I strongly believe in an open, fair Internet. I think that letting companies control what we can view online goes against our personal freedom, and takes control away control from the people, and gives it instead to greedy corporations. I have been assisted by net neutrality by learning programming and hacking techniques from smaller websites that would most likely go out of business if net neutrality was eliminated.