

I'm a freelance app/web developer and computer engineering student, and I rely on the Internet to make my living. Killing net neutrality will blow a hole in the tech economy and will put many livelihoods at risk (my small clients cannot afford to pay to play), not to mention the livelihood of the millions of other medium and small business owners and freelancers. And this is not even to mention the enormous impact it will have on education, voting rights, employment, and other key areas. FCC Commissioner Ajit Pai's assertion that somehow killing net neutrality will bolster the economy is truly idiotic and shows his lack of knowledge and experience in the tech industry. It will create a catastrophic bottleneck where a select few giant corporations have near complete power over an industry and this will make it much harder for start ups and small businesses to be able to compete on the internet.
