RE: WC Docket No. 17-108 (Net Neutrality)

The Management and Strategy Institute, along with virtually every major internet company and most global citizens, oppose the FCC proposed rules for an "Internet Fast Lane". Reversal of Title II will inevitably lead to discrimination of traffic to the highest bidder.

The Internet was designed as an open medium. The fundamental idea since the Internet's inception has been that every Web site, every feature and every service should be treated without discrimination. That's how bloggers can compete with CNN or USA Today for readers. That's how up-and-coming musicians can build underground audiences before they get their first top-40 single. Discrimination endangers our basic Internet freedoms.

By allowing this fastlane, you will be aiding and abetting the largest ISPs in their efforts to destroy the open Internet.

We implore you to please act within the best interest of the American people, Global Citizens, and free enterprise and keep the internet an equal opportunity service.

Sincerely,

Michael DiLeo
President
Management and Strategy Institute
