

To the FCC

In relation to Net Neutrality:

Without Net Neutrality, I might have to pay extra to access government resources, such as the FCC page, to be able to comment and provide my voice in our democracy. Or, perhaps, depending on my geographic area and the political views of my ISP, I might not be able to access any government site at all making me unable to register to vote, to interact with the DMV, with any social service

Without Net Neutrality, I might be shuttled to particular vendors for insurance, medical treatment, grocery shopping, or ordering food. I might not be able to get access to scientific information, and only be able to access religious information.

Net Neutrality allows for everyone to be able to participate in new technologies. Without Net Neutrality, the "Web" as we know it would not exist. The ability to stream movies, to download books, to shop online, our phones wouldn't be internet connected devices, and our homes wouldn't have the ability to be controlled automatically and remotely.

Without Net Neutrality, the growth of new ideas and technologies that we can all benefit from will be stifled, and we can't even know now what we might miss in the future as those technologies which will rely on an open connected network have yet to be imagined or created.

Net Neutrality is important for every citizen, it benefits every one of us. The fears of what might happen without Net Neutrality are based on what companies have already done, not on a hypothetical 'maybe'.

Please keep our internet open, and make rules to make it even more open.
