To whom it may concern,

As both a former businesswoman and a professional researcher I know firsthand how important it is to have net-neutrality and access to the entire internet. The FCC is unfairly allowing the highest bidder to control the fast lanes leaving the consumer with a Hobson's Choice: either pay higher ISP costs or throttle the flow of information. This pending action by the FCC is extremely shortsighted as a free-market society that encompasses all levels of business activity must have equal access.

Thank you,
