

Strongly in support of net neutrality. The internet is the backbone of modern communication. In lieu of public sector provisioning of this service, Title II protects Americans from at least some private meddling in what is one of the more egalitarian projects our country has ever brought into being.