

My name is Christopher S. Wheeler. I am a United States citizen living abroad.

I urge the Commission to maintain net neutrality. In my view, the better public policy is one that provides the most internet access to the most people for the least cost. I am concerned that any policy that conditions access to classes of domains on the basis of ability to pay will work against those who most need that access. The internet has become important in many people's lives, and that dependency will only increase. Those who cannot afford to pay will be left behind when in fact those are among the individuals whom we should be focusing on assisting.

Thank you for considering my opinion.

Chris Wheeler

Mumbai

27 November 2017