Federal Communications Commission
445 12th Street SW
Washington, DC 20554

Dear Chairman Pai:

The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) received more than fifteen million comments on your proposal to undo the strong net neutrality protections put in place by the Open Internet Order. This volume of comments underscores the tremendous interest the public has in this proceeding. Given the unprecedented number of comments, we urge the FCC to extend the reply comment period to allow sufficient time for the public to ensure their views are reflected in the record.

The FCC currently plans to allow just 30 days for reply comments. Yet in 2014, during the previous net neutrality proceeding, the FCC provided 60 days for Americans to reply. The FCC should follow its own precedent and extend the reply comment period to ensure the fullest spectrum of comments fills the docket in this historic rulemaking.

This proceeding has the potential to impact all Americans and as the expert agency, you should ensure that the Commission provides ample time to ensure all voices are heard.

Thank you for your attention to this important matter.

Dear Senator Baldwin:

Thank you for your letter urging an extension to the reply comment period for the Restoring Internet Freedom Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) adopted by the Commission on May 18, 2017. I believe in the importance of having a free and open Internet. And in this proceeding, the Commission is currently examining the best legal framework for both protecting Internet freedom and providing strong incentives for the private sector to build and expand next-generation networks so that all Americans can be connected to digital opportunity.

Consistent with our process reforms, the draft text of the Restoring Internet Freedom NPRM was released to the public on April 27, 2017, three weeks before that item was voted at the Commission's May agenda meeting. This level of transparency was not afforded in the 2014 Title II proceeding. In addition, on August 11, 2017, the Wireline Competition Bureau extended the deadline for filing reply comments by two weeks, until August 30, 2017, in response to a motion filed with the Commission. The Bureau recognized that, consistent with past Commission precedent granting partial extensions, an additional two weeks for replies was appropriate to provide parties additional time to analyze the technical, legal, and policy arguments raised by initial commenters. This will also allow parties to provide more thorough comments, ensuring that the Commission has a complete record on which to develop its decision.

Currently, the FCC is in the midst of receiving public comment on this matter, and we will go where the facts and the law lead us. Your views are very important and will be entered into the record of the proceeding and considered as part of the Commission's review. I look forward to continuing to work with you and your colleagues on this critical issue. Please let me know if I can be of any further assistance.

Sincerely,

The Bureau recognized that, consistent with past Commission precedent granting partial extensions, an additional two weeks for replies was appropriate to provide parties additional time to analyze the technical, legal, and policy arguments raised by initial commenters. This will also allow parties to provide more thorough comments, ensuring that the Commission has a complete record on which to develop its decision.

Currently, the FCC is in the midst of receiving public comment on this matter, and we will go where the facts and the law lead us. Your views are very important and will be entered into the record of the proceeding and considered as part of the Commission's review. I look forward to continuing to work with you and your colleagues on this critical issue. Please let me know if I can be of any further assistance.

Sincerely,

The Honorable Jeff Merkley
United States Senate
313 Hart Senate Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator Merkley:

Thank you for your letter urging an extension to the reply comment period for the Restoring Internet Freedom Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) adopted by the Commission on May 18, 2017. I believe in the importance of having a free and open Internet. And in this proceeding, the Commission is currently examining the best legal framework for both protecting Internet freedom and providing strong incentives for the private sector to build and expand next-generation networks so that all Americans can be connected to digital opportunity.

Consistent with our process reforms, the draft text of the Restoring Internet Freedom NPRM was released to the public on April 27, 2017, three weeks before that item was voted at the Commission's May agenda meeting. This level of transparency was not afforded in the 2014 Title II proceeding. In addition, on August 11, 2017, the Wireline Competition Bureau extended the deadline for filing reply comments by two weeks, until August 30, 2017, in response to a motion filed with the Commission. The Bureau recognized that, consistent with past Commission precedent granting partial extensions, an additional two weeks for replies was appropriate to provide parties additional time to analyze the technical, legal, and policy arguments raised by initial commenters. This will also allow parties to provide more thorough comments, ensuring that the Commission has a complete record on which to develop its decision.
