

Repealing net neutrality regulations will inevitably stifle innovation and curtail the free speech and content that is available on the internet. I have no desire for corporations to decide what is appropriate and what is not, what is important and what is not, and what access I should have and what I should not. I urge you to protect net neutrality and let every user and content provider have an equal playing field.