

Ajit's remarks on fox&friends are disgraceful.

A decision on net neutrality will have a lasting and consequential effect on more than just the price of the service.

You are responsible for American freedom, which is at risk.

Ajit preaches about de-regulation, but it clearly only benefits the producers and not the consumers (who you should be representing)

In 20, 30, 100 years from now (if we still have the freedoms we have today) those voting in favor of Ajit's proposal will be a ridicule to all those who look back on this point in time... an ignorant chairman appointed by an ignorant president who made a stupid decision and was supported by the other members of the FCC.

Internet access (not speed) is not a commodity. You should not treat it as such
