

Powerful Signal was founded in 2007 and has been a reseller of cellular amplification equipment from the major manufacturers in this industry. We saw great improvements in the quality and network protection safety of cellular boosters in 2014 when the new FCC rules took effect in the industry.

1. Powerful Signal is opposed to the waiver for non-conforming boosters to be allowed to enter the market. Much progress has been made with the 2014 FCC rules. We should not allow a manufacturer to circumvent the standards. Many companies have invested millions of dollars in technology to adhere to these rules. The 2014 FCC rules were instrumental in helping to remove companies from the industry with low quality and non-complying products that were known to cause problems with carrier networks.
2. Powerful Signal is opposed to the waiver that allows a single company to be allowed to provide non-conforming (per 2014 FCC rules) products directly to network operators, thus circumventing established industry distributor and dealer channels. The fact that there are multiple manufacturers in the cell signal booster industry has helped to create and proliferate competition in product performance, features, and competitive pricing. Creating a monopoly situation with a single product source would damage the entire industry.
