

The Internet has allowed me to teach my students, research information for my lessons, and keep in touch with my school district. This is a very important tool I use every week, and the fact that my access is in danger really hurts my job specifically and education jobs generally. Taking away net neutrality is an attack to the education of our students and an insult to the teachers who need this to do their jobs.

I implore you to think of all of those of us who need the Internet to do our jobs properly before you make a decision that will devastate us. Thank you.
