

Stephanie Levanduski

stephlevanduski@gmail.com

November 22, 2017

To Whom It May Concern,

Chairman Pai has stated that "Amazon and Google become global powerhouses precisely because we had light-touch rules that apply to this Internet" but I truly believe that ending net neutrality hurts consumers the most.

Ajit Pai stated that this would be a benefit because the TelCo companies would be forced to be open and transparent. I currently work for Verizon and I can tell you that such a huge monopoly of a company, even if forced to be transparent, would step all over consumers, gutting us of our choices and our freedom by making consumers pay more to access competitor services.

The monopolization of TelCo companies, I believe, is one of the biggest threats to the Internet and those who use it.

I understand a need to restrict the global powerhouses like Amazon and Google, but I sincerely believe that this comes at the expense of the consumer.

Please, keep net neutrality. As someone who works in the TelCo industry, I can already see how this would be a disastrous policy.

Don't let the consumer suffer at the hands of these mega monopolies.

Sincerely,

Stephanie Levanduski