Commissioners
Federal Communications Commission
Washington, DC
RE: Net Neutrality

Dear Commissioners:

I am writing because I strongly believe that the internet has become too important to society for its regulation to be left in the hands of a few large corporations that are only interested in making money. It has become a public utility and consequently should be regulated as the phone lines are, with free and equal access to all.

I urge you to defeat / reject any proposed legislation / rule making that would change the status of the internet from what it is today ... neutral. Please do not allow any carrier / ISP to favor one client / company over another or to charge more for additional speed.

Sincerely,

Erwin H. Peters, PhD
