

Americans need Net Neutrality.

Millions of livelihoods are at stake - people who use the Internet to work, learn, and communicate with every person in their lives.

Allowing a few oligarchs to control the entirety of the Internet is an affront to the free market ideals that the republican party claims to value, and is deeply unamerican in its concept and in its execution.

There is no version of America in which leaving behind Net Neutrality is acceptable. This is a sentiment I share with every one of my peers - all of whom are registered voters.

Understand that a majority of Americans are demanding the enforcement of a free and open Internet, and that any attack on this system will be read as an overt affront to the ideals of Liberty and Freedom.