Dear Federal Communications Commission,

FCC Mail Room

My name is Neil Lee, and I am from Alhambra, California. I, as well as more than 323 million people in the United States of America believe that if we were to live in a free society, we must have free internet service. It is unfair for some who say that we live in a free society, but we are not allowed to have free cellphone and internet services. What does a free society mean to you? Is it morally right that Time Warner Cable can charge excessive amounts of service fees to the consumers? We must address this issue now.

Sincerely,

Neil Lee, from Alhambra, CA.
