

Net Neutrality prevents ISPs from treating various content unequally, and potentially charging extra for consumers to access content that the ISP(s) do not like or that competes with their services.

Internet access needs to be treated like a utility because that is what keeps the web a level playing field and prevents it from rewarding the deepest pockets with the ability to broadcast one's message the furthest, the way television is.

Not only do we need to keep Net Neutrality, but the FCC needs to be more transparent and less misleading about what a repeal would really mean.

The statements put out by the FCC and Chairman Pai are mendacious, and take advantage of a public too overworked, too stressed, and struggling too hard just to make ends meet, to truly research and understand the great harm that would be done by repealing Net Neutrality.

I am not a bot, I live in the United States, and this is not a copy+paste message. I have taken the time out of my busy day as an entrepreneur, where every minute costs me money, to write this, because it is important and matters to me.

If you repeal Net Neutrality, rest assured that I will be contacting my Congressperson, and I will participate in any non-violent protests which are available to me. And as a member of the media, I will encourage my audience to do the same.

Listen to the American people. We will not be cowed, we will not be silenced. That is exactly what you are trying to do, but we will not allow it.

Resolutely,

Desi Sanchez
Artist, Technology Expert & TV Host
NYC