47 U.S.C. Section 160(c); WC Docket No. 18-141; Category 1

Dear FCC,

I cannot fathom why you feel less competition is good for the internet consumer. If it were not for the smaller providers in the cities Ive lived in, my quality of service would have been terrible. In general ATT has let me down time and again, whether it be from a customer service perspective, or quality of product rendered. They do not care about customer service at all. Allowing them to cut off access to their networks will only further limit the customers choice, and hurt the end user. They have failed to keep my business time and again, and now they seek to force end users back into their control, whereby I will be limited to artificially expensive internet packages and crummy service. Shame on ATT. This is unfair and unethical. FCC, please reconsider your position and stop these monopolistic actions.
