To: The Commission

COMMENTS OF SINCLAIR TELECABLE, INC.

Sinclair Telecable, Inc. ("Sinclair")¹ submits these Comments in response to the Notice of Proposed Rule Making ("NPRM")² with regard to the Local Radio Ownership Rule. Sinclair urges the Commission to increase the AM/FM subcaps³ by one station across each of the tiers set forth in Section 73.3555 of the Commission's Rules. In the alternative, an approach which considers a market's advertising revenue and population growth would be preferable.

Sinclair has experienced the same disadvantages plaguing broadcasters that are described in comments by the NAB and many others. Radio stations compete for listeners with a wide variety of outlets that are not licensed and are not subject to the same regulatory regime as over the air media. Radio must stay relevant to compete and, in order to do so, must be given a more level playing field. In addition, it has been documented by NAB and other commenters⁴ that the radio advertising market has ¹ Sinclair Telecable, Inc. is the licensee of radio stations in several markets both large and small and not to be confused with the Sinclair Broadcast Group owner of numerous television stations.

³ NPRM at para. 30, the Commission solicited comments on whether it is necessary to retain the subcaps.

declined and shifted to online and mobile options. This advertising trend for radio is likely to continue downward in the future.⁵ Thus, there is a greater need to take advantage of economies of scale in order to compete in this expanded audio marketplace. Sinclair believes it is essential that the Commission raise the AM/FM subcaps. Allowing broadcasters to own additional stations enables them to survive in this new competitive environment.

On April 9, 2019, during his presentation at the NAB Show, Chairman Pai stated that “being a broadcaster means something different than just being a media company. It means something more.” Sinclair urges the Commission to provide broadcasters with the means to compete with other media sources so that they are not forced to become a streaming service. Raising the subcaps would be a good first step.

In the NPRM, the Commission has “invited commenters to offer alternative proposals for a tiered approach or for a different type of approach altogether”.⁶ Furthermore, the Commission stated “if we were to change from tiers based on station counts, as first set by Congress, would it make more sense to consider tiers based on advertising revenue, or some other factor, rather than use Nielsen’s Audio market rankings as NAB proposes, which are based on population.”⁷

While the ownership tiers have been a useful and efficient guide for the processing of applications which impact the number of stations in a market, a preferable system for determining the number of stations that one entity could own should be based on the amount of advertising revenue or that market's population growth. For example, the Austin, TX market has undergone tremendous growth (23%) since the 2010 US Census (from 1,716,289 population to 2,115,827).⁸ That growth follows a 32% increase in population from the 2000 Census to the 2010 Census.⁹ This amount of growth is larger than any of the other listed markets. The Austin market has only 42 stations and does not qualify for the eight station (five of either service) limit whereas there are at least 16 markets ranked below Austin with less population which qualify for the eight station tier.¹⁰ As a result, broadcasters in those smaller markets (some with 1 million less population than Austin) can own more stations overall (and more of the same service) than broadcasters in the Austin market. Furthermore, it is extremely unlikely that the Austin market will expand to 45 stations in the future because recent engineering studies indicate that the market is so saturated there is no spectrum available for another FM station or even an FM translator station in Austin. It is also unlikely that there will be any more AM stations in the Austin market. The Commission's highly restrictive Rural Radio Policy¹¹ eliminates any chance for additional stations to move into the Austin market.

A similar analysis can be made for the relative advertising revenue percentages for radio and non-broadcast sources in a market such as Austin. Based on these factors,

¹⁰ See Attachment 3.

¹¹ See Policies to Promote Rural Radio Service and to Streamline Allotment and Assignment Procedures, Second Report and Order, 26 FCC Rcd 2556 (2011); recons. den., 27 FCC Rcd 12829 (2012).

the number of stations that one entity could own can be adjusted to reflect the reality of the competition in today's marketplace.

Sinclair is not necessarily advocating a complete departure from the Commission's current regime. Rather Sinclair is suggesting a more flexible approach which takes into account markets that have undergone rapid population changes with little or no increase in advertising revenue (due to other sources of unregulated competition). By having a more flexible approach which takes into account these realities, radio station owners would have a better chance to compete.

List of primary statistical areas of the United States

This article defines a "primary" metropolitan area as a metropolitan area that is not a component of a more extensive defined metropolitan area. The 574 primary statistical areas (PSAs) of the United States and Puerto Rico comprise all 169 Combined Statistical Areas (CSAs)^[1] currently defined by the United States Office of Management and Budget (OMB) and the 405 of 929 Core Based Statistical Areas (CBSAs)^{[2][3]} currently defined by the OMB that are not a component of a Combined Statistical Area.

On February 28, 2013, the United States Office of Management and Budget defined 1098 Statistical Areas for the United States and Puerto Rico, comprising 169 Combined Statistical Areas,^[4] 388 Metropolitan Statistical Areas,^[5] and 541 Micropolitan Statistical Areas^[6] for the United States and Puerto Rico.^[7] A total of 574 of these 1098 Statistical Areas qualify as primary statistical areas, including all 169 Combined Statistical Areas, 122 of the 388 Metropolitan Statistical Areas, and 283 of the 541 Micropolitan Statistical Areas. The OMB currently does not use the term "primary statistical area", but the term is commonly used to identify the most extensive OMB defined Statistical Area for a given county or county-equivalent.
