Re: In the Matter of Petition of USTelecom for Forbearance Pursuant to 47 U.S.C. Section 160(c); WC Docket No. 18-141; Category 1

Dear FCC,

I am an enthusiastic customer of Sonic.net, a small broadband provider that has much better service than AT&T or Comcast or Verizon. If companies that own rights of way (physical infrastructure) are permitted to discriminate between different service providers, reason would indicate that the competition would be forced to string their own fibers across rights-of-way, but this is practically impossible in either an urban area where rights-of-way are already allocated or in rural areas where rights-of-way or physical fiber would be stupid to duplicate.
