

Don't you dare repeal net neutrality. Keep the internet protected under title 2 and keep ISP's as common carriers. The internet isn't just for fun, it's a vital tool for things like finding a job, looking for a place to live, exercising free speech and looking up any pieces of information you would ever need to know for literally anything else.

A free market can't exist without net neutrality. Repealing it would make it much easier for established companies to obtain monopolies.

Speaking of monopolies, Comcast has one, almost everywhere where they do business And Time Warner has a monopoly everywhere where THEY do business.

They've agreed to stay out of each other's way, just like criminal organizations claiming their turf with each other. Which is why they're fighting so hard to merge.

As for anywhere that does have another choice besides the two I mentioned, what few other options there are, are almost always worse than Comcast and Time Warner and that's no accident! The bigger ISP's of a territory bribes politicians to fuck with the smaller providers!

Repealing net neutrality would literally do nothing but harm to ALL consumers. People that Ajit Pai and the rest of the FCC are supposed to be looking out for!

KEEP NET NEUTRALITY EXACTLY AS IT IS! DON'T YOU DARE REPEAL IT!
