

In May, thirteen senators wrote to the FCC about Net Neutrality. Their words state my opinion very well. “Net neutrality rules protect the free flow of ideas that are creating new industries, educating our youth, promoting free speech, and supporting the communications that we rely on every day. Without the Open Internet Order, Internet Service Providers could discriminate against certain services, potentially distorting competition, stifling innovation, and hampering user choice and free expression.” I encourage you NOT to repeal net neutrality regulations.
