

Maintain Net Neutrality Rules

I encourage the FCC to maintain current net neutrality rules established in 2015 and which enforces fair and open access to the internet by treating internet service providers according to Title II rules. The foundation of democracy is fair and open communications and equal right to information so that citizens remained informed contributors to their society. Repealing the current net neutrality rules results in a fundamental damage to the constitutional rights to information in the "information age". Do not sacrifice democracy by allowing the greed of ISPs to govern information access and exchange.
