

The Internet needs to be protected for equal access, it is a utility. Daily and constant connectivity to the Internet is indispensable to conducting business, living our lives, and having equal access to education and information.

The creation of the Internet was funded in full by the American taxpayer and is a public asset. It is unconscionable to allow corporations to now take over and dictate the terms of its access. It would be no more acceptable to sell off libraries to private owners and allow them to hold information hostage.
