Sir —
As a mother and Grandmother I am deeply concerned about the lack of quality children's programing currently available on T.V. Our children have such Tender, moldable minds it is important the violence in cartoons / regular programing be reduced. That quality be encouraged that Healthy life Styles be promoted please consider these concerns / Robin Call

Your Honor,

It's time you give television back to America as "family" entertainment and show less sex and violence.

Dear Honorable Hundt,

Our Children are our future and deserve to be the very best they can be. The TV industry can play a major role by airing more TV programs designed to serve the educational and informational needs of our Children.

Put our Children First! We care about our Children. Sincerely,
Ramona Glenn

Dear Mr Hundt,

The television industry has a social responsibility to provide quality educational programs for our children. In addition, they now have a legal imperative to do so. We are very concerned that an industry which certainly prospers from the advertising that targets our youngest consumers, has failed to live up to their responsibility. In short, they have failed miserably to improve programming for children. In my town, Springdale, AR, we are very concerned about the lack of availability of programs which inform & educate our children, as opposed to the surfeit of violent and divisive offerings. We are struggling to provide examples of values that promote leadership & cooperation. We don't expect you to hold the industry accountable for their product which can so affect our children — for good or contrary to good. Sincerely,
Lynn Donald
