

To whom it may concern,

By upending net neutrality, you are undermining a basic freedom of the American people. I am disgusted by the sheer lack of caring for the privacy of US citizens, and the clear prevalence of bribery in the political system.

Please have the best interests of the people you represent hold some regard in this decision. The internet service providers hold a near monopoly, and you're playing right into their hand by allowing them to exploit the game even further. Why should they have the right to throttle any websites they see fit, even when they themselves call it unethical behavior?

ISP's have historically shown that they care more for their own financial gain than their customers' happiness, and it's just simply wrong.

Please put a stop to this.

Sincerely,

Dave Childs
