

Please don't allow the ringless voice mail practices to start bypassing "Do Not Call" listing. We have enough spam on our phones already and we have our phones on "Do Not Call". It was bad enough when it was just landline phones being bothered. Now our cell phones are being hit with spam. I have come to believe that the "Do Not Call" lists are being sold to telemarketers to provide a database. To allow these "honest" business people to fill my voicemail with crap I am not interested in would not be a service to me or the American consumer, the very people you are supposed to protect. I have enough trouble keeping track of Doctors calls and other important calls on my voicemail. If I go on a trip none of those calls will get recorded for my attention because telemarketers will fill my phone with crap.
