

Over 17,000 U.S. PIRG members support the 2015 Net Neutrality Rules

U.S. PIRG is the non-profit, non-partisan federation of state Public Interest Research Groups. PIRGs take on powerful interests whenever our health and safety, democracy or freedoms are threatened.

In 2015, the Wheeler FCC issued a critical net neutrality order to re-classify the Internet as a "telecommunications service" rather than an "information service," while also making it clear that its order applies to the entire Internet, including mobile services. That FCC action strengthened the free and open Internet for everybody, not just for firms willing to pay for fast lanes or otherwise favored by the cable and telephone companies that want to act as gatekeepers. Had that order not been rescinded in 2017, every new innovation, every small or new business and every diverse political or cultural idea, no matter how small or narrowly held, would have been digitally equal and could not be relegated to a slow lane or otherwise throttled by Internet gatekeepers.

Those gatekeepers, the powerful phone and cable Internet Service Providers, should not be able to pick winners and losers online or give their own services an unfair advantage over their competitors. We don't think that internet service providers should be able to control what content or services you access on the internet. Nor should they be able to penalize you for using another company's services on the internet.

So, we urge the current FCC to reverse its hasty, poorly-conceived elimination of that important net neutrality order that worked for everyone, not only for powerful gatekeepers.

Attached are petitions signed by 17,176 PIRG members around the nation.

The next 244 pages are members who signed this petition:

Internet service providers should not be able to control what content or services you access on the internet. Nor should they be able to penalize you for using another company's services on the internet. Please keep the internet free and open, and do not roll back net neutrality protections.

The final 127 pages are members who signed this net neutrality petition, which also including language supporting continued FCC investigations of zero-rating practices:

Net neutrality is the basic principle that all internet traffic should be treated equally. Please uphold current net neutrality rules and continue investigations into companies using zero-rating -- a practice that gives service providers unfair influence and control over the internet. Without further investigations, net neutrality could be rolled back, leaving consumers at a disadvantage.

Sincerely,
Edmund Mierzwinski
Consumer Program Director, U.S. PIRG
202-461-3821 edm <at> pirc.org

To the Federal Communications Commission:

Internet service providers should not be able to control what content or services you access on the internet. Nor should they be able to penalize you for using another company's services on the internet.

Please keep the internet free and open, and do not roll back net neutrality protections.

Sincerely,

U.S. PIRG members in support of net neutrality

To the Federal Communications Commission:

Net neutrality is the basic principle that all internet traffic should be treated equally.

Please uphold current net neutrality rules and continue investigations into companies using zero-rating -- a practice that gives service providers unfair influence and control over the internet. Without further investigations, net neutrality could be rolled back, leaving consumers at a disadvantage.

Sincerely,
