

The internet needs to be a free and open place for creativity and innovation. Passing this amendment gives ISP's the keys to the front door. They will be able to restrict and block content based on its ability to pay or not pay.

Once ISP's take over, consumers will be forced to pay higher amounts for their internet speeds or face server throttling.

This bill does nothing to help consumers, but only benefits the rich and powerful ISP's.