

FCC

We need net neutrality protections now more than ever. Information is power and those who have control over people's main source of information, the Internet, have control over the population. Not being able to access all sites as easily, quickly, and freely is simply unacceptable. There are already millions of ways to profit off the internet. No business should have the ability to manipulate it in this way. All information and websites should be equally accessible.

It's as easy as that.

Bailey Pryor