

Hey All,

I really like the Internet the way it is currently. I support net neutrality. I'm kind of a big deal in my own circles, so my voice definitely has some weight and you should definitely take me seriously. Just keep the Internet regulations the way they are.

Look, I'm just a guy who likes to break up my work day with some cat videos, funny fail videos and the occasional tearjerker videos. My kryptonite are videos of kids surprising their stepparent with adoption paperwork so that they can legally adopt them. Holy shit, I cry all the time. ALL THE TIME! One time I sat on the toilet when I first woke up and watched a compilation of those videos and cried my eyes out...on the toilet, first thing in the morning. Best way to start my day. I really don't want anything new potentially interfering with my access to those videos and ease of viewing. Please don't take away my need to cry on the toilet watching Internet videos.

I also upload a bunch of videos, mostly sketch comedy. You should check out my Youtube Channel, Curb Your Entertainment. It's pretty, pretty funny. I have a series called Underrated Bodies where I spend a few minutes talking about male celebrities who have a surprisingly hot body. My videos go viral instantly (they average like 50 views each) and I really don't want anything to affect that. So really, for the sake of my channel also, please leave the Internet as is.

Look, to me, the Internet isn't broken, no matter what Kim Kardashian claimed, so if it's not broken, then don't fix it or change it. Let's use the mantra of the 2013 Baltimore Ravens "Title II is good."

So let's keep this Internet like a complimentary meal at Denny's — free and always open.
