Net neutrality is profoundly important for the free flow of information. History has shown us that, without rules against it, those in power will abuse that power. Keep the Internet free from undue influence from corporations; keep treating it as a utility.