Re: Continuing Support for Fiber Optic Internet Services
Date: September 1, 2018

My relationship as an internet consumer began it was referred to as "The World Wide Web", and at that time, my 300 baud modem connection, via home phone line and American On Line, cost more than one dollar per WWW connection minute. Over time, the technology improved and prices reduced.

Services such as those provided by Sonic is the next step to a new generation of affordable, faster and more reliable communications we consumers require today. Online access is no longer an option for those of us who are struggling to stay informed, obtain education and remain employed.

As a public service agency, the FCC must continue support for broadband competition for the benefit of the people of United States.

Thank you.
