

To: The Federal Communications Commission
Date: July 17, 2017
Re: The Open Internet is Under Attack. We Vow to Protect It.

The Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission announced that he will overturn net neutrality rules. We, people of faith and moral conscious, vow to build the resistance to protect the open Internet.

Two years ago, millions of us rose up in a movement to protect the open Internet, and we won. The open Internet is a space where all of us -- no matter the content of our beliefs, color of our skin, size of our wallets -- have an equal voice.

We will not let the Federal Communications Commission overturn net neutrality protections. In this critical time, we need net neutrality now more than ever to fight and defend the future of our democracy. Our marches, vigils, petitions, and calls to action depend on organizing on an open Internet.

So we vow to continue to champion faith and moral voices in the fight to protect the open Internet as a moral imperative. We, as people of many faiths and backgrounds, ask lawmakers to do the right thing as a moral imperative.

Sincerely,
