T & W Electronics Inc. Explanation of Compliance with FCC CPNI Rules

T & W Electronics Inc. is a provider of two-way radio services. To ensure compliance with Federal Communications Commission ("FCC" or "Commission") rules and orders governing protection, use, and disclosure of customer proprietary network information ("CPNI"), T & W Electronics has established procedures to maintain the security of the CPNI of its customers. An officer of the company has been assigned responsibility for ensuring that CPNI security procedures are consistently followed, that CPNI complaints and problem reports are appropriately responded to, and that all required reports to law enforcement and the FCC are timely made. All employees that have access to customers or customer data are made aware of the importance of protecting CPNI. T & W Electronics does not accumulate records electronically and does not maintain call detail records. All customer records are filed and stored in an environmentally sound, locked safe. No CPNI is released by telephone or other electronic means. CPNI is made available only in person upon production of valid identification, by mail to the customer's address of record, or in accordance with a valid order from a court or law enforcement agency. T & W Electronics does not utilize CPNI for marketing purposes, and so does not maintain a customer opt-in or opt-out procedure.
