Dear FCC:

Why we need strong net neutrality:

It's important to be able to find information/services and news on an equal unbiased playing field such as the internet. The internet is like the library to me, I do not want books removed or censored from my public library because some librarian makes that decision for me.

I use the internet for my Etsy store in addition to looking up all sorts of information from recipes, health issues, locating shops, services and people, comparing and ordering items at a reasonable cost, and learning about other artists and their creations.

We Skype with family across the U.S. and e-mail photos and articles of interest. I share information via e-mail, Drop box, the Cloud, etc. with other volunteers and send files to printers for my freelance graphic business.

For entertainment, we enjoy Netflix, Hulu, Accorn and other internet services that require a broadband that is efficient, reliable and reasonably priced.

Like anything else, we feel rules and regulations are needed to provide fair and reasonable internet access for all.

Thank you,

Donna Savage
