Re: MB Docket No. 12-217

Dear Ms. Dortch:

On September 19, 2017, Rick Chessen, Senior Vice President, Law & Regulatory Policy, and I spoke by telephone with Michelle Carey, Chief of the Media Bureau, regarding the draft *Report and Order*¹ in the above-captioned proceeding concerning cable television digital technical standards.

NCTA reiterated its view that mandatory “proof of performance” testing for digital signal quality – whether required by the FCC or local franchising authorities – would be unnecessary, costly and disruptive.² Section 626(c)(1)(B), referenced in the draft Report and Order,³ does not provide general authority for testing to determine compliance with the FCC’s technical standards. This narrow provision allows franchising authorities to consider whether “the quality of the operator’s service, including signal quality... has been reasonable in light of community needs” in the specific context of certain franchise renewal proceedings.⁴ NCTA proposed that if the Report and Order were to address the issue of franchise renewal-related testing, it should clarify that any such testing should be limited to SCTE 40 parameters and, to avoid unnecessary
