

Mark Mosheim
2110 - 31st Ave.
San Francisco CA 94116

Aug 29th 2018

Via ECFS
Marlene H. Dortch, Secretary
Federal Communications Commission
445 12th Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20554

Re: In the Matter of Petition of USTelecom for Forbearance Pursuant to 47 U.S.C. Section 160(c); WC Docket No. 18-141; Category 1

Dear FCC,

Please deny the petition to take away access to critical unbundled broadband network elements. We need greater choice in ISPs.

I have switched providers several times in the last 22 years connected to the Internet. Good broadband service is critical to me in my career as a public school teacher, a career I've had for the past 35 years. I began with dial-up service, then moved to ADSL, and am now pleased to have Gigabit fiber. I have used AT&T in the past, but am now a satisfied customer of Sonic Internet. Residing and working in San Francisco, I hear of other providers in other districts in my city and wonder that they do not expand to my neighborhood. Internet service is nothing like mobile telephony, with its plethora of options. In my family, we use five different mobile operators, each one offering slightly different packages. Even our two landlines are with two different companies. Why shouldn't that occur in Internet service?

Mark Mosheim