Pape, Park Ridge, IL

We pay over $240/month for cable TV and Internet. The cable box rental is part of this outrageous bill. ISPs are already ripping us off. Do not let them exploit us further by selling personal information.
—Kieren Ladner, Chicago, IL

—Mary A. Smith, myrtle creek, OR

My personal information should have the same protections as any patent or copyright.
—David Kozlowski, Santa Fe, NM

Limited income on SSI and so few raises prevent me from being able to budget for a cable service. Please help out.
—Martha A Smith, Morro Bay, CA

Anything worth doing at the FCC is going to take at least a 3–2 vote. You have a chance to go down in history as leaders of the FCC that did more for the public interest than any other. Your decisions over the next few months could cement that legacy — but only if you hold strong. We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Dennis M King, Longmont, CO

This is supposed to be government by, for and of the people...not of the wealthiest and not of big business.
—Greg McNeal, Oakland, CA

Comcast is the quintessential rip-off company.
—Lew Douglas, Oakland, CA

Passage of these two no non-sense consumer bills is a must for the average Internet customer. Especially the senior citizens whgo live on limited income. Please pass therse bills. Ralph Andrews
—Ralph Andrews, Green Bay, WI

My information MINE. Nobody should have the ability to sell it on without my permission. I don't get a cut. Also, it is time to.squash the monopoly the few cable companies ha e on us. The ones that keep them in business.
—Anthony Epp, Kansas City, KS

It's information about me. I don't care if they gathered it while I was using their product, it is me. They want to sell me, my life choices, etc, without my permission and profit from it. Either I get a cut, or they ask my permission. Period. Do something about this. And if you have a chance to open up the incredibly unfairly monopolistic market here then it is your duty to do so.
—Adam Morgan, Orem, UT

We should be able to have more choices with our cable. Be able to buy our cable boxes and have other points of entry.
—Walden Mabry, Glenwood, IL

The internet is educational and a powerful tool to learn.
—Kendra Hunter, Haiku, HI

Please help American citizens protect our privacy. And my cable bill is out of control; their services do not justify their profit margins, or however they are absorbing our monthly payment. Thank you.
—Abigail Jaye, Valley Glen, CA

The cable monopoly is not working. It is hurtful to consumers. I do not want my private information or any information in the hands of the cable and telecom industry.
—G Parson, ENDICOTT, NY

We don't want Big Corps to sell our private information without our consent, and to end the practice of making us rent their set-top box every month each month. Ma Bell did something all too similar ages ago; Big Cable should do the same.
—Lorraine Lavoie, Waltham, MA

Give the business community a chance to continue robbing every one of their money, and they will.
—Fred Coplin, Saint Petersburg, FL

As a work from home self-employed business owner, high cable bills make up a large portion of my monthly income. Internet should be classified as a utility and managed the same as power or phone. It is essential to everyday life and business.
—Dom Price, Marietta, GA

I want to be able to pick what I pay For
—MIchael Thomas, South Bend, IN

I think our privacy is being lost and it is in The Bill of Rights. Here it is from a private company and the rates being charged keep rising. People now need the internet to take care of business I hate having to use the library to go on line.
—Mr. Scott Pierce, Portland, OR

WORK TO STAY WITH THESE COMMON SENSE, PRO- CONSUMER POLICIES ON SET-TOP BOXES
—Michael Gregory MD, Santa Fe, NM

Please note that DECADES ago, you liberated phone users from mandatory rental of equipment from the phone firms. This is precisely the same. Unhook the equipment profit motive from Comcast (or any cable provider) and let us use and purchase our own equipment.
—Constance Bevitt, Silver Spring, MD

I've been with Dishnetwork for 6 years and paying therm $14 a month for 2 set top boxes and have paid them over $1000 for boxes that aren't worth 1/3 of that. Even phone companies don't keep charging you payments on your phone when you've paid for it.
—Donna Crane, SanTan, AZ

In "socialist" Europe, one has more than a dozen choices to get phone, tv, and blazing internet for $40 a month. What do we have ? MAYBE 2 choices and around TRIPLE that rate. Free market?? More like quasi-monopoly. Why?? Because corporations are hurting?? They have created the biggest income gap EVER in this country!! It's time for them, the oligarchs, to sell a few homes and live like the rest of us.
—Matt Woolery, La Jolla, CA

Please stop the corruption in D.C. This would be a nice start by breaking up the cable monopolies.
—Jarod Johnson, Ypsilanti, MI

I don't want my personal information to be a commodity in yet another business.
—Tanya Lasuk, Kennewick, WA

A phone company, internet company or cable/fiber provider should not be able to capitalize on its monopoly on your ability to connect to everything else in the world - with your personal information. There should be regulation and restriction on gathering of any personal information. Selling any person's personal information without expressed written permission should be a crime. Neither should they be able to monopolize the type of receiver, modem, or decoder that you attach to your system. They are the provider of the means of communication and often the only provider and should not be allowed to farm their customer's information or interfere with their choice of technology.
—Timothy E Hof, CINCINNATI, OH

I am forced by owner of my office building into using specific cable operator. AND IT IS EXPENSIVE and SLOW - and I am in middle of San Francisco. Cable operator has freedom to sell my private information. I have uncontrolled spam phone calls coming in on all my phones - which are on DO NOT CALL registry. Cable TV box at HOME is also a monopoly. I know I am paying way to much to use the internet and local government channel. Please fight back - for me.
—sue Hestor, San Francisco, CA

Frankly, we hate Comcast: they are the only game in town. Their prices keep many people from having cable and Internet access. I don't want them selling my information for their benefit, while charging me an arm and a leg for their for their products. They are a greedy monopoly right now and need to give up selling our information. I no longer do any business with them for this reason.
—Paula Fougere, Seabrook, NH

KEEPING PRIVATE OUR INFORMATION IS VERY IMPORTANT AS WELL AS LOWERING CABLE BILLS. ACT ON IT TODAY!!!!!
—Connie Sitzman, Antioch, TN

Please... do SOMETHING to help
—Bernadette Zupan, Tamarac, FL

DirecTV, Comcast, and AT&T all compelled Citizens that NEEDED (I am an IT Professional, and before retiring did a good deal of "Defence Work" that REQUIRED a high-performance, encrypted, secure connection. I still do computer security work and some consulting with Defence Contractors - the equipment I require CANNOT have built in "back-doors" accessible to lord only knows who and my data MUST be secure - and this is MY responsibility. These multi-national corporations FORCED customers to PRE-FUND THEIR INFRASTRUCTURE COST. Now that they are in the clandestine personal information gathering and selling, to persons unknown, business - THEY WANT TO LEASE US INSECURE EQUIPMENT THAT WILL FACILITATE THEIR UN-CONSTITUTIONAL EAVESDROPPING AND THE SALE OF THE DATA TO PERSONS UNKNOWN. THIS IS A NATIONAL SECURITY THREAT OF THE HIGHEST ORDER!! As an American Citizen, I have the Constitutional right to equip my computer network, and the machines on that network, as required by my privacy needs, security oaths, and my RIGHT to operate MY computers on MY network on MY private property in the wat I see fit - not some commercial, sneak-thief, corporation bent on invading my personal AND PROFESSIONAL PRIVACY! Clients in the EU, the UK, Canada, and others NO LONGER TRUST THE INTEGRITY OF AMERICAN VENDORS, PROFESSIONALS, AND "CLOUD" RESOURCES - AND WITH GOOD REASON. I am having to route my communications through France, Germany, and other EU nations - to the extent possible - to avoid the disclosure of proprietary information regarding new inventions, discoveries, technical discoveries (some related to our National defence) as possible; but cannot do this lawfully in some situations. AT&T, that has maintained a TOTAL MONOPOLY over our communications services in now trying to FORCE customers into a new 2 year agreement to switch to "uVerse", pay $9 extra per month for a "wireless router" (totally insecure) that THEY CONTROL, UPDATE, AND SECRETLY GATHER WHATEVER INFORMATION THEY WANT, WHENEVER THEY WANT, WITHOUT MY CONSENT OR KNOWLEDGE AND SELL THAT DATA TO THE Communist Chinese, Russians, North Korea, anyone with a checkbook. Meanwhile, AT&T has reduced our "service set" of features by over ONE HALF, while almost doubling prices. The top speed I can get is 6.5Mbit, yet FOR THE EXACT SAME PRICE FOLKS SIX MILES UP THE ROAD ENJOY 20Mbit TO 40Mbit SERVICE FOR THE SAME PRICE - $59 per month. In Romania, and most other EU countries customers get 50-60Mbit service for $20 per month, with legally guaranteed privacy. In Japan, 100Mbit service costs $20 per month. WHY ARE WE BEING ROBBED? BECAUSE THE MONOPOLY WAS NEVER REALLY BROKEN UP, AND WE ARE BOUND IN SERVITUTE.
—William Wilkinson, Watkinsville, GA

Big cable companies seem to think they should be in control and that John Q Public exists for the soul purpose of lining the cable company pockets. Their reign needs to end! It's time for Congress to support the FCC for the good of the people, not the cable companies. Do you know who your Congressman supports? Tell them to support FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler in his work to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent and to end the monopoly of set-top boxes, which would, in turn, lower our cable-TV bills.
—CJ Houghtaling, Middlebury Center, PA

Please do this. Our Cable bills are way too high. The Cable company , in the future will also target us with Ads.
—Bakermanb@yahoocom Baker, milton, NY

I'm tired of being jerked around by what should be illegal, the closest thing to a monopoly that exists in the US! The price of internet is too high, and they have free reign to set the costs. FIGHT FOR US.
—Nicole Mikeals, New Castle, PA

sick and tired of companies running ours government
—Phil Copeland, Louisville, KY

Please vote the public interest.
—Arthur Keller, Palo Alto, CA

Monopolies are tolerated in a competition-driven free market because they provide necessary public functions. They do not exist to bilk the public or defraud the public.
—Dwain Wilder, Rochester, NY

If you can't lower my cable bill, then ALLOW FOR COMPETITORS!! There is no competition for Comcast!!!
—Angela Haynes, snellville, GA

My "high-speed" Internet service is only 3Mb, yet costs $50/month. The speed has actually gone down from 7Mb over the years, but the cost has gone UP.

Please! Be STRONG, Hold fast to Public Interest. Throw down HARD on Political GAMES. Help US/us.
—Donna Besser Stone, Boynton Beach, FL

The FCC's agency mission is to protect the nation's public airwaves and the public communications that travel through them. At the same time, its mission is to enhance development and quality of those communication pathways and transmission lines, by encouraging private-sector contributions and innovations, but not at the cost of protection of the public's interests and privacy and of their access to a truly competitive market. If carrying out this agency mission means immense pressure from the lobbyists for the giant telecom companies, so be it. The FCC's leaders must stand up to this sordid pressure and act and do what is right and what it is supposed to do: protect the nation's communication airwaves from private-sector dominating control and monopoly. Thank you. Rudolph Gartner
—Rudolph Gartner, Chicago, IL

Quit protecting the mega profits of monopolies .
—Michael Smith, Yakima, WA

The desire for privacy should be self evident. On the cable box issue, I see no reason why I should be forced to overpay to rent a set-top box from my cable provider when I could choose to buy one on the open market and save myself some money. Cable providers already over charge for service and force you to buy channels you do not choose to watch as part of a "package". Cable providers already over charge for service and force you to buy channels you do not choose to watch as part of a "package" The set-top box racket is just another way to make you pay more than you need to for service. Please do your job and and end these practices.
—Lloyd Adams, Houston, TX

It is not your information to sell, You allowed a merger to take place that should not have. We need small companies competing for business not no choice.
—Tim Zemba, Los Angeles, CA

Cable TV is a defacto monopoly in this country with Comcast especially in the eastern part of the country. Not only are there prices outrageously high but allowing them to sell my private information is adding insult to injury. I am a small business and allowing Comcast to act as a monopoly is a financial hardship. I do not operate a monopoly and I would never sell my customers private information. Please act to end their monopoly and selling of private information. Thank you.
—Robert Hennessey, FRANKLINVILLE, NJ

If network providers are monopolies, then they must be regulated. The FCC must force the industry to build multiple network options everywhere in order to foster competition and, thus, to avoid regulation as a utility. If in reality only a single company can deliver true broadband network services in a particular region, then it must be regulated as a utility.
—Payam N Minoofar, Ventura, CA

cable is much to high. with one company you get more then another at times and might even pay less with the other company for more channels and or faster net. I think it's rediculus
—Wayne Foster, South Paris, ME

My privacy is valuable to me. Additionally, cable companies have charged far too much for far too long.
—Sean Kennedy, Healdsburg, CA

I'd love to buy my disabled, house bound friend internet access which she cannot afford. Trouble is I can't afford it either! PRIVACY + ACCESS NOW PLEASE
—ML Fowler, South Colby, WA

I myself do not utilize Comcast. I refuse to pay to watch television. I can't afford it either. I do know many who use Comcast and would be beside themselves if unrelated topics are a part of getting what they do pay for.
—C Nichols, Chandler, AZ

I should not be reliant upon the cable companies for my DVR or to view on my tv. Open up competition and break their monopoly on these devices. As for my private information, I am always opting out of company's sharing of my information. I want my internet privacy as well.
—David Paul, Turlock, CA

Congress is suppose to work for the people.

I am retired living on a fixed income. The internet is my only source of communication with my community. Please don't destroy my only source of information by making it unreasonable for me to afford.
—William A Lansville, Barstow, CA

We collectively have no power to change the way cable companies do business. I support this proposal.
—David Berten, Pittsburgh, PA

When PC makers were forced to provide alternatives to Microsoft Explorer as a browser, it was done to prevent a monopolistic practice - if you buy a piece of hardware that can run many different types of software, you shouldn't be forced to use just one. It should work the same the other way around - when you subscribe to a service such as cable TV, you shouldn't be forced to pay for just one hardware device (and a perpetual rental, at that!) when devices that are on the market are capable of doing the same job. It's the same logic. Please end the set-top box monopoly.
—Phillip Chonigman, Hartsdale, NY

As a retiree, I simply cannot afford the unnecessary charges that FCC is addressing.

Dear Mr. Wheeler, I do applaud your actions to protect the information of me and other fellow citizens. I also applaud your actions to open the market on set top boxes. I believe that the government and its agencies are there to protect and support all of us and not just the big business interests of the country.
—Thomas E. Wisniewski, Parkland, FL

Because you should listen to the people
—Jason Bartz, Lexington Park, MD

Take control of this monopoly!
—Shane Beers, Redondo Beach, CA

Yes, please lower our cable bills. But ONE MORE THING: Please require Comcast to also include C-SPAN-2 and C-SPAN-3 in my Basic Service!
—Timothea Papas, Evanston, IL

Cable bills for all services are outrageous. Time to end the greed merchants' protections by collusive government.
—Richard Morgan, BELLINGHAM, WA

The FCC needs to advocate for and protect the public interest, not grant power to companies whose main interest is their own bottom line.
—Robert Helmick, Rathdrum, ID

It is very important because this has been a long time game but republicans, who misleading our country just only to make sure their pockets are full of easy money, we cannot allow this type of game to continue, our privacy & lower cable bill are 'Priority'.

cable companies are quasi-monopolies! Don't let them take advantage of users that don't have an alternative!
—Ron King, Oklahoma City, OK

If you don't stop these immoral, unacceptable practices, Who Will?
—Elmer A. Anderson Jr., M.D., L.A., CA

Since the era of deregulation television and radio have become almost unwatchable...until the internet came around. Now, television has to compete with lots of other sources on many playforms and it's never been better. (Commercial radio is mired in the past, it may be a while before we hear much change). That said: comapnies like Comcast are squeezing the consumer by becoming bloated nigh monopolies. As such my bill (I save you the story but they basically harranged me into this service) is now 100/mo. And I only use the internet...at a pretty basic speed compared to the rest of the world. When it comes to cable, I have very few alternatives and given Comcast's record for customer service (or lackthereof) it's past time something be done. I inplore the FCC to consider action. Thank you, Nick Brunner
—Nick Brunner, Sacramento, CA

The pricing is outrageously high given the profits of the parent corporation. It should be a utility. Instead cable service is exploitation, legalized theft.
—Mr. William Ray, willits, CA

As a consumer, and a voter, I should have the right to expect my information is NOT given (sold) to other marketers without my consent (It shouldn't be an 'opt out'- it should be 'opt in'). Further, I shouldn't have to pay forever for a product that I can purchase at a given price (box). I am further disappointed with the level of consolidation in the telecommunications industry. It removes all competition and dis-incentivizes the companies from any improvements- it garners them guaranteed customers through monopolization. I am counting on the FCC to work harder for the consumer! Here in midtown Manhattan NYC, I have no choice who I want to give my business to. I am stuck with an expensive and lousy Time Warner (soon to be Charter, because yet another merger was permitted!). Innovation, as well as better pricing, comes from competition- NOT monopolization.
—Stacy Rauch, New York, NY

Finally something for the masses. Do it already!
—Brian Fullerton, Erie, PA

Do the unexpected. Watch the corporate interests panic. Watch the people dance in the streets.
—Barbara Hill, San Benito, TX

Consumers should be central in marketplace regulation - stop suppliers from trading our private information without the consumer's consent, and lower cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on the set-top boxes we're forced to rent.
—Rick C Dacosta, fonthill,

Comcast is expensive and should be broken up like MA Bell.
—Bob Hibbits, Gig Harbor, WA

We need to stop the dreadful trend of trying to run government at a profit. No, government does NOT need to be run 'like a business'....the two have fundamentally different purposes!
—Sadie SullivanGreiner, El Cajon, CA

Our cable bills are way too high, the companies have monopolies or in some areas duopolies. We shouldn't have to pay for these boxes, and they shouldn't be able to sell our private info. The latter is a violation of privacy and probably privacy laws.
—Dorothy Rocklin, Melrose, MA

Our First Amendment is essential to a clear conduit for a informed democratic citizenry.
—James Par Zino, Holly Ridge, NC

We need competition in the cable industry. What we have is monopolies. Open up the field, let companies compete.
—Edward Vaughn, Everett, WA

Renting set top boxes for eternity is the same as renting phones until the 1980s, a practice designed to inflate fees for a monopoly.
—Ben Johnson, Smyrna, GA

Internet access is necessary for everyday functioning. We need it for earning income, education and personal enrichment. It should be safe for us to use, and that includes protecting private information that might make us vulnerable to predators. It should also be affordable for everyone. It is not a luxury.
—Tracey Polyflavour, ,

It's time to stop the corporate giants, such as the cable industry's practice of buying politicians to get their way to abuse their customers trust. Please protect my privacy; junk commication and identity theft is out of control.
—Gary Holm, tampa, FL

costs are off the charts
—Glenn Phillips, Seattle, WA

1. Keep private information private. 2. End the rental fee on cable boxes.
—Margery Armstrong, Great Neck, NY

Treat the cable companies like the public service business they are supposed to be, not the profit hogs they are.
—Ron Farnsworth, West Townsend, MA

I am appauled the cable company is receiving payments from US and then selling OUR personal information for profit! The phone companies are equally liable for this disgusting and illegal act. I'm so sick of ALL of it. You are responsble for the demise of our freedoms and our country.
—Dee Preston, lantana, FL

Personal information should not be able to be resold without permission. This is not only a privacy concern but also a security issue. On top of that this information could include medical searches and other informaton that should not be shared or sold.
—David Foor, Lombard, IL

Cable Companies have been Gouging their Customers for Years, The People Paid For Developing the Internet not Corporations!!!
—Richard F.Burger, cotati, CA

I'm nearly 76 years old with a limited income. I just learned that I will need a new prescription at $500/month. I can barely afford cable/internet now, don't know how I will do it in the future. Please do your part to protect consumers like me.
—Mary T Slayter, West Dennis, MA

I am retired a live on SS. I cannot afford cable anymore .
—Marilyn Livote, Buena Park, CA

Your responsibility is the the PEOPLE of the United States who pay your salary and the FCC expenses. NOT your friends in the cable industry who are trying to leverage additional profits by selling confidential information and by monopolistic practices - something that was supposed to have been outlawed 60 years ago
—Liz Amsden, Los Angeles, CA

Privacy and price are incredibly important in this changing world.
—William Sweeney, New York, NY

IN Alaska we have NO competition and GCI cable is a deceptive business model.FCC allowed them to own a local station in Anchorage which is conflict of interest.Also GCI will not LOWER cost of their service to low income and they are the only choice. Also in AK over the air is not made available in many areas leaving the only choice GCI-a bait and switch and capped internet company.Low income in AK means no services.
—Skylar Phoenix, Homer, AK

Because it is my data and my money.
—Edward Drapkin, tucson, AZ

—Jim Prah, Chapel Hill, NC

MY PRIVATE INFO IS NOT FOR SALE, AND WE ALREADY PAY EXCESSIVELY HIGH CABLE RATES!
—R Honeck, cincinnati, OH

Privacy is becoming a premium, if I acquire a service from company x thatd is all I'm intrestred in, it is not in my best untrest that they further profit from my information, services, inquiries, needs, to benefit, that is not what I'm payong for. Also other companies shouldnt profit of that knowledge without my consent. For example: just purchased a new notebook computer with windows 10, it brought already installed 120 companies that would track me from my usage on windows 10. How does that benefit me, it is a invasion of privacy. Don't let cable and internet companies also do this.
—Rafael E. Umana, mia, FL

I heartily appreciate the work you have done on the public's behalf, and wish voters had done a better job winnowing out Congressional puppets of big telecom, so that your job would be more straightforward.
—Frank Glass, Albany, OR

I do not like Comcast--they are already knocking on my front door and filling my mailbox with their crap.
—Doreen Stratton, Doylestown, PA

Comcast has been getting away with charging BS fees for years. Lets put some money back in my pocket.
—Joe Cates, Minneapolis, MN

It's time for the FCC to work for the people and not the corporations!
—J Solni, Akron, OH

It's important to protect private information no matter what, unless consent is given. This is especially important as we struggle to maintain the democratic nature of the Internet and keep it from becoming an avenue for profits. Please take action and do your job. Thank you.
—Patricia Sandoval Sralla, SAN ANTONIO, TX

My cable bill is currently twice my electric bill and I receive only the most basic and what is supposed to be the cheapest cable.
—Larry D. Rafey, Argyle, FL

My internet is no less important than my telephone or my post office box. No one should have the right to see--much less to sell--my communications data to anyone.
—Burley Herrin, Stewardson, IL

Prices go up as service and value received decline. My personal information becomes another commodity to sell. Shameful.
—Mike Berger, Imperial, MO

I am not getting the mbps that are in my contract. I have no other options for internet service in my area.
—Melissa Rosen, Los Angeles, CA

There is no good reason why Comcast should see anyone's private information. It's private for a reason! They, and all cable tv/internet providers already charge far too much for their services and do not need to make any more money off my back. LOWER OUR BILLS AND KEEP OUR PRIVATE INFORMATION PRIVATE!
—Sandy Sargeant, Rowlett, TX

My cable bills grow every year and my income does not.
—Judith Bergson, Somerville, MA

Let's not become China!
—Garrett Hayashida, San Francisco, CA

Cable is now necessary, so it needs to allow all to afford it. Take the action that helps people.
—Ken Walsh, Alameda, CA

We view monopolies as bad things in this country for a reason, please stop the abuse from cable companies, it makes no sense to rent a piece of equipment forever on those outrageous charges. And since these companies are monopolies by default their privacy policies should be scrutinized and regulated, they can't be allowed to sell your information without your consent, and it should opt-in not opt-out.
—Carlos Ravelo, Stamford, CT

The right to privacy is a fundamental concept of the Constitution. Without it we are no better than some of the communist countries. Internet providers should not be allowed to systematically collect any information, especially Sensitive Information from its subscribers. It was illegal for the phone company to eavesdrop on its customers, it should be illegal for the Internet providers to effectively eavesdrop on its customers. the setup boxes used by cable TV, as well as the modems used by certain IP providers should not be proprietary. It is too easy to identify each of these setup boxes/modems using Internet protocol. There is no reason other than financial gain of the companies to make these devices proprietary. They are ripping off the consumer. In some cases the consumer has no choice other than to use that company. I am requesting that you act now and approve both the FCC Privacy policy and cable set up box recommendations.
—Joe Allen, Memphis, TN

I want to be able to buy my own cable box, not pay rent. That's an important point for me.
—Jim Fenner, Troy, MI

I want my privacy protected and need you to stand firm on not having it shared with data seeking corporations that want to see something. Thank you,
—Eileen Mitro, Ukiah, CA

Monopolies must be regulated for the good of our populace.
—KGH Nicholes, Martinsdale, MT

You are here to protect us, the taxpayers who are often gouged by big monopolies. Please do your jobs and advocate for us. Stop being puppets of the industry, as that is often how it appears.
—Grace Wu, Sacramento, CA

Lower cable bills and privacy? You need to hear why this is important to me?
—Robert Covelli, Santa Fe, NM

Common sense laws to protect the consumer. Who would have thought of such a thing ??
—Norman D Brooks, Leesburg, GA

Comcast prices are atrocious.
—Ronald W. Hull, Houston, TX

Corruption in USA government is hurting people like me with little to no money.
—Susan Boyce, Myrtle Creek, OR

The FCC has finally turned its focus from the monopolistic cable companies to the needs and rights of the American consumer. Please continue with this trajectory and you will be remembered as the FCC which championed consumer rights—the task to which you were appointed.
—Howard Bornstein, Lake Oswego, OR

I am sick of the cable industry ripping us off. Do what is right for us
—Carson J Heldmann Jr, Catonsville, MD

To much for to little
—Edward Bradly, Ridgewood, NJ

Last night, I was just thinking about how high my cable bills are. And, that I really need my telephone, TV and computer. And, that there are no options. Government 'of the people,, by the people, and for the people'. The FEC needs to stand up to both protect our privacy and lower our cable bills.
—Michele Sherriton, Hollywood, FL

Costs for consumers should be going down, not up. Privacy of all U.S. citizens and that of consumer data must be off the table for sale, consumption, or monetization in any other form without the express written consent and direct permission from each private citizen, on a per-case basis.
—Carl Gren, Chattanooga, TN

Government is supposed to protect the people, not huge corporation and multi billion dollar fat-cats. Regulatory agencies such as yours are supposed to protect me, so please do the right thing for the millions of Americans in this country that need your agency to fight for us. Please vote NOW to pass your privacy proposal and to end the monopoly on set-top boxes. You can be my hero, just by doing the right thing.
—Greta Buckman, Knoxville, TN

My bill is WAY to high!
—John Anderson, St. Louis Park, MN

The cable companies have too much unwarranted control over what we see, hear, and have access to over the internet and through television. They cannot be allowed to use this over-inflated privilege to control our personal information as well.
—Florindo Troncelliti, New York, NY

Simply to gain access to media (not just entertainment) the public is essentially blackmailed into renting equipment for service. In the USA, citizens pay more for less in internet and media availability than any other developed nation. The FCC has it within its power to turn this around.
—Tobie Helene Shapiro, Berkeley, CA

A free press is what has made We the People, work for all. Neither party, unfortunately ,tell the truth to the people. We have to rely on independent tv stations. Bill Moyers, Cenk Yuger of Sirius Xm radio. And shows like Redacted. We have To thank Ronald Regan for deregulating the airways.

Its about us, citizens of the US.
—Rufus Morison PhD, Bristol, TN

You need to get with the 21st century and actually listen to your customers.
—Dr Ian M Bird, Madison, WI

Every time I eliminate "packages" to get my cable bill below below $100/month, it manages to creep back up above that amount; but the service itself gets no better, with lots of reception errors and occasional outages.
—John Fowler, Santa Monica, CA

Living on a fixed income, I am particularly impacted by the lack of competition from telecommunications industry. In fact, I've been priced out of the cable industry's monopolistic pricing.
—Tom Poe, Eden Valley, MN

These proposals are clearly the right actions in defense of consumer interests, which I take to be the Commission's mandate. Please follow through while the opportunity is present.
—Gordon Lutz, Holden, ME

I'm tired of having my information and my privacy sold to the highest bidder every time I subscribe to a cable service, and what they are charging is outrageous. It is far past time to reign in this inexcusable behavior.
—Thomas Scarpinatto, Portland, OR

Freedom
—Richard Musk, NEWTOWN, CT

Government should work for its citizens, not for corporate profits.
—Elizabeth Bartlett, Jarrell, TX

The cable monopolies are hurting competition and innovation in the cable industry. Please help pass these common sense policies!
—Daniel Zachs, Minneapolis, MN

Common sense must prevail not politics..... Stop Comcast and the monopoly on set top boxes... Help us with the cable bills..... Thanks

I am retired and am on a (low) fixed income.
—MARIANNE KRANZ, Lake Hiawatha, NJ

Stop Comcast selling our private information without our consent. Stop set-top box monopoly and milking us under your regulation.
—APeery, Gorinchem,

My privacy is important to me so I don't want any ISP that I use to sell ANY personal information without my consent. I would also like to lower my cable bill for TV and Internet. An unrestricted Internet would be ideal. Please don't let corporations "run" or pressure our rights as consumers by passing legislation that is one sided. Please take action to STOP Comcast and the monopoly they hold. Why can't we have a choice who provides our Internet and TV service? This would surely drive process down and the compitition would hopefully increase Internet speeds. Do you know where America ranks in Internet bandwidth? It should be an embarrassment to the FCC.
—Thomas Dee, Wheaton, IL

Stand up for the public rather than selling out to business, please. Their greed continues to diminish the quality of my life. I pay $120 per month for worse TV reception over cable that I had for free before unelected officials gave the analog spectrum to business, and I still have to watch the crap advertising. STOP the giveaway! Keep the net as neutral as you can. Please.
—Kurt Harper, Shepherdstown, WV

The Action Is Needed & The Time Is Now!
—Blue R. Brown Jr., Keene, NH

I am in a rural area and we have no choice but the big companies who take full advantage. For example they have an offering of 55Kb coverage , with 5KB between 6a-2a, 50 KB between 2a-6a. That is not fair business practices but out and out gouging. ENOUGH IS ENOUGH IS ENOUGH!!!!!!!
—Cathy Balan, camptonville, CA

If we want American culture and freedom to survive we MUST HAVE ACCESS TO THINK OUR THOUGHTS ALONE AND TOGETHER IN PRIVACY.

Because cable bills go up almost every billing cycle. It should stop.
—Shirley Russell, Norcross, GA

Cable is out of control
—Martin Webber, dallas, OR

I'm tired of cable being the only source and raising prices because they can. Help is much appreciated.
—Andrew Groh, Dallas, OR

Please do your job for the consumers. Common sense must prevail in denying Comcast the ability to sell my private information without my express consent. Common sense also dictates that consumers not be forced to rent set-top boxes from monopolistic cable companies. Please do the right thing and move these proposals forward.
—Jim Siderits, Rialto, CA

IT'S TIME TO HOLD FRAUDULENT MONOPOLIES ACCOUNTABLE FOR THEIR ACTIONS.
—Bill Lindner, Greenbrae, CA

this is common sense which of course means that it probably isn't good for the old profit line. Common sense is getting so rare that it might be headed to go the way of the Dodo bird. Let's get these measures passed!
—Dave Scanlon, Mpls., MN

FCC, YOU MUST to protect OUR privacy and lower OURcable bill TODAY.
—Elaine Balgemann, Mesa, AZ

I'd like to feel that none of my information is seized and disseminated until I hit the "Send" tag. I'm irritated that I'm being so closely tracked and monitored that the advertisers are calling me when I decide NOT to submit a partially completed form. Within minutes !.!.!.!
—Kirk Taylor, Yelm, WA

Let's just try doing the right thing for the people who actually pay your salary. I just got rid of cable because I refuse to pay twice for crap that I can watch for free. As far as privacy is concerned, I will also opt out of any agency that tries to use my information for any purpose other than what I explicitly authorize. Privacy must be the default right of every citizen!
—Stephen P. Karnisky, Rochester, NY

This important because Increasing TV Bills have begun to put a larger strain on my family's finances.
—Graham Braly, Rocklin, CA

Yes, get it done. The cable bill is outrageous.
—Renee Nichols, Pendleton, SC

Please put some controls in place. Things are getting out of hand in every direction. We need stronger consumer protection laws now.
—Mr. Dave Scassa, Cedar Park, TX

At some point the consumer needs to be getting the break not Big Business. Too much profit off of those forced to watch a plethora of commercials on regular TV or pay fees to big cable for all those channels one never watches!
—Michael Ernst, Highland Park, IL

The cable industry has a monopoly, which gives little to no choices. Our privacy is of no importance to these companies who stay awake nights trying to find more ways to increase costs to customers. Customers who are long term and loyal customers are charged more than new customers so the industry can bait them into contracts. With so few choices and so little regulation of these companies, we look to the FCC to protect us. They're robbing us blind, providing substandard service, and compromising our privacy. Is there anyone care about the consumer anymore? Do your job; protect the consumer.
—Maryann, Fort Lauderdale, FL

This spiral needs to end now! Average people need action fast!
—Mary Paolazzi, McMinnville, OR

The People need support, not the corporations.
—Mohan Attar, Berkeley Springs, WV

My cable company has overcharged its customets and refuses to return the money they stole from me. Why should they get any favours!
—Rob Sebastian, Akron, OH

I remember when TV was free! What happened?! Make decisions for citizens, not corporations...I thought that was your task.
—John D David, Houston, TX

Comcast charges egregious rates and is selling their customers on top of it? Most other internet businesses trade their customers' info for seemingly free services. At least customers can opt-out/not use that service if they are not interested. Comcast customers have no such option.
—Matthew Braun, Champaign, IL

My time and my money are valuable to me & my family.
—Thomas G. Dahl, New Port Richey, FL

About time for the FCC to work for citizens and not just corporate interests.
—Thomas Peterson, Windham, ME

I am so tired of the cable companies charging what they do because we do not have a real choice.
—Rudy Avizius, Cherry Hill, NJ

It is a privacy issue and Comcast makes enough money from all the charges they add to our bills.
—Mario Mere, Novato, CA

I believe that US Citizens deserve to be protected from Big Cable. You are the only organization that has that power. Use that power to help us!
—Ken Anderson, Boulder, CO

Being a college student having internet is a must but prices can be outrages. For the basic pack with very slow speed I'm having to pay $60 per month which is very high specially when can barely afford food.
—Marcelo Vidal, Milford, CT

the FCC should not be held hostage by a Congress that's itself unable to get anything accomplished. Please continue making progress on behalf of consumers to try to roll back some of the unwarranted and dramatic rate hikes from the cable industry over the past two decades.
—Scott Francis, Moorpark, CA

I do not believe Comcast should be able to sell or provide my private information without my direct consent. As well renting set top boxes should be an option, not a requirement. There needs to be choices in set top boxes, just like there is with any other consumer electronics except set top boxes.
—Joe S Samples, Austin, TX

We should all have a right to privacy. Please protect it.
—Susan Morgan, Austin, TX

The cabler industry is far too much in the control of a very few corporate giants. The FCC need to take steps to protect American citizens from their monopolistic practices
—William Gilbert, Cerrillos, NM

Because of requirements to bundle and no competition, phone service Internet and PBS and cable news are $200 a month for seniors on a fixed budget
—Laurent Hourcle, Saco, ME

I'm a consumer on a fixed income who can't afford to keep paying higher bills. And who wants their information to be sold without their consent? That's ridiculous!
—Robin Sinyard, Atlanta, GA

I can't afford these outrageous rates!
—William A. Dolly, Mc Alpin, FL

I pay Comcast every month for internet access. They shouldn't be allowed to charge me money and then turn around and sell my information. That's double dipping. And monopolies are only good for monopolists and corrupt politicians.
—, Round Rock, TX

Cause Cable Service is a monopoly they made Microsoft split up for just what companies like Comcast are becoming! Now they are trying to make even more money by selling information that we already are paying them to protect this is an outrage!
—Eric R Stemmerich, Ligonier, PA

My identity belongs to me, not my cable company. I'm on a fixed income so I can't afford extra fees.
—Sybil C Malinowski Melody, Jerome, AZ

How can a non-life form entity like a corporation be more important then People? Corporations come and go, People are forever.
—Mitchell Slatin, Lakewood, CO

please protect our privacy by not allowing Comcast to sell private information. Karen Bradford
—Karen Bradford, Greenwood, IN

C'mon, FCC, DO THE RIGHT THING. Help the PEOPLE, not GREEDY corporations!....
—Bill Hutchinson, Keene, NH

Dear FCC....Please HELP to STOP the proliferation and onslaught of junk phone calls! The phone calls persist and have become extremely abusive in content & nature! Please do all you can to eliminate and ban the "selling of our private and financial information"! I DO NOT NEED TO BE MARKETED TOO! Despite the "do not call" list our family is continually bombarded by unsolicited telemarketers! FCC Please do your job and go down in history as doing something for the common person! Corporatization (oligarchy) must NEVER come to pass in this country! Please save "us" from corporate greed! Thank you, James Paulson
—James Paulson, Camarillo, CA

Media corporations are trying to muscle subscribers into accepting severe and unnecessary disadvantages. Only government regulation can stop this racket and break up the oligopolies that deliberately DON'T compete, leaving customers with NO CHOICES. Is this capitalism? THIS IS FEUDALISM, with Comcast's crusty buttocks parked on the tattered old thrones corporate jokers were so careful to preserve from the first Medieval Age. Welcome to the "new" economy.
—Steve Ditore, Seattle, WA

The public must come first or there is little reason to have the FCC at all.
—Shelley Snow, Paso Robles, CA

stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Norma Nichols, honolulu, HI

Rampant industry-led monopolization and blatant disregard for the FCC's rulings is an insult to everything we as citizens choose to support you on. Take a stand against shady politics, anti-democracy lobbyists, and corporate power plays.
—Robert C. Jasper, Hesperia, CA

The US has the slowest Internet speeds and highest prices, please help change this.
—Will Schein, santa cruz, CA

It is your job to protect democracy not the rights of greedy wall street taliban thugs who are trying to destroy our country
—Gay Norris, st.louis, MO

The airwaves, the cyber space,belong to the people; not to greedy monopolistic businesses, like Comcast...
—Art Fogg, Hickory Hills, IL

Let the market decide. Not monopolies .
—Alan a Arnold, Hamilton, NJ

I want to be treated fairly and not have my private info sold by a large conglomerate.
—Chester Vidacovich, St. Bernard, LA

Cablecards are OK but consumers don't have exposure to the concept and it doesn't have the public exposure to succeed. The gatekeepers to access this technology - the cable companies themselves - have a vested interest in seeing it fail. "CableApp" as an upgrade is a good idea, but I would rather see price regulation and prevention of data cap/usage fees. Also, it's a given that people assume their data shouldn't be resold and aren't even aware of the extent of the exposure they suffer at the hands of their ISP.
—Casey Fipps, Chicago, IL

The American consumer is getting jacked on these cable bills, give us a break!
—Greg M. Schwartz, San Diego, CA

An open internet via net neutrality is a basic utility that everyone should babe access to. We are a third world country when it comes to fast, affordable internet services and that is largely due to these large cable companies with effective monopolies in their regions. They don't compete with each other and therefore each is able to reign supreme in their own area. It needs to stop.
—William Eldridge, Eugene, OR

Imagine having to "rent" a radio to listen to broadcasts!!!! And, please, let's keep our "stuff" private. Thank you for representing the PEOPLE of America, rather than catering to big business interests.
—Mike Jaureguy, South Chatham, MA

I feel VERY strongly about not letting any co. Use my private info except to provide the service and to deny any unnecessary controls over service or equipment. Look at the array of better, less expensive phones when we were allowed to buy our own phones apart from Tel co.
—David Kerrigan, Corona del Mar, CA

The United States was founded to ensure the well-being of everyone involved vs the long standing European style of the privileged few profiting in perpetuity at the expense of those "below". Help the US live up to these ideals. Help humanity keep making progress.
—G Scott Clemson, las vegas, NV

My private information is exactly that...private. Let's keep it that way. Also monopolies are illegal.
—Joan Stephenson, Windsor, CO

Protect our privacy!
—Luanne Anderson, Chinook, WA

The light is on. You guys are playing dirty cards and supporting corporate agenda's.
—Debra Thatcher, Idaho Springs, CO

Protect citizen's rights, not corporate profits.
—Mr. David White, Arlington, MA

like many older people, my only source of income is social security benefits. cable internet via time warner takes way to big a bite for anything decent as opposed to super slow.
—Jesus B Ochoa jr, El Paso, TX

I don't own a TV, but added a basic cable subscription to my internet subscription plan as part of a promotion to lower my cost. Comcast did not disclose in advance that there would be a charge for the set-top box which I could not refuse, even though I will not plug it in. This charge eats up half of the savings that were used to promote this bundle. There is no other industry where customers can be forced to take and pay for a device that is useless to them as a condition of providing an unrelated service! Comcast's functional monopoly on broadband internet in my neighborhood means I have no alternative; I can hold the set-top box and accept the charges including financial responsibility for any future failure to return the unit, or I can pay even more money for the exact same entry-level broadband internet service. Something has got to give.
—Ms. Denise Conner, Newark, DE

I do not want my information up for sale and we do not need Monopoly's!!
—Bruce Carlton, Mill Valley, CA

It's the right thing to do!
—David Favello, Walnut Creek, CA

I am tired of the monopoly my cable company has!
—Shannon Borthwick, Winthrop, MA

I need the FCC to work to stop Comcast from selling my private information without my consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those boxes i'm forced to rent each month. Thank You, Pamela de Maigret
—Pamela de Maigret, Los Angeles, CA

My cable bill is high enough and I see ads Time-Warner merged w/Charter. Whatever happened to the laws AGAINST monopolies?????!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
—Ann Burkes, Endicott, NY

Comcast and other large cable companies use their monopoly to price gouge. This is especially true in many areas, like where I live, where Comcast is virtually the only option.
—Robert Crozier, Mobile, AL

Selling private information for profit to other companies to spam you should be illegal for this reason: Common Sense. If you care about your constituents, you would take action to protect the powerless consumer against huge telecommunication companies looking to nickel and dime the consumer.
—Dan Vogt, Vista, CA

privacy.
—Tim van Amburg, Orangevale, CA

citizens with low incomes should have access to cable. after all, the basic principles by which the web runs was funded by citizen tax dollars. it's highway robbery to allow private corporations that benefited from citizen payments to now gouge their benefactors. thank you.
—Nona Glazer, Portland, OR

Dr. Richard Kuczkowski
—Dr. Richard Kuczkowski, Valley Cottage, NY

I want to end the invasion of our privacy. In addition, current pricing of cable services is outrageous and climbing every year. Thanks, in advance, for taking a stand for the consumer with protecting our privacy and lowering our cable bill. D. Roger Houston
—Roger Houston, Aptos, CA

It's hard as is paying bills. A few bucks saved could really help.
—James Janovsky, West Hills, CA

Of the 100+ channels bundled from my provider, I only use 20 or fewer. I should not be forced to pay for the others. And I should not be forced to pay for my personal information to be sold without my permission.
—Dinah Lea Jentgen, Las Cruces, NM

Rates are ridiculously high, keep rising, and in the US we pay more than other industrialized nations.
—Glynden Bode, Houston, TX

I'm pro-consumer, anti-monopoly.
—Brad Furst, West Lafayette, IN

Free net equals free Press.
—John h Loftus, New York, NY

The infrastructure of cable & fios have been paid for by the public. The telecommunications corporations should not be able to abridge the public's right to free speech in any way.
—Lauren Russell-Pank, Highland Park, NJ

Please protect the consumers, and support these common sense, fair policies that help American families.
—Carrie Hagan, Pittsburgh, PA

In addition to set-top cable boxes, please also include satellite receiver boxes for those fortunate enough not to subscribe to cable.
—F, Albuquerque, NM

People deserve privacy.
—Mark Harrison Jr., Bedford, IN

Stop the megacorps
—Kimbo Mundy, Albuquerque, NM

Every U.S. citizen’s information has never been less private than it is right now, at this very moment! Protect the people who elected you to represent them, not the lobbyists that pay you to be their puppet. Stand up for the right to privacy for the sake of the citizens of our country.
—Anthony M Rogers, College Park, MD

Citizens of the United States pay some of the highest rates if not the highest rates for communications. As a government agency I urge you to protect consumers.
—Donna Snyder, Hamburg, PA

I don't want cable companies selling my private information and I want to purchase and own a set top box of my choice from a competitive market.
—Thomas Smith, Clearwater, FL

This is important because where I live I cannot watch TV without a cable connection.
—Kathy Shimata, Honolulu, HI

The American consumer needs your protection. Work for the people not the big money corporations. If you don't protect us who will?
—Peter Michael Podesta, Fernandina Beach, FL

Since the dawn of the Internet age mega companies like Verizon Cox, ATT and Comcast have been providing inferior service and gouging consumers to provide over inflated salaries and benefits to their CEOs and their boards of directors. It's time that these companies with they're near monopoly power and who are above the law because of their lobbying power serve their customers and not Congress.
—Al Meda, Atlantic Beach, FL

I'm retired on a fixed income; ever rising costs make life more difficult all the time.
—Noel Eaves, Red Bluff, CA

The FCC's important actions should be pro-consumer, and not be beholden to special interests, either political or corporate. The FCC ought to defend the rights of individual citizens, and our public access to "the air waves" -- no matter what media they flow through. This is an extremely important mission, impacting elections, free press, free speech, freedom from monopolies, and access to information and news--the lifeblood of our society--regardless of income. Please help the FCC be all that it can be for all United States citizens, by quickly taking action to 1) prevent our personal information from being sold, and 2) fostering healthy competition by ending the monopoly (and forced perpetual rental) on DVRs and set-top boxes. Allow the market to--freely--decide. Heck, take all of 'em over and convert tv/radio/cable/internet & whatever's-next to a public utility! Just kidding, you probably can't do that. And wouldn't want the hassle anyway. But hopefully it made you smile. Even a wry grimace -- I'll take that. Have a great rest-of-your-day! Peace and love, Lori Kingery Urbana IL, USA!!
—lori Kingery, urbana, IL

Privacy is the key.
—Alan Steven Gonzalez, Minneapolis, MN

It is obvious this is beneficial for our people in all aspects and it would be nice if our government protected its people not the 1%.
—Barbara Selig, Roswell, GA

We need choices so we can have more control over what we pay and also need to protect our information.
—Maria Garcia, Miami, FL

I pay $168.75 a MONTH for expanded basic cable thanks to Comcast's monopoly and business practices. This is outrageous. Please act! Thank you.
—Jc, Alameda, CA

These two proposals present a golden opportunity for the FCC to move quickly and effectively in the public interest. Positive action will be a great credit in the public's perception of the Commission's legacy.
—Mr. Curt Dunnam, Trumansburg, NY

I STRONGLY object to having to pay $13.98 every single month, year after year, for two boxes that I could have owned outright years ago had I been allowed to purchase them. Please STOP the rip-off of the public NOW!
—Nancy Seats, Saint Louis, MO

Do your job!
—Karen Hennigan, West Grove, PA

This is very important for expanding consumer free trade, and also for individuals like myself that are underserved and overcharged routinely by cable giants (in my case AT&T Uverse).
—Jeff Dorman, Satellite Beach, FL

We need a free and open market for set top boxes like we had a few years ago, all of these companies are talking about letting them merge so things will be better. They want to have a monopoly so that we have to take their inferior equipment. They need competition so that the equipment gets better instead of worse. I do not want my private information being sold to anyone, unless I am the one selling it.
—Joe Martyniw, Saint Louis, MO

I am retried and need a lower bill
—Harold Phelps, Westland, MI

We already pay way too much for cable and then they expect us to pay monthly fees for those set-top boxes!
—Julian Yerena Jr, Parlier, CA

We already pay way too much for cable and then they expect us to pay monthly fees for those set-top boxes!
—Julian Yerena Jr, Parlier, CA

Please support the free market and stop protecting Comcast's monopoly. As more political communication (like presidential debates) moves to the cable networks, having cable is not just a luxury, but an essential part of being an informed citizen. Cable TV and broadband internet should be available to all at competitive prices.
—Bryan Wegman, San Jose, CA

It's time the Federal government started performing its Antitrust duties again. Broadband cable companies are among the worst anticompetitive actors in the U.S. today. They need to be reigned in. A large part of your job is to protect consumers against communications monopolists.
—Lonny Eachus, Spokane, WA

Just too many Americans are living paycheck to paycheck while slipping into greater debt; every reduction in our monthly debt payments would make our lives a lot more manageable.
—Douglass Turner, Alfred, NY

Dear Sirs, Access to the internet has become a necessity comparable to electricity and water. Please do your best at making this commodity affordable to every household in in the US. Thank you.
—Guido Laudisa, Beverly Hills, CA

My cable bill is ridiculous. I live in a rural area and there is only one provider. We do not have broadcast t.v. as our service area is too small and no one will install a translator to reach our area. I also strongly object to these companies selling their subscriber lists and other private information to third parties. Please take action now. J. G. McPhee
—Joe McPhee, Telluride, CO

monopolies must end]
—Peter S Mulshine, Phillipsburg, NJ

My cable and internet bill comes to over $212.00 a month, that is outrageous and does not include any movie channels.
—Barbara Kantola, Niles, MI

I'm a senior trying to keep my expenses as low as possible.
—Ms. Courtney Cazden, Lexington, MA

Privacy is important.
—Daniel Leventhal, ,

The privacy issue is obvious. Could not care less about cost but I know a few who do.
—Ralph M. Shannon, Hudson, FL

Comcast is not on our side. Do not give in to them!
—Arvin Blakeney, Centennial, CO

protect my privacy!
—Stephanie Schueler, Chesterton, IN

Please eliminate the cable industries monopoly on set top boxes. Allowing the cable companies to control these devices leads to few options available to consumers as well as less innovative solutions. Opening the market would drive competition amongst compainies, inspire new features and functionality, and empower consumers. The current closed ecosystems benefit the cable industry at the cost of consumer choice. Please end the free handout to the cable companies.
—Jonathan shkiele, Chicago, IL

I am planning to not use the internet for anything but video, basically fun, because my financial security is under assault at every level, not even the IRS or the DNC are safe. I have my cable company raising my bill every few months, and now they have told me I no longer qualify for any specials. So that means in a few months my bill will go up, and I have no recourse. Is that really Capitalism? Make the internet a utility, so it can be controlled by local commissions.
—Dawn Stanko, Dublin, OH

1984 is not my idea of way to live life
—Phillip Gordon, london, VA

Please lower cable bills to help the low income seniors living on low fixed incomes
—Paul Frizane, Mesa, AZ

Americans spend more on media than any other county and get less for our money. I expect the FCC to support customer fairness.
—Chris OMeara Dietrich, Campbell, CA

Please stop the corporate abuse! The middle class is suffering from corporate America!
—David Toledo, Hollywood, FL

We shouldn't have to pay monopoly bloated prices for cable service
—John Thomas, Hillsborough, NC

Please protect our privacy and lower our cable bills!
—Ethan Burnham-Fay, Hopkinton, MA

It is outrageous that COMCAST should be allowed to sell their customers' private information without the consent of those customers. It is a blatantly unfair practice that customers should be forced to rent set-top boxes when those items are available on the open market at a lower price than COMCAST's rental fees accumulated after a short period of time. Instead of protecting the monopolistic and high-profit practices of COMCAST the FCC should focus on insuring public access to reasonably priced cable services.
—Mark D. Normand, Hatfield, MA

Access to the internet is becoming unaffordable. We cannot afford to pay the prices asked for cable TV.
—Ed Werth, Dallas, TX

YOU Comcast are the only provider we have in our area. We pay $94 a month just to have some entertainment. We are in our late 70's and retired. it is not ethical for you to charge so much.
—Mr. Darlene Kirby, Magalia, CA

Mr. Wheeler. As citizens of US democracy we have right to our personal data privacy and free competition. Please act on both proposals positively. Thank you. Kirill Kravchenko
—Kirill Kravchenko, Silver Spring, MD

I don't watch TV, and only subscribe to cable service for internet access. Over the years I've seen my rates skyrocket--most months of the year my cable bill (for internet ONLY) is higher than my utility bill. This is outrageous price gouging, and it someone needs to take action to get it back under control.
—Lisa Talev, Austin, TX

I'm retired & on Social Security, These monopolies are gouging the public with high rates & poor service! We need lower prices! How about some regulation for crooks!
—Charlene Boydston, Pahrump, NV

Cable is too expensive up here.
—Wm Schultz, whitefish, MT

LOGIC. LOGIC. LOGIC. N-O-T GREED = DEMOCRACY DEMOCRACY NOT OLIGARCHY.
—Ms. Roslyn E. Walker, Marina del Rey, CA

I run a small internet business. The whole thing is based on the fact that I have the same access to potential custoners
—Ted Krever, New York, NY

I am on a fixed income so it is important that the FCC works to stop companies from selling our private information and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set top boxes we are forced to rent each month.
—Irlean Keyes, Mc Millan, MI

Looking out for the most is more important than helping the already huge.
—Linda Hamil, Marshall, MI

I don't want anyone to have access to my info!
—Francine Cohen, Havertown, PA

As a single, self supporting senior on a very limited income, I would like to look forward to being able to watch television and access the internet, but if the charges continue to escalate as they have, and in fact if they are not lowered, I can foresee a time when I will not. That time is not at all far in the future.
—Gail McMullen, Los Angeles, CA

Free and Open internet is the only net for America, leaders of the FREE WORLD.
—Haikeem-Olajuwon Stewart, Augusta, GA

I've been renting an old DVR from Verizon for about 6 years. The fee is about $15.00 a month. Therefore, I have paid over $1000 for an old piece of equipment that was ever worth more than a couple of hundred dollars. And I continue to pay! This is outrageous.
—Nicholas Nicolaides, Sterling, VA

This really needs an answer?! Obvious.
—Jeffrey Holzer, Randallstown, MD

I've got one choice for cable in my town. It's a monopoly. The only thing I've ever received from the various corporations that have bought and sold my cable account is - a higher monthly bill and "tiered pricing" for transmission speeds. It's ridiculous. Please do your job. Stand up for us consumers.
—Michael Moon, Costa Mesa, CA

Comcast has proven they do not care about corporate morality. We need to make sure that we let them know what is fair to everyone. Comcast is the biggest entertainment company in the US and they only care about their profits. The Olympic coverage is proof of their intent of a monopoly.
—Matthew, smyrna, TN

Survival, and combating monopoly
—Thomas Rippolon, putnam valley, NY

Fees for what comes through the atmosphere are obscene and obscenely high. I'm of an age when what came through the old Victrola my Grandmother had was free since it came through the "ether" as they called it then. Why are we paying these fees when they have so much funding from advertisers? The only ones benefitting from this kind of economic control are the advertisers and the cable/satellite/wi-fi owners. STOP IT NOW!!!!
—Cassinelli J. Robert, Sacramento, CA

I don't use a cable company supplied decoder, I use a TiVo. In spite of existing regulations, they haven't made that easy, or convenient. They regularly use their near monopoly position in this market (at least where I live) to harm customers.
—Gordon Williams, Fairbanks, AK

We have a right to privacy. Selling private information without my consent is completely unacceptable! We also need lower cable-TV bills. Ending monopolies would ensure that we have competitive pricing available to all.
—Gloria Flynn, Las Vegas, NV

Privacy for law abiding citizens is a natural born right.
—Marilyn Hackett, Franklin, VT

It is important for me to know that public servants work for the people.
—Maria D Fernandez, West Hollywood, CA

My cable bill keeps escalating, my choices are stagnant at best and filled with useless fluff. I am held hostage by a monopoly.
—Donlon Mcgovern, Portland, OR

Cable companies have too much power and I am paying ridiculous prices because of their monopoly.
—Todd Rogers, Akron, OH

Consumers are vulnerable to corporations squeezing the life out of our communication networks, devices, and peripherals. FCC, please do your best job to protect us and stop monopolistic, oligarchical corporate behaviors that hurt regular people. Expose their cozy corruptions of our political systems while you are at it. K? ThankU, All. Much respect for the good work you have managed to do so far...
—Charmaigne Scott, Salinas, CA

Let us protect the consumer and not the Cable Companies! It is long time to cut the LITTLE GUY a BREAK!!! MICHAEL P ABRAMS
—Michael Abrams, PARKESBURG, PA

DON'T LET REPUBLICANS STOP THIS!!! CABLE BILLS ARE BECOMING TOO HIGH FOR MANY OF THIS AND THAT IS WRONG! WE KNOW REPUBLICANS ARE RESPONSIBLE! DO YOUR JOB!
—Maggie Schafer, Boulder, CO

Monopolies kill competition so the only game in town is preset by the biggest corporation. Selling information that is not for sale i.e. private info sold without consent should be illegal. Isn't this covered by the Fourth Amendment? Do not submit to the political games of Congress - they have one agenda and it is not about representing the best interests of the people of this country.
—Julie Smith, Dexter, MI

Actually do what's best for the people who elected you for a change. Not a big corporation. It's my personal data and my money why should o have to use there cable box. This sort of thinking it's stagnating innovation To please a few lobbiests.
—Justin porter, east palestine, OH

Everyone is sick of big companies- and the power they always exert against the marginalized.
—Steve Vetter, Boise, ID

Because my data is my own property, and I need to know who gets access to it and to know as well why they are getting access and what is it going to be used for. There has to be transparency in all this process.
—Redona Kajmaku, ,

I'm already in a situation where Comcast has a monopoly on the Internet in my area. The costs are so much higher if I chose individual companies as my providers, so I am relegated to getting a Comcast "bundle" in order for my bill to be in the $200/month range instead of the $300/month.
—Cheri Gaspero, Monee, IL

I'm on a fixed income. Cable and internet bills are going through the roof. Us older people need a break
—Troy Tackett, Huntington, WV

Because it's the right thing to do!
—Robert Gaynor, Clear Lake, IA

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Alfred Denny, Oak Ridge, TN

I urge the members of the FCC to do everything in their power to protect consumers.
—Karola Spring, Lakewood, CO

We need open competition.
—Kirk Preston, Alden, NY

They are making plenty of money and still try to get more from us. I urge you to stop them. They should not be sharing our information without our permission either and this needs to be stopped as well. Stand with the people they are trying to prey on and stop them!
—Kimberly Aicone, Olympia, WA

You have to see the problems here. This is very clearly a monopoly. On top of that, how can you allow this company to sell our information - something we never agreed to. Please stop Comcast, a company that year after year scores poorly in customer service, but that many of us have no option to leave.
—Sara Crane, Seattle, WA

This is a no brainier, as to why it is important to the all people, who's privacy is in jeopardy, and who can afford higher cable bills?
—Jill gloger, Chicago, IL

I am concerned why the FCC is still waiting to address the privacy issue with cable companies. This privacy has to do with the inability to choose my own implement for viewing movies, TV, etc.. and the fact that my name and address are not considered private enough to keep them secure.
—Shirley Sharan, Fort Wayne, IN

Don't you think we are paying enough; most likely too much? Are your salaries contingent upon how much these companies are paid? Then reduce our costs as consumers now!
—Vincent Newman, Hollywood, FL

Do not give in to this kind of blatant power play that is inimical to the interests of the people you serve.
—Laura Horowitz, Pittsburgh, PA

Tired of not having competitive prices. I fully support the broadband privacy proposal and your efforts to end the monopoly on set-top boxes.
—Belinda Jones, Westbrook, CT

Fast reliable internet is now the backbone of our lives.
—Mark Arntson, Seattle, WA

I am so done with corporate america
—David Theen, Englewood, FL

This is important to me because it does seem to be a very real invasion of privacy issue. And lowering the cable is desirable.
—JoAnne Orr, Wooster, OH

Americans are being overcharged for everything and cable is one of the biggest offenders.
—Glen Conkling, Euclid, OH

I can barely afford the Internet as it is!
—linda hunt, Berkeley, CA

Comcast isn't the only TV service provider to gouge customers on control box fees.
—Michael L. McQuown, Philadelphia, PA

Keeping more money in the hands of the populace creates a better return.
—Susie Cassens, Fort Pierce, FL

This is critical. You need to protect my rights before those of giant corporations that consistently want to trample them for their own benefit. I have no other way to fight them and stop them.
—Michel Pronovost, ,

Don't like big corps.
—Hugh Fitzpatrick, ,

We need competiton not corporate communism
—Arvind Rangan, Houston, TX

I am a disabled single parent, and both my daughter and I are in school so we can become employable. Our internet costs over $100 a month!!! I live on only a thousand and cannot afford the internet we need to build a future. This is unconscionable!
—Carissa Daniels PMB 134, Bremerton, WA

Please work for consumers and not Comcast!
—Cathy Bangerter, Bothell, WA

Cable companies are monopoly's and they should be very regulated for the public good over profit.
—Connie Godin, Barre, VT

Comcast is the most hated company in the United States and has committed fraud regarding a situation with me. I will never allow such a company to rise to monopoly status without my 2 cents (ie a company without competition, too big to fail and certainly too large to be held accountable)
—Mike Kress, Ypsilanti, MI

Protect the citizens of the US. Stop selling out to corporate.
—Tammy Causey, Jefferson, OR

I have just basic cable and pay well over $30 a month just for basic TV channels. Please consider lowering the cable bill for basic channels.
—Ms. Renee Klein, Marina del Rey, CA

It is the right thing for the consumers.
—Bee Johnson, Atlanta, GA

Privacy is important because of identity theft considerations.
—Thomas Brady, Spokane, WA

As a "senior"cable customer and one who is on a fixed income, I am dismayed at the abuse of consumer privacy by the cable industry and especially dismayed at our constantly rising cable rates. The proposed policies would help protect consumers in very important ways! Please stand up to Congressional and industry pressure and their political games during this important time. We need our privacy protected and our cable rates lowered!
—F R Neely, Huntsville, AL

We value our privacy and our cable bill is outrageous. Time Warner has doubled our cost over the last 3 years, including the rental of the set-top box.
—James Hart, South China, ME

I cancelled my cable 7 years ago because I couldn't afford it then, even the cheapest "basic" cable. I live in a HUD affordable housing for Seniors building where I paid a "one-time fee" of $65.00 for WiFi and it is my only for of news and entertainment.
—Amber Joy, Seattle, WA

It's time to protect the American people and do what's best for us.
—Manetric L. Douglas, Indianapolis, IN

Do what is best for consumers, not corporations. Yet another example of corrupting influence of money.
—Gordon Lange, Kihei, HI

One: I have a right to privacy. The FCC should be defending it. Two: my cable/ internet monthly bill is $160. My cell phone monthly bill us over $200 for a household of three. And we don't even have half the premium channels available on cable, and only one of us maximizes cell phone apps and usage. Ridiculous that our communication fees should be this high. FCC should be fighting for citizens like us.
—Nancy Murphy, Maryville, IL

My husband and I are seniors on fixed income 1/4 of what we made three years ago. We shouldn't have to be poor.
—Nancy Craft Lopez, Westville, NJ

We have a right to privacy [period]
—Theresa Lepine, Woodridge, IL

Comcast already ignored the regulations requiring them to create a decoder to replace set-top boxes. Seriously, if buying cable television and internet and telephone is a legitimate reason to allow a company to sell private billing information, then how is it that we can prosecute people who steal our mail to sell the same information to criminals? The FCC must protect the people, not the corporations who aren't HARMED by being required to treat people with respect. People ARE harmed when their private information is sold without their permission. Get your priorities right.
—Stephen Joseph Hutchison, Aloha, OR

This is important for the average American citizen where the cost of living is going up everyday yet salaries are at all time low. Cable is a basic entertainment many wish to have. Please help provide the Americans what they desire.
—Brenna Matejka, Katy, TX

Cable companies have a monopoly on and monitor our usage, that needs to be stopped, big business in the US have to much unquestioned power!
—Bill Polesnak, Troy, MI

I should not be forced to rent anything I do not request like the set-top box.
—Jeanene Bergeron, Half Moon Bay, CA

listening to the people is a win win for both parties.
—Doloris Mikkelsn, Sutherlin, OR

Tell companies also not to add copyright protection to their broadcasts so that I don't need proprietary software just to decode channels that I supposedly am paying for. I cannot distribute the signal within my own household without having a set top box at each TV. That isn't fair use, it is attempting to force me to buy additional services. That would be both useful and save me money. If you need an example, look at what Time Warner does when you attempt to purchase anything beyond the 'basic' package to all of the other channels that I pay for in the way of copyright protection. I paid the money to purchase a box that uses a cable card to distribute the channels within my home on my internal home network (Homerun Prime), then I find out that it can't automatically distribute those signals to all of my Smart TVs because the software to remove the copyright from the live channels doesn't exist. Instead of being able to watch TV from any TV in my house, I am restricted to a couple of TV manufacturers or my PC because Windows Media Center is one of the few pieces of generic software that can actually remove the copyright and display live channels on-the-fly. Why does Time Warner broadcast with copyright protection anyway? Didn't I pay for the service to watch those TV channels?
—Patrick Stroud, Kernersville, NC

It is not OK for Comcast to sell our private information without our consent. It is time for the monopoly on set-top boxes to end as well.
—Jennifer Waters, Tucson, AZ

Since the early 1970s, I have had cable TV installed in my apartments and now my home. My guess is that over the years I have paid cable companies 10s of thousands of dollars. And now they want to capitalize on my loyalty. NO WAY! The greed being exhibited by the cable companies regarding the sale of my private information and the continued monopoly on set-top boxes is appalling. Stand up to them - tell them ENOUGH! Protect my privacy and lower my cable bill.
—Mark Cronin Ritter, Utica, NY

Poor people need to have cable access at low costs and decent speeds for finding work, and for entertainment and communication purposes. The poor are people too, not animals!
—Leonard Greene, Bluefield, WV

We used to have to rent the telephone company's phone! That was outlawed a few decades ago. Talking landlines here, and Princess and other on-the-wall phones. Also, the phone company monopoly was broken up, and Big Bell was gone, and the Baby Bells were born. Monopoly is the problem with cable TV, and a cause underlying wretched service and blatant overcharging.
—Martha Knight, Port Allegany, PA

our rights are being step on and makeing us pay more then we should cable use.
—Carl Moore, santee, CA

It's time to stop preying on the poor by repealing policy that's greed driven.
—Liann, Pittsburg, CA

The internet is the great equalizer of our era. It has the potential to empower any individual motivated enough to seek out the knowledge and resources it provides. 21st century Americans need easier internet access to thrive and compete in a global digital marketplace. Please don't let monopolistic corporations limit and inhibit this essential utility.
—Matt Watrous, Lansing, MI

My privacy is important to me and my Direct TV cable bill has been going up at an alarming rate, this needs to stop.
—Mr Gary Dean Cox, North Richland Hills, TX

to much of our private is getting lost or so they say ie a security breach or the transfer got hijacked, as for set top boxes just another gimmick to pinch the consumer for more outrageous profit for a service that is lack luster slow and doesn't compete with other countries. stand for the consumer not the monopolies that are the cable industry
—Chancellor Ibberson, Rochester, NY

The cable industry needs to be controlled by the laws of free trade. Please recind the monopoly on set-top boxes, and stop the sale of my private information.
—Stan Zeichner, Columbus, NJ

Privacy is important to me and also my cable bills are highway robbery!
—Linda Graham, Redford, MI

Please act in the interest of the public!!
—Paul Harrison, Edna, TX

Because it's the right thing to do for the American people
—Pete, Yucca Valley, CA

I am on social security..cable bill just went up again. They have added a charge to bring sports to me. They told me it is what the channels charge them. REALLY ?All I get all day is calls from liars and thieves. I always report to the do not call list. I have had the same dig. box for 10 yrs ..still paying. Perhaps I will get a little raise in my ss in a couple years. I worked for Comcast and I know of some of their little tactics to get more money. pease help us FCC ..you are our only hope. protect my privacy and get the crooked politicians out of it.
—Sandra McDaniles, Bloomington, IN

Start working for the PEOPLE instead of the greedy corporate telecom companies.
—Jim Yeaman, Montgomery, AL

I am sick of the cable companies constantly raising rates, then offering me lower rates if I will give them my information. I want my privacy.
—Richard Monahan, San Jose, CA

Please do what is right for your consumers and citizens!
—J martin, Henderson, CO

I am a senior whose sole income is social security. I only watch about 10 - 15 channels a month but my cable bill is $228 a month. The is a chance that I could move in the next few months to get lower rent but I will be forced to either pay off the remaining balance on my outrageous Comcast bill or re-up for another 2 year contract. This is wrong. Consumers should be able to pay for just the channels they actually want. I am subsidizing hundreds of channels that don't interest me in the slightest. Please refuse all merger requests from cable and phone companies. What we need is far more competition, not less. Please protect our privacy. I don't want any ads from anyone.
—Gloria Valoris, Sacramento, CA

Because we all use cable and should not have to pay more than our fair share for it.
—Ms. Linda A. Heath, Grafton, OH

I am old and live alone. Electronic means are the only method I have for keeping in touch with the world and my grown children who live in other states. Comcast and ATT have me by the short hairs and they know it. I have to continue my subscription even though I cant afford it.
—Forrest Hopping, Fresno, CA

No cable monopoly, lower the bills and protect customers privacy.
—Rafael Ormino, Silver Spring, MD

I am a Senior Citizen and the cable bill keeps going up and I keep signing for less and less. When will it ever end? TV and my favorite shows are important to me but I can not afford it. Please help.
—Katherine E. Cunningham, Pittsburgh, PA

Businesses should not sell our private information unless we have consented individually. Cable and forced eternal rental of a TV box is ridiculous. We should be able to choose our cable company and or buy a box. Done
—Linda Jung, Harlem, GA

We have generally slower speeds and higher rates than many other countries. Yet that isn't enough for our current near monopolies. Please act on what you have started.
—Philip Kuhn, Raymond, MS

We need digital freedoms !
—Jordan Poole, Philadelphia, PA

Each and every citizen has a Right to Privacy and to not being price gouged by our current cable monopoly system.
—D Lancon, Tujunga, CA

I don't want to live in a plutocracy.
—Roberta Richardson, Golden, CO

If both these measures are not adopted, we isolated seniors will lose our cable service.
—Mabel and Don McElhaney, Hillsborough, NC

I do not want my private information sold by Comcast. I do not want to pay for a set-top box rental by my cable company.
—Sandra Fujita, Kaneohe, HI

The FCC has NO BUSINESS selling my private information to anyone, nor to take any action to further increase already outrageous cable bill costs! The outright thefts that the traitors who have engaged in such abominable, manipulative acts, attempting to force the FCC to do their bidding at any and all costs, should be fined and punished to the highest extent of the law! We the people of this nation do not need to be further mistreated by the greediest amongst us!
—Janiece D. Staton, Beaverton, OR

Please, I can't afford what the company's which are a monopoly are doing to my financial. No raises, bonuses for government employees who do poor or criminal activities. I'm going from upper middle class to being poor. No joke this true.
—John Shea, Glenshaw, PA

Selling my information without my consent should not be permitted by any group, corporation, or business. Paying 100+ a month for internet and corporate driven media is not democratic.
—Jonathan F Crissey, Leander, TX

I want my privacy protected! and I want a lower cable bill. These are not outrageous demands but common sense steps for consumers. Thank you.
—Ann Collins, Saint Louis, MO

Selling my private information without my consent is, on its face, bad policy. Don't allow it. Also, a monopoly on any electronic device surely tends to delay efficiency and innovation in this area of technology. Again, it's bad policy.
—Bob Filipovich, Helena, MT

A rip-off should never be legal.
—Rolf Radicke, Bristol, PA

I support lower cable bills & privacy. NOT monopolies and more junk mail for stuff I can't afford to buy!
—Connie Cavara, Pittsburgh, PA

Stop letting telcoms rip off consumers and violate our privacy. Thanks to endless mergers there is no competition so we cant vote with our dollars. We need tbr FCC to do its job.
—Jessica Janecki, Durham, NC

The United States Supreme Court has ruled that the right to privacy is implied by the constitutional right to be secure in one's person and possessions. My personal information is my possession. All government agencies, including the FCC, are established to protect the rights and privileges of the people. Please protect our right to privacy.
—Patrick Chapman, Cedar City, UT

We are retired and the cost of living isn't going down. The politicians that want to give everything to corporations also want to cut retirement t benefits. Enough is enough.
—Barry Landson, Bend, OR

Just because people are forced to pay a certain amount for something, doesn't mean that it is worth the price. I can walk away from an over priced garage sale but I can not walk away from a monopoly situation of big telecom gouging its customers and selling info. PRIVATE INFORMATION IS PRIVATE!!!!! In case you were confused.
—Chris Gibbon, ,

I would like to say there is at least ONE federal agency that is honest and has the public good at heart... as it should.
—Steven Yerow, Jersey City, NJ

I do not want anyone selling my private info without my consent.
—Duane Young, Stoneham, MA

I am not fine with the huge bills for my cable...I think we should have more choices....and local government supplying services...may be a good choice !
—Daryl Pullen, Boise, ID

The cable companies make huge profits on our ever increasing cable bills. They have no business selling our personal information to third parties. Ending the monopolies in cable boxes will introduce competition which has proven for years to reduce costs and improve service.
—Jeff Odell, Irvine, CA

I'm on a very limited budget as a retiree.
—Anna Ansari, New York, NY

I support the FCC's broadband privacy proposal and the agency's efforts to end the monopoly on set-top boxes. You should too.
—Jon Connell, Brooklyn, NY

These are common-sense measures that benefit consumers without overturning some basic business model. Our private info should not be a salable item for companies we patronize, nor should forced rental be an acceptable add-on to our cable service.
—Brian Bland, santa monica, CA

my cable bill just for internet connection is obscenely high. also would love to keep my private information PRIVATE.
—Roberta Schepps, guerneville, CA

Comcast is too powerful and ordinary consumers have no real power.
—Jessica Clem, Spring, TX

I applaud your attempts to protect my privacy and lower my cable bills. These are important issues to me because I worry more and more about identity theft and access to information as we have no access without cable here on our island. Please continue to use my name and that of others that support your efforts on our behalf. Thank you so much.
—Deana Shelby, Anahola, HI

You okay ed encryption for basic cable TV now OK options to buy cable TV equipment instead of leasing it. The pre Greene v att days are over, and not need to be rehashed.
—Will, San Antonio, TX

We happen to be a member of "We the People"!
—Bob and Inge Owens, STUART, FL

The monopoly on set top boxes must end
—Robert L Branham, House Springs, MO

Dear FCC THANK YOU for defending American citizens and consumers. Today internet and telecommunications are are essential public, common goods. I have just come from Europe and am shocked and frustrated by the cost, opacity and avarice of oligopolistic communication companies. Now, they are intruding into our private lives and undermining the FCC itself. Please do not let Comcast intrude and exploit its dominant position to the detriment of ordinary Americans. Please Commissioner Rosenwor el, hold fast to FCCs principles. Resist the cable lobbyists! You have our thanks. Sincerely Jessica Gress-Wright
—Jessica Gress-Wright, Orange, CA

The FCC is supposed to work for the public
—Andrea Cassidy, Berkeley, CA

Fixed income ,don't have the money that they would require
—Benjamin Chavez, Henderson, NV

Privacy is a fundamental right recognized by law!
—Dan Coplan, mdr, CA

Consumers do not need to have their privacy rights bought and sold to any bidder because multibillion-dollar corporations want to make even more money. Please protect consumers by taking action for their privacy and for their ability to reduce costs of communications.
—Veralene Campfield, Quincy, IL

Selling private information is the lowest ebb of profit pirates in the cable business, lower our cable bills and refrain from information sales.
—Pam Leighton-Burwell, Austin, TX

Cable is no longer a luxury but should be controlled like water,and electricity. The for profit big companies are squeezing us and limiting our free Choice and privacy.
—Duncan Jones, Lathrup Village, MI

Those who purport to believe in capitalism should champion competition in the set-top box market and should oppose monopoly control of cable service.
—Laurie "Ryan" Norton, Durango, CO

As a retired couple, it is important to us to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month also to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent.
—Kirk & Donna J P Mendenhall, Magna, UT

Because, even though I have kept the same service, my cable company wanted to raise my monthly rates by almost $50, until I called and threatened to cancel! That shouldn't be allowed!
—Donna Turiano, West Palm Beach, FL

These are common-sense, pro-consumer policies and that should be all the justification the FCC in its watchdog capacity should need to move forward QUICKLY on these proposals!
—Vern Maresh, Albuquerque, NM

Protect us from rate increases.
—William Jaskowiak, Eau Claire, WI

Catering to big corporate media conglomerates has got to stop! People deserve better. Please act in our interest instead of the interests of big money.
—Be Erickson, Westlake Village, CA

NO to selling our private information, sans our consent! Make it an illegal and punishable infraction!
—Polly Tarpley, Poulsbo, WA

Third world nations have better service at lower prices. Pretending these rates are warranted is laughable.
—Nan Ayers, Richmond, CA

There are not many options to get internet where I live, so I am forced to pay a high cost for a low bandwidth, which is absurd. Corporations just take our money, and they take advantage of us. We should be protected from this greed. The privacy issues comes when they sell our information with all the data mining they do, yet we still get charged a premium to use the internet. These type of practices need to stop.
—John Davalos, Bakersfield, CA

The Dmark should be the outside wall and carriers should have no say inside that nor should they have access to our usage patterns. This includes freedom to supply my own modem and to determine what information I am prepared to share with those to whom I connect . It's also time that companies like Comcast be required to supply itemized billing so we can see what each service is costing.
—Tom Leonard, Kailua Kona, HI

My cable bill is going through the ceiling. Why? I thought all this new technology was supposed to make things more efficient and cheaper? We have the worst service and the highest cost of the developed world. I was in Europe recently and they have much better services for much less money. I will have to cut the cord soon as it's costing too much!
—Robin Bergman, Arlington, MA

Cable companies are gouging consumers.
—Amber Cornett, Knoxville, TN

monopolies are bad and cable companies make enough as it is.
—Charles C Marye, germantown, MD

Companies should not be allowed to give/sell personal data to 3rd parties without permission. It is our information and we should control who gets iit and what they can do with it. SetTop boxes are a commodity just lite computers and cell phones. No company should have the right to requite that we rent the same box from them they we can buy on the open market. They are selling a service which should not be an open invitation to gauge the public for all they can get.
—Jim Kistler, Westminster, CA

Regulation is healthy for a fair and productive market. Please protect me, you are my voice in the world of mass communications.
—Jonathan Ohlen, Middletown, CA

If I ever can afford to subscribe to comcast again, I sure do not want them to sell my information to ANYONE!
—Dianne Bryant, Yuba City, CA

Do what is RIGHT & JUSTICE prevail for the consumer instead of us being roughshod over by Corporate America! They have ruined this Country enough that their greed and corruption may already be irreversible for a correction! Help the Consumer...will ya for goodness sake!
—Dianne Jacobs, Tucson, AZ

PLEASE !
—Rodd Ringquist, Forest Lake, MN

I do not want my privacy compromised in yet another way for the profits of big corporations. Do NOT use my confidential information in any way that compromises my privacy. And please lower my exhorbitantly expensive cable bill while you're at it, please!
—Edward R. Treuting, Emeryville, CA

consumer protections should outweigh corporate profits at ALL TIMES!
—Jeffrey Falkenstein, Cave Junction, OR

My privacy is of the utmost importance to me as living in a free democracy should entitle me! Cable companies should not hold a monopoly over us consumers.
—Patricia Page, Virginia Beach, VA

I need basic cable to get news and information. The cost to me for no-frills basic Comcast cable television is $38.09 per month. I live in an apartment where there is no other choice. Some of this amount is called "fees" of one kind or another. Billing is opaque and difficult to argue. Can you lower my monthly bill? At age 79, I live on a limited social security income. This Comcast bill is way higher than my electric bill.
—Elizabeth Walker, Santa Rosa, CA

It is important to me for those of you who have family know it is one of the things that keeps family's together. Entertainment!!!!
—Jennifer Alford- Alford-Eichelberger, MIDDLE RIVER, MD

Please protect the privacy of us consumers and stop the outrageous charges our cable companies are forcing on us just to access the Internet. Thank you.
—Ann T. Fathy, San Diego, CA

It is a civic duty to ensure that ALL citizens should be treated equally, including those who are unable to afford some of the means of communication that some of the "better" endowed citizenry" take for granted.
—Roger Hancock, Aurora, IL

These are policies that every cable consumer can support. Cable providers have certainly demonstrated that they will use every trick available to increase their charges while their customer service ratings are among the lowest of any industry.
—Jon Hannahs, Chicago, IL

Stop believing all the lies that big business leaders tell you they are going to do for the consumer. They're all lies. I want you all to stop being so gullible. You're public servants. Public...the little guy...remember? That's who you are working for, not some golfing buddy.
—Nancy Zaman, Los Angeles, CA

Cable and internet service providers were given carte blanche from their beginnings, and the FCC has the power to REASONABLY regulate their activities, in protection of consumers. Financial losses due to identity theft cost over $24 BILLION in 2012. Allowing cable providers and ISPs to sell consumer data will further erode the few protections consumers should be given. The FCC MUST stop the monopolies and their unethical business practices. Congress doesn't just fail to act, they interfere by arguing for their cable/ISP lobbyists, rather than their constituents. Please, please balance the power. Don't let cable companies or ISPs sell our data, and please, rid us of the monopolies. You're our only hope.
—Kimberly Black, Denver, CO

People cannot afford cable anymore & this is just one more example of corporate corrupting government agencies. Pleasw stand up for real live people, not wealthy businesses.
—Linda Ehrisman, Gasquet, CA

what gives them the right to sell my private information.
—Patrick Adams, shawnee, KS

Too many of these large corporate companies find too many ways of overpricing and overdoing unneeded or unwanted services. And to think privacy should be compromised or taken away, though customers have full legal right to privacy and not selling the customers out as 'public domain' is just deplorable and lousy business. You won't see me giving any business to Comcast, and it won't be Verizon either, as their situation is about lack of FiOs accessibility and Comcast's bullying monopolizing scheme. There's one cable company that is worth it, but Comcast has the monopoly in this area, with no competitive choices.
—Beth MacDonald, Greenfield, MA

I'm tired of being gouged, monthly, with extravagant fees for equipment and services. REIN THESE MONEY-MAD CREEPS IN!!!
—Dorothy G. Wilkinson, Hollywood, CA

You are betraying the people by leaving us open to hacking, etc. A lower bill is the right thing to do in this economic climate.
—Adele Galloway, Winfield, KS

I want to have the power over what personal information a company can and can't use. I want to have a say so don't give companies a free hand using my personal information. Please protect my privacy!
—Walter Thompson, Santa Rosa, CA

This would be great PR for you and greatly appreciated.
—Sherrie Rozniecki, Delaware, OH

Cable bills keep going higher & people like me get less for in spite of increases. Keep our cable affordable & do not give cable companies the right to sell my personal information.
—Evelyn Sepulveda, New York, NY

Why am I forced to pay for cable TV I dont even use, just for access to the internet? And I have to do business with this monopoly because nothing else is an option. Please stop the madness ;)
—Rob Goodenow, Topsham, ME

keep my living costs down, nothing but advertising on cable and too many channels I don;t watch and have to pay for. we should be able to choose what channels we want and pay a decent rate for them
—Calvin Varner Helen Zika Dan Wilson, Betty Wilson, Mansfield, OH

Privacy is a right, and we're losing it more each day. Stop the intrusion into citizens lives and help save Democracy in the process.
—Charlene Davies, Spokane, WA

Invasion of privacy is unconstitutional. Congress should not have a right to deny our rights.
—Jack Lloyd, Spokane, WA

Invasion of privacy is unconstitutional. Congress should not have a right to deny our rights.
—Sharon McHugh, San Ramon, CA

My cable television bills are way to high and my wife wants to drop Comcast and switch to an old fashioned antenna which will pay for itself in one month after we drop cable. We will be limited to local broadcast channels within 60 miles of our home but it will be worth it with all the fees and taxes. The FCC needs to protect consumers and not huge media conglomerates who have monopolies.
—Timothy Alstrum, East Hartford, CT

I'm a full-time wheelchair user. I do not drive a car. I live in a city that has bus transportation and very little snow so that I can get around at least a little. But it also rains nine months out of the year and has plenty of hills so along with the computer stuff I'm doing I watch TV because it keeps me company. It makes me feel less alone. But I'm on a fixed income and the cable companies have reduced the number of stations available on my tier twice so I'm down to about half of the number of channels I had when I signed up, with no reduction in price! I'm basically being charged more that I was when I signed up for half as many channels. Believe me when I tell you I am not inclined to go to iron tier, but I don't want to be without television access either. The world is changing to vast and they need a way to keep up with it in real time. I use the Internet a lot to as I help manage a lab for people with disabilities but I can only take care of part of the picture. People need to be in use TV without being scalped as far as prices. Thank you for listening.
—Tom Ross, Seattle, WA

Cable companies have pretty close to monopoly power. My apartment building owners do not like satellite connections (they think they do damage cable connections don't) and forbid me from having them-- so I have no choice but cable. Please do not enhance my cable company's monopoly power over me.
—Ken Perry, Oxford, OH

It is beyond outrageous that any company can sell my personal information, especially without my knowledge or consent. I strongly urge you to prohibit this practice and keep my private information private.
—Jeff S, Ogdensburg, NY

There is no real competition outhere where customers can choose between various companies for a better rate and service. Only the big companies seem to have their monopolies and sticking you with large bills and poor service. I remember when cable internet first took off. There were so many local comapnies who offered better service and price for customers to choose from. Just about all of them were bought and merged into this massive money hungry monster we see today. Finish what you have started and do it for the American people. Just about everyone is sucking the blood out of us. DO THE RIGHT THING!!!!
—Arafat Khaskheli, Spring, TX

Both of these issues are part of the very reason the FCC exists. Do the right thing: put us before the corporados' insatiable greed any prying.
—T Jeffries, ,

We deserve fair prices and a free and open internet. Make it so.
—Joseph Barlow, Indianapolis, IN

i am an older woman and can barely pay my cable bill for internet and phone - i gave up tv because i simply can't afford it. If the internet starts costing or costs keep going up, pretty soon i and many millions like me will be cut off, and that's only going to increase the need for expensive government resources. Please do you job
—Rev Louisa A. Dyer, Weaverville, NC

Say no to the cor
—Deborah Brody Chen, Cromwell, CT

We should have a right to privacy and not be subject to corporate monopolies and lack of competition
—Victoria Crampton, Bozeman, MT

This is common sense. Just do it already.
—Deborah Crohn, Portland, OR

I NEED TO SAVE MONEY
—Mr. William Ruch Jr., Cranbury NJ, NJ

Please, our privacy needs to be protected. Cable/TV is way too high. Ending the monopoly on the set top boxes we must rent would help lower our costs.
—Deborah Peterson, Indianapolis, IN

I have paid over $3,000 for my AT&T set-top boxes over the past four years, in addition to $9600 for content & Internet access. This is way too much for TV & internet. And the cost keeps increasing. Please help!
—Lee Lindsey, Cypress, TX

We need a free press that's accessible to all. That can't happen when corporations who have no interest in serving their stakeholders increase prices and decrease services in order to profit themselves and their shareholders.
—Cindee C McCallister, Costa Mesa, CA

I don't like getting unsolicited phone calls, mailings etc. And, as I am retired, welcome any reduction in bills.
—Ms. Catherine Loudis, San Anselmo, CA

I support the FCC broadband privacy proposal. It is crucial to sustain the integrity of the internet.
—Gloria E Donohue, San Francisco, CA

My personal information is private and should not even be collected, let alone shared. Forcing consumers to rent overpriced boxes is a prime example of crony capitalism. Free market be damned, as long as cable companies keep "contributions" flowing.
—John Persico, Buffalo, NY

I am already besieged with phone calls, mail, and email from parties that have no business contacting me. Privacy invasion and identity theft are growing in a scary fashion. The FCC has not been proactive enough in protecting consumers in this area. This needs to change immediately.
—Dr. K Stahl, Fort Lauderdale, FL

We need competition in cable not one company that can charge as much as they like to customers.
—Bernadette Belcastro, FLORAL PARK, NY

Cable rates are sky high!
—Dick Gatz, Lexington, KY

Getthisdone= tired of paying and getting little in return
—Nanette Wizov, Penns Grove, NJ

As a consumer, I know that prices keep escalating as we have fewer choices. Monopolistic mergers keep taking more money out of our pockets. As a citizen, I believe that I have a right to control my private information. If I am OK with letting it be sold, then the profits should belong to me.
—Sandra Stein, Ithaca, NY

Keep our private information private. Why should a private company be allowed to profit from our information?
—Batya van Messel, New York, NY

The FCC should be watching out for the interests of the consumers. It's time you do your job!
—Ginny Corwin, Middleton, WI

Monopolies are supposed to be illegal in this country and no one should have the right to sell your information without your consent.
—J Belcastro, Floral Park, NY

End the monopoly and leave my information private
—Cindy curran, bowdoinham, ME

This is important because the cable companies charge us way too much for tv. Ehst was once was free basic channels is no longer. And unless someonevsteps in its only going to get worse
—Kelly Bechtel, ,

Cable fees are killing us... I remember when the only tv was free over the air and we had to suffer through commercials. Now we still suffer through commercials but pay a premium for the privilege. Cable TV needs to be affordable for all because television provides the nation with important information often vital to us as a united nation of diverse people.
—Paul G Ecklund, Marietta, GA

MOST MEDIA COVERAGE IS TOO VIOLENT PLEASECREDUSE VIOLENCE IN THE MEDIA. THANK YOU
—MICHELE DAwn SANDERSON, Walnut Creek, CA

I spend more money on watching TV than I do on my car payment. This is wrong.
—Lynn Levine, Minneapolis, MN

My personal habits are mine, they shouldn't be up for sale.

End political games. Citizens vs corporat interests
—Linda Medeiros, Cloverdale, CA

I value my privacy, especially when I'm online.
—E Mothershead, Mesa, AZ

This is about the PEOPLE, not the corporations. Please represent us.
—Sandra V. Mueller, Livingston, MT

I have a limited income, and I need to save up for more important things like buying a car which I'm saving my hard earned money for. People like me depend on cable and broadband today as a way of life in today's America. People with limited incomes shouldn't have to bear the cost of more unnecessary higher cable bills.
—David Broden, Framingham, MA

These cable prices are out of control. Already I have turned off my TV. What is next? This isn't the America I grew up in where the rich become richer at the expense of the working class citizens. Prices must be lowered.
—Pamela Sheridan, Woodstown, NJ

Duh! Really? C'mon, personal liberties AND privacy are cornerstones of our freedom. Get with the 21st century, eh?
—Joe Cooper, Austin, TX

Costs are unreasonable.
—Linda Norton, College Station, TX

If prices don't come down, our family will have to cancel cable. Groceries and medicine come before cable.
—Mariko Yannacone, Palm Bay, FL

Privacy is important to me. If Comcast can sell my data, it puts me at greater risk of identity theft.
—J M, Columbia, MD

Help make this a government by the people, and for the people.
—Dwight Tuinstra, Potsdam, NY

I want freedom of choice regarding set-top boxes, which will lower my cable bill and allow me greater choice for viewing. Also, no providers should be able to sell private information about me without my consent. My right to privacy should not supersede a cable company's assumed right to profit off of information I did not agree to share.
—Anthony Glover, Bronx, NY

Please, monopolies are un-American!
—Maria Jacobson, New Ulm, MN

Because of cable's high prices, we did away with our cable. Comcast does not have the right to sell my private information.
—Michelle Lever, Kansas City, MO

A lot of us are housebound and depend on regular Television, which has been ruined by cable. So it is only right that we pay low premiums on our cable bills considering that we are having to pay for something that for many years we got free! I can barely afford my cable! But it is all I have!
—June Arnett, Dallas, TX

My cable bill is larger than my car payment. Something ain't right.
—Larry Sullivan, decatur, GA

We already have little real choice in tv and pay exorbitant rates. Are information should not be allowed to be sold and there must be competition in the set top box industry.
—Jeremy Sohn, Plainfield, IL

It makes dollars and "SENSE"!
—Robert Baxter Jr, Clarkston, MI

My family will be unable to afford the continued abnormal high cost of cable TV with internet and will be moving to an all mobile/cell phone plan.
—Julius Tasselmyer, Trucksville, PA

You drag you asses every time there is something to do for the working or middle class. Delay, compromise its getting old. Do you damn job for a change.
—James Norgrove, Winter Park, FL

I am tired of these internet and telephone companies running over the rights of the American people.
—Lj Lombardo, Beaumont, TX

I think it should be obvious to all of you why this is important to me.
—Dave Benson, Aurora, OH

We have been losing our privacy in our personal business and lives increasingly. Please pass the FCC's Broadband Privacy Proposal and stop the selling of our prrsonal information by Comcast and others. Also please stop the monopolies including of set-top boxes for cable service.
—Victoria Bower, Puyallup, WA

I am on SSI and I pay $56.00 a month for basic Internet as it goes up Every 6 months when they want you to take TV & phone service , You Decline and its goes up It is All I have , just a computer and I can't pay any more for so little.
—Alita DeMarco, Ypsilanti, MI

We rely on you to protect national interests over special interests. Please do your best!
—Deborah J. Miller, Austin, TX

It's REPUGNANT that you vote along Political Party lines instead of representing the best interests of your fellow citizens. How much money did you get when you sold your souls???
—Dr. Jeffrey Paul LaGasse M.D., Freeland, WA

Individuals have no bargaining power against giant enterprises. We rely on you to protect our interests.
—Alvin Goldman, Denver, CO

As a senior citizen, my income is limited, while cable tv is my main means of aquiring information and entertainment, it is becoming increasingly unaffordable.
—Sunny Payne, Philadelphia, PA

Please do the right thing about privacy and cable boxes.
—Onka Dekker, Washington, DC

We are all aware where this is going Internet providers won’t rest until the government’s net-neutrality rules are dead! Kindly do you job and stop the hypocrisy. thank you
—Sharon Scanlon, Cherry Hill, NJ

Already there's too much of OUR activities being logged, sold, 'dig-data processed' for further, future more effective suasions upon us against our wills. Please allow the American citizens to have access to, to consume some information & entertainment without having the details of our activities being 'big-data-ed' for some else's goals & bottom-line.
—Umar Bell, Whitefish, MT

Selling our information without option or consent is unethical and not in the public's best interest. Legislation to protect citizens from monopolies was enacted for very good reasons; serve citizens
—Jamie Myers, Fort Collins, CO

I believe in PUBLIC ownership of PUBLIC resources. If we can't have that, then we must not tolerate monopolies. Please protect access and privacy.
—Pamela Williams, Boise, ID

Please take action to end the monopolies that cable and satellite companies have in the United States. Consumers have no true choice. The cable and satellite companies seems to have complete control over certain areas which means they can charge anything they want. This situation is the opposite of a free market.
—Susan Burton, Columbus, IN

Lower cable bills mean I can help my family more financially. Please do your jobs and finish what you started!
—Christian Bryant, Detroit, MI

Stop huge mergers and big money interests from denying free and easy access! The internet is not for the Wild, Wild West!
—Eric John Fry, Dallas, TX

Don't force us to rent the boxes! It's highway robbery on a monthly basis!
—Karen Hewelt, New Baltimore, MI

I want my privacy protected.
—Virginia Jastromb, Northampton, MA

I am a disabled senior, and I can barely afford cable TV now, and it's all I have to keep me company during the day, and warn me of bad weather. Please help me so I won't have to give this up.
—Patrice Ann Shay, Byron Center, MI

FCC, please stand up to cable industry and their friends in Congress. Let us preserve democratic forms of communication.
—James Donaldson, Okanogan, WA

FCC, please stand up to cable industry and their friends in Congress. Let us preserve democratic forms of communication.
—James Donaldson, Okanogan, WA

This is a matter of common sense and fairness
—Sharon Crane, Cody, WY

I cut the cord years ago and use a ROKU with 700+ channels currently only paying for NETFLIX and HULU. High rates are why!
—David J Miller, Gilford, NH

I have cable to listen to the news (not Fox) and C-span but, they keep raising the cost and as a senior, I can't afford it. I'm not alone. We are being forced to subsidize non profitable channels and pay for the set-top boxes. You can end the monopolies and the selling of private information. Please do so before the end of the Obama Administration.
—Margaret Wilson, Green Bay, WI

Money is tight as is with a min wage full time job without renting something so superfluous.
—Jason D Carlisle, Indianapolis, IN

For many working people cable tv is a huge source of entertainment but the cost is becoming prohibitive! A few companies monopolize the industry and hold us hostage.

Too much profit.
—Marianne Amann, Ingleside, IL

Stop the Greed
—Rick Foster, Lynch Station, VA

Media companies keep merging and sucking up more power at the expense of consumer privacy and choice. Buck the trend. No one else has the power to fight back.
—Lawrence A. Swain, Temecula, CA

My privacy is not yours to take.
—Hanna Kutcher, Sylvania, OH

I need the cost of cable to be lower
—Maria Mota, ,

I'm sick of the lack of Anti-Trust enforcement. Your next move will be to Ireland? T.U.R.D.S.
—Yara Mello, Yelm, WA

My personal information is not for sale and I wont allow the likes of Comcast, Verizon or the like to arbitrarily steal my information and sell it to their "3rd party partners. That would be total BS if the FCC allows this kind of crap to happen.
—Donald L. Burg, Pomona, CA

During the last 4 years, my cable bill has doubled...without ANY adjustments on my part. As far as I'm concerned it's a monopoly. I have two choices in my area, and that is true all over the country,..some have only one choice. I am absolutely opposed to bundling manipulations.
—E Muriel Schlecht, Tewksbury, MA

My privacy should not be sold without my consent..
—Geri Nolan, Milwaukee, WI

I'm a retired school teacher and I live on a fixed income that does little or no adjustment for inflation. Therefore, it is getting harder and harder to make ends meet. It would help if Cable and dish bills could remain relatively small.
—Mr. Wayne Flick, Cimarron, CO

Right now my Comcast bill is between $155-169, mo. & that is way more than I can afford. When I moved into this senior housing unit, I was told that we HAD to use Comcast, as the company that owns these units, "Interstate Realty Mgmt., aka The Michaels Organization, I was told that they contracted with Comcast/Xfinity to provide our tv, telephone & internet providers. Being a senior citizen on a fixed income, & was quite ill when I moved in 2 yrs. ago, I did nothing about what I consider to be a monopoly that I was forced into. It began around $99/mo. & now it is so very much more. PLEASE help me & all others who have been forced into using Comcast or nothing. Protect us from this huge, heartless MONOPOLY. Thank you so very much!!!
—Elizabeth Juvet, Cloverdale, CA

My privacy is my business, not comcasts nor att's. And no monopoly is wanted or needed in a free and democratic society.
—Mark Bachelder, San Anselmo, CA

This monopoly is corrupt and takes advantage of the American people!
—Anita Vogel, Orange City, IA

In spite of what radical capitalists will insist on, every single thing should not be turned into a commodity. Our right to privacy is certainly one of those things.
—Gary Alderette, Santa Rosa, CA

1) No corporation should be allowed to sell anyone's private data without that individual's consent! Our privacy should be protected by Constitutional law, and if it isn't, we need an amendment to safeguard our personal data, just as much as our bodies! 2) Cable monopolies are bad for this country! Such monopolies keep the costs of service artificially inflated, halt technological progress, and corrupt the local governments that support these monopolies! Also, cable companies that have monopolies are notorious for terrible service!
—Linda Lee, Atlanta, GA

FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler has two strong proposals on the table: one would stop Comcast from selling your private information without your consent, and another would lower your cable-TV bill by ending the monopoly on that set-top box you're forced to rent each month. Please protect my privacy and lower my cable bill TODAY.
—Joe Ayers, Racine, WI

I have a right to free access without monopolies strangling the air ways.
—Michael House, Salt Lake City, UT

We can only get tv reception through cable tv and it is too expensive
—Carol Gordon, Los Angeles, CA

I'm retired and getting SQUEEZED.
—Mr. David Audette, Saint Helens, OR

Internet access is now so ubiquitous in our society that it is nearly a necessity. One cannot get a job, do research for school, or locate certain services without an internet connection. Do the right thing, protect the internet from companies like Comcast
—Brian Wagnon, Springfield, MO

I am very concerned about privacy. I think big companies like Comcast should need my permission to sell my private information. I'm a Comcast customer. They probably know all kinds of personal stuff about me. It's not good to think they can sell that information to someone else.
—Joshua Sperry, Oakland, CA

I am housebound so all my social interactions are through electronic media. Privacy and cost are very important to me.
—Katherine Lake, Marshalltown, IA

I am a senior citizen, of course, living on a fixed income. Comcast just raised my cable/phone/internet bill by $35/month. I can't afford that! I am currently trying to decide what I want to give up...cable/phone/internet? Food? Prescriptions? Giving birthday and Christmas gifts to my children and grandchildren? Please do whatever you can to keep cable bills down.
—Linda Ahart, West Roxbury, MA

This is important for every obvious reason. Not only is it ludicrous that we pay four times the rate of nearly any country in Europe for inferior service, it is just another greedy slap in the face from our corporate overlords.
—Denver Davis, Captain Cook, HI

I am paying 192.00 a month for basic cable service.
—Ed Gould, Chicago, IL

Cable costs are outrageous; further erosion of our privacy ifor someone's commercial gain is deeply depressing.
—Dr Nora J Klein M.D., houston, TX

The FCC doesn't seem to understand anymore who they work for, and what their responsibilities are. Please protect the people's right to privacy. Many thanks.
—Caroline Good, sherman Oaks, CA

First, selling private customer information is bad enough but doing so without a) notifying the customer & b) not having the customer's approval before hand is simply egregious. Its things like this that keep me from getting cable. Second, another reason I don't have cable is the "extras" they charge for that they know you'll to pay or no cable service for you. The FCC should remember they're supposed to protect the customer not the provider(s). Pretty Simple!
—Pat Palmer, Indianola, IA

from the start we were told that if we agreed to help pay to run the cable lines that we would have a voice in the process. We were told that we would be able to choose individual channels to control our bills. The cable companies have enough power, they should not be able to sell our personal information
—Joan Ludvik, Lumberton, TX

I'm tired of geting Concast ads in the mail and email. And you are tasked with helping us, the consumers: please lower our bills!
—Vic and Barby Ulmer, Saratoga, CA

For all of the above reasons. Kathleen
—Kathleen Nelson, Denver, CO

My personal information is not for sale by the non-competitive cable company that I am stuck with in my community… and I should be able to look to a competitive pay-TV set top box. Pass the new rules now.
—Bernard J. Couming, Stoughton,, MA

duh..?
—Frank Maiorano, Brooklyn, NY

Thee FCC job is to protect the public interest, not promote the private sector. The private sector is doing fine.
—Jeff Goodwin, Los Angeles, CA

It is extremely important that you stop Comcast from making more money by selling private informaton. You have also been ask time and again to force these companies to stop gouging people so that their CEo's can get even richer. I don't want my personal information to be sold for any reason, and it's way past time to make them lower their prices so that it is more affordable to low and fixed income Americans.
—Carol Quick, Bloomfield, NM

Cable costs are too high so we get our TV and radio over the air. Many people we know have also rejected cable due to exorbitant costs and limited choices. Our privacy is essential.
—Cheriel Jensen, Saratoga, CA

Because you must stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent. You can also lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we're forced to rent each month.
—Lila Berman, Tucson, AZ

I care about my privacy. It should not be legal to sell my private information without my consent. I thought it was the job of government to protect the people not corporations.
—Elizabeth A. Senhen, San Diego, CA

We need more oversight and control of our personal data that these companies collect. When it comes to personal data we should have an opt in system where you are assumed to opt out of data collection and selling of personal info. Instead you should have to opt in to programs to sell and share your data. This only makes sense in light of the constant hacking scandals, we the people cannot expect these unknown third parties to protect our valuable information.
—David Lira, Manvel, TX

Internet access has become an essential component for anyone living in the US. The internet was created to facilitate universally equal access. Unfortunately Service Providers are working to limit access to those who can pay the most. They would render the only level playing field in the world, into a sad pay per view tv channel. I urge you to protect consumers' privacy, regulate fair pricing and ensure quality service. Thank you Brent Supperstein
—Brent Supperstein, Colorado Springs, CO

Cable and ISP companies may be the future of commerce. They must be fair.
—Gregory A Nasif, Brookline, MA

Like the modem for high-speed internet cable (which we once had to rent forever), consumers should have the option of supplying their own set-top box.
—Morrow Frank, Bellingham, WA

I strongly believe that shopping Comcast strengthens innovation and supports start-ups and smaller companies. And as the US serves as a role model for most other democracies, your decision has a large impact on European countries!
—Dr. Matthias Doblies, Glienicke,

For too long the cable giants have monopolized the agenda. It's past time to reign them in!
—Herb Long, ASHLAND, OR

As a senior surviving on Social Security, the $11.75 per month I pay for the rental of the set top box is a major hit on my tiny amount of disposable income. No company should be allowed to sell any individual's private information with out consent. Your vote literally affects each day of my life. Please think about me and place your vote in the interest of the consumer over the corporation. Thank you.
—Michal Bouilly, Camarillo, CA

compared to the rest of the world, cable is too expensive already

Corporations exist to serve us citizens, not the other way around -- unless one is an acolyte of the sociopath and misanthrope Ayn Rand (as are Paul Ryan and so many of his fellow Republicans).
—AJ Averett, Potsdam, NY

Comcast having less cash and in so less political clout =win win
—stafford Carter, Bremerton, WA

80 yr old retiree-vet-fixed income-live below poverty lever, & there are a lot of us,,peace
—Frank G Sandoli, akron, OH

We have been over charged for years now is the time to end the unfair business practices!
—Lee Taylor, Port St Lucie, FL

Comcast is already a monopolistic menace. They never should have been allowed to merge with a TV network, and now they want to sell our information as well? They shouldn't be allowed to bully a government organization by making threats, either. We need you to stand up for what's right, if you don't, who will? We spend on you to exercise the power we do not have as individuals over ruthless, power-hungry companies like Comcast.
—Nancy Norbeck, Lawrenceville, NJ

So may of us are on fixed incomes that we need lower cable bills.
—James van Maanen, Boca Raton, FL

Opening the ubiquitous "cable box" to competition would increase competition, so we'd get a better product at better price. Recall how such moves improved the telephone industry- when we no longer had to purchase the phones from the phone companies, the phones immediately got better AND cheaper.
—John R. Vigna, New Kensington, PA

Cable bills are outrages! The cable co. make enormous amounts of money just on renting us the cable boxes alone. These companies are to large and should not be allowed to become any larger.
—Ann I. Aurelio, West Sayville, NY

Laws such as the bills presented before you are what was supposed to make this country great. It is a shame we have went so far the other way and we do not even realize it. Please do the right thing.
—Timothy Clark, Paducah, KY

WHY? would you allow Comcast to make a profit by selling our private information? WHY? It is just plain wrong and smacks of corruption at the highest level of government agencies
—Ron Kaminski, Patchogue, NY

Cable bills are entirely too high. We're tired of paying for things we don't need.
—Elizabeth McDonough, Alexandria, VA

The FCC's regulatory policy decisions also affect those of us in the electronic universe outside US physical borders. And while our methods may differ, we face the same issues that you are dealing with. Hopefully you will continue to serve reasoned public interests over those of Comcast (et al), and not let them control our shared "airwaves". Thank you for all you do.
—Alex Burton, ,

Chairman Wheeler, you can stand with the masses against the power and influence of the almighty dollar. Comcast and other Big Corporation's only concern is to control and maintain their own oligarchies, for their own greedy benefits. They are in zero way concerned about how they would negatively impact us. They already gouge us with these outrageously high rates, and poor service. Because they recognize that they are the only game in town, and they take advantage of us, accordingly. Stop their abuse of the masses. Do not give them anymore power and control over us, as we have no recourse against them.
—Arturo Blake Sr, Mount Prospect, IL

I'm tired of corporations taking precedent over citizens. America wasn't founded by Comcast.
—Michael Neeman, Dayton, OH

I don't have cable any more. Didn't want Comcast as my provider.
—Mike Kostich, Milwaukee, WI

Cable and Satellite companies are out of control.. Pricing is outrageous. You need to get a handle on this.
—Ivey, Clinton, ME

We need protection from big business greed and power
—Nancy Blastos, Redlands, CA

I AM DISABLED.GOING OUT IS A STRUGGLE OF PROPORTION .BY BUYING CABLE ITS ACTUALLY GIVES SOME ME HAPPINESS ! THE PRICE OF CABLE IS VERY EXPENSIVE AND TAKES AS LONG TO PAY AS WHEN WE ARE TURNED O FF AFTER A FEW MONTHS OF NON PAYMENTS
—Brian T Bayer, williston park, NY

It is the job of the FCC to protect the consumer from big cable companies, not to frustrate and block our protections. Remember, if the GOP gets its way your agency will be eliminated entirely as will your jobs. Get it done!
—Paul Apollonio, Garden Grove, CA

The cable companies & big telecom have monopolies in our cities. They have managed to pass local laws that prevent cities to provide high speed internet to their residents & businesses.
—Carl Hearne, North Canton, OH

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Mrs. Wilkie Little, WINSTON SALEM, NC

Soon to be on retirement income only;, will no longer be able to afford cable and there are no free over the air channels in my vicinity. We need to curb prices in every way to continue access to information and entertainment for seniors.
—Janet Smoker, Corvallis, OR

Cable rates are through the roof! Stop allowing super-monopoly cable conglomerates to rip off consumers!
—Janis Lentz, Ocala, FL

I can't even afford cable TV, we watch off of a digital antennae.
—Kelly Small, Schoolcraft, MI

Consumers should NOT be forced to pay the never ending rental fees for set-top boxes. After a few months rental fees, boxes are bought and paid for and the fee becomes gravy for telecommunication companies bottom line.
—Denise A Hickey, Orono, ME

We're moving from simple obstruction into Neo-Fascist obstruction, the kind that leads to all sorts of unpleasantness for those who are doing the obstructing. Please tell Republican Congressmen that many Americans feel that this year may be the final straw. Tell them to give up the corporate alignment before it is too late. Because once things start to go bad, you can't pull them back.
—Joseph O'Shaughnessy, Downers Grove, IL

Don't let them bully you into allowing them to invade our privacy and set their own rates. We are counting on you to protect the rights of the consumer and not allow the cable bill companies to increase their profits at the expense of our Constitutional, as well as other legal rights.
—Anita McInnis, Bellflower, CA

Help me! Government and corporations are targeting and taking away virtually everything I have. I am losing my freedoms, my cultural connections, my food, my healthcare, my privacy, and my sanity. Please do what you can to save me.

—Barry G. Davis, York, ME

No one is protecting the people from corporate abuse. This has to end.
—Thomas Moore, Philadelphia, PA

Because of monopolies there are only two internet providers to my home and both are expensive. I would love to have access at a reasonable price and to be able to use it for my grandchildren!
—Dr. Judy G. bramlett, Meadows of Dan, VA

I don't have cable because I can't afford it. If the bills were lower, maybe I'd change my mind.
—Cris D'Angelo, Tampa, FL

Good grief, people, do your job and protect our privacy . . . what's left of it . . . from further corporate marauding!
—Maura Stephens, Spencer, NY

OMG !
—Lynn Levin, Bayonne, NJ

Private information is by it's very nature private! Let's keep it that way.
—P S Wright, pottsboro, TX

There is a reason I ditched all cable/satellite providers, and this is it. The price is too high, and the providers hold all the cards. Ask anyone about how to run with Comcast and they'll say "after 12 months of the promotional price (what it really should be) just call them and threaten to quit, they'll lower the price a little". Just that should tell you a little about how they operate. Add in the Lobbying, and dirty pool they play on the public they really need to be brought back into line. I know they (mostly) operate by the letter of the law, but certainly not the spirit of the law. Lets adjust these laws and bring them back to where they should be. I think its time again for another round of what occurred when Bell was split up.
—Howard Robinson, Saratoga Springs, UT

End the cable monopoly!
—Shad N, Lansing, MI

As cable companies consolidate, they raise fees once or twice a year. People's income does increase at that rate.
—Edwina White, Sacramento, CA

You cannot have a true democracy and we have never had one, unless ALL citizens have the same opportunities to be part of deal. Enough with exceptionalism and private clubs for the wealthy. Cable companies are thieves. I have fired them.
—Rosemary Graham-Gardner, Manhattan Beach, CA

August 16, 2016 Chairman Wheeler / Commissioner Rosenworcel: Please pass these two measures. Both make sense for the American people. Privacy is at the very heart of our democracy. Yet each day it is eroded by corporate policies which hold privacy in very low regard and do little to protect U.S. consumers / citizens. The forced renting of the cable boxes is not only anachronistic, it's monopolistic. We no longer are required to rent phones from the phone company. Why should we be compelled to rent set-top boxes from cable and satellite TV companies? Greed is the simple answer. The boxes cost very little to produce. Yet, consumers are forced to pay $12 a month (on average) to rent one box. In a given year, the average U.S. consumer pays approximately $144 to rent a single box -- a single box which most likely costs no more than $100, possibly less, to purchase outright. Please pass these two common sense measures. Peter J. May
—Peter J. May, La Habra, CA

I have no viable internet choice in the area where I live; so am stuck with a monthly bill of $140. TV commercials are disgustingly voluminous! End the monopoly on end set top boxes and above all protect our private information
—Karen Doulin, Brooksville, FL

This government MUST become "for the People". You have a great opportunity. Act now against big business and act for the people. You CAN do it!!
—Daryl Peterson, Welch, MN

Privacy is of utmost importance and saving money is something we all want to do.
—Gary Hopkins, clinton, IA

It is the responsibility of the FCC to protect the rights and best interests of citizens. Despite efforts to the contrary, we all know that Comcast is not an individual but a corporation with interests that do not always include the best interest of the individual. Please prevent Comcast from invading our privacy and profiting from it.
—Mary Susan Martin, Haddonfield, NJ

It. Just. Is.
—S-3 Burton, Conway, SC

Living on a limited income means anything that lowers my bills is of the greatest importance. I don't need excessive charges on my computer or the spreading of my world to strangers.
—IHM Ann Sister Mary Ann Ford, Hamtramck, MI

US citizens have a right to their privacy, and we need to stop paying for what used to be free!!
—Laurie Mauro, Lakewood, NJ

Why is it that when your cable company is taken over by another one that your cable bill automatically goes up in price? Also, our private information should not be able to be boughy and sold with out our consent.
—Elizabeth Boynton, Temple Terrace, FL

Cable companies regularly engage in predatory practices on their customer base becaus they're protected by their natural monopolies in their various markets. It's time to introduce more competition so consumers have a chance to receive ethical service that's worth the money we pay.
—David Rigby, Oceanside, CA

Vote in favor of ordinary people, not companies!
—Johannah White, New Orleans, LA

THere's NO reason whatsoever for these companies to be allowed to have a monopoly on offering these services! And NO company with as much info as the cable companies gather-WITHOUT MY PERMISSION!!!!- should be allowed to sell,and even make a whopping profit from MY personal info, it to anyone, anywhere. THey really shouldn't be allowed to collect that kind of info, period! Why should they be allowed to charge extra for a box that means without it I can't get their services? I suspect it's an end-run around current fee regulations they have adeptly circumvented with these box rentals;the boxes should just be included as normal equipment. You represent THE PEOPLE, not the providers, and thank you for doing all you have done so far, it's been awesome to see and appreciate. We really DO have a right to privacy, though the actual laws are vague onthis issue- we can MAKE it a law by actively protecting our right to privacy. Thank you for assuring our privacy and reasonable charges and getting rid of a ridiculous monopoly-which is truly unconstitutional.
—Linda Decker, Pleasanton, CA

My private information is Mine! And cable/internet prices are out if control! I switched to basic canle and internet to save $25 a month, but the price creep has wiped out that savings. I haven't had that kind if increase in pay, come in niw!
—Lisa Canning, San Diego, CA

We already pay too much
—Brandon Landas, Leesburg, VA

I guard my privacy and so should comcast
—Celeste Lightheart, Scarborough, ME

With everything being so expensive we need a break.
—Julie orosco, San Antonio, TX

I have an expectation of privacy when purchasing goods and services. I am against having companies like Comcast holding a gun to my head forcing me to accept their "terms and conditions" which include selling of personally identification information and marketing information. Stop Comcast and any/all companies from using every scrap of data they acquire from sales and services being used against consumers in attempts to generate more sales.
—Glenn Hawkins, Poulsbo, WA

I want my privacy, why do I have to have it taken away from? If Comcast is going to sell my private information, do I get to profit too? What benefits are helping me and my family if I allow companies to have their way to make money off of my private information? It does not take one to have a Ivy league education to see that there is a monopoly going on with the set-top boxes and we are forced pay climbing fees every few months where it is ridiculous to put customers in a dictatorship environment. The government expects US citizens to be informed and educated citizens and consumers, yet we have to pay a high price to get news and educational information. Please help to protect unethical business practices and to lower cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly. Thank you for reading my plea. -Dawn Feintuch
—Dawn Feintuch, BRONX, NY

The power and abuse of consumers by cable companies has gone of for far too long.
—Yuana Blanke, Chicago, IL

My communications bill is extremely high and my privacy is important to me!
—Ann Kelly, Mount Laurel, NJ

Privacy and choice are important parts of freedom. Cable companies should not be able to sell or share my info without consent. Also the set-top box rental is an unfair practice that costs more than it should.
—Chris Fernando, San Jose, CA

Freedom of the press and related media is important to me.
—Joel S. Trupin PhD, Marshfield, VT

I'm tired of companies making money from my private information. I'm tired of rates going up when we don't have a decent interest rate to keep in step and I'm tired of monopolies! Please FCC, help we consumers out!

Access to an open, neutral, and affordable Internet is essential for everyone to fully participate in our current Society. No one should be being left out or restricted from access due to Class or Financial status. Protect our First Amendment rights and provide the 21st Century Telecommunications Utility that is essential for American's prosperity, education, & security.
—Teresa Montague, Clifton, ME

costs keep rising. cable companies acquire other cable companies and raise the rate.
—Leland Jay Baldwin, Norwalk, CA

My personal information is owned by me, not the cable industry. Any information I've given them was given in strict confidence in order to honor a contract. As a customer I have proprietary rights to my personal information about myself. i have a right to my self, the identity of myself, and all information pertaining thereof. A contract does not give the cable industry rights to my person nor should they have rights to my information. Monopolies have/are screwing up the normal flow of business competition which has ultimately made prices fixed and/or increased. This has nothing to do with business costs. Business is based on supply & demand by the consumer, not! by the business. When a business demands a consumer to not only pay exorbant prices, but gives the consumer no rights to choose... doesn't that reek of Stalinism?
—I J., North Adams, MA

Everythin should not be a available for sale such as life, dignity, privacy and harmony in society.
—Syed Fazlurrehman, Ontario, CA

If they sell my information, I would think that I would get the money. It seems crazy that a company can take my information sell it for money, and I don't get the money? WT- Under No circumstance do I want my personal information being sold - especially if I am not getting the money for the sale of my information.
—N Avery Litin, Minden, NV

The injustice of your agency not finishing what it started can't be underestimated, the protection of my privacy and the concurrent lowering of my cable bill would address it.
—Jamesm M Nordlund, Moorhead, MN

As a citizen I thought that I was entitled to privacy as spelled out in the privacy laws of this country and to a certain amount of anonymity. Please do not let them sell my information to anyone. The Set top boxes are a joke too. The set top boxes are monopolistic reduce or eliminate competition and limit my choices in the free market. When you ultimatly do return to private life don't you think that you your family and friends are going to be subject to these same policy decisions that you make now and when they ask you why you passed it what shall you say? Break up the comcast and verizon and other communications monopolies so we can have a competitive less expensive innovative america instead of "It's A wonderful Lifes" Potters ville with one bar and one bank and one agent to rent a house from I want to live in George Bailies Bedford Falls where there are a couple of each.

—Eugenia A. Patterson, Kingston, WA

For God's sake, can you do your job and look out for the PEOPLE for once?
—John McCarthy, Holbrook, NY

My TW bill for TV and Internet connection has shot up to over $200/mo. I am past retirement age, on a wholly inadequate fixed income. Anything that can be done to help prevent my forced disconnection from the world due to obscene costs would be welcome.
—M S. Epstein, Los Angeles, CA

Telecom providers are really common carriers. They shouldn't get to read the mail.
—Edward Mills, Bellevue, WA

It's not fair and it's wrong. Corporate America at it's best.
—Lois Manoli, washington, MO

Customers are being gouged by cable companies, and manipulating the internet speeds to charge more for faster speed. Cable was supposed to be controlled to minimum pricing when it first was allowed on commercial airwaves. Now it's impossible for everyday folks to even subscribe. It should be a utility, and not a free market entity.
—Peggy O'Neil-Rosales, Long Beach, CA

My husband and I are on Social Security, We need lower cable bills. Our food and medicine is very expensive and more important than TV. We seldom go to movies in theaters. Cable television is our only "fun" activity. Please lower the cable bills. Please don't let Comcast sell MY private information without telling me. It is MY information, not theirs so they can make un Godly sums of money. It is MY information. MAKE COMCAST lower the obscene cost of cable.

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month. Verizon is just as guilty in rentals. In addition, the hard drive in DVRs run all the time even when the unit is powered off wasting large amounts of energy every day.

Comcast is notorious for overcharging its customers. Please don't let Comcast make even more money from me by selling my private information. Thank you.
—Jeffrey Gross, Swarthmore, PA

Because the cable companies are the absolute worst capitalism has to offer. Their executives should be locked up and the key thrown away.
—Daryl Odefey, Denver, CO

The cable and direct broadcast companies help themselves to customers wallet much more than anything else they do... Regulation and municipal networks are the answer. Please, step up and regulate companies that put their profit above ALL things, for the citizens/customers that government is supposed to serve.
—Stephen Wyman, Georgetown, TX

I don't think that the cable companies should require me to rent expensive equipment and sell my personal information either.
—B wells, Independence, OH

Comcast overcharges us and then sells our private data. It's adding insult to injury.
—Vicki Cintron, newton, MA

Please pass your two proposals that will protect my privacy and lower my obscenely high cable bill. Please don't let the threats from our Comcast owned congress stop you and your commissioners from fighting for these proposals. Stop Comcast from selling my personal information without my consent. My personal information is mine and shouldn't be for sale. Please end Comcast's monopoly on set-top boxes I am forced to pay for each month. I should be able to buy a set-box and not pay a monthly fee. The fees add up to thousands of dollars over time.

Privacy IS important to EVERYBODY!!!! If you need to have it explained to you then you're obviously a moron & should NOT be in a position of overseeing the issue.l))
—Audrey Jordan, Arlington, TX

I understand that the FCC can prevent ISPs from selling one's private information without consent and open up a free market in cable boxes to help competition lower prices. I want to strongly support these proposals. I am especially disturbed by the way that my private information is misused. Every time I make a purchase or even contact customer service by Internet, it seems that I get a flood of spam e-mails on related topics and I get served advertisements for weeks afterward. It's not just disturbing, it is bad business, reducing my inclination to use the Internet. Unfortunately, the bad actors don't see this, and are rapidly ruining the Internet. I hope the FCC will take commonsense steps to stop this.
—Joel Swadesh, Albuquerque, NM

Protect our privacy
—a voter who votes Beverly Eckman-Onyskow, Cave Junction, OR

For far too many years, government agencies have supported corporations over citizens. Please break that trend and support main stream Americans instead of corporations. Especially stand firm in preventing companies that provide prison phone calls and internet services from paying commissions (kickbacks) to local and state facilities and governments.
—Linda Polk, Joelton, TN

Without cable or satellite dish, I cannot receive television signals in this part of Oregon. However, the charges for cable have gone up to more than double what I originally contracted. It is time for the FCC to rein in cable companies. Also, I would appreciate having the FCC protect my right to privacy and prevent communications companies from selling my information without my prior consent. Please institute pro-consumer policies as soon as possible. Thank you.
—Jane Cothron, South Beach, OR

This is very important because big cable companies always overcharge my family for the most absurd reasons and my equipment only works half of the time when I just want to watch something on demand. And when we would get our bills by them they would put more on our bill for some reason and my mom always has to call to complain about that but they just do it regardless. So please FCC lower our bills and stop having cable companies charging us for unjustified reasons because they want more money out of their customers.

Protect privacy now
—Micah Wilger, Galesburg, IL

Monopolies are harmful in many ways. FCC should protect consumers, not monopoly suppliers.
—Geoffrey Bruce, Arvada, CO

The cable companies are digging their own grave. Due to their effective monopoly and intransigence they are making more of us cut the cable and just stream and go back to broadcast TV. Privacy is dead, but at least I don't want to have my information be something a cable company gets money for and I don't.
—Steve Lewis, Reading, MA

im legally blind, why am i being forced to rent a device that i cant use fully? its used to change the channel, thats it. the CVAA has no "teeth" no enforcement, no penalty. so why am i penalized by being forced to rent a device in perpetuity that i cant use fully? mediacom even strips out descriptive audio from channels they carry on their system. i should be allowed to BUY a cheap "channel changer" or better yet, the FCC should reverse its decision to allow encryption of BASIC cable so i can go back to using the tuner built in to my tv.
—Paul Milton, albany, GA

Having to rent the cable box costs me $120/yr. After 3 years I have paid $360 for a box that cost more than my TV. I am also extremely annoyed that they "Sell" my information. At the very least if you won't stop them from giving out my information without my consent I should be compensated every time they do share it.
—Debbie Blair, Boca Raton, FL

cost of cable is to high and they select the channels that we have to watch or not, don't want 2/3 rds of there programing but have to pay for it anyway
—Jerry Burrier, blaine, MN

Since there is less and less competition in the cable and internet scene and since companies seem more than willing to abuse their customers, it is vital for every american citizen that you step in and put a stop to the abusive practices of these companies.
—Thomas Matthew Hibbard, South Lyon, MI

I'm trying to live on just my Social Security.
—Jackie Rader, Bullhead City, AZ

Consumers need choice! There is no technical reason why we should be required to rent our cable boxes from the carriers, and good reasons that we should not. As a blind consumer, for example, I would love the opportunity to buy an accessible (talking) cable box, instead of the fully graphical, inaccessible modelsI am required to have by Comcast/Verizon/etc.
—Luke Davis, Philadelphia, PA

Privacy should be the same inn the virtual world as it is in the physical one.
—Joshua Goracio, Payson, UT

My only choice for cable and internet is Comcast. Their prices are unreasonable and I'm forced to work with them until "cord cutting" becomes a more viable option. Please don't give them any more control.
—Mr. Robert Kelly, Tuckerton, NJ

Our cable & phone bills are OUTRAGEOUSLY high. They make hand over fist and do nothing to upgrade their systems.
—Dawn Rohner, Fort Lee, NJ

The monopolistic power of cable companies such as Comcast and Time-Warner has gotten totally out of hand. Your Commission is the only counterbalance to them. We hope you will start exercising your regulatory power to reign them in.
—James Damon, Chapel Hill, NC

Monopolies and price controls by mega corporations in the communications industry are the furthest thing from "consumer-based" as it gets. The cable providers are always looking for another way to collect and profit at the expense of the consumer. Please stop them from going down that road, thanks.
—Jean Goldsborough, Reading, VT

My 4 adult children cannot afford to subscribe to cable television. Ending the monopoly on set-top boxes will help a little in making television possible for them. Please help in any way you can to once again make television possible for everyone.
—Carol Miller, Ann Arbor, MI

Constitutional rights and fair and honest economy! We the people pay taxes that the corporations drain that leaves us deprived! It's time for an egalitarian economy that protects our democracy!
—Norma Pearson, Fairburn, GA

The free flow of information is crucial for democracy and economic justice. We should either have public infrastructure, or else private providers should be regulated as utilities.
—Donald Winslow, Shawnee, OK

I have been a cable subscriber since I became an adult, and I feel like I've been being scammed for years! The same was true back in the days when I spent a ridiculous amount for a modem because I had to rent my modem from the cable company providing my cable. That change alone has saved me hundreds of dollars, while improving the quality of my internet experience. The same will be true when I no longer have to rent a set-top box for cable TV!
—Mark Swiecki, Lincoln Park, MI

The cost of just BASIC cable runs $100/mo. This is highway robbery. The cost keeps going up while millions of people haven't been getting a cost of living raise in their income. STOP THIS MONOPOLIZING BEHAVIOR NOW!!
—Lisa Hansen, Phoenix, AZ

Stop Comcast from selling our private information w/o our consent. LOWER our cable -TV bills by ending the monopoly on set-top boxes we're forced to rent monthly. LOWER our cable TV bills because we are paying THROUGH THE NOSE FOR NO CONTENT.
—Joyce Loewy, Sunnyvale, CA

This company has almost no competition and should be bound by clear rules in the consumer's interest. It is especially important to set up clear and firm policies as technology encroaches on our privacy.
—Lisa Gualtieri, Encino, CA

In proclaiming that Americans have the right to ownership of their papers, the Founding Fathers intended to establish a right to privacy. However, at that time the closest word to "privacy" was privy, which meant going to the bathroom. Of course that made no sense at the time. Undoubtedly, they intended to establish that citizens have ownership of their personal information as well as to any writings not intended by the author for public consumption. Frankly, it is beyond "creepy" to shop on retail websites only to return to social media and find ads for the items you just looked at. Preserving Net Neutrality and curbing the outrageous profits the digital media monopolies makes by selling information that belongs to it's customers is the least the FCC can do for American citizens. You should also adopt regulations allowing any municipality to offer internet and cable services to keep the costs reasonable and competitive. Please consider taking these actions to protect this public utility from being used against us and without our permission.
—JM LaVassair, Ardmore, PA

Comcast/Xfinity cannot continue to charge us for a DVR box that is limited by what you tell us! We need much more options to choose from!
—Rusty Greer, Nashville, TN

I am an older woman on social security and television is my main entertainment. I can not afford my basic cable and internet connection. I know television is a luxury, not a need but I should be able to have it.
—, Fort Collins, CO

I am a retired single man raising 2 grandchildren on limited social security income. Please reduce my outrageous, limited choice bundled cable choice and obscene monthly charges.
—James G Whitehead, Mount Clemens, MI

monopoly is not healthy
—Scott Clark, Greene, NY

I've been a Comcast user for a decade or more. This is an issue I feel strongly about.
—Don O. Noel Jr., Hartford, CT

The cable bill it not something I can afford already & that cable box costs extra.
—Gary Holcomb, Minneapolis, MN

Civil rights are important and defendable; reasonable billing rates are especially important, while monopolies tend to charge whatever they want in the absence of competition, which is of course, unacceptable.
—André Marier, Brossard,

The privacy rule in particular is critical!
—Michael Inners, Grand Isle, VT

I believe the internet should be a public utility, available to all at reasonable prices. Accepting the cable companies' arguments mean that we are instituting a regressive tax on the poor.
—Helen E Roland, Davis, CA

Be known as a true American hero protect the people and the internet. Comcast could not be any worse for service and product.Please don't sell us out like our politicians.
—Vic Oberle, Aurora, CO

This is really important because my cable bill keeps going up at least every six months. I'm really tired of paying $120 a month for cable bundle.
—Patricia Mihalic, North Olmsted, OH

I'm on a fixed income and my cable bill has increased over 25% in two years after I dropped some channels to lower the bill. I need help and you folks are in a position to do so! Please do your jobs.
—Ken Franklin, Panama City, FL

Internet needs to remain free as a way for people everywhere in the world to communicate and share culture, ideas and news to everyone, everywhere. The internet should not be chopped up and sold to the highest bidder to break apart into soulless bits of a bad product.
—Oscar Petersson, ,

When I first went online (dial-up), the big concern was protecting oneself from others with bad motives. Registration wasn't required on many sites, and when it was, there were no address checkers, etc., to verify the info one registered with. Now, registration is required almost everywhere. One's ISP exerts pressure to use their portals. Every bit of info about us is tracked and the big concern is how that tracking info about us is going to be used. Every one of us online is, in effect, a cash cow as info about our behavior online is collected and sold. To whom? For what purpose? We have no idea. Privacy policies are vague or even deceptive and full of loopholes. This pervasive selling of our information negatively affects the original promise of the Internet. As for set top boxes, we long ago stopped having to lease our phones from AT&T and other phone companies. Why are we being required to lease equipment for broadband and cable TV? It's another way to "milk" us, and it needs to stop. And so does the cynical game-playing designed to delay and ultimately defeat the current proposals to require our consent before our info can be sold and to end the set-top box monopoly.
—Linda Risinger, Covina, CA

Comcast should never be given the right to sell private information without informed consent, and we elect people to Congress for the purpose of representing our interests. If you have the power to lower our cable bills, it behooves you to do it. The cost of living is out of control, and many of us are suffering because of it,
—Suzanne Jarnagin, Jamaica Plain, MA

This action is in the best interests of all consumers. Don't let corporations hijack the democratic process.
—Ralph Bruechert, Grosse Pointe Park, MI

As an American citizen I expect to have my privacy protected.
—Gloria Wigert, ocean grove, NJ

Chairman Wheeler, you are taking steps in the right direction and I applaud your efforts to protect the privacy of individuals and breaking up monopolies. This is good for individual consumers who want their privacy protected and good for the economy as a whole as monopolies have devastating effects on economic efficiency.
—Tobias Conn, ASHLAND, MA

FCC Commissioners need to stop prioritizing their own personal gain over the will of the people.
—Matthew S Melin, San Diego, CA

Please get it done!
—Carolyn Pullman, Wharton, NJ

Not only is renting the box a scam but my cable bill has more than doubled over the past five years. For someone on a fixed income I will have to live without TV if the rates keep rising without explanation. Cable companies have taken the lead of government and if you are poor, well, tough shit.
—Kevin J. Gosztonyi, Bethlehem, PA

I'm a Disabled Senior on a fixed income paying for the same service on different devices I.e., Internet at home and on the phone, cable channels on the phone. One bill for home and cell charging for multiple phones lines and multiple cable boxes.
—Akilah Graham, Denver, CO

As a long time member of the American Civil Liberties Union privacy is of vital importance to me.
—Naomi Cohen, Gap Mills, WV

My cable internet bill runs over $65/mo. That's just for internet. Compare that to rates in Europe, where the service is much better. Cable is a de facto monopoly. I'm very tired of being shaken down by my cable company.
—Dean Poirier, DULUTH, GA

Prove that the government is of the people, not of the lobbyists!
—Ernest Renaud, Tonawanda, NY

When services vital to everyday life, employment, shopping, ordinary entertainments is offered with a proviso buried deep in a TOS/EULA, there really is no choice. Cable companies and ISPs have a near-monopoly on communications services we all rely on daily for tasks essential to modern life. I do NOT consent to having my personal information collected and sold, and I do NOT trust corporations to not "re-associate" purported anonymous data with my name, address, and who knows what else they "have on me." It feels like being a criminal, when more often, it is the data-collectors who are using my information to take away my choice, my privacy, and my peace of mind. So I urge the FCC to adopt binding restrictions on what, when, and how peronsal data may be sold. In addition, cable companies, and some ISPs, are reaping a windfall in the tens or hundreds of millions of dollars annually from saddling us with set-top boxes that do little for viewers, but which allow providers to control quality (down-converting HD video shot that way to SD, unless a fee is paid). I should be able to buy a compatible box from a third party and save the inflated rental fees Comcast charges me monthly (almost $12). Let us have real competition. Who knows, someone other than Comcast may have a better, cheaper way of doing the same things. Thank you.
—William C. White, Seattle, WA

Our personal information belongs to us, the consumer, and not the cable companies. Please stop Comcast from profiting on information that does not belong to them. This is outright theft, and invasion of privacy. Also, please stop Comcast from making consumers rent set-top boxes that are not necessary. That goes for VoiP modems that can only be rented and not purchased, as well. Comcast is already raping the American consumer with its monopoly. Enough is enough! Stop Comcast please!
—Douglas Tubach, Canton, CT

I just cancelled my Comcast account because they raised their rates. I stream video from my Roku & don't miss the garbage on TV at all.
—Deborah Suslovic, South San Francisco, CA

Corporations should serve the needs of the people and not the people serve the excessive desire for corporate profit.....
—Larry Bernard, Jemez Pueblo, NM

i feel i pay for commercials more than anything prices keep going up and up. nothing offered to loyal account holders. i do not wissh my private information to be out for everyone
—John Selvey, Winston Salem, NC

We may live in a very public world today, but selling private information without consent is an egregious wrong that needs to be righted, and forcing customers like me to pay for renting boxes needs to end. The cable companies have too much monopoly or near-monopoly power throughout our country.
—Alexander Clayton, Denver, CO

Do this for the people not the corporations.
—Jerry K F Chilson, Enumclaw, WA

because it's costing me too much money & it needs to be AFFORDABLE for the masses
—Sherrie Munday, longmong, CO

FCC needs to do it's job. Disgusted by paid off politicians doing the bidding of greedy corporations.
—Sara Kathleen Ogden, Hohenwald, TN

Let me get my own box with the features I want instead of just what they want to give me.
—Mr. Jim Porter, Binghamton, NY

I depend on the internet to do business daily. It must be affordable.
—Leo Diener, McAllen, TX

The airwaves are SUPPOSED to belong to THE PEOPLE. Advertising on pay-TV should be enough. Programming should be FREE--but if that doesn't happen, at least make it harder for companies to monopolize the market.
—Allyson Drucker, North Haledon, NJ

Our economy is built upon free market competition, and, though there are circumstances which require some level of free market modification, it should be opened up whenever possible to maintain competitive pressures and positive outcomes for consumers.
—Ed Orme, Norristown, PA

My privacy needs to be protected. I am forced to use the monopoly, Comcast, if I want internet and TV. Don't let them sell my private information. I had no other safer choice! Dpon'tr let ANY company sell my private information. I have been a victom of identity theft. Don'r make things worse for me. Also, break up this monopoly!
—Margaret Wood, West Milford, NJ

I pay waaaaaay too much for cable and Internet from a company with the poorest quality customer service.
—Jeremy Ball, Acworth, GA

This is a basic right compliant with standard POTS Telco service granted over the years. Why should ISP's be treated any different? They shouldn't. Please vote to uphold mine and all Americans internet privacy and don't place a "For Sale" sign on internet traffic. Thank you FCC and Tom Wheeler!
—Greg W Cox, Pearland, TX

Big money controls politics. Please don't allow it to control cable communication. Please stop Comcast from selling private information without individual consent ad break up the cable TV monopoly. Keep completion in the market place to keep costs affordable to all.
—Sheila Trujillo, Denver, CO

Every day a bit more of our privacy is eaten away. Only through YOUR action can a portion be saved! As a 100% disabled veteran, what little income I have is most precious and the cost of my home entertainment and communication takes a huge part of it.
—Ronney West, Goldthwaite, TX

As, ought to be obvious to anyone, Cable is too expensive, and privacy is very precarious both to hackers, and the institutions of business and government!
—J Steven Livacich, Redlands, CA

Privacy is fast becoming an action of the past. Do not let that continue.
—Barbara Haines, Palm Bay, FL

Where is the competition for internet in my state. Two companies. The rates are way too high.
—Edward Imbier, Belmont, MA

It's the right thing to do!
—Samantha Heatherly, Long Beach, CA

I want what I do on the internet to be private. I want my cable bill to be lowered. I hate the extra charges.
—Alin Boughousi, Glendale, CA

As a senior citizen on a fixed income I am inundated daily with solicitation via computer, smartphone and regular mail with targeted advertisements that has been obtained by purchased data. The constant bombardment that is truly nonstop affects and invades my daily life. The FCC can save me money and also supports my privacy by passing Chairman Wheeler's proposal. Please take action now!
—Gloria Brand, Boca Raton, FL

please prevent big industries from using their customers information as a product to be sold.
—Chris Carrozza, Drexel Hill, PA

Our private information should be sold to no one!! Also, monopoly in the cable industry MUST BE STOPPED!!
—Marlene Magone, Prospect, CT

Communication infrastructure must never be controlled by the private sector.
—Danny Dyche, Hillsboro, OR

I PAY FOR TOO MANY CHANNELS I DON'T EVEN WATCH BECAUSE I HAVE NO INTEREST IN WATCHING THEM.
—Tracy, Egg Harbor Township, NJ

—Mike Brenner, brockport, NY

Please act to protect consumers and their privacy. You hold the power to protect us all.
—Deja Lizer, Asheville, NC

Allowing cable companies to continue their predatory mistreatment of their subscribers is about as anti-American as a government agency can get. Tighten up on Comcast and their corrupt partners ASAP.
—Andrew May, Emmitsburg, MD

Our cable bills are insanely high, the monthly fee for the boxes is theft, and so are all the extra charges they put on, PLUS we literally have NO CHOICES in the programming we want.
—Cheryl Liniman, Cleveland, OH

Our lives and work actives today relies on affordable and reliable computer access and TV - cable cost have reached uncomfortable levels with poor service to boot. Please address these issues and help consumers get fair treatment.....We are not cash cows.
—Gary Tomlin, Aledo, TX

Reform and choice are needed so we are not forced to pay hundreds of dollars just to watch a few favorite TV shows. We are forced to pay for packages of channels they select. We were forced to pay for cable years ago when we had to pay for cable or use a box to get basic channels. Some of us in home sub-divisions are forced to use the cable company selected by the builder. In my case, it is Charter which I dislike very much. My choice is AT&T U-Verse which is not available in my subdivision. Bring choice for provider and cheaper packages for channels.
—Betty Gilbert, Simpsonville, SC

Because I have a right to my private information, and Comcast is gauging us on the cost of a bunch of garbage on Television.
—Judith Kelly, Buzzards Bay, MA

Please think about the value of America. We need to build this country together to make better life not for the few rich person.
—Peter Kang, Mukilteo, WA

I'M SENIOR WITH LOW SS AND RETIREMENT INCOME! I'M PAYING FOR THINGS I DON'T EVEN USE!
—Ms. B Merritt, Flushing, NY

We all want our personal information to be private, and not disbursed to anyone without our knowledge. We expect the Fcc to stand up for these rights as well as other than exorbitant prices for Comcast sevice; so please do all you can to protect our rughts and costs from Comcast
—Marian Krewson, Bellevue, WA

Our family needs to count every dollar we spend. Don't make us waste more money on cable/internet than we already are.
—Mimi Foust, Cleveland, OH

Internet monopolies-NO. Release of our private information-NO. Lower Bills-YES. The consumer shouldn't be the one screwed, while mega-billion companies have huge profits.
—Jill Levin, Asheville, NC

WTF!
—Skip Vena, Woodland Park, CO

Comcast's treatment of its customer is simply outrageous. What they charge for cable and broadband verges on monopolistic practices.
—Tippy Young, Sacramento, CA

I am who decides what to share with the public not the companies and I am the one that also if I want to make a profit of my information at least is my information not anybody else life
—Marina Colombo, San Antonio, TX

I have had a small website that I would like to be effective in competition with the big websites.
—Bill Donohoe, Austin, TX

I'm in no need of hundreds of channels I have no interest in watching or paying for.
—Joe Russo, Rye, NY

My information belongs to me. It is not a give-away to a corporation, because they know they can get it for free, because they bought enough congressmen.
—David Whelan, Bondi Beach, None

the price of cable keeps going up endlessly my income does not. The programming is repeated endlessly with little new content so why the high pricing especially when you have to subsidize programming that few are interested in but are forced to pay for please do something about this.
—Scott Wilson, Cleveland, OH

cuz I'm, paying attention.
—Carter Andrew McLaughlin, los gatos, CA

The cable bill takes a huge portion of my paycheck every year and I do not like that! More so since I have things forced onto me like a set-top box. The cable bill and set top box make me feel like a prisoner of the cable industry which is truly uncomfortable and should not be the case in the first place. I am also very much against my personal information being sold by a huge corporation with no scruples!! I urge you to work in the favor of the public interest and vote to pass these two bills. Thank you very much!!!!
—Akschith Bhagavatula, Greenville, SC

Cable bills are out of control with no real competition. Consumer protection is needed.
—Debbie Chambers, Beverly Hills, FL

Because, while Congress won't give those of us on Social Security a substantial raise, they continue to allow these mega corporations to rake in billions of profit on the backs of those who can least afford it.
—Linda Ford, Puyallup, WA

I m using lost of internet so do some think about it
—Satyam verma, ,

Plz low the charges its too much
—Satysheel yadav, ,

Because my private and personal information has become a commodity, which I can't opt out of...I've tried, believe me. Nightmare. Privacy has vanished? Thanks for your time
—Christine M Peterson, HHI, SC

Please do what your jobs require: regulate near monopolies like Comcast to protect consumers' privacy and cable costs.
—Will Baldwin, New York, NY

Not only would it be unamerican if my private information is sold without my consent and my cable bill continues to be outrageously high due to the monopoly that only a handful of companies have onset-top boxes, it would ultimately limit my acess to important and lucrative business opportunities that these same companies enjoy only because they can afford to. The next step is charge us more for the service we already have, thus pushing more Americans out of the process of earning a decent living wage and providing the even the most basic of necessities for their loved ones. We must stay active and vigilant whenever the gap between the top 1/10 of 1% and the other 99% is constantly widening by leaps and bounds.
—Lukman Lateff Taylor, ,

Iit is important because I am tired of being gouged by these corporations
—Tom Stark, Colo. Spgs, CO

Please stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Diane Riffitts, Mullica Hill, NJ

Protect our privacy and stop the Comcast monopoly.
—Gregory Comerford, Gurnee, IL

Protect the consumer. It's in the benefit of us all.
—Daniel Canales, Humble, TX

We need the FCC to work together to stop Comcast from selling our private information without our consent, and to lower our cable-TV bills by ending the monopoly on those set-top boxes we’re forced to rent each month.
—Johan van Kesteren, Ferndale, WA

Paying for a service means I should have a choice whether my information is sold. This is not the same as opting in to use a free service (which is also debatable).
—Sasha Neri, Chicago, IL

you just can't sell private information
—Timothy A Thomas, Spokane, WA

With privacy in America on the verge of extinction and the second largest protest in United States history (the largest one in over 50 years) taking place not long ago because of public knowledge of the governments alarmingly prolific unwarranted surveillance, if public approval is something you want to be part of your legacy as chairman of the FCC I think it would be in your best interest to stop Comcast from being the next big business to sell our private information. I think they have enough money don't you?
—Mark Arrington, Fredericktown, OH

monopoly allows this company to say anything and delivr nothing for an ever increasing price.
—Lorraine Alfini, denver, CO

The time is NOW1
—John D Smith, New York, NY

Privacy and respect of what our country needs, keep prices reasonable to retain customers. It seems power and control is the new government thing.
—Pamela Mckinney, Rapid City, SD

I am an Asian-American and always frustrated about the lack of narratives that speak to the lives ofpeople who are non-White and are indeed Americans. In 1942 if demographics are right America will begin having as many of us as there are White people. I fear that we are nowhere near ready to be multi-cultural. FCC needs to help America change.
—Anita Alcantara, Chicago, IL

Do what's right for a democratic nation and work to expand basic internet access to the millions who have NONE; to the same level of easy, affordable access as TV.
—Joel Goldfarb, Kihei, HI

This needs to move forward regardless of corporate based obstructionist politics that have plagued the last eight years of our Government.
—Robert M Profitt, Salem, OR

Miss Doris Thomas is a executive producer of the Divine Diva Talk Show in Philadelphia, Pa at the local Public Acccess Center, PhillyCAM. I am very interested in Comcast Corporation having a monopoly on the video programming and television and media creation for the Delaware Valley and national media arena. Miss Doris Thomas is a Black female and veteran who is seeking funding support , such as state of the technology and equipment for video production, film productions, and digital media creation. Furthermore, I am requesting the feasibility study for revenue sharing from Comcast Corporation for the arts, entertainment, spiritual, sports content in the Delaware valley and national revenues . These revenue sharing strategies will provide better video productions from us as digital media creators of diversity. I am requesting 50% of the 8 billion dollars that Comcast received from profits last year! Miss Doris Thomas will gladly set up an appointment to dicuss the revenue sharing strategies, Miss Doris Thomas will be sending the FCC and Comcast Corporation information and my diversity as a video and television programmer that we are demanding land, building, video technology, and media diversity. Miss Doris Thomas grew up in Philadelphia,Pa and I attended Villanova University and Cheyney University of Pennsylvania with a Master in Education Administration.since 2001. I will be sending you my transcripts and fact check my military service in the Pa Army National Guard from 1992 through 1998. I do not want my private information sold and I want my revenue sharing rights and content developer management rights.
