

I am a widow and am not receiving social security yet – I cannot even afford a smart phone. I pay for a cell phone card and use it until I run out of minutes and then purchase another. My phone is used only for emergencies. I have to pay for every text message and voicemail I read on my cell phone. I should not have to pay for unsolicited non-emergency calls. It is becoming increasingly more difficult to determine the source of a voice mail. This is just one more hardship that will affect low income citizens. Please do not allow telemarketers to use ringless voicemail technology.
