

REGARDING THE FCC's REQUEST FOR COMMENT BY AMERIFACTORS FINANCIAL GROUP, LLC

CG Docket No. 02278, CG Docket No. 05338

I have been sending and receiving fax's for more than 8 years exclusively through my computer. I don't have a fax machine or a phone line. They come directly in my email inbox, I send my documents to my customer's strait from my computer, I use the print to fax option and it sends. When I receive a fax (without a phone line or machine!) it goes directly into my email inbox. If I get a unwanted fax in my email I delete it, "it's an email". To say an unwanted email is a fax is insane. I have a fax number that exclusively uses the internet never passing through a telephone line or through a fax machine, it doesn't use paper, toner or ever ring busy. Amerifactors petition should not even be necessary as its common sense that if anything is sent or received via email is not a fax. I believe the law says it has to be sent using a telephone line and received by a telephone line because 20 years ago people had fax machines and it cost a lot of money with that old roll paper and toner. Well you don't have any of those types of fax machine anymore, so why try and apply a huge fine to something that doesn't even exist, its kind of stupid really
