

I urge you to vote against rescinding the current net neutrality rules. Internet access should be treated as a utility rather than a normal seller / consumer relationship.

I have exactly 2 choices for internet service. One only provides minimal bandwidth via DSL and the other is cable via Spectrum. If either decides to implement tiered service based on sites and uses, I have no viable alternatives.

The innovation being spoken of is not technological, but rather innovation in how to extract more ones from consumers. We wouldn't allow the power company to charge based on what brand of refrigerator we are plugging in.
