

I write this opposition in a state of disbelief that a civil servant Mr. Pai would so blatantly disregard the constitution in regards of the American people. To ignore the will of the masses is to openly claim that privatized wants of the few, outweigh the needs of the many, and such a claim is in direct violation of any oath taken by any government personnel. Internet service providers are provide, what many governments consider, a fundamental human need alongside water, and freedom. To remove a limiter on corporations by the government to ensure that freedom is a terrible atrocity that would limit the freedom of the American people. The corporations themselves have spoken out against the repealing of net neutrality, recognizing public dissent of the idea that it would be beneficial in any way, except for the few that would profit off the sequestering of what little freedoms the American people can claim they have left. I beg the sense of moralilty to see through any fascade laid forth by Mr.Pai; of removing net neutrality being beneficial to the American people in any way and to ensure the freedom guaranteed to us as citizens.

-Elisha Chung