

I am writing to express my strong support of the current net neutrality rules, where the internet is classified as a utility. Access to internet data is a necessary piece of infrastructure that people use to organize their lives and businesses use to communicate. By eliminating the current status of net neutrality everyone except for the ISPs will be negatively affected. The populace has thoroughly voiced their views on this but the FCC hasn't listened. I encourage you to listen now.

Matt Waterman,