Re: GN Docket 13-111, FCC 17-25, Promiting Technological Solutions to Combat
Contraband Wireless Device Use in Correctional Facility

Dear Chairman Pai and Secretary Dortch;

As Chairman of the Arkansas Board of Corrections, and having served on this Board for 18 years, I am very aware of the issues that we face daily in corrections when dealing with contraband cell phones. We have discussed these issues with our staff in Board meetings, and our Board has great concerns about these cell phones being used to order hits, operate illegal drug activities, scams, and escapes. Our top concern is the safety of correctional employees, other inmates, and members of the public. Those using the network to smuggle contraband cellphones into correctional facilities could use the same network to smuggle in weapons.

I support President Bertsch's request to amend your proposed rule to include surgical jamming technology, and to provide stringent measures to ensure carrier cooperation with beacon technology, managed access technology and future technologies.

I agree with her that "Section 333 of the Federal Communications Act does not prevent the FCC from authorizing the use of jamming illegal wireless device signals. Section 333 merely prohibits the 'willful or malicious interference to authorized radio communications.' Since cell phones are contraband within correctional facilities, their use constitutes unauthorized communications; jamming those illegal signals could not violate Section 333."

We sincerely appreciate that the FCC recognizes that these are legitimate issues, and we are relying on you to require FCC regulated wireless carriers to be part of the solution.
