

This is net tyranny and you are not fooling anyone. Restricting and throttling web sites and services is the modern-day version of burning literature. Please do not line your pockets with money from ISP lobbyist groups in favor of this obvious censorship. The internet is among the best inventions in the history of man-kind (which you did not create nor crown yourself king of). Why don't you fill your hearts with the notion that you did your part to allow net neutrality to exist and continue. Or don't, and I guarantee you that people will find other avenues to ensure anonymity and neutrality. Roadblocks often-times have detour signs. Oh, and net neutrality affects you too. You'll also be subjected to the same regulations if appealed.
