the norm. I know I'm going to sound silly, but I miss "Leave it to Beaver" type shows. Is there something wrong with having normal, families on TV?

My children have outgrown Barney, Sesame Street, and Mr. Rogers. They do enjoy the Discovery channel at times when animal programs are on. But that's about all that is offered, except for a few shows on public TV, which are also in danger of being cut because of federal spending cutbacks.

Please work on getting better programs on TV for children.

Sincerely,
Marta Kimball

Dear Commissioner

We have been working on Children + T.V. Please set a standard of at least one hour per day of specifically designed educational + informational programming on all T.V. stations.

Thank you for listening

As a parent of school age children that watch T.V., I desire for there to be more educational + informational programing for my children as we grapple with monitoring the kind of show that is being watched. I ask that there be at least 1 hour of truly educational programing every day during daytime (after 8 am) + early evening times that would help me encourage + influence my children to choose such valuable programing.

I desire for you

Dear Mr Hundt, [redacted]

The FCC should,

Set a standard of at least one hour per day of specifically designed educational information programming on all TV stations. This does not include the programs such as The Flintstones + Power Rangers. You should please count only standard length, regularly-scheduled educational programs, including programming aired before 6:00 am or after 10:00 pm, counting towards that requirement.

Mr. Hundt, I am not in favor of using TV as a babysitter for children, but I do feel that stations have obligation to replace a minimal amount of the trash they show in the airwaves with something of substance and value for our youth.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Marcia Capps
