

Net Neutrality is incredibly important to the current economic stability of the US. Also, the repeal of existing regulations would open the door for mass manipulation of the public by corporate/political entities. Think about it, if comcast supports political party X, they would be allowed to only show internet pages that promote party X. Nobody should have that power. You might be a republican, but you don't want the democrats to be able to leverage that kind of power over the population any more than the democrats want republicans to be able to do so. Do not repeal existing regulations
