NetZeroVoice Customer Profile

- 39% of NetZeroVoice's Customers have household incomes of less than $25,000.
- 65% of NetZeroVoice's Customers have household incomes of less than $50,000.
- AT&T and other parties have recognized the need to minimize the impact of USF reform on low-income households.

USF Reform

- We support the explicit continuation of the implicit exemption for “free services.”
- “Free services” should be any service that is offered on a stand-alone basis at no cost to the consumer, regardless of whether the consumer purchases a separate service for a fee from the contributor.

- In migrating to a numbers-based contribution methodology, the FCC should recognize an exemption for certain low-cost services; otherwise, the USF contribution could be a disproportionate percentage of the cost of the service.
